THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JANUARY 3, 1895. No 1

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

WORK OF THE GYMNASIUM.

Physical Director MacPhie Writes on Callisthenics.

All must work, all must rest, and work, and rest must be supplemented by healthy recreation. For recreation is the great relief from the wear and tear of life—the oil as it were that lubricates the machinery, prevents friction and makes the wheels run more smoothly. And not only so but it renovates the exhausted energies and fits them to resume their work in the most appropriate way and with the least expenditure of time.

It may either consist in variety of employment, amusement, sports and the like, but of whatever description, its essential function, so to speak, is to provide a frequent and appropriate change or organic activity.

Does it pay to have a clear head, a large breathing capacity, a vigorous body and a good sound night's rest? We all answer very readily, yes. If we have a habit at all let it be of taking exercise regularly, without depending on feeling, as sometimes we feel like taking too much at other times not enough and still others not any.

Constant health and strength will follow as naturally as daylight follows darkness, if we exercise every day we eat, work or study.

The dumb bell drill as performed in the Young Men's Christian Association gymnasium is, I believe, the most perfect arrangement of callisthenics which has yet been devised. It makes an equal distribution of action of all parts of the body. No undue exertion is put upon any special part and unnecessary fatigue is avoided. Rest is judicially accomplished by change of action, but there is no movement inserted merely for its negative value as relief, but each exercise has its positive use. Especial attention is called to the sequence of the exercises. They are at first gentle and easy, gradually becoming more vigorous and grow quite so toward the end. No sudden or violent demand is made upon the heart or lungs. First there is brisk action of the extremities which increases circulation.

The "oxygen hunger" thus created is satisfied by the breathing exercises which come next in order.

The whole callisthenic drill with dumb bells, bar bells and Indian clubs, is well contrived to correct the multiplicity of deficiencies and malformations which are well nigh general among members when they first come to the gymnasium.

"Drooping heads, cramped chests, round shoulders and weak backs" are common defects we have to deal with. These malformations are usually the results of unsymmetrical muscular development. When we find shoulders have gone forward, we prescribe exercise to strengthen the muscles, which will put them back where they belong.

"Stretching exercises" come in as an important part of the drill. The tendency of a muscle developed by hard contracting exercise is to grow shorter; at the same time it increased in thickness and firmness. Stretch work elongates anterior muscles and renders the thorax more flexible to the influence which is brought to bear upon it. D. A. MACPHIE.

WILLOW AVENUE RECEPTION.

Delightful Social Event in Washington Park.

Miss Elsie Horne gave a reception to a number of her friends Saturday afternoon at her home on Willow avenue. She was assisted in receiving by Miss Ross, Miss Alice Ross and Miss Gendel. Mrs. Henry McGee and Mrs. Walter McGee presided at the tables which were tastefully decorated with smilax and small lamps whose red shades cast a warm glow over the visitors. Tea, chocolate and cake were served.

Among those present were: Miss Alice Thompson, Miss Grace Beeny, Miss Sadie Douglass, Miss Lovell, Miss Needham, Miss Alice Needham, Miss Nora Williams, Miss Carrie Endicott, Miss Mitchell, Miss Elizabeth Cornwell, Miss Edith Lape, Miss Miller, Miss Anne Miller, Miss Emma Fisk, Miss Bessie Taylor, Miss Kate Overton, Miss Grace Overton, Miss Hulia Van Deventer, Miss Eleanor Van Deventer, Miss Elsie Suffren, Mrs. Charles Horne, Mrs. J. B. Joy, Mrs. Ashbrook of Philadelphia, Clarence Peck, Harry McGee, Raymond McGee, Wilbur Cornwell, Phillip Suffren, Fred Goddard, Walter Serrell, Edward Waring, Henry Wells, Thomas Taylor, Clifford Moelice, Philip Wells, Warren Church, Nathan Lane, George Horne, Carl Brown.

A Holiday Souvenir.

The new year brought to the editor's desk a handsome and valuable souvenir from the Prudential Insurance Company, with the compliments of the local superintendent, R. M. Dawson. It is a massive silver paper cutter, envelope opener, and folder. The Press will find it a useful office assistant through 1895, and its user cannot avoid the reflection that it is symbolic of the Prudential in its sterling worth, nor avoid the impressive message graven on the handle, of "claims paid over $17,000,000."

ATTACKED BY NEGROES.

Charles Hastly Has a Thrilling Night Encounter.

ASSAULTED IN A LONELY SPOT.

As He Was Going Home from Work, Passing the Junction of Brook and Westervelt Avenues, He Was Attacked by Two Powerful Men, and Left Lying Insensible in a Snow-Storm.

A bold assault has just come to light.

It was committed last Wednesday evening about 6, upon Charles Hastly of 52 Brook avenue, who was returning to his home from his work in Edward Love's wall-paper store, corner of Watchung and North avenues, where he is employed in the block-cutting department.

He walked up Front street as far as Elm, and then went down Elm as far as Brook avenue. As he was crossing Westervelt avenue on Brook avenue, he was startled by a noise, and on looking around had time to see two large burly negroes in the act of leaping upon him.

One jumped in front of him, and clutched his throat, while the other attacked him from the rear.

They struck him several times, rendering him unconscious.

It was snowing hard at the time, and nobody was passing in that neighborhood.

Mr. Hastly was left lying insensible on the ground, and the negroes escaped.

It was some time before he regained consciousness, and then it was with difficulty that he reached his home, which is but a short distance from where the assault occurred.

On reaching home, he told his wife of his experience, and she called Mr. Whalen, their nextdoor neighbor, who with his family went in and gave assistance.

One of Hastly's eyes was badly bruised and swollen, there was a bad mark on his face, and he felt sore and lame about the body.

On searching his clothes, he missed nothing, though he had considerable money and a valuable gold watch.

Every since the assault he has been confined to the house.

As it was very dark at the time of the assault, Mr. Hastly does not believe he could recognize his assailants.

Monroe Ave's Christmas.

In the Monroe Avenue Chapel a very interesting time was had last evening. The exercises opened with the singing of carols by the school, and a prayer by James McGee.

The primary department then entertained the audience. A vocal duet, "Jesus was a little child", by H. VanDorn and Lillie Cockley, was prettily rendered. After a recitation by Irene Aldrich, a solo by Aaron Brower, and a solo by Ella Rogers, the little ones marched off the platform to the delightful playing of the Washington Post. Mrs MacDonald had them in charge.

A feature was a dialogue; scene, Santa Claus. Those taking part were: Santa Claus, L. C. Batson; Angel, Edith Burt; Romeo, Samuel Beekman; Fairies, Miss E. Haff, Ada VanDorn and Clarence VanDorn.

Walter McGee made a few remarks of regret at the slight attendance, and after the school sang a carol all the scholars received candy and oranges. Miss Charlotte Beekman was the efficient pianist.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

Rev. E. Klonka has kindly consented to teach a class in German in the Y. M. C. A. educational course at the rooms in the new building. Quite a number have already enrolled their names, and others desiring to join the class can apply at the general secretary's office.

Visitors were received yesterday at the new building. All were delighted with its apparent and prospective comfort and usefulness.

The physical director has had his office adjoining the gymnasium fitted up comfortably and has a complete outfit of anthropometric apparatus for taking measurements and making physical examinations. Several have had their examinations already and quite a number of appointments scheduled on the physical director's notebook. Make an appointment with him soon. Secure your locker before the rush comes.

—Rogers the seafood man sold over 12,000 oysters for the New Year's trade, Monday and Tuesday, in addition to his other seafood business.

—It is expected that the Y. M. C. A Building will be formally opened Jan. 15 The gymnasium was used yesterday for the first time, and the regular classes will now be formed. The association temporarily occupies the downstairs stores.

BULLY BACHELORS.

THEY JUST CAN'T LOSE WHEN IT COMES TO BOWLING.

Tried Hard to Throw the Game Saturday Night So That There Would Be a Series of Three, But the Married Men Could n't Be Coaxed to Win.

There was the usual happy assembly at the Park Club Saturday evening to witness the second game between the Bachelors and Benedicks. Notwithstanding the cold, the women were out in full force, and assisted throughout the game by their hearty applause. Two familiar names were missed on the score-board, and two familiar faces were absent from the bowlers. Both sides were equal sufferers.

B. A. Hegeman, the genial captain of the Benedicks at their former contests, was confined to his house with a cold, which, though not sufficiently severe to cause any alarm, prevented its possessor from leading his confreres to possible victory on the alleys.

The Bachelors suffered in like manner by the absence of Geo. C. Worth, whose score of 167, the highest made by the Bachelors during the game of Dec. 22, was such an important factor in the victory of the Bachelors on that occasion.

Saturday's game was replete with interesting features, the star bowling of Van Buren for the Bachelors bringing him a shower of applause each time he stepped to the alley.

Great was the amusement and hearty and long-continued the laughter as a select chorus rendered "Down on the Farm", "Sweet Marie", and other catchy songs at frequent intervals during the progress of the game.

In the third frame the score was 474—393 in favor of the Bachelors, but in the next frame the Benedicks put on their fighting clothes and steadily mowed down the lead, not, however, quite enough to lead at the wire, though it was neck and neck down the homestretch At this point, when every pin was important, the Garrison finish of Van Buren, above mentioned, brought forth round after round of well merited applause, resulting almost in an ovation to the skilful bowler.

After the excitement had subsided, music and dancing in the assembly hall, pool and billiards in the spacious room adjoining the alleys, and social chat in cozy nooks, rounded out the evening's pleasure, and it was late when the happy party dispersed.

The next game in the league series is called for Friday evening, Jan. 4, at the Elizabeth A. C. alleys in Elizabeth, and the home team will try conclusions with the Columbia Club of Hoboken Jan. 10 on the Park alleys.

Saturday evening's score:

BACHELORS.		BENEDICKS.
Sandford	159	Lyman	129
VanBuren	229	Worth, W. O.	184
Randolph	117	Howell	169
Leonard	134	Grant	127
Faber	111	Peck	119
Murray, W	137	Brown	164
Chapman	117	Rogers	97
Rushmore	120	Reed	144
Lenox	139	McCutchen, S. St. J	117
Matthews	149	Thiers	132
	1414		1402

Scorer—Mrs. Charles A. Reed.

The game was called at 8:40 and ended at 10:20.

The Bank Stays.

The report that the First National Bank directors had purchased the Babcock lot at the corner Front street and Madison avenue, is denied in every detail. They have not yet decided about remodeling the present building, but will probably do so.

Business Misfortune.

D. M. Gardner, baker, of 41 Somerset street, has turned over his business to his landlord, Alexander Thorn, to satisfy a chattel mortgage. The failure of Mr. Gardner will be received with sincere personal sympathy by his many friends in Plainfield. He has worked hard and conscientiously to make his business a success, but since May he has lost $1 000. He announces his intention of paying his creditors dollar for dollar as soon as he can get work.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

WINTER SURF BATHING.

Capt. Baker Finds Pleasure and Health in His Plunges into the Icy Breakers.

All Plainfielders who have been to Asbury Park, and their name is legion, have noted the rugged form of Captain Abram Baker, father of Vincent W. Baker of this city, and have heard that he bathes in the ocean the year round. The all-the-year story is an exaggeration, but the wonderful extent of the Captain's bathing season has attracted the attention of the Philadelphia Press, which reports as follows:

At Asbury Park there are several cold-water bathers. The most persistent is Capt. Abram Baker, a Fourth Avenue cottager. Last week, when the temperature was down to 42 degrees and the temperature of the ocean was 40 degrees, the captain, rigged out in the bathing-suit he wears during the Summer, emerged from his bath-house on the shore front, ran down to the strand, went into the surf, took a header, swam out for twenty-five yards, came to land again, and, shaking the nearly freezing water from his hair and beard, hurried to his bath-house for a vigorous rub down.

When he reappeared, dressed for the street, but without an overcoat, his face was aglow with a color like a rose. The only persons who shivered and shook and seemed supremely miserable were the spectators under their overcoats, and not the intrepid captain.

Capt. Baker has enjoyed his Winter ocean baths for nine years. He says: "I commence to bathe in the ocean on the 1st of April of each year, and generally keep it up until the 1st of January, or the middle of the same month. I would continue it longer, but 'Founder' Bradley's bath-houses, being the same that are used in the Summer, are rather cool. From the 1st of April to the 1st of July," he continued, "I take a bath daily; in July, August and September I bathe twice a day, but remain in the ocean not more than ten minutes.

"During October and November I bathe in the sea once a day during December and January once or twice a week, according to the weather. I have been nine years bathing in this manner. I am now nearly sixty-nine years of age, and I do not doubt if I had commenced thirty years ago I could bathe all the year. I wear two flannel shirts in Summer and Winter and very rarely wear an overcoat."

Capt. Baker last Winter enjoyed a dip in the ocean when the water was at the freezing point and the air eighteen degrees. That these winter baths are beneficial is evidenced by the fact that he has not been confined to his bed by illness in over twenty years. His rugged constitution is the result, he claims, of the "glorious climate" of California, he having journeyed westward in '49, when the gold fever was epidemic.

BLAZE IN THE KITCHEN.

Arthur F. Miller Saves Himself from Burning Out.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Miller, living on West Third street, came near being burned out of their home Monday noon Mrs. Miller left a few clothes near the kitchen stove to dry, while she went upstairs to attend to some household duties Soon afterwards she noticed the smell of smoke, and going to the kitchen found the clothes in a blaze.

She called her husband, being very much frightened, and by the time he arrived the clothes were burning rapidly. A curtain hanging near was consumed, and in his attempt to throw the burning clothes outdoors Mr. Miller almost upset a kerosene lamp into the blaze.

The mantel near the stove was considerably charred, before Mr. Miller subdued the fire.

Librarian's Report for the Month of December, 1894.

Volumes on accession-book, Nov. 30, 1894	12,766
" added by purchase	2
Volumes added by gift	1
Volumes now in the library	12,769
Number of card-holders	3,462
Cash rec'd from fines	$ 19.20
" " " non-resident subscriptions	$ 5.00
Cash received from sales of catalogues	$ 5.00
Home Circulation.
Fiction	1144
Juvenile	440
Biography	87
Travel	141
Philosophy	13
Religion	14
Sociology	27
Natural science	65
Useful arts	28
Fine arts	35
Literature	162
History	139
Bound magazines	11
Total	2297
Total for December, '93	2002
Increase	295
Visitors to building	2,881

EMMA L. ADAMS,
Librarian.

A FLORAL RECEPTION.

Mrs. Ackerman's Home the Scene of a Brilliant Assemblage.

ROSES, LILIES AND HYACINTHS.

Four Hundred Society People Enjoy the Event, and a Select Company Participate in the Subsequent Progressive Euchre Games for Prizes.

One of the smartest and most delightful functions of the present social season was the reception given by Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman at her beautiful residence on Ninth street, Saturday afternoon. Over four hundred of Plainfield's society leaders assembled to honor the fair hostess, and at their departure showered congratulations on her for the pleasure afforded them at being present. The spacious reception hall, parlors, and music room, were beautifully and artistically decorated with garlands of smilax and huge clusters of American Beauties, Easter lilies and hyacinths. Twined in graceful profusion on staircase and wall were festoons of beautiful trailing asparagus, intermingled with smilax. The beautiful banquet hall was done in white and green, a novel and strikingly artistic effect being given by an enormous basket, entwined in green, and filled to overflowing with gorgeous white hyacinths. From the massive candelabra radiated garlands of green, and under the artistic canopy thus formed stood the beautifully gowned fair ones who presided at the bountiful board.

In the large reception hall stood the fair hostess, and beside her her mother Mrs. F. H. Wills, and the beautiful Miss Ada Cox of New York, who received with her.

As the arriving guests passed through to the banquet room, where Mrs. Evarts Tracy and Mrs. Ernest Ackerman presided over the samovars at each end of the table, they were served by Miss Marion Dumont, Miss Gertrude Walz, the Misses Bessie and Nina Morgan, Miss Annie Cook, the Misses Catharine and Margaret Yates, Miss Harriet Halloway, Miss Molly Lawrence, and Miss Margaret Tracy.

After the departing guests had bade adieu, dinner was served to the hostesses and the women who assisted at the board during the reception, merry jest, piquant bonmots, and pleasant repartee, seasoning the elegant repast.

In the evening the guests to the number of forty assembled to enjoy the fascinations of progressive euchre, and many were the amusing features which marked the progress of the game.

The honor of winning the women's first prize fell to the lot of Miss Ada Cox, who received a beautiful fan, while a similar award for skilfulness among the men was captured in the shape of a dainty silver whisk, won by Rowland Cox, Jr. The next in skill among the fair ones was Miss Marie Morgan, who received a silver handkerchief holder for the belt. The second honor among the men was in the shape of a beautifully chased silver match safe, of which Lewis G. Timpson is the fortunate possessor. Mrs. Evarts Tracy won the consolation prize, which was a copy of the Oliver Wendell Holmes beautiful year book, while the grandstand finish of Louis Waring secured for him the gentlemen's consolation prize, a tasty bronze inkstand.

At the conclusion of the game, supper was served; and the happy house party, once more congratulating their host and hostess on the brilliant success attending the event, filled the waiting carriages and were driven home.

The affair served but to emphasize the long established fact that Mrs. Ackerman is indeed an ideal hostess.

ON TO SPRINGFIELD.

Lively Sleighing Party in Capt. Hand's Big Box on Runners.

Twenty-five young people of Plainfield crowded into Capt. Hand's capacious box sleigh Saturday night for a strawride.

A bugle and numerous tin horns enlivened the journey. Despite the clouds and the cold, the young people thoroughly enjoyed their ride on the county roads to Springfield and return. The party was chaperoned by Miss Hallie VanDeventer and Miss Long.

The merry party consisted of Miss Eleanor F Van Deventer, Miss Grace E Overton, Miss Edith L Burt, Miss Florence E Beale, Miss Lucie P Davis, Miss Pearl Edgerton of Brooklyn, Miss Mary Louise, Miss Elizabeth Allis, Everett Peck, Wilbur F Cornwell, Henry W Brower, Philip Suffern, J Vincent Rittenhouse, Walter B Rittenhouse, Charles B Morse, Henry B Drake, George A Horne, Nathan Lane, Jr., Raymond A McGee, Robert Douglass, Alvah Davis, Ernest Suffren, and Sydney E Titsworth.

THE TYLER RECEPTION.

The New Year Charmingly Ushered in 'Mid Roses and Laurel.

Among the many social functions of the season none will be more pleasantly remembered by those who were present than the New Year's reception and dance given by Mrs. Mason W. Tyler at her beautiful home, 525 West Seventh street, Monday afternoon and evening.

Throughout the house the art of the floral decorator was in evidence, transforming the beautiful rooms into bowers of green intermingled with clusters of American Beauties, Jacqueminots, and pinks.

The parlors were garlanded with laurel, which hung in tasteful profusion from archway and wall. Huge vases filled with pinks and roses, whose sweet odor filled the house, graced mantelpiece and table; and passing through the rooms to large library the guests were charmed with the pretty array of greens which everywhere depended from bookcase and wall. The library is an elegant new fireproof apartment, and its walls are filled with cases of choice volumes. Its hardwood floor added much to the pleasure of the dancing.

Those who received with Mrs. Tyler were Mrs. Decker of Scranton, and Mr and Mrs. Wright. The guests at the reception numbered over two hundred and fifty.

The banquet room was done in pink and green, festoons of laurel being draped over the pictures, clustered in convenient corners to form a background for gorgeous bouquets of roses, or tastily twined around the beautiful candelabras.

Presiding at the samovars at either end of the banquet board stood Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna and Miss Catherine Yates, and assisting them were the Misses Maud and Elizabeth Van Boskerck, Miss Kittie Stewart, Miss Annie Murphy, and Miss Marion Dumont. Max Wiertz catered in his usual superior manner.

Both at the afternoon function and the dance which followed in the evening, Lander's orchestra of New York discoursed sweet music, and Lander himself did the honor to lead. Over two hundred honored the host and hostess with their presence at the evening dance, and the time passed merrily as the happy assembly of beautifully gowned women and gay gallants tripped to the melody of the waltz, gathered at intervals around their fair hostess to congratulate her upon the success attending the occasion, or sought quiet nooks to rest and chat a moment ere the dance continued. So swiftly sped the hours that the New Year's had made his debut long before the happy party dispersed.

Among the guests were:

Mrs Lincoln of New York, Miss Lincoln, Miss Lewis of Binghampton, Miss Margaret McIntyre of Philadelphia, Miss Cox of New York, Miss Dyckman of White Plains, Mr and Mrs Daniel Ginna, Mr and Mrs Marion S Ackerman, Mr and Mrs L G Timpson, Mr and Mrs Fred W Yates, Mr and Mrs James Hallock, Mr and Mrs Joseph Sandford, the Misses VanBoskerck, Holly, Stewart, Waring, Talmadge, Hunter, Pierson, Harte, Huntington, Lowe, Yates, Randolph, Cooley, Murphy, Woltmann, Vail, Whiton, Tracy, Reinhart and Depew, and Messrs. Cox, Huntington, Van Boskerck, Waring, Cooley, Murray, Walz, Pierson, Shepard, VanBuren, Moore, Erickson, Patton, Talmadge, Woltmann, Lowe, Dwight, Goddard, Wadsworth, Patterson and McGee.

FIRE AT CAPT. HAND'S.

His Furnace Overheats the Floor Beams and the Firemen are Routed Out.

The alarm at 1:13 a. m., Sunday called the department to Wm. Hand's house at 518 Park avenue. Stillman Randolph, the popular driver of the Hook and Ladder truck was the first on the scene and the other aparatus followed in quick succession. The fire was caused by an overheated furnace. As the house filled with smoke the occupants were aroused from their slumbers and rushing to the dining room found the mantelpiece and carpet ablaze. The firemen quickly laid a line of hose and water was called for but was not turned into the house, the extinguishers proving sufficient to subdue the flames. The damage was nominal. Officer Cooney experienced some difficulty in ringing in the alarm as the hook at first refused to work and many were aroused from their Sunday morning naps at 9:20 when the readjustment of the mechanism caused the box to send in another round.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

BABY BELL.

Have you not heard the poets tell
How came the dainty Baby Bell
Into this world of ours?
The gates of heaven were left ajar:
With folded hands and dreamy eyes,
Wandering out of Paradise,
She saw this planet, like a star,
Hung in the glistening depths of even—
Its bridges, running to and fro,
O'er which the white-wing'd angels go,
Bearing the holy dead to heaven.
She touched a bridge of flowers—those feet,
So light they did not bend the bells
Of the Celestial asphodels:
They fell like dew drops upon the flowers;
Then all the air grew strangely sweet!
And thus came dainty Baby Bell
Into this world of ours!

—Thomas Bailey Aldrich.

ARIZONA'S GIRL MINING EXPERT.

At One Time She Was the Only Woman in a Mining Camp of 1,500 Men.

"Arizona has the only girl mining expert in the world," said Major John Rawlins, of Phoenix, Arizona. "For years she has followed up all the new camps and passed judgment on mines. Her name is Nellie Cushman. Just now she is making a pull for the Harqua Hala mines. She has just been in Los Angeles and bought a restaurant outfit for the new camp, and while her employees serve bacon and beans to the flannel-shirted miners at $1 apiece, she will make her location and begin mining as usual.

"She is a wonderfully plucky girl. It is about nine years now since she first came to Tucson. She was originally from Dodge City, Kan., and could not have been more than 17 years old. She got to examining the ore as it came out of the Tucson mines, and was soon as good a judge of its value as her brother Jim, who was foreman and mineralogist in one of them. The boys in the Tombstone locality soon began to bet on her judgment, and found that she was a wonderfully good guesser, and hit it close every time. Her fame spread and miners, who, as you know, are always superstitious, got an idea that to have her around and enjoy her good opinion some way brought luck. She knew where to dig for ore, too, and some of the ore in the Contention was found by following her advice in running a drift.

ENGLISHMEN NOT IN IT.

Americans are Better Dressed and Better Groomed.

"Englishmen are not nearly so well dressed as are Americans," said a tourist who spent last summer in England. "And well dressed Englishmen are not, as a rule, nearly so well groomed as are our well dressed Americans.

"I am speaking particularly of the class which can afford to dress according to its desires, and not of the English people as a whole. For the latter point it is a fact that in no country in the world are the whole people so well dressed as in the United States. This, of course, applies to the towns, for in the country, elsewhere as here, folks wear old clothes from choice as much as from necessity.

"But the working people here not only have more money to spend in clothes, but take a much greater interest in having good clothes, and in their personal appearance generally, than do the people of the same class in any European country.

"The people who I have especial reference to now, however, are those who can well afford to buy good clothes, who really wear good clothes, and who, if they gave it a thought, would think that beyond doubt they were well dressed—the average run of men, such as you would meet any day.

"So far as mere style goes, it is a different thing there from here, and we do not get many of our ideas and fashions in clothes from England, as I was quick to discover in my own dress this year, though many people think the latest London style is the latest thing.

"This year, at any rate, the latest thing in men's clothes in London would be about a year and a half late in New York. Then, as a general rule, Englishmen like their clothes to hang more loosely than do Americans, and it is not the cut of the clothes on which I base my opinion altogether, although this is, to my mind, a great point in favor of the American. English tailors don't know much about fitting a man, except in the matter of a box overcoat, perhaps.

An Open Letter to Santa Claus.

Dear San aC aws I am a little girl 8 years old and I want you to bring me a piano and big doll and rocking chair and muwf and pitcure book and that is all My name Maggie M Kirchner and my Sister Elsie B Kirchner 7 years wants a muf and a doll and a doll and a pair of gloves and a box of candy and that is all I want this time and my brotner Raymond Herbit Kirchner 4 years old wants a mouth organ and a drum and a string of cars and a tie and a pair of gloves and a some nuts and some candy and oranges and that is all we want this time good buy

Athenia
Passaic Co Van Houten
Avenue N J

P. S.—Ethel Ruth Kirchner is 6 months old and dood want much this she wand a carrige a rubber doll and a rattler that is all she want this time

Victimized.

"If I live long enough" he said moodily "I hope I'll get over being a natural mark for any bunco steerer that happens to be loose."

"What's the matter?"

"I concluded I'd have to economize, so I sent 50 cents to a man who said that was all he'd charge to tell me how to make a little money go a long way."

"And what did he tell you?"

"He simply wrote: 'Sent 5 cents by express to San Francisco.'"—Washington Star.

A Joke.

"Ha, ha."

"What is it?"

"A joke."

"What's a joke?"

"A simple turn of the humor-wrist. See! Ha, ha."—Puck.

Correct Proportion.

Hojack—Jaysmith weighs only a hundred, but his wife is twice as heavy.

Tomdik—Then she is his better two thirds.—Harlem Life.

Emancipated.

The bloomer girls who ride
the bike
Can now indulge in smoking, too,
Since they at last a match can strike
The same way that their brothers do.

THE MASQUERADE BALL.

A GORGEOUS SUCCESS IN THE COUNTRY CLUB CASINO.

Plainfield People Mask for a Holiday Dance, and Right Merrily Frisk the Hours Away.

The masquerade ball given in the Casino of the Union County Country Club Dec. 27 was a delight to all attending. The genius and activity of Lewis G. Timpson, leader in the social enterprise, won such hearty favor that the society of the town spontaneously united in making it a glowing success. The lights were softened into a pink glow; the walls were hung with holly and other evergreen, and southern moss; the nooks facing the superb waxed dancing-floor were cozy with cushions and rugs; and in contrast to the frosty air of the snowclad outdoors The Casino was a scene of cheer and comfort.

The musicians occupied the stage. A novelty in Plainfield was the double orchestra. Elliott himself presided at the piano and played continuously, while one-half of his men rendered music for the dance and the other half alternated with restful selections. That was up to 12. At midnight the two orchestras merged into one, and up to 2:30 the dance went merrily on.

The balcony was reserved for onlookers, who saw a scene of gayety and animation, peopled as the floor was, after the grand promenade, with men and women in all styles of fantastic or beautiful disguise. Many of the gowns were rich; all of the costumes displayed originality and good taste.

Entering, the marqueraders were received by the committee, and saluted by lifting their masks, "not necessarily for publication, but as an evidence of good faith". Then, divesting themselves of wraps, they passed in and joined the merry revelers.

The supper, served by Max Wiertz, was faultless. The music was divine. Nothing was lacking for perfect enjoyment of the event. Aside from the regular supper, a private supper was given by J. W. Reinhart in the ladies dining room, the participants being Mr and Mrs Reinhart, Miss Reinhart, Mr and Mrs James P McQuaide, Mr and Mrs J T Scott, Mr and Mrs L G Timpson, Dr G W Endicott, E M VanBuren and H Page Guyton.

Mrs F O Herring had the most striking costume of the ball; she represented the U S Mail; her dress was covered with used envelopes and trimmed with stamps; she carried at her side an exact copy of a letter box, cleverly manufactured by her husband.

Mrs J W Reinhart appeared as pink domino; Mrs James P McQuaide, Summer girl; Mrs A Douglass Salkeld, red domino; Mrs J T Scott, bride; Mrs Marion S Ackerman, Summer girl; Mrs Alexander Gilbert, Swedish costume; Mrs W J Roome, Gypsy; Mrs T S Wheeler, Summer girl; Mrs Walter Wilkinson, flower girl; Mrs W L Saunders, Summer girl; Mrs J Frank Raymond, flower girl; Mrs Evarts Tracy, Gypsy; Mrs L G Timpson, Havanna; Mrs Irving H Brown, Princeton tiger in black and orange; Mrs Walter E Stewart, domino; Mrs Edward S Hooley, domino; Mrs Craig A Marsh, Watteau gown; Mrs Herbert Brooks, domino; Mrs B A Hegeman, Jr, Gypsy; Mrs R H Depew, fancy yellow dress; Mrs Corliss, fancy costume; Mrs Auguste Kleinecke, Summer girl; Miss Massett, Swedish costume; Miss Fairbairn, Greek costume; Miss M Johnson Gypsy; Miss Corliss, Summer girl; Miss A Johnson, Gypsy; Miss Murphy, Gypsy.

Miss Louise Dryden represented Night, in striking black gown with gold stars; Miss Mary Dryden, tambourine girl; Miss Annie Dryden, Summer girl; Miss Jessamy Harte, Summer girl; Miss Kathryn Yates and Miss Marguerite Yates, college girls, in gown and cap; Miss May Waring, Kate Greenaway; Miss Richardson, fancy costume of flowered silk; Miss Kathryn Reinhart, white silk fancy costume; Miss Reinhart, Quakeress; Miss Manning, Little Bo-Peep.

L H VanBuren was a notable figure in real baby costume, with Mr Johnson as nurse; Auguste Kleinecke was a bold Hussar; Evarts Tracy, Highlander; Allan Worth, Harlequin; J Parker Mason and H W Corliss, monks; J W Bartindale, Captain U. S. Navy; R M Shepard, page; J Frank Raymond, knight; Edward L Hall, army officer; Dr Walter Wilkinson, sailor; McCready Sykes, Princeton student; W J Roome, master of the hounds; B A Hegeman, Jr., a handsome prince; Walter Place, clown; Howard Beebe, page; H A Patton and Edward Finch, college students; Marion S Ackerman, Alpine hunter; Rowland Cox, prince; Irving H Brown, college student; Marshall Adams and Thomas VanBoskerck, babes; George VanBoskerck, U S Navy captain; John Moore Continental; L E Waring, clown; Peter B Matthews, Mephistopheles; Everett Dwight, Fred Reynolds, Gerald Lowe, Henry Lowe, clowns.

Joseph W Reinhart appeared as king and was a truly royal presence in red satin and ermine. James P McQuaide was a page; Mr Pearson, prince; F O Herring, Hebrew peddler, whose tray completed a perfect representation.

Others of the masqueraders, without distinctive titles, were: Mrs Henry D Brewster, Mrs E E Dorman, Mrs G Wharton Edwards, Mrs D T VanBuren, Mrs Massett, Mrs Gifford Mayer, Mrs Wm Sandford, Mrs O T Waring, Mrs J W Sandford, Miss Louise Depew, Miss Long, Miss Moore, Miss Randolph, Miss Kittie Stewart, Miss Place, Miss Minnie Brooks Miss May Sandford, Frederick Huntington, F W Frost, F H Freeman, H Page Guyton, A Douglass Salkeld, Harry West, Jules Erickson, Alex Gilbert, H O Stroull, Henry McGee, Mr Parker, Wm P Ball, Edward S Hooley, T S Wheeler, Craig A Marsh, Herbert Brooks, Frank D Ely, Meredith Dryden, Albert Woltmann, A W Chase, W L Saunders, R H Depew, Stuart H Patterson, James Leonard, Dr Endicott.

The committee, Messrs. Lewis G Timpson, J T Scott, E M VanBuren, Augustus Shepard, Jr., O G Waring, Harry V Borden, Howard Huntington and F W Walz, were faultlessly attired in English hunting costume, with red coats, white riding breeches, and high boots.

The patronesses were: Mrs Robert L Burnett, Mrs Irving H Brown, Mrs Rowland Cox, Mrs J Edgar Corliss, Mrs Geo Wharton Edwards, Mrs Howard O Fleming, Mrs Alexander Gilbert, Mrs Benjamin A Hegeman Jr, Mrs Wm E Lowe, Mrs J. Parker Mason, Mrs Joseph W Reinhart, Mrs Wm J Roome, Mrs Wm L Saunders, Mrs James T Scott, Mrs Walter E Stewart, Mrs Wm P Smith, Mrs Mason W Tyler, Mrs Evarts Tracy, Mrs Lewis G Timpson, Mrs G W VanBoskerck, Mrs Orville T. Waring, Mrs George W Endicott, Mrs Frank O. Herring

BRIAR PIPE
GIVEN AWAY
WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF
DUKES MIXTURE
for 35 cents
Every pipe stamped
DUKES MIXTURE or
2oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Duke's Mixture

Congregational Cheer.

Although the temperature was almost zero, it could not check the enjoyment of those that attended the Christmas entertainment of the Congregational Church last Friday. The church was decorated with evergreens, and a large Christmas tree, very prettily trimmed, stood in one corner.

The entertainment commenced with an instrumental trio "Song Without Words" by Tschaikowski, acceptably rendered by Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organ; Mrs. M. E. Dwight, piano; and F. Ludwig Conde, violin.

Prayer by Rev. C. L. Goodrich followed, after which a quartette, composed of Miss M. G. Morse, Miss E. A. Whiting, Stacy R. Reynolds and Robert Clark, rendered the selection "The Sweet Refrain" by Fairlamb. Arthur Robinson then sang "Jesus Once Was a Little Child". This was his first appearance before an audience, and he certainly distinguished himself. Miss Amy Emmons next gave a recitation, "Pecola". "Luther's Cradle Song" was pleasingly rendered by three little girls from the primary department, Miss Laura Baker, Miss Ethel VanZandt and Miss Ethel Lorton.

"Harry's Christmas Message" was recited by Harold Nomer in a way that called forth the applause of everyone.

The quartette next rendered another selection "Heaven's Angelic Choir", by Ashford.

"Bethlehem's Star", a recitation and song, was charmingly given by Miss Marion Dwight, Miss Mildred Day, and Herbert Glaentzer

A recitation, "A Grenada Serenade", by Miss Katherine Dwight, was greatly enjoyed.

Another instrumental trio, "Der Freischutz", by VonWeber, concluded the programme, after which the gifts to the primary and confectionery and oranges for the older scholars were distributed. All were invited to remain for a period of social converse.

The instrumental music was very fine and was greatly enjoyed by everyone present. The children who took part in the entertainment showed that they had been well trained and took the parts assigned them very satisfactorily.

A Tribute.

In the death of Col. Archer N. Martin of Summit, the loss is not to the locality in which he lived but also a loss to the State and the Democratic party of which he was a most earnest member. He was broad-minded and liberal in his views, and had the courage of his convictions. The writer saw much of him during his residence in Union County and can feelingly say that our State and party has met with a sad loss.

J. E. M.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Rates of Advertising

Space	WEEKS 1	2	3	MONTHS 1	2	3	6	1Y
1 in.	$1.00	1.50	2.00	$2.50	4.00	5.00	8.00	15.00
2 in.	[illegible]	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00	20.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	7.00	10.00	[illegible]	25.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	[illegible]	[illegible]	32.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	[illegible]	[illegible]	37.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	[illegible]	[illegible]	45.00
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	[illegible]	45.00	70.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00	140.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double-cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings.
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything.

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
B EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR,
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos, always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 119 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S
INDIAN VEGETABLE
PILLS
Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

L. B. WOOLSTON, J. F. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTER'S SUPPLIES. 141-143 NORTH AV
eod3tf

TELEPHONE COMPANY

BEARING CONNECTION WITH OVER 12,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J H Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telegraph Exchange 175 North ave opp depot
[illegible] Parker Grove and Front sts
[illegible] 4th and Park avenue
Frank Rowley Somerset and Craig place

Subscriber's Name	Address.
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 5th
Ames, C. J.	12 Crescent ave
Alert Hose Co., No 1	Madison ave
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H.	32 West 7th street
Adams, Dr D G	46 Grove
Brakeley, P W	[illegible]
Brokaw, Isaac N	Bound Brook
Babcock, Geo H	5th and Union sts
Barkalew & Dunn	15 North ave
Boone, W, C., M. D.	Cor. Front & Central Av
Bushnell, John	Central ave, and 9th st
Beerbower, J E	Park av and 2d s
Borg, Jos F, M D	20 E 6th s
Board of Education—6th st, 6th and Union sts
Booth, E H	66 Madison av
	6th & Liberty, 6th & Monroe
Clark, E B	2 Waynwood plac
Children's Home	Jackson ave.
Closson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
CONSTITUTIONALIST Office	2 North ave.
Cook, A D & Bro	Park ave and RR.
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	[illegible]
Chapman, Mrs. F. A.	9 Third Place
Cruikshank, S. A.	126 Carlton avenue
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, F V M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy, (J H Leggett, Mgr)	Park ave and Front st
DAILY PRESS	2 North ave.
Depew, Mrs. E. H	16 Crescent ave.
Day, Frank	52 W. Fourth st.
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Demarest, P M	37 Park av
Dumont, John B	[illegible] E 7th st
Decker, T—pay station	Westfield, N J
DeGraff, James	22 E 9th st
Doane, T O—Chief F F D	46 W 5th st
Dollner, S L	121 Madison av
Davis & Stevens, coal and wood	Office W Front
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave and 4th st
Evening News, T. W. Morrison, Editor	7 Som't st.
Engine No 1	West 2d st.
Engine No 2	Front st.
Engine No 3	Somerset st.
Evans, Geo C	37 Washington ave
Fisk, Chas. J	29 West Seventh St
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French, F M & Sons	Somerset st.
Fritts, Dr J T	33 Park ave
Fleming, Howard	38 Park avenue
Fisk, Pliny	3 W 7th st
French, C Frank	69 Somerset st
Grant Geo W, Chief of Police	26 W 6th st
Goddard, C M	17 Third Place.
Griffen, A M	13 E Front st
Gaston, M. D., W F	5th and New sts
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 8th st
Howell & Hardy	North Avenue
Heyniger, L	81 & 83 Somerset street
Hegeman, B. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	42 East Front st
Hyde, Chas.	141 Front street.
Hedder Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Higgins, M. A	76 East 4th st—38 North Ave
Hetfield, John N	204 South 2d st—31 Park av
Harder, Francis C	122 Madison av
Herwanee, O	Netherwood
Hoagland's City Express	39 North av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	68 W. Front st
Jones, Evan	13 Kensington st
Kirkner, J	5th and Division sts.
Kaufman, W F	55 W 7th st
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L N	Crescent ave
Lord, Wm A	Belvidere av
Loomis & Rice	[illegible] Broadway
Laire, J F & Co	3 W Front st
Linke, Frank	18 W Front st
Lounsberry, F C	12 [illegible] ave
Myers, J H	7 East 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
Miller, J G	10 E. Front st.
Moore, Geo. A	20 North ave
Muhlenberg Hospital	South ave.
Murray, Dr. Wm. H	107 Broadway
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
Pond Mach-Tool Co	Boulevard below Grant av
[illegible] Hardware Co	42 W Front st
Reed, Chas A	27 Myrtle ave
Milliken, E F	120 Central
Morrison, T W	31 Somerset st
MacDonald, J F	36 E Front st
yers, Lawrence	E Front st
Netherwood Hotel	Netherwood.
Newhall, Henry B	16 E 7th st
N J Postal-Tel Co	4 Park ave
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave.
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Roberts, D G	12 North avenue.
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and North ave.
Runyon, A M & Son	Park ave
Runyon, A M & Son	49 Madison ave
Rushmore, Dr Edward	Park ave. near Fifth st
Roome, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves.
Runkle, H. G	8th s
Runyon, Chas W	Park ave
Rice, R. W. & Co	75b cor. Emily and Duer sts
Randolph, L W	Front st
Rogers, D W	W [illegible]
Rogers, N P Jr	36 Westervelt ave
Stover, E W	29 east 9th st
Serrell, Lemuel W	Front st. and Plainfield ave
Seguine, C. J	60 Front street.
Shaw, R J	Front st. opp. Park ave.
Streuli, A S	Prospect ave.
Smith, W F	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Shephard A D	Fanwood
Smith, Jas A	18 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Smith, Chas A	Spring st., Westfield, N J
Stelle, Irving G	Sixth st
Terrill & Cole	16 E Front st
Thompson, A. D	20-22 North av
Talmadge, Henry P (Esq)	Netherwood
Thickstun, Jno A	Madison av
Titsworth, Jos M	23 W. 7th st.
Tomlinson, Dr T H	La Grande and N B'dwy
Tobin & [illegible]	51 North av
Tracy, J Evarts	8th and Division st
Thorn, Alex	27 Somerset st
Tweedy, O. B	11 Crescent avenue
Townsend, Samuel	60 Rockview av
Thompson, A D	Prospect ave
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Thorn, R	76 W Front st
United States Express Co	2 North ave
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle W. J	10 North ave
Wharton, Clifton	17 Central av
Woltman, C	West Seventh street
Wadsworth, W B	8th and Liberty sts
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Welchers, J F	W 8th st. near Grand ave
Waters, E, Ass't Chief	3d st near Washington
Westfield, pay station	Westfield, N J
Wotherspoon O G	144 E Front s

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

Place	Rate	Place	Rate
Asbury Park, N J	60c	Hempstead N Y	45c
Astoria, N Y	50c	Hoboken N J	35c
Babylon, N Y	60c	Hunter's Point N Y	45c
Bath, N Y	40c	Irvington N J	40c
Bayonne N J	45c	Islip N Y	60c
Bergen Point N J	35c	Jamaica N Y	45c

Place	Rate	Place	Rate
Bayside N Y	50c	Jersey City N J	[illegible]
Bay Shore N Y	75c	Keyport N J	[illegible]
Bayville N Y	70c	[illegible] N J	[illegible]
Belleville N J	40c	Laurel Hill N Y	[illegible]
Blissville N Y	45c	Leonia N J	[illegible]
Bloomfield N J	30c	Little Neck N Y	[illegible]
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	[illegible]
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	[illegible]
Brooklyn N Y	30c	Madison N J	[illegible]
Caldwell N J	45c	Matawan N J	[illegible]
Carlstadt N J	40c	Millburn N J	[illegible]
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	[illegible]
Chatham N J	40c	Morristown N J	[illegible]
Closter N J	45c	Newark N J	[illegible]
Colt's Neck N J	70c	New Brunswick N J	[illegible]
Coney Island N Y	45c	Newtown N Y	[illegible]
Cresskill N J	45c	New York N Y	[illegible]
Dover N J	40c	Orange N J	[illegible]
East Norwich N Y	60c	[illegible] N J	[illegible]
Eatontown N J	60c	[illegible] N J	[illegible]
Elizabeth N J	15c	Paterson N J	[illegible]
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	[illegible]
Fairview N J	45c	Rahway N J	[illegible]
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	[illegible]
Far Rockaway N Y	45c	[illegible] N J	[illegible]
Flatbush N Y	35c	Short Hills N J	[illegible]
Flushing N Y	40c	South Amboy N J	[illegible]
Fort Lee N J	45c	South River N J	[illegible]
Franklin Park N J	35c	Staten Island N Y	[illegible]
Freehold N J	50c	Westfield N J	[illegible]
German Settlem't N Y	60c	Woodbridge N J	[illegible]
Glen Cove N Y	50c	Yonkers N Y	60c
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton N J	[illegible]
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	60c

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1894, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer

FOR MALARIA,
GENERAL DEBILITY.
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. Co.
RAHWAY, N. J.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER
FOR THE NEVERSLIP
THE ONLY
SHOE FOR WINTER USE.

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.

Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,

Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.

On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dec hardware blacksmiths' supplies, etc.
sole agents for Union county.

$6.00
........TO........
CALIFORNIA

is our Sleeping Car Rate on the Phillips-Rock Island Tourist Excursion, from Boston and kindred distant cities on the route of this car, to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The cars have upholstered spring seats, are Pullman build, and appointments perfect.

You have a special manager on the car all the way, and excursions run once a week, leaving Boston every Tuesday. Save money by taking this popular mode of travel.

Address for full particulars,

A. PHILLIPS & CO.
296 Washington st., Boston, Mass.

JNO. SEBASTIAN,
Gen. Passenger Agent, Chicago.
[illegible]

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 21½ W. Front street, to 261 West [illegible], one door east of Madison avenue to solicit the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

NOT YET FINISHED.

Common Council Finds It Has Its Hands Full of Work.

FINAL MEETING DEFERRED TO '95.

Last Night's Session Largely Devoted to the Auditing of Claims and the Hearing of the Report on Water Supply—Judge Coddington Rebuked for Constituting Himself a Disbursing Department.

The only absentee from the session of the Common Council Dec. 24 was Councilman Billington. The meeting was a protracted one, and as the business was not concluded for the year it was decided to hold another session in the new year.

Petitions were received and referred to the proper committees for a crosswalk at the corner of Sixth and Washington streets, a fire hydrant at West Sixth and Arlington, a hydrant at the Grant avenue neighborhood of West Eighth street, and apportionment of taxes on the Martine estate.

The report of Wm. A. Coddington, City Judge, was received for the year, showing 233 arrests; 23 were committed, 193 fined, [illegible] released under suspension of sentence, 25 dismissed or discharged, 18 held in bonds, 6 were unsettled, and 4 appealed. The money received from fines was $810 86 and from back fines $8. The expenses were $228 27, including $36 for "stove-pipe and so forth". The reading of this item made the councilmen open their eyes in surprise, remark being made that it would have been cheaper to move the chimney; and the Finance Committee through Mr. Dumont reported on it later in the evening in words of disapproval. Said Mr. Dumont: "The City Judge seems to have constituted himself a disbursing officer, and we think he has no right to order supplies without warrant. We recommend that the City Judge file with the City Clerk vouchers for the account submitted, and that in the future no bills be paid except after examination and audit as in the usual manner." This was unanimously adopted.

Mr. Frost for the Sewerage Committee reported that 17,411 feet of pipe had been laid, with about 10,000 more to do; that the engineer had been directed to stop construction for the season after the 110 foot gap on Putnam avenue should have been closed up.

The report on the water supply was received and disposed of as fully told in other columns of this issue.

Petitions for fire hydrants and crosswalks were reported back and laid on the table for the action of the incoming Council. The bond of Constable Rockafellow was referred to the Corporation Council for investigation. The matter of the apportionment of taxes on the Martine estate was referred to the new Council, Mr. Dumont stating that the opening of the highway through the property was progressing, and that action on the petition could soon be taken. $3 000 was ordered borrowed for the sewer fund, $3,000 for the fire fund, and $5,500 for the general fund. The contract for the street lights was renewed with the Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company to Nov. 1, 1895. Street lamps were ordered placed as follows: one on West Fourth street between New and Liberty; two on Church street between Front and Third; one on Division street between Sixth and Seventh; one on Arlington avenue between Fourth and Fifth streets; and two on Madison avenue east of Sixth street. The ordinance amending the dog ordinance was adopted on final passage. A vast pile of bills, aggregating about $9 000, was audited and ordered paid. The Council adjourned to meet Friday night, Jan. 4.

The Baptists' Christmas.

The Primary department of the First Baptist Sunday-school held their Christmas entertainment Friday afternoon, when a programme of music and recitations was rendered, the following taking part: May Batchelor, Harry Woodland, Edna Lewis, Helen Armstrong, Violet VanWinkle, Anna Morrison, Gussie Allen, Marguerite Serrell, Jerry Manning, Ada Mershon, Maude and Myra Emmons, Bettie Weiss, Edna Oakley, Hazel Grant, Clyde Slater, Minnie Serrell, Edith G[illegible], Carrie Bird, Susie Woodward, Ella Serrell, Ethel King, Hattie French and Ursula Krewson. M. Stairet of New York then gave a Punch and Judy show. "Santa Claus Is Coming" was sung by Wallace Pierce, and preceded the advent of that jolly character in the person of Frank Jones, who delighted the hearts of the little ones by presenting them with gifts.

The scholars of the First Baptist Sunday-school were entertained last evening by Mr. Stairet of New York, who gave some clever shadow pictures and delighted all with ventriloquism. The singing of Christmas carols and distribution of candy added to the enjoyment of all. Howard Case was the pianist, and was assisted by Robert Barnes with the violin.

Borough License Fees, $700.

Application has been made to the Somerset County Court of Common Pleas to increase the price of hotel and saloon license to $700, the same as charged in Plainfield.

The Mayor and Council have by resolution instructed Borough Counsel Reed to press the matter and he says that it is probable the Court will increase the fee. If this is done it will largely increase the

SANTA CLAUS CAPTURED.

Methodists Also Have a Merry Christmas Celebration.

The Christmas festivities of the Sunday-school of the First Methodist Episcopal Church were held in Vincent Chapel December 28. In opening, the Sunday-school sang a Christmas carol "Crown Him". Miss Gertrude Sharp acted as pianist. The singing was led by Mr. Bond. The pastor, Rev. C. R. Barnes, offered a prayer, which was followed by the doxology and the carol "Christmas Time" sung by the school.

Miss Edna French delighted the audience with the long and beautiful poem "The Knight and the Page".

The school sang the carol "Sing to the Saviour", after which Jas. W. Jackson, the Sunday-school superintendent, gave a short talk. He said that with the church in its present condition, just freed from debt, it would not be fitting to give any elaborate presents to anybody, but in the name of the Sunday-school, he now presented Mr. Bond with a parlor-lamp, for his kind services rendered during the past year. Mr. Bond thanked Mr. Jackson, and the Sunday-school, and said he would always think of them when he lighted the beautiful lamp. Mr. Jackson now announced that the entertainment for visitors was over, but the school would each receive the usual inseparable Sunday-school Christmas gifts, a box of candy and an orange. The children enjoyed this part of the programme immensely, as Mr. Jackson predicted they would. The candy was distributed by Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. N. Y. Hull, Clifford McGee, Arthur Crone, Miss Gertie Sharp, James Joy, Mr. Bingman, James Jackson, and George R. Cornwell. Lewis Dunsvan, the Santa Claus of fifteen minutes before, gave each person an orange, for a Christmas gift, as they passed out of the door.

The committee, under whose able management the entertainment was conducted, consisted of Miss Minnie French, Mrs. Clark, Miss Margaretta Barnes, Mrs. N. Y. Hull, Miss Gertrude Sharp, and Mrs. L. M. French.

The programme in the entertainment for the younger children in the afternoon consisted of a recitation, "The Day Star" by a number of the primary department, and the same cantata rendered in the evening.

SANTA CLAUS AT HOLY CROSS.

Novel Electrical Effects at the Annual Christmas Festival of the Sunday-school.

The annual Christmas festival of the Sunday-school of Holy Cross Church took place in the parish building Dec. 28, a large gathering of friends joining the children and teachers in the enjoyable exercises. There were the usual cheery carols, a short service and a brief, happy talk by the rector, Rev. T. Logan Murphy, after which, to the accompaniment of a mighty jingling of sleigh-bells, old Santa Claus himself burst upon the scene and inquired for Superintendent Benjamin R. Western. It appeared that the benevolent old saint had been so pleased by his evening with the Holy Cross children a year ago that he had expressed the desire to be on hand again, and so the superintendent wrote him a letter of invitation for this occasion and here he was, with his ruddy cheeks, his ermine robes and the arctic icicles still fringing his revered whiskers. A neighboring barn was placed at the disposal of his reindeers and The Press man who went over to interview the team and get their impressions of Plainfield found them the most affable and altogether engaging span of reindeer he ever met. Some few doubting ones in the audience were foolish enough to imagine that the features of Santa Claus bore a strange resemblance to those of Horsley Barker, the Front street medicine man, but the children said they knew better, and they ought to know. The good saint presided grandly over the distribution of a motley host of pretty and useful gifts, not to mention an inexhaustible supply of the sweetest confections, and then, remembering an important appointment for midnight at the North Pole, hurried away with a parting promise to show up again next year.

The most interesting feature of the affair, perhaps, was the novel and elaborate electrical display arranged by C. P. Sebring. An immense arch at the end of the building, bearing in gilt lettering a Christmas sentiment, was brilliantly illuminated by electric lamps and surmounted by a large Bethlehem star, in the centre and points of which glowed beautiful incandescent globes. The two tall Christmas trees were lavishly studded with nodding lamps of many colors and the effect of the whole was one of original and unusual beauty.

Beside the rare array of costly presents for the children, there were handsome gifts for the rector and his wife, and for each member of the church choir.

Miss Lockey Entertains.

Miss Mary Lockey entertained a number of her friends last evening at her home on East Fifth street. Games and dancing kept the young people busy for part of the evening, and refreshments were served. A song by Herbert Schutt and several recitations by Miss Mary Lockey were thoroughly enjoyed. Among those present were Miss Lucie Davis, Miss Pearl Edgerton of Brooklyn; Miss Lillian Schoonmaker, Miss Lillian Green, Allen Taylor, Volney Greeb, Henry Brower, Alva Davis, Sydney Titsworth, Herbert Schutt, Robert Douglas.

—Short copyrighted serials by the best [illegible]

A FLYING MACHINE.

SECRETARY LANGLEY OF SMITHSONIAN INSTITUTE THE INVENTOR.

The Aeroplane Flies Three Hundred Yards and Looks Like a Bird. Two Screws Driven by Steam Act as Propellers while Wings Sustain the Thing in Its Flight.

A week's work with Secretary Langley's aeroplane is declared to have demonstrated the possibility of aerial navigation. The apparatus was made to fly three hundred yards with a steady, even movement, propelled by a small but swiftly revolving pair of screws.

Although the new flying machine at a distance looks much like a very large bird, its wings do not flap. They are set in a fixed position, and so inclined that by the rapid movement through the air the mechanism will be supported as is a kite. When the device has been perfected and adapted to practical use the wings will be made to move for the purpose of guiding the aerial vessel's course, just as an eagle moves its pinions while sailing.

Illustrated accounts of the model on which the Secretary of the Smithsonian Institute was then at work appeared in several papers last year.

The new flying machine is twelve feet in length over all, and eight feet wide measured across the front wings. There are four wings, and the caudal pair—if they may be so termed—are little more than half the size of those attached to the body. But for the fact that the two pairs are separated by an interval of several feet the nerveless creature might be described as a monstrous butterfly.

The fine white cloth of which the wings are in part made is stretched over a light framework of numerous closely set veins or ribs, adding to the likeness. The aluminum body is very light, weighing only about two pounds. It is nearly four feet long, and the width is almost half the length, giving it a decidedly chunky appearance. In transverse section it would approximate a circle.

The propelling power is steam. It is applied through the agency of a little copper boiler and engine within the aluminum body, giving motion to a pair of wooden screws placed at the postern end of the body. The little engine is marvellously light and powerful for a mechanism so reduced in size. The propeller's blades are hardly thicker than paper. They are about a foot long, one piece to each, and hum like a hive of bees.

UNWILLINGLY JOINED THE CHASE.

Dragged Along by a Bull Dog in His Mad Pursuit of a Cat.

A spinster of the emancipated woman type was leading a bull dog by a chain and evidently enjoying the terror which its presence inspired among her weaker sisters, who were still bound in the chains of conventionalism. The bull dog, with the listless good nature peculiar to his species, paid no attention to anybody or anything until a predatory cat essayed to cross the street a few feet in front of it. If there is one thing more than another that a bull dog is death on it is a cat.

The situation is instantly reversed. The bull dog was leading the emancipated woman a mad chase across the avenue in pursuit of the feline, that stood not a moment on the order of its going. The street was crowded with vehicles, and it was only because that kindly providence which tempers the wind to the shorn lamb and the fall to the drunken man happened just then to be taking a keen interest in the fate of that woman of advanced views that her life was preserved. As it was, the recording angel must have had a particularly busy two minutes taking stenographic notes of the oaths that were uttered by excitable Jehus as they threw their horses on their haunches.

On the opposite side of the street the cat sped down a flight of steps leading to an areaway and hopped onto a window sill, where it was beyond the reach of its less agile foe.

The woman, either because she wouldn't or couldn't let go the chain, was lugged down the same steps, narrowly escaping a fall, and for five minutes she stood there tugging vainly at the chain while the dog strained and leaped and barked in fruitless efforts to get within biting distance of puss.

The crowd gathered around enjoyed the woman's discomfiture. Not a man offered to assist her.

"It just serves her right," remarked a pretty girl to her companion. "She ought to know better than go around with such a horrid brute."

All the women present were evidently of the same opinion. A policeman, attracted by the crowd, finally came to her rescue, and by main strength pulled the dog up the steps, while the terrified cat made tracks for parts unknown.

Self Control.

There is no person more to be admired than the woman who is thoroughly mistress of herself. The one who is calm under excitement, brave in emergencies, dispassionate, assuredly possesses most noble qualities of both mind and heart.

Yet you cannot for a moment imagine that she has acquired them wholly as an inheritance. Natural disposition may indeed sometimes lay the foundation for this enviable control over one's words and deeds, but a rigid course of self-training must always rear the superstructure.

A woman who allows herself to fly into a state of nervous excitement in the presence of an insect or a mouse cannot hope to preserve her equilibrium in the face of a sudden disaster. One who habitually gives way to fretfulness or fault-finding cannot think to form for herself a well balanced character, neither can she expect to have entire health of body or mind.

The increase of nervous and mental maladies among members of the gentler sex should lead their sisters to reflection. The troubles which have overtaken so many may also overwhelm others, unless they take timely warning. In nine cases out of ten habitual self-control may be the preventive of nervous disorders and of insanity.

A woman who would be really well, and who would exert a helpful influence over her friends, must learn to moderate her task and her pleasures, to avoid worry, and to cultivate a resolute calmness of demeanor.—Harper's Bazar.

Counterfeits in the Plate.

John B. Shazzl was recently charged and convicted with depositing a counterfeit fifty-cent piece in the contribution box of New Haven's St. James's Roman

FIRE DEPARTMENT HORSES.

It Costs the City of New York $100,000 to Keep Them.

The prescribed height for horses in the New York Fire Department is between 15 1-2 and 16 3-4 hands, and the minimum weight is 1,300 pounds. The Fire Department does not buy horses outright, paying for them on delivery, but keeps them on probation in the service of the department at the training stables for one month. There the horse is tested as to health and speed, and at the end of the month the Fire Commissioners have the right to reject any horse not sound or suitable. About forty-five per cent. of the horses sent to the training stables are rejected.

There are exclusive of the fireboats 86 fire engine companies in New York, a majority of them requiring two horses, and some of them three, in addition to which the hose tenders require one or two horses each. There are trucks, nearly all of which require three horses, and in addition to these are the horses required by the fire chiefs, the Commissioners, the fuel wagons, water towers, and the relay. In all there are about 400 horses constantly in the service of the New York Fire Department. It loses by death about fifteen a year, and by the sale of horses no longer serviceable about twenty. The maintenance of the equine department of New York's fire service costs a considerable amount in a year. The item of forage is $50,000. The item of horseshoeing is $15,000. Additional horses cost $24,000. The hospital and training stables with medicines included cost $10,000. These four items foot up $99,500, so that it may be said, in a general way, that New York spends $100,000 a year for the care, keep, and renewal of its fire horses exclusive of the salaries of attendants, and the interest on the money which the city has invested in horses. Stablemen at the training stables receive $2 a day. The foreman gets $1,500 a year.

ELECTRIC CHURNS.

Some of the Many Wonderful Electrical Devices Exhibited at Budapest.

Electricity not only rings doorbells, lights houses and cooks food, but it sweeps the floors, washes the dishes, blacks boots and shoes, and so on through the whole catalogue of domestic operations. If no machine has yet been invented to dress and to feed a man, it is only because the inventors have been so busy that they have not got around yet to the electric valet and the electric knife and fork.

If any one thinks there is any exaggeration about this he ought to have attended the exhibition of machines of this sort that has just closed at Budapest, Hungary. This exhibition, which was organized by the Hungarian Commercial Museum, was a great success, and probably will result in greatly increasing the use of small electric motors for domestic purposes. All sorts of curious electrical machines were exhibited, including wood-working and metal-working machines, clothes-washing machines, sewing machines, ventilators, ice-making machines, blowers and looms. These different machines were run by thirty alternating current motors and forty-two continuous current motors. Thus the contest between these two types of current which has been waging almost since the first introduction of electricity may still be said to be carried on on even terms, the advantage being a little in favor of the latter.

One of the most interesting machines exhibited was an electric churn, of which the motor was of the alternating current type.

A MUSICAL PRODIGY.

The Nice Sense of Pitch Possessed by Six-year-old Marie Edwards.

A brown-haired girl, whose head barely comes above the keyboard of a piano when she stands beside it, is the centre of attraction for Chicago musicians just now. It has been generally agreed that little Marie Edwards has a gift which would be coveted by some of the most eminent musicians, and that in her perception of tone and in her natural sense of pitch she is a phenomenon. At a private meeting of expert musicians, where she was brought by her father, one of the company struck a high note on the piano where the tones are mere unmusical clinks.

"That is G sharp," said Marie, who was climbing upon a chair in a corner.

"And what are these?" said the musician, as he pressed down a number of keys at the lower end of the scale.

The little girl scarcely paused before calling out the names of each of the tones struck. Then followed a series of tests, which would have disconcerted 99 out of 100 of the adult musicians of the world. Intricate chords were struck—some of them were simply discords—and in every case the child picked out each of the tones buried in the puzzling mass of sounds. One of the party then whistled a few notes and she named them one by one, a reference to the piano verifying her judgment in each case. The same feat was repeated with a violin and with various musical instruments.

The extreme delicacy of her perception may be understood when it is known that if the same note is struck on two pianos varying but slightly in pitch she can tell which instrument is the more correct.

Good Out of Populism.

Senator Peffer is to be credited with a thoroughly sensible bill which, being introduced thus early in the session, ought to become a law. He wants the disreputable and expensive custom of Senatorial funerals done away with. He sees no reason why the death of a Senator should be the occasion of a pleasure trip across the country, with champagne and other drinks ad lib. for the "mourners." It may possibly be true that the death of certain Senators would be fit occasion for public rejoicings, but it is surely not decent to express that joy in a costly Senatorial "jag" accumulated at public expense.

Poetical but Impracticable.

The modern Enoch Arden avocation received a setback in the local courts yesterday when a woman was granted a divorce from a husband who had been mysteriously missing for 28 years, but who returned to find her happily married for the second time. The Enoch Arden idea works all right in poetry, but when it comes to every day practice the men who stay at home and meet the duties of the fireside as they arise stand by long odds the best show with society, as well as with courts and juries.

Some people appear to be utterly [illegible]

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.
Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to rent. Orders by postal, P. O. box 396 or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 16 Park avenue will receive prompt attention. Residence [illegible] E. Front street, corner [illegible] street.

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROVISIONS,
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.
OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place. Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Office cor. Front St. and Park Ave.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security.

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 21 SOMERSET ST.

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
10 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N J.

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 2[illegible] East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to.

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed.

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.
TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.
Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware needing mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.
Stoves of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and
Portable Furnaces.
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODDINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Office corner of Park avenue and Second street.

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 100, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of CONSTITUTIONALIST. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES H. THIERS,
Dentist,
48 Somerset street. A new local anaesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
[Successor to T. J. Carey.]
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—[illegible] W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box [illegible] a specialty.

NOTICE. June 1, 1894.
Estate of Sarah Doane, deceased.
Pursuant to the order of George T. Parrot, Surrogate of the county of Union, [illegible]
JOHN B. [illegible],
Administrator.

TWENTY
Years experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 2 doors above Peace street.
Mr. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredibly short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Livery and Boarding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No. 114.

Parlor Stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
Steam Piping, Plumbing.
Heater Work, Tinning,
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL, 6.

American
Silver
Truss
Remains where placed and holds rupture perfectly, causing in many cases a complete cure. It is cool, durable, clean and simple, being composed of one continuous piece of metal wire without pads, screws or ratchets; is easily adjusted and so light and comfortable the wearer often forgets his ailment or that he has a truss on. The hips and back are absolutely free from pressure, hence may be worn day and night. They are equally suitable for infants or adults. The Silver Truss has received the hearty endorsement of eminent [illegible] and surgeons in [illegible]
For sale only at
L. W. RANDOLPH'S,
Prescription druggist, 143 West Front st.,
Plainfield, N. J.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. [illegible]

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

Plainfield, New Jersey.

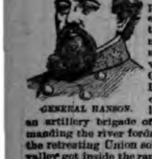
TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

A Forlorn Hope at Murfreesboro.

Jan. 2, 1863, saw the final and decisive repulse of Bragg's Confederates by Rosecrans' army at Murfreesboro. The last charge was made by General John C. Breckinridge's division, and the place of honor fell to Hanson's brigade of Kentuckians, known as "The Orphans." The task was in the nature of a forlorn hope. The Confederate army on the north side of Stone river lay in range of several Union batteries crowning a height on the south side. Those batteries must be silenced, or Bragg's army would be compelled to retreat. Breckinridge's division lay south of the river, Hanson's brigade being nearest the stream, and when the column was formed it marched along the bank under orders to fire a single volley when closing on the Union guns, then carry them with the bayonet.



GENERAL HANSON.

The Union artillerists and their supports, finding their line virtually outflanked, rushed down the slope to the river for safety, closely pursued by the exulting Kentuckians. The north bank opposite this scene was occupied by General Thomas L. Crittenden's corps, Rosecrans' left wing, with an artillery brigade of 58 guns commanding the river fords. The moment the retreating Union soldiers across the valley got inside the range of those cannon, Crittenden ordered his chief of artillery to let loose the entire battery upon Hanson's men. The guns fired at the rate of 100 shots a minute. Forests which stood in the pathway went down as before a hurricane, and "The Orphans" were nearly annihilated. Hanson was killed, and the regiments in the van lost half their officers and men.

GEORGE L. KILMER.

For the first time in twenty five years the Sheriff of Union County has left Amos Moffett, the veteran constable, from the court list. The faithful services of this officer deserved better treatment.

Frank R Stockton has written another of the stories such as only Frank R Stockton can write; and as The Daily Press gets everything good that's going, in The Daily Press it will appear. The opening instalment will be printed Friday, Jan. 4, and everyone who loves Stockton stories (and who does not?) must now be on the lookout for "Moses and Aaron; or, A One-Man Sin". It will be published in this paper, and you'l read it there or nowhere.

Always endeavoring to improve the quality of its contents, The Daily Press begins the new year with additions to its already large list of novel and original features. Notable among these is the series of Short Stories of Heroism. 300 of th se will be given during the year. Everybody likes to read an inspiring story of adventure, and these are brief, pointed, and true. They are arranged chronologically for publication on or about the date of the anniversary of each event recorded. Moreover, these Stories of Heroism are of great educational value, and it is proper to suggest to the attention of teachers the advisability of using these stories as a daily reading lesson. Marking, as they often do, the solving of gigantic issues of history or revealing instances of exemplary personal conduct or bravery, nothing can be more instructive, inspiring or interesting to the young. The typographical arrangement is striking, and gives an individuality to the feature, which, being copyrighted, will be found in The Daily Press, and in no other paper in Plainfield.

The Daily Press hopes much for Plainfield in 1895. The year just ended has been full of judicious planning, and within this year and the year succeeding Plainfield will acquire a phenomenal growth. She has been steadily progressing during the past twelve months, and under the new order of things she will boom with prodigious strides. The growth will be as permanent as rapid. Within the town, sewers have been begun, and the early Spring will witness the rapid-transit extensions which The Press has been praying for, and which mean so much for the place. The trolley roads to the outskirts will open up homes for the waiting throng, and the many advantages already possessed by Plainfield will be augmented to such extent that this will be New York's greatest suburban paradise. Already Plainfield is better and more favorably known than most towns within earshot of the metropolis, and with its new and completed attractions Plainfield will be the Mecca of the commuter who wants the best home at the least cost. Another factor in the growth of Plainfield will be the new electric railway from New York to Philadelphia. The competition thus created will eventually result in the reduction of railway fares, and transportation for the commuter will be lowered to a nominal figure. New York taxes have gone up and are going higher. The death rate has kept pace with the tax rate, and the people are longing for a cheaper community and a purer air. There is bound to be an exodus from the big city, and every indication is that Plainfield will reap the largest benefit. Here's to the greater Plainfield!

Death of Frank Tailliant.

The many friends of Frank Tailliant will be pained to learn of his sudden death, which occurred at the home of his sister, Mrs. John B. Sharp, Newark, Monday night at 8. He was as well as usual till Saturday night about 12, when he was taken very ill, and from that time till he died he did not regain consciousness. The cause of death was Bright's disease.

He was the only son of the late Cyprian L. Tailliant, and was 27 years old.

A grief stricken mother and two sisters survive him, Mrs. John B Sharp of Newark, and Mrs. Charles S. Greer of North Plainfield. His mother also resides in Newark.

The body was brought here for burial.

Funeral services were held this afternoon at the home of his sister, Mrs Charles Greer, Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes officiating. The pall-bearers were: William Blimm, George Babcock, R. W Schiereth, Peter Blimm, B. F. Crane, and George Mehl. Interment was made in the family plot in North Plainfield Cemetery.

The Bond Record.

In the new issue of The Cosmopolitan, it is noted that Harvey Fisk & Sons are offering to readers of the magazine free copies of The Bond Record. This is recognized as the authority on bonds throughout the country. For two years the property of the Fisks, it has become so great a publication that they have organized it into a stock corporation, and under their direction it is assuming even greater importance than ever. As the controllers are chiefly Plainfielders, they will doubtless take pleasure in supplying free copies to the readers of The Daily Press as well as to the readers of The Cosmopolitan. Write to the Fisks at 24 Nassau street, New York.

"Swim Out O'Grady, Swim Out."

Harry Frank, the night ticket agent at the North Avenue station, he of the sunny smile and the beautiful bronze mustache, went to New Market yesterday afternoon with a party of skaters. Shortly after their arrival on the ice Mr. Frank who by the way is an expert at the sport while executing some fancy figures ventured on the thin ice and went down Fortunately the water was only shoulder high, and Harry immediately "Bobbed up serenely from below", while the merry skaters formed a circle around the hole and sang "Swim out O'Grady". Mr Frank is none the worse for his involuntary bath and will be on deck as usual this evening.

A Poodle Caused His Fall.

Al. D. Taylor of 21 Harmony street still has his hand bound up because of a peculiar accident which occurred a short time ago. He was going upstairs to bed, carrying a lighted lamp. At the top of the stairs lay a poodle. Not seeing the animal, Mr. Taylor tripped over it. Feeling that he was falling, as a result of the sudden loss of balance, and realizing that unless the lamp were extinguished the house would be set afire, Mr. Taylor had the presence of mind to throw behind him the hand holding the lamp, and in his fall he crushed the lamp under him and smothered the blaze The broken glass cut his hand and thigh, and he fell to the foot of the stairs and was badly bruised

Sleighing Party.

A sleighing party arranged by J. A. Karet of Park avenue left town last evening and went to the Westfield Hotel, where the evening was passed pleasantly in dancing. An elaborate collation was served about midnight and the members of the party arrived home at 3 this morning. Those enjoying the affair were: Mr. and Mrs. William Newcorn, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Canfield, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Karet, Miss Brokaw, Miss Bertha Dreier, George Lederer, and Michael Karet.

C. E. Election.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of the First Church of Christ have elected the following officers:

President—John H. Staats.

First Vice-president—Berton Mettler.

Second Vice-president—Mabel VanMiddlesworth.

Recording Secretary—Benjamin William Hand

Corresponding Secretary — Mrs. Ella Hand

Treasurer—Miss Ella Herrmann.

Skating Accident.

Willis West of Crescent avenue, in company with some young men, was skating on Hyde's pond yesterday when he fell and cut himself badly over the left eye. Max Honeyman, John VanWinkle, Jr., and Norman Probasco immediately went to his assistance and helped him to Dr. Probasco's office, where the physician took three stitches in the cut. He was able to walk home, though the loss of blood made him rather weak.

Are You Ever Annoyed

by a buzzing or roaring sound in your head? Have you difficulty in hearing distinctly? Are you troubled with a continual dropping of mucus, irritating the throat and causing you to cough? Is your breath unpleasantly affected and accompanied with bad taste? Is your hearing less acute If so, you have catarrh and should at once procure a bottle of Ely's Cream Balm, the best known remedy. The Balm will give instant relief.

Anæmic Women

with pale or sallow complexions, or suffering from skin eruptions or scrofulous blood, will find quick relief in Scott's Emulsion. All of the stages of Emaciation, and a general decline of health, are speedily cured.

Scott's Emulsion

takes away the pale, haggard look that comes with General Debility. It enriches the blood, stimulates the appetite, creates healthy flesh and brings back strength and vitality. For Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Weak Lungs, Consumption and Wasting Diseases of Children.

Send for our pamphlet. Mailed FREE.

Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

FREE PUBLIC LIBRARY.

Legal Transfer of the $10,000 Bequest of the Late George H. Babcock.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Free Public Library was held last evening. There were present A. C. Baldwin, M. W. Tyler, J. B Dumont, Wm. H. Larrabee, Wm. M. Stillman, and J. Evarts Tracy.

The minutes of the meeting of Dec 4 were read and approved.

The following bills were on motion ordered paid: F. A. Pope, $19 02; Miss Adams, $100; Miss Davis, $25; S. B. Allen, $41 46.

The following resolution was on motion duly passed:

"The executors of the will of Geo. H. Babcock, deceased, having made known to the Board their readiness to pay over the sum of $10,000 bequeathed by Geo. H. Babcock to the Trustees of the Plainfield Public Library for the purchase of industrial, mechanical and scientific books to be known as the Babcock scientific library; therefore

"Resolved, That the treasurer be, and he is hereby authorized to receive the same, and that the president and treasurer be, and they are hereby authorized on the receipt of the said sum to execute and deliver to the executors the proper refunding bond required by law, and a release in proper form acknowledging the receipt of the amount of the bequest, and discharging the executors from all further claim in respect thereof, and that a copy of the refunding bond, and the release and discharge so to be executed and delivered, be incorporated in the minutes."

On motion it was resolved that the sum of $10,000 be received from the executors of Mr. Babcock's will for the purposes of the "Babcock Scientific Library" when received by the treasurer, and the rents of real estate applicable to the support and maintenance of that library when received and on hand from time to the amount of $500 be deposited by the treasurer in the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company upon interest, in the name of the Trustees of the Plainfield Public Library and Reading-room, and that such money be withdrawn only under resolution of the Board. Resolved, That moneys deposited in the New York Life Insurance and Trust Company to the credit of the Board, be withdrawn only upon checks required by the president, vice-president and treasurer.

On motion, the communication from the librarian, respecting the use of additional room for periodical and the selection of additional periodicals, was referred to the Library Committee with power.

The Librarian's report for December was read, and on motion ordered on file. Adjourned.

WM M. STILLMAN, Sec.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

Vacation is over and everybody is ready for work again. Dr. Probasco, President of the Board of Education, was present at the morning exercises, and addressed a few words to the school. Superintendent Maxson and Mr. Travell also spoke a few words appropriate to the new year. Quite a number of the graduates of '93 and '94 were present at the morning exercises and at the recitation of the Geometry Class in the Senior room. The Astronomy Class also entertained quite a number of visitors by the reading of several of the essays on certain diversions of Astronomy.

Among those who visited the High School were:

Miss Needham; Miss Alice Needham '94; Miss Florence Smith '94; Miss Nora Williams '94; Miss Helen Hasbrook '94; Miss Edith Lane '94, Miss Phoebe Lovell '94; Miss Julia Bourgeois '94; Miss Carrie Kellogg '94; Miss Mabel Mitchell '94; Thomas A. Cuming '93; S. Clinton Crane '93; John C. Whiting '93; Nathan Lane, Jr., '94, Walter Raynolds '94.

NINETY-FIVE.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., sends this: "I have used

Dr. Deane's

Dyspepsia Pills

for indigestion and stubborn constipation, and found them to work like a charm when all other remedies failed to benefit me. I cheerfully recommend them to all suffering with above troubles." WM. J. MOORE, Contractor and Builder, Atlantic City, N.J.

At all druggists', 25 cents. Send to us for a free sample.

DR. J. A. DEANE CO.,

Kingston, New York."

DANCED IN THE NEW.

Germans Have a Jolly New Year Celebration.

Gesang and Turn Verein Hall presented a lively spectacle to the onlooker Monday evening as the members of the society and their friends to the number of three hundred assembled to dance the old year out and the new year in.

A short entertainment consisting of vocal and instrumental music was given in the early evening, after which the merry dancers took possession of the floor and held it until the wee small hours of the morning. The fun was fast and furious and at the intervals of the dance the funmakers adjourned to the banquet rooms, to partake of the good things provided by the generous hosts. At midnight the orchestra broke out in a perfect fusillade of music during which the entire party rushed around the hall wishing each other many Happy New Years.

N. H. Guttman furnished the music The committee, to which great credit is due for the successful issue of the affair, consisted of Geo. Richter, president of the society; Herman Lenke, the recording secretary, and Messrs. Myer, Bender and Divier.

Jerusalem Installs.

At a regular communication of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26 F. and A. M., held the first evening in the new year, the following officers were installed to serve this lodge for the ensuing year:

Worshipful Master—D. C. Adams.

Senior Warden—Stephen Beeching.

Junior Warden—W. F. Bartlett,

Treasurer—Alex. Titsworth.

Secretary—Chas. Yaeger.

Chaplain—John M. Lewis.

Senior Deacon—M. L Connolly.

Junior Deacon—Stephen VanHorn.

Masters of Ceremony—Lewis S. Pocock, Frank W. Hand.

Stewards—L. B. Woolston, Henry Liefke,

Tyler—Kaspar Bolsterle,

Past Worshipful Brother William H Sebring conducted the ceremonies and Worshipful Master C. C. Howard of Anchor, 149, officiated as Marshal.

At the conclusion of the ceremonies about fifty of the members and invited brethren repaired to the banquet room, where the fourth degree was conferred in excellent style, and the speeches that followed were of a high order. The brethren at about 11 o'clock departed for their respective homes, satisfied that they had spent the first evening of the new year very pleasantly.

Has the Best Wishes of the Board.

One of the leading insurance papers of New York speaks as follows concerning the resignation of a prominent Plainfielder:

"The board of directors of the German-American Insurance Company met last Thursday and accepted the resignation of John W. Murray. Mr. Murray has been vice-president of the company since 1873. He has always been regarded as one of the ablest underwriters in the United States. A director of the company, speaking of Mr. Murray's resignation, attributed it to a desire on his part to secure relief from the cares of business. Mr. Murray leaves the company with the best wishes of every member of the board of directors."

Queen City Elects.

The following officers were elected at the regular session of Queen City Lodge No. 226, I. O. O. F., Monday evening:

N. G.—Frank G. Smith.

V. G.—Alfred Barber.

Rec. Sec.—James D. Anderson.

Permanent Secretary—Henry S. Hoffman.

Treasurer—J. P. Allis.

A large number of brothers was present and several interesting speeches were made for the good of the order after the election. District Deputy Grand Master Staman and staff will install the newly elected officers Monday evening, Jan. 14.

Sons of Veteran Dance.

The first reception and dance of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., held New Year's Eve in the Olympia, was a great success. About sixty persons were present and all enjoyed the excellent programme. The music was furnished by Mr. Guttman. The committee in charge, Williard V. Sutton, Charles P. Stephens and Cyrus Moore, served refreshments about midnight, after which part second of the order of dance was followed out. It was nearly 4 a. m. when the dancers left for home, and all felt well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

The Boys Club Christmas.

A great success was the Christmas entertainment at the Boys Club Saturday night. The boys greatly enjoyed the singing and playing of Miss Demarest, Mr. Hallock, and Mr. Runyon. The funny songs of Mr. Runyon were particularly relished. Miss Erskine, who is always popular with the boys, furnished charming piano music. At the end of the programme the members of the club all received packages which pleased them greatly, and which were prepared on the plan that the way to reach a boy's heart is through his stomach.

Hemorrhage from a Tooth.

An attempt was made to extract an old root from the jaw of Miss Nellie Arnold, daughter of Borough Clerk Arnold, Monday, and a terrible hemorrhage set in. Over a teacupful of blood gushed out, and much concern was felt. Dr. Fritts was summoned, and after two visits he succeeded in stopping the dangerous flow.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.

Castoria allays Feverishness.

Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.

Castoria cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic.

Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.

Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.

Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.

Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.

Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.

Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."

See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

E. P. THORN,

No. 125 Park Avenue,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,

For Family and Medicinal Use,

A SPECIALTY.

5-25-y

$75,000 STOCK

—OF—

Carpets and Furniture at Slaughter

To make room for Holiday Goods.

Amos H. Van Horn, L't'd,

Have reduced their prices just one-half, to make room for Holiday Goods, which are largely coming in.

Tapestry Brussels carpet, per yard only	50 cents
Body Brussels carpet, per yard only	85 cents
Velvet carpet, per yard only	95 cents
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$10
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$15
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$20
Parlor suits, only	$20
Parlor suits, only	$30
Parlor suits, only	$40

PORTLAND RANGES—We have received several letters from parties who had the Portland Range to roast their Thanksgiving turkey in, and they all declare they never had a turkey roasted better. It is all on account of the ventilated oven door, one of the points for which this famous range is noted. Easy terms.

AT COST—Parlor Stoves to close them out.

Goods delivered free of charge to all parts of the State.

STORING FURNITURE—It will interest you to call and see our new building, just erected for storing furniture at 88, 90 and 92 Bank street. Rates low. Furniture removed with vans, with care men, in city or country.

Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,

73 Market Street, nearest Plane street. Newark, N. J.

Every "Miller" lamp is perfect, whether it costs $1.00 or $100.

FINE "MILLER" LAMPS with Exquisite Shades for Gifts.

THE MILLER LAMP
No 865
BANQUET

ARE BEAUTIFUL, USEFUL, APPROPRIATE.

The "Miller" is made in all styles of Banquet, Boudoir, Piano, Vase, Study, Bracket, Hall, Library, Chandelier, so everybody can find designs to please in our assortment, which is the best in New York. Our "Miller" Oil Heater will warm a room. We also make Brass Tables with Onyx Tops, The "Rochester" lamp, etc. Established 1844. We make only the best.

The "Miller" gives a bright, steady light, flame does not "climb" to smoke ceiling; lighted without removing chimney; a simple turn of a button (which a child can do safely), adjusts the wick so the flame is always even (a great improvement over the old way of pulling up the wick); to put in new wick is no trouble. An indicator tells when lamp is full of oil; the draft is so controlled that chimneys are not broken by the flame. THE "MILLER" IS A WONDERFUL LAMP; EVERYBODY SHOULD BUY IT. If your dealer will not supply come to us. Catalogues sent on application.

EDWARD MILLER & CO.,

10 and 12 COLLEGE PL., bet. Park Pl. and Barclay St., New York.

[illegible]

A YEAR'S DEATH ROLL

WORK OF THE KING OF TERRORS IN 1894.

A Busy Time For the Grim Messenger. How He Entered the Ranks of Statesmen, Soldiers, Poets, Financiers, Clergymen, Social Leaders and Royalty.

JANUARY.

1. Dr. D. B. Cheney, an old Baptist minister of Chicago, in Chicago; aged 74.
2. Col. Floyd Clarkson, well known G. A. R. veteran, in New York; aged 68.
William P. Earle, an old New York hotel keeper, in New York; aged 72.
Elizabeth Peabody, educator and reformer, in Boston; aged 89.
4. Benton J. Hall, a prominent Iowa lawyer, at Burlington, Ia.; aged 59.
10. Rear Admiral Donald McNeil Fairfax, U. S. N., retired, at Hagerstown, Md.; aged 70.
11. Isabella Shawe Thackeray, widow of the author, at Leigh, England; aged 75.
12. John Hailey Spears, an associate of Lincoln, at Jacksonville; aged 90.
Ex-Gov. William Gaston of Massachusetts, in Boston; aged 74.
19. Helen A. Shafer, president of Wellesley college, at Wellesley, Mass.; aged 54.
Ex-Gov. William Gilpin of Colorado, at Denver; aged 81.
24. D. W. Irwin, a prominent Chicago business man, in Chicago; aged 64.
27. Rosina Vokes, actress, at Torquay, England; aged 40.

FEBRUARY.

1. George W. Childs, proprietor of the Philadelphia Ledger, in Philadelphia; aged 65.
4. Morton S. Wilkinson, ex-United States senator from Minnesota, in Wells, Minn.; aged 75.
5. L. Schofield, pioneer manufacturer of iron rails in the south, at Chattanooga; aged 80.
6. Gen. Jacob Ammen, a prominent Union veteran, at Yorkland, O.; aged 88.
Dr. Theodore Billroth, distinguished German surgeon, near Vienna; aged 65.
8. Dr. Gustave Leipnitz, a well known character on the coast, in San Francisco; aged 82.
Col. John R. Baylor, a Texan pioneer and noted Indian fighter, near San Antonio; aged 72.
9. Maxime du Camp, a noted French author, at Paris; aged 74.
13. Homer Ramsdell, ex-president of the New York and Erie railroad, at Newburg, N. Y.; aged 80.
Hans von Bulow, the celebrated pianist, at Cairo, Egypt; aged 64.
14. Gen. Edward Hincks, a civil war veteran, at Cambridge, Mass.
Mrs. Myra Bradwell, editor of The Legal News and the first woman lawyer in Illinois, in Chicago; aged 63.
15. Col. Jonathan Drake Stevenson, a prominent Californian, in San Francisco; aged 94.
17. R. W. English, a personal associate of Lincoln, at Kansas City; aged 83.
18. William T. Stansbury, a printer on the Baltimore Sun since 1837, in Baltimore; aged 73.
19. Joseph Keppler, famous cartoonist and one of the founders and owners of Puck, in New York city; aged 56.
21. Louis Wistar, wealthy citizen of Philadelphia, at Atlantic City; aged 66.
22. Dr. William B. Lapham, well known Maine historian and geologist, at Augusta, Me.; aged 66.
24. Dr. Martin Luther, an eminent Pennsylvania physician, at Reading; aged 68.

MARCH.

1. Ex-Gov. John G. Downey of California, at Los Angeles; aged 67.
Dr. Frederick William Poole, D. D., eminent librarian of Boston and compiler of a valuable index to periodical literature, in Chicago; aged 73.
2. Gen. Jubal A. Early, a prominent ex-Confederate, at Lynchburg, Va.; aged 78.
4. James Montgomery Bailey, "The Danbury News Man," humorist, author and editor, at Danbury, Conn.; aged 53.
8. Benjamin Bunker, editor of the Kennebec Democrat, at Waterville, Me.; aged 54.
11. Rev. A. T. Wood, a prominent Presbyterian, at Omaha; aged 77.
14. John T. Ford, the well known theatrical manager, at Baltimore; aged 65.
19. Commodore William D. Whiting, U. S. N., retired, in New York city; aged 71.
20. Louis Kossuth, the Hungarian patriot, at Turin; aged 92.
Prof. Isaac T. Goodnow, a prominent Kansas pioneer and educator, at Manhattan, Kan.; aged 80.
26. George Ticknor Curtis, an authority and writer on constitutional law, in New York city; aged 82.
26. Gen. Alfred Holt Colquitt, senator from Georgia and a prominent ex-Confederate, in Washington; aged 70.

APRIL.

1. Dr. Charles Edouard Brown-Sequard, the eminent French physician, discoverer of the "elixir of life," in Paris; aged 76.
7. Richard Wistar, noted millionaire, in Philadelphia; aged 65.
Ben King, the Chicago poet and humorist, found dead at Bowling Green, Ky.
12. David Dudley Field, the eminent lawyer, in New York city; aged 89.
Gen. Joseph Brevard Kershaw, a brilliant Confederate soldier and later a distinguished lawyer and judge, at Camden, S. C.; aged 74.
14. Gen. Henry Warner Slocum, a distinguished Union veteran, in Brooklyn; aged 67.
Senator Zebulon B. Vance of North Carolina, in Washington; aged 64.
Gen. Oliver Lathrop Shepherd, U. S. A., retired, a civil war veteran, in New York city; aged 81.
17. Henry S. Ives, the "rapid" financier, at Asheville, N. C.
21. William B. Daniels, ex-governor of Idaho, at Tacoma; aged 76.
James W. Throckmorton, ex-governor of Texas, at McKinney; aged 70.
23. Jesse B. Seligman, the New York banker, at Coronado Beach, Cal.
25. Gen. R. S. Granger, U. S. A., retired, in Washington; aged 83.
26. Nathaniel Springer Berry, war governor of New Hampshire, at Bristol, N. H.; aged 98.
28. Francis B. Stockbridge, United States senator from Michigan, in Chicago; aged 68.
Maj. Joseph Kirkland, a well known veteran and author, in Chicago; aged 64.
30. Frank Hatton, editor of the Washington Post, in Washington; aged 48.

MAY.

1. George W. Abell, proprietor of the Baltimore Sun, in Baltimore.
5. John Jay, ex-minister to Austria, in New York city; aged 77.
6. John Harwood Maynard, a prominent resident of Manchester, N. H., at Manchester; aged 90.
7. Frances Elizabeth Barrow, "Aunt Fanny," popular author and writer for children, in New York city; aged 82.
William F. Sayles, the third richest man in Rhode Island, at Pawtucket; aged 70.
8. Thomas C. Latto, well known Scotch-American poet, in Brooklyn; aged 76.
9. Gen. Matthew M. Trumbull, a Union veteran, in Chicago; aged 68.
12. Sewell E. Jewell, a noted abolitionist, in Haverhill, Mass.; aged 85.
14. A. C. Hunt, ex-governor of Colorado, at Tenallytown, near Washington; aged 65.
18. Rev. Dr. Edward Bright, editor of The Examiner, in New York city; aged 86.
19. Andrew J. Graham, author of the Graham system of shorthand, at Orange, N. J.; aged 64.
20. Edmund Yates, English author and journalist, in London; aged 63.
21. Gen. Phil Cooke, a distinguished Confederate veteran, in Atlanta; aged 77.
23. Mortimer L. Hopkins, an old Chicago journalist, in Chicago.

JUNE.

4. Ex-Gov. Charles Collis Van Zandt, at Berkshire, Mass.
7. Prof. William Dwight Whitney, eminent philologist of Yale college, in New Haven; aged 67.
Ex-Gov. Rodman M. Price of New Jersey, a pioneer of California, at Hazelwood; aged 79.
28. Commodore John Rodgers, U. S. N., retired, at Oakland, Pa.; aged 71.
Rev. E. C. Robinson, [illegible] university of Chicago, [illegible] formerly president of Brown university, in Boston; aged 78.
17. Judge William Walter Phelps, business man and diplomat, at Englewood, N. J.; aged 55.
"King Pharaoh," chief of the Montauk Indians, at Frankliville, Suffolk county, N. Y.; aged 67.
Commodore John N. Easby, U. S. N., retired, in Washington; aged 75.
23. Mme. Marietta Alboni, famous contralto, in Paris; aged 70.
28. Rear Admiral William Greenville Temple, U. S. N., a veteran of the Mexican and civil wars, in Washington; aged 70.
30. William G. Green, a well known banker and railroad man and lifelong friend of Lincoln, at Tullula, Ills.

JULY.

4. Ex-Gov. Edwin B. Winans of Michigan, in Hamburg.
5. Sir Austin Henry Layard, the explorer, in London; aged 77.
13. George R. Graham, founder of Graham's Magazine, at Orange, N. J.; aged 81.
19. William H. Garfield, pioneer Boston agent for the New York daily papers, in Boston; aged 84.
20. E. L. G. Steele, California capitalist, in Oakland.
21. Mrs. J. Dundas Lippincott, a prominent Philadelphian, at Bar Harbor.
Frederick Ferdinand Low, ex-governor of California and ex-minister to China, at San Francisco; aged 66.
Chief James R. Godfrey, last surviving chief of the Miami tribe of Indians, at Fort Wayne.
25. Rev. Dr. J. B. McCullough, well known Methodist preacher and editor, at Chester Heights Camp, Pennsylvania; aged 71.
26. Gen. Alfred J. Pleasonton, distinguished Union cavalry leader, in Philadelphia; aged 86.
29. John A. McDougall, a once famous artist and friend of Poe, Willis, Irving and others, at Newark, N. J.; aged 87.

1. Joseph Holt, [illegible] a cabinet officer and judge advocate general under President Lincoln, at Washington; aged 87.
George Inness, noted American landscape painter, in Scotland; aged 69.
6. Ex-Gov. Austin Blair, Michigan's "war governor," at Jackson; aged 76.
8. Joseph P. Wightman, an early settler at Burlington, Ia., in Chicago; aged 94.
14. John Quincy Adams, son of Charles Francis Adams and grandson of President Adams, at Quincy, Mass.; aged 61.
17. Charles Robinson, the first governor elected by the Free State party of Kansas, at Lawrence; aged 76.
18. Col. John Arkins, editor of The Rocky Mountain News, at Denver; aged 52.
Burton C. Cook, lawyer and statesman of Illinois, at Evanston; aged 75.
23. Judge Norman L. Freeman, the oldest court reporter in the United States, at Springfield, Ills.
26. Mrs. Celia Thaxter, poet, at Isle of Shoals; aged 58.

SEPTEMBER.

1. Gen. Nathaniel P. Banks, a distinguished Union soldier, at Waltham, Mass.; aged 78.
Samuel J. Kirkwood, Iowa's war governor, at Des Moines; aged 81.
3. Judge A. H. Douglass, a prominent lawyer in Tennessee and a pioneer, Indian fighter and soldier, contemporary with Davy Crockett, at Memphis; aged 84.
4. James M. Adsit, a veteran banker of Chicago, in that city; aged 85.
5. Gen. George Stoneman, ex-governor of California and at one time chief of cavalry in the Army of the Potomac, at Buffalo; aged 72.
6. Gen. Henry Eugene Davis, a Union veteran, in New York city; aged 59.
8. The Count of Paris, head of the French royal family, in London; aged 56.
Prof. Herman Louis Ferdinand Helmholtz, celebrated German physiologist and physician, at Berlin; aged 72.
9. Gen. P. S. Levis, a Union veteran, in Toledo; aged 72.
10. Prof. Heinrich Karl Brugsch, eminent philologist and Egyptologist, at Berlin; aged 68.
11. Joseph S. Cone, a noted California pioneer, at Red Bluff; aged 72.
14. Rear Admiral Edward Y. McCauley, U. S. N., retired, at Jamestown, R. I.; aged 67.
20. Mme. Fursch-Madi, a noted dramatic soprano who created the title role of "Aida," at Mount Bethel, N. J.; aged 47.
23. Gen. Willard Slocum, a Union veteran, at Ashland, O.; aged 74.
24. Gen. Thomas Seir Cummings, noted American artist, last surviving founder of the National Academy of Design; aged 90.
26. Launt Thompson, noted American sculptor, at Middletown, N. Y.; aged 61.
28. William Allen Shephard, well known Canadian journalist, printer and manager, at Toronto; aged 64.

OCTOBER.

2. Prof. David Swing, noted college professor and minister, in Chicago; aged 64.
5. Prof. Vincenzo Botta, well known linguist, in New York city; aged 72.
7. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, in Boston; aged 85.
Andrew G. Curtin, war governor of Pennsylvania, at Bellefonte; aged 77.
20. James Anthony Froude, the historian, in London; aged 76.
21. Ex-Mayor Monroe Heath of Chicago, at Asheville, N. C.; aged 68.
Ex-Gov. Joseph Dorsett Bedle of New Jersey, in New York city; aged 63.
25. Mary A. Woodbridge, secretary of the W. C. T. U., in Chicago.
Commodore William E. Hopkins, U. S. N., retired, in San Francisco; aged 73.
26. Rev. Alexander Herberton, prominent Presbyterian minister, in Philadelphia; aged 92.
Gen. Amos Beckwith, U. S. A., retired, at St. Louis; aged 69.
27. Hon. David Wills, organizer of the National cemetery at Gettysburg, in that town; aged 63.

NOVEMBER.

1. The Czar Alexander III of Russia; aged 49.
Samuel Hancock, a prominent Methodist and a pioneer, in San Francisco; aged 67.
3. Duncan H. Campbell, noted inventor in shoe machinery, at Pawtucket, R. I.; aged 66.
5. Philip Gilbert Hamerton, the well known English artist and author, in Paris; aged 60.
8. William Moseley Hall, a Chicago pioneer, in New York city; aged 82.
10. Theodore R. Davis, war artist of Harper's Weekly, at Asbury Park, N. J.; aged 54.
11. Col. John A. McCaull, the opera manager, at Greensboro, N. C.
14. Charles E. Strong, a prominent newspaper man of Chicago, in that city; aged 52.
15. Iron Nation, head chief of the Brule Sioux; aged 90.
17. Rev. Dr. James McCosh, president of Princeton college from 1868 to 1888, at Princeton, N. J.; aged 83.
Rev. W. G. T. Shedd, theological teacher and writer, in New York city; aged 74.
Robert Charles Winthrop, a lineal descendant of John Winthrop, the colonial governor and a noted orator and statesman, in Boston; aged 85.
18. Thomas D. Gilbert, a prominent citizen and pioneer of Michigan, at Grand Rapids; aged 78.
20. Anton Grigorievich Rubinstein, the Russian pianist and composer, at St. Petersburg; aged 64.
21. C. S. Kauffman, one of the oldest iron masters of Pennsylvania, at Columbia; aged 68.
22. Gen. William Harvey Gibson, at Tiffin, O; aged 72.
25. Jean Victor Duruy, well known French historian, at Paris; aged 83.
27. Princess Bismarck, wife of the German ex-chancellor.
30. Joseph Emerson Brown, ex-governor of Georgia and ex-United States senator, at Atlanta; aged 73.

DECEMBER.

1. Rev. Dr. Henry M. Storrs, a prominent Presbyterian minister, at Orange, N. J.; aged 67.
4. Leon Abbett, ex-governor of New Jersey, in Jersey City; aged 58.
Victoria Vokes, the last of the famous Vokes family, in England.
Oden Bowie, ex-governor of Maryland, at Bowie, Md.; aged 68.
6. Dr. J. Bernard Brinton, eminent physician, war surgeon and botanist, in Philadelphia; aged 60.
7. Gen. Eliakim Parker Scammon, an American veteran of three wars, in New York city; aged 78.
Ferdinand de Lesseps, in Paris; aged 89.

PARTICULAR MENTION

Miss Lee Freeman of South avenue is visiting friends in New York.

Richard Randolph of Evona spent Sunday with relatives in this city.

Miss Jennie Quick of East Fifth street is visiting relatives in Somerville.

Miss Emily Dyckman of White Plains is visiting Miss Florence Waring.

Miss Sadie Taylor of Watchung avenue is convalescent from her recent illness.

Police officer Wm. Mattox is confined at home with a slight attack of pneumonia.

B. R. Cain and family of Grandview avenue spent New Year's Day in Waverly.

Miss Ida Mills of Elizabeth is the guest of her cousin, Miss Gillem of Duer street.

Mrs. Margery Swessel of Brooklyn is visiting Mrs. Jackson of East Sixth street.

Miss Nellie Fanning is spending a few days with Miss Stella Shotwell of College place.

Miss L. D. Holmes of Grandview avenue has recovered from a slight attack of the grip.

Miss Cora King of Newark is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Davis of North avenue.

Miss Nora Hamilton of Fort Wayne is visiting Mrs. F. C. Jennings of Rockview avenue.

Rev. Rush Rhees of Newton, Mass., is visiting C. W. McCutchen of Rockview avenue.

Mrs. James T. Scott fell Monday and sprained both ankles, disabling her seriously.

Albert B. Lume and family, of South avenue, Netherwood, have moved to Brooklyn.

Miss Sophie McGinnis of Somerset street spent Sunday with friends in Newark.

Mrs. Walsh and daughter of Brooklyn are visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Tier of Bank place.

Miss Eveline Taylor of Philadelphia is the guest of Miss Woodruff of East Second street.

David Krymer of West Second street is spending two weeks with friends in Poughkeepsie.

A charming New Year's party was held at the home of Miss Marjorie Sterling of Park avenue.

Charles LaForge of New Brunswick is visiting his cousin, Miss Mary VanFleet of East Third street.

Miss Sadie Grant of Chautauqua is spending the holidays with her parents on West Sixth street.

Miss VanHorne of Salt Lake City spent Sunday at the home of ex Mayor John H. VanWinkle of Duer street.

Willard Case of Brown University is spending the holidays at the home of his mother on East Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Overton and daughter spent New Year's Day with Mr. Overton of Rockview avenue.

Miss Sheppard of Central avenue is entertaining Miss Krausse of Glen Gardner and Miss Eveland of Junction.

Miss Nettie, the daughter of J. W. A. Bau-reachs, who has been ill with bronchitis, is now convalescent.

The Misses Smalley of New Brunswick are visiting their grandmother, Mrs. Isaac Smalley of East Front street.

C. Henry Hawkins and bride of Newark spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. G. L. VanEmburgh of East Second street.

Charles Hall of Reynolds's pharmacy has gone to his mother's home in Fishkill to frame his New Year's resolutions.

Miss Laura Shive of Milford has returned to her home after a visit with her cousin Miss Lunger of Watchung Park.

John Lane of Pluckamin Mountain View Farm, Bedminster, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. Van Eps of East Fifth street.

Theodore Kurzhals, Jr., who has been laid up with a sprained wrist for the past three weeks, is able to be at work again.

Dr. I. E. Glen of Pearl street is enjoying the holiday season with his family, having recently returned from an extended trip.

George Young and Miss Ida Probasco of Clinton, who have been visiting Mrs Lunger of Watchung Park, returned home Saturday.

Mrs. David McKelway, who has been visiting Mrs. J. G. Daisiel of Plainfield avenue, has returned to her home in Philadelphia.

Mrs. F. B. Beals and family who spent the last few days with friends in New York city, have returned to their home on South avenue.

Miss Grace Gendell of Philadelphia, and Miss Alice Rose and Miss Lillian Rose of Brooklyn are visiting Miss Elsie Horne of Willow avenue.

Andrew and Evelyn Slater returned to their home in Phillipsburg Saturday after a pleasant visit with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Dunavan.

Mrs. Steinhauser and her daughter Miss Marie of Jersey City are the guests of Miss Rose Verdon of Somerset street. Mrs. Steinhauser is a sister of Miss Verdon.

Cards are out for the marriage of Miss Frances Stewart of New York to Robert Fairbairn formerly of Plainfield, in St. Andrew's Church, New York, next Saturday.

Alexander Willett, the successful footwear merchant of 107 Park avenue, finds business so prosperous and the young man's services so faithful that he has taken his son A. K. into partnership. This is a meritorious recognition of a

David Dunavan spent New Year's Day with friends in Freehold.

Miss Cox of New York is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman.

Mrs. Neely of Vine street is very low, only slight hopes being entertained of her recovery.

Miss Lillie Clickener of Manasquan is visiting her uncle, H. VanMiddlesworth, Liberty street.

Jules Chatelain of Brooklyn is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. August Trust of 222 Somerset street.

Miss Margaret McIntyre of Philadelphia is the guest of Mrs. John Doull Miller of East Ninth street.

Julia F. Bogert and Howard Bogert spent the Christmas holidays with J. D. Spicer of West Fifth street.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Randall of New York spent New Year's Day with Mr. Bromfield of East Sixth street.

Miss Edith Blackwell of Astoria is spending a few days with Miss Mabel VanDeventer of Willow avenue.

M. J. Casban, musical director of St. Mary's Church choir, is visiting friends and relatives in Poughkeepsie.

Harold B. Hart, formerly of this city and now living in Brooklyn, spent New Year's Day among Plainfield friends.

Mrs. C. L. Goodrich is entertaining her sisters, the Misses Carter of Montclair, at her home on West Seventh street.

Miss Eleanor Williams of West Seventh street has returned to her home after a short stay with relatives in Philadelphia.

Ex-Councilman and Mrs. F. M. Slater entertained a few of their friends Monday evening at their home on Jackson avenue.

Miss Valentine Chandor has returned to her home on East Fifth street after spending several days with relatives in New York.

Miss Halsey, daughter of Judge Halsey of Rockaway, Morris County, is visiting her friend Miss Euphemia Johnston of East Fifth street.

Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Lauderdale of Fort Ontario, Oswego, spent New Year's Day at the hospitable home of Nathan Lane on Sycamore avenue.

Miss Pearl Edgerton, who has been spending a few days with Miss Lucie P Davis of East Fifth street, has returned to her home in Brooklyn.

Ralph Campbell of Netherwood avenue returned this morning to New York where he will continue his studies in the University of New York.

Mrs E. C. Morse of Chatham street who fell down stairs a few days ago, has not yet recovered from the effects of her fall, but is slowly improving.

Supt. H. M. Maxson of the public schools is slowly recovering his health, and, it is hoped, will soon be able to attend to his accustomed duties.

Mrs. Steinhauser and her daughter Miss Marie, returned to their home in Jersey City after spending the holidays with Mrs. Steinhauser's sister, Miss Rose Verdon of Somerset street.

The New Year's Assembly was a great success. The list of subscribers was increased since the opening, and they danced to Elliott's music. Wiertz was the caterer. The waitresses receiving were: Mrs Burnett, Mrs Reinhart, Mrs Saunders, Mrs Timpson, Mrs M S Ackerman and Mrs Hegeman.

A New-Year-Day Tea.

At the home of James McGee in North Plainfield was given a pretty tea yesterday afternoon. His daughter, Mrs. Joy, received the guests assisted by her sisters, Mrs. Horne, Mrs. Ashbrook of Philadelphia, Mrs. Welch of Brooklyn and Miss Joy of Boston.

Mrs. VanVliet, Miss Horne and Miss Pearce of Boston were also of the receiving party. In the dining room which was prettily decorated in pink, was Mrs. Henry McGee serving bouillon at a dainty side table, while Mrs. F. G. Foster and Mrs. Walter McGee served chocolate and coffee from the centre table.

The young ladies who assisted in the dining room were the Misses Rose from Brooklyn and Miss Gendell of Philadelphia. Among the many friends who called to exchange New Year greetings, were:

Mrs F O Herring, Mrs August Baldwin, Mrs Walter Haviland, Mr and Mrs Scott Foster of New York, Miss Foster, Mr and Mrs W W Howland, Mr and Mrs D N Groendyke, Mrs Henry McGee, Mr and Mrs O T Waring, Mr and Mrs B A Hegeman, Jr, Mr and Mrs William Roome, Mr and Mrs William L Saunders, Mrs Walter McGee, Miss Munger, Mrs Edwin T Douglas, Mrs Lucy Hooley, Mrs E S Hooley, Mr and Mrs George P Dupee, Mrs Alex Gilbert, Dr Ellis W Hedges, Rev Herbert Welch, William S Ashbrook, Mrs Talmage, Mrs Ege, Mr and Mrs G Harry Squires, Mr and Mrs L W Serrell, Mrs John Clark, George A Horne, Edward G Ashbrook of Philadelphia.

$100 Reward $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Props. Toledo, O.

Available.

Many good remedies are unavailable because they need the direction of a physician.

Allcock's Porous Plaster

can be used by anybody, and it is always effective for sprains, strains, weak back and soreness in the chest or muscles.

Be Not Be Duped into taking an imitation. Insist upon having the genuine "Allcock's."

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills

renovate the system by purifying the blood. They do not weaken.

Borough Horse Runs Wild.

A lively frolic was indulged in by a borough equine Monday afternoon. It was a gray horse driven by two lads, and owned by the estate of D. J. Smalley, to whose delivery sleigh it was attached. The start from the market at Somerset and Race streets was made with due decorum, but at the corner of Grove and Emily streets the sleigh was overturned on a snowbank. The horse ran down Emily street, dragging the overturned sleigh, crossed Somerset street, and took to the sidewalk, falling at the door of J. K. Arnold's grocery store. Regaining its feet, the horse started down the sidewalk, and fetched up against the iron railing at the Gesang and Turn Verein Hall, where it fell again and was caught. There was not any serious damage.

New Year's Sleighing.

Splendid sleighing and a delightful evening added much to the pleasure of eighteen young people of Plainfield who spent New Year's Eve on a strawride. Westfield, and return by the way of the Springfield road, was the route of the gay party.

Miss Arlene Crane and Bert Hinrichs were the chaperons, and the others who enjoyed the ride were: Miss Nettie Langdon, Miss Elsie Jobes, Miss Lillian Schoonmaker, Miss Lillian Glenn, Miss Percy Emmons, Miss Stella Shotwell, Miss Edith Hurlbut, Miss Mary Luckey, Herbert Schutt, Clifford Crane, Volney F. Green, Sidney R. Titsworth, Carl D. Pfender, Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr., Allen Taylor, Seymour Smith, Jr.

—A happy party of sixteen New Brunswick sleighing enthusiasts made merry Monday night over an excellent supper provided by Caterer McVey in his commodious North Avenue dining room, and last evening the same bald-headed and jolly Boniface smiled on a party of ten from Rahway who were tempted from home by the excellent sleighing.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Nov 18, 1894, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 [illegible] p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

6.37 p. m. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

8.34 p m—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8 42 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—1 00 [illegible]

For Baltimore only 1 57 p. m., week-days.

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

For New York only, 6 10 a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

(1 57p.m. with through Buffet parlor car) Sundays [illegible] a. m.

Cape May, Sea Isle City and Ocean City 1 57 p. m. weekdays.

For Rahway—[illegible]

For New Brunswick—[illegible]

For Woodbridge—[illegible]

For Perth Amboy—[illegible]

For East Millstone—[illegible] week-days.

For Trenton—[illegible]

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible]

For Flemington—[illegible]

For Freehold—[illegible] via Monmouth Junction, week-days.

For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—[illegible] week days.

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible] do not stop at Asbury Park on Sundays.

For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—12 46, p m.

For Boston—[illegible] daily.

For Brooklyn N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton Street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]

[illegible]

BY THE WAY.

—The Christmas collection in St. Mary's Church was $530.

—Three of Plainfield's robust young women, taking advantage of the perfect weather, went on a tramp Christmas Day. Being somewhat exhausted, they returned by train from Westfield in the afternoon.

—Now that it is a certainty that the Plainfield postoffice is to occupy a portion of the Babcock Building it would be a decided improvement to the city and borough if Duer street was opened to Madison avenue, according to the original plan.

—The city would save money by having the night policemen make faithful record of street lamps out of service. The number unlighted nights makes a total of many hours each month, and the city is entitled to reduction in its electric-light bill for the service not rendered.

—The usual New Year's feast took place in Hope Chapel, and was a great success. 700 people attended, and this is what they ate: 100 loaves bread, 71 turkeys, 28 lbs sugar, 21 lbs coffee, 4 boxes oranges, 25 lbs butter, 2 baskets apples, 73 cakes, 36 qts milk, 18 cans condensed milk.

—"California in 3½ Days" is the title of a very handsome folder just issued by the North-Western Road. It is an itinerary of a trip to the Pacific from Chicago and is the kind of a memento of the trip which is apt to be preserved by the tourist. It is elegantly engraved and printed on highly calendered paper and is one of the most interesting and pretty folders of the holiday season.

Fife and Drum Dance.

The eighth grand dance of the I. F. and D. Corps at Central Hall, New Year's Eve, was a very pleasant affair, and reflected great credit on the efficient committee of arrangements, which consisted of H. O. Ackerman, L. B. Bodine, A. Allen, D. V. Force and W. W. Cook. Refreshments were served during the evening. Samuel D. Frazee furnished the music. Dancing was enjoyed until a late hour.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Dec. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Newark [illegible]

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Somerville [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Easton [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield 9 54, a. m., 5 06 p.m

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

6 43 A. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport and Tamaqua.

7 10 a. m. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge Branch.

8 16 A. M. for Flemington, D. L. & W. R. R. Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.

9 54 A. M. for Flemington, High Bridge branch D L & W R R, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Nanticoke, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.

12 46p. m., way for Easton, connecting at Junction for stations on D. L. & W. R. R.

2 06 P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Sunbury and Williamsport, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. Buffet parlor car to Mauch Chunk.

4 06 p. m., way for Easton, connecting at High Bridge for stations on High Bridge branch.

[illegible] P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Bethlehem, Bangor, Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Mauch Chunk, Shamokin and Tamaqua. Buffet parlor car to Scranton.

[illegible] P. M. for Flemington.

[illegible] P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading and Harrisburg.

[illegible] P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.

[illegible]

For Atlantic City, [illegible]

Long Branch, Ocean Grove, &c.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

For Perth Amboy, [illegible]

For Freehold [illegible]

For Boynton Beach [illegible]

ROYAL BLUE LINE.

Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia, [illegible]

For Trenton [illegible]

For Baltimore and Washington at [illegible]

For Chattanooga, New Orleans and all points south with through vestibule sleeper, via Shenandoah Valley Route at [illegible] p m. Sundays [illegible] p m.

For Buffalo, Chicago and all points west, week-days at [illegible] Sundays [illegible]

RETURNING—LEAVE PHILADELPHIA.

Reading terminal, [illegible]

Sundays—[illegible]

From 24th and Chestnut [illegible]

Leave Trenton, Warren and Tucker sts., [illegible]

Plainfield passengers by trains marked * change cars at Bound Brook.

Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket agent at the station.

J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Supt.

H. P. BALDWIN, Gen. Pass. Agt.

THEY PUMPED NOLL OUT.

He Is Sorry Now That He Has Told His Wife That Little Story.

Albert Noll, of Williamsburg, is very sorry now that he has told his wife any such fantastic story. He is 30 years old, and lives at No. 75 Meserole street, and there it was that an ambulance surgeon, three policemen and the municipal stomach pump made him sorry.

Noll is a porter, but he has been out of work for a long time, and his wife says that it is his own fault, as he looks for customers only in saloons. They had a row about it yesterday morning, and the porter got the worst of it. He left the house a thoroughly aroused man, muttering all sorts of things, intended only for his own ear.

He rushed into her room about two hours later, and exclaimed: "You will be sorry for this in a little while. I've been eating Paris green, and I cannot be alive long. When I am dead you'll wish you'd treated your Bertie a little better."

Then he lay on the lounge and began to emit convincing moans, intended to soften the heart of Mrs. Noll. At first she was incredulous, but the wailing became so loud that she was convinced. But, instead of folding him in her arms and forgiving him, the woman rushed out into the street and collected all the policemen she could find. They came and peeped at the man. One of them, who had taken a course of "first aid to the injured" lectures, felt his pulse, looked at his tongue, and observed oratically: "Symptoms of arsenical poisoning, without a doubt."

Along came Ambulance Surgeon Guilfoyle, with the municipal stomach pump. By this time Noll thought the joke had gone far enough, and said that his story of taking poison was all a lie.

"Don't you believe him, gentlemen!" cried Mrs. Noll. "He's as foxey as he can be. Pump him out and make sure!"

The man kicked and howled, but the policemen held him down, and after a sharp struggle the municipal stomach pump began its task. There wasn't any arsenic or anything else in Mr. Noll's inside more poisonous than frankfurter sausage and beer. To make sure that the Paris green had not dodged the pump Dr. Guilfoyle made Noll swallow a gallon of warm water with mustard in it. This was pumped out of him, and then his interior was drenched with a few quarts of ice cold salt water, in order to be perfectly certain.

Before Dr. Guilfoyle left he said to Noll grimly. "Don't monkey again with poisons, my friend," and the policemen, grinning, carried out the municipal stomach pump.

Noll wasn't arrested. He lay weak and limp on the floor. Mrs. Noll told the policemen she would "fix" him, and she sat there waiting for him to get better.—N. Y. Herald.

PARSON CARTWRIGHT'S WOOING.

It Began at a Dance Which He Turned Into a Prayer Meeting.

McKendree College at Lebanon, Ill., has been presented with an interesting relic in the shape of a pair of saddle bags in which the famous itinerate preacher, Peter Cartwright, carried his Bible and hymn book in his horseback travels in southern Illinois.

Parson Cartwright was a well known character in early days and his pulpit eloquence is still recalled by people who lived in southern Illinois 50 years ago. His eloquence swayed multitudes of people at the old time camp meeting in Egypt. When thoroughly aroused by interruptions and abuse the parson became a veritable giant in strength. He would spring upon the bully like a tiger and give him a thrashing that was never forgotten. After the bully was licked the pugilistic preacher would suddenly change into a ministrating angel of mercy and dress the wounds of his victim. He would then offer up a devout prayer for the salvation of the man's soul, and if he did not make a convert, which he usually did, he effectually disposed of a disturber.

A romantic story of Peter Cartwright is related in connection with his early days as a preacher. When a boy in his teens one night he stopped at a country house in southern Illinois for the night. The comfortable old fashioned farm house was prepared for a country dance. By the time young Cartwright had eaten his supper the largest room had been cleared for dancing.

The pretty black eyed daughter of the host walked straight up to the stranger and asked him to lead in the dance. The remarkable beauty and winning manners of the farmer's daughter for the moment mystified the youthful parson and he allowed himself to be led to the centre of the room. Before the set was complete, however, the parson had time to collect himself.

When the musicians commenced to tune their fiddles the parson dropped upon his knees and began to pray. There was mirth at first but before it was closed there was tears in the eyes of those who at first felt inclined to laugh. The result was that the proposed dance was turned into a revival meeting, and many of those present professed religion then and there. The farmer's pretty daughter who chose the parson for her partner in the dance that night, afterward consented to be his partner in the journey of life.—Detroit Tribune.

Her Reasons.

The woman—If there is one word in the language more than another that I am heartily sick and tired of—a word that is the very block and obstacle in the path of argument or reason—a word that seems to me to have been created out of nothing to fill a vacuum that never existed—a word that all men condemn, and no woman can look upon except as a constant reminder of her innate lack of logic, that word is because, and I wish to goodness it were expunged from every dictionary in the world.

The Man—Why?

The Woman—Oh—er—er—er—because.—Detroit Free Press.

A good story is told of a number of boys who were playing one Saturday in front of an Episcopal church. The rector suddenly came out of his parsonage and told the boys to be quiet in front of the Lord's house.

"That is all right, mister," said the boys. "The Lord is not here to-day. He is down the street at the Jewish synagogue.—Jewish Messenger

Neighborly Amenities.

"Why in the world don't you grease that lawn mower of yours?" asked a lady of her next door neighbor's hired man.

"Missus told me not to till you had [illegible]," answered the hired [illegible]

THE CITY WATER.

Councilmen Make a Sweeping Investigation.

Evidence of Shrinkage in the Supply at the Netherwood Wells---Danger of Contamination---Plainfield Must Protect Herself.

The subject of Plainfield's water supply was given a most exhaustive review in the Common Council meeting Dec. 28; and food for grave thought and immediate action was provided, in the report of the sweeping investigation conducted by the Committee on Water and Sewerage. The investigation was in response to the warning uttered by the Mayor in his message, and the report emphasizes and expands that warning. The point of it is that the Water Supply Company in serving communities other than Plainfield and its sister borough is endangering not only the adequacy, but also the purity of the drink drawn from Plainfield's "underground river". The committee points the danger, and Counselor Marsh points the way to abolish it.

The report is long enough to occupy many columns of The Daily Press. It deals largely with geological estimates and legal quotations. Therefore The Press has abridged it for the prompt and clear understanding of the general public, who have not time to wait for its publication in pamphlet form, nor patience to follow its intricate detail.

The paragraph in the Mayor's message which precipitated the committee's action is as follows:

"Another question which sooner or later may be of importance to the people of Plainfield is connected with the Water Company. This company, or its promoters, have undertaken to furnish Fanwood, Westfield, Cranford, Roselle and Elizabeth with water drawn from our own source of supply. How long this drain can continue without being seriously felt by our people is a question worthy of serious consideration. At the present time, danger may not be imminent, but the natural increase in the population of the places referred to may in time result in an insufficient supply for our purposes. I recommend that during the year some action be taken by your honorable body to obtain information, both as to the extent of the danger referred to, and as to our legal rights in the premises."

The committee says:

"* * * * The water for our industrial and domestic uses is obtained from the loose, porous sand and gravel, and from the open fissures in the rocks underlying any given watershed. * * * * It is estimated that in a free open soil such as underlies Plainfield, about one-fourth of the rainfall percolates into the ground, and the balance is taken up by evaporation and vegetation, or runs off over the surface to streams and ponds. * * * * The 'underground river' from which we obtain our supply of clear and wholesome water is of purely local origin—the rainfall over an area of about 10 square miles—and the volume of flow is subject to the variations of the seasons of average or excessive rainfalls, of ordinary dry weather or severe drouths. This 'underground river' takes its rise near Springfield, and, flowing in a south westerly course parallel to the Watchung Mountain, gathers volume from the steep sides of the mountains on the right, and from the lesser slopes of the 'short hills' on the left, until it passes the corner of the terminal moraine at Netherwood, where it broadens out to the southeast and in a wider and presumably shallower stream finds its way through gravel and shale to the Raritan river. * * * *

"The area of the watershed tributary to the wells of the Plainfield Water Supply Company at Netherwood is about five square miles. The red sandstone underlying this area has been furrowed deeply in places by glacial action; bowl like depressions similar to what is seen on the surface among the 'short hills' have been formed, as also rock mounds, the counterpart of surface topography. These irregularities are overlaid by the 'boulder drift' composed of small boulders, gravel, sand, shale, and clay, and it is through this material that the 'underground river' flows in its course to the Raritan.

"If we allow 25 feet as an average depth of boulder drift above the rock, and 15 feet as an average from the surface of the ground to the water table, there is 10 feet depth of saturated gravel and shale from which the total yield of water must come. The total volume of water held in suspension in the interstices of a gravel bed such as that of the Plainfield watershed, extending over five square miles and ten feet deep, is 3,136 320 000 gallons, allowing 30 per cent of the total cubical contents to be water. This volume is moving in a stream the entire width of the valley, and cannot possibly all be intercepted by a single pumping system. Allowing one-third of it to be intercepted at the Plainfield Water Company's wells, gives 1 045 000 000 gallons as the [illegible] day pumped, there is a supply for 522 days, or less than one and one-half years, after which time the supply would have to be provided from the water which soaked into the ground from the rainfall.

"If we allow 12 inches of the annual rainfall as reaching the storage area, it will amount to a daily yield of 2 875 000 gallons. But only about one-half of this can be depended on for a permanent supply, hence the amount available will be less than 1 500,000 gallons per 24 hours. During the dry months, from May to September, the ordinary rainfall never reaches the saturated bed; it is therefore from the storage basin, or the so-called 'underground river', that the supply is drawn in these months. As the storage basin is drawn upon by pumping, the level of the water table is lowered; after a time the yield becomes so lessened that the pumps must be lowered, and this is what occurred at the Plainfield Water Supply Company's pumping station in the dry season of 1891 when the water table was lowered six or seven feet and necessitated lowering the pumps 8 ft 1 in below their original position. Engineer Brush, in referring to this necessity, stated that it was an indication 'that the supply was not inexhaustible'.

"To explain this effect of pumping upon the ground water more fully: At the normal volume of the 'underground river' the water table, representing the surface, maintains its permanent slope and its distance from the ground surface; when pumping begins, the water falls at first rapidly, afterwards more slowly, until, if the discharge of the pump be uniform, a point is reached where the water is supplied at exactly the same rate as delivered by the pump, and therefore pumping can go on indefinitely, but if the pumping is forced the water line sinks, and in doing so assumes the shape of a flattened, inverted cone, of which the pumping well is the apex and the absolute depth of the cone cannot exceed 30 feet below the surface of the water in the saturated bed. The average suction lift of the pumps of the Plainfield Water Supply Company was 20 to 26 feet during the original tests; and within a year after commencing to pump, the natural result of pumping—lowering the water table—occurred. The immediate area subject to the influence of the pumps is presumably a circle with the centre of the well for its centre, but in the case of a system of gang wells such as those of the Plainfield Water Supply Company the form will be that of an ellipse, and allowing for a depth of 50 feet the area of the influence will be about 100 acres; the westerly limit will be about 200 feet west of Leland avenue, and the easterly limit about at Terrill road; the sides of the ellipse will be distant about 1,100 feet on each side of the pumping station; allowing 25 feet depth, of the saturated bed, gives 35 000 000 cubic feet of gravel, or 66,500 000 gallons of water. On account of intermittent pumping, time is allowed daily for a partial refilling of the area of influence, but as consumption increases so is the time of pumping lengthened, and as the water in the cone (or pyramid) is lowered, the discharge is diminished proportionately as the head is diminished.

"If the pumping be kept up at the rate of maximum yield, the cone of influence will eventually be emptied, when no water can be obtained until after such time as it can be partly or wholly replenished from the natural rainfall reaching the saturated bed. There may be, however, water below this limit of suction; and to reach it, deeper and larger wells must be driven and the pumps lowered to within 20 feet or less of the surface. The old wells of the Plainfield Water Supply Company were driven 40 to 45 feet deep, but it has become necessary to sink new and deeper wells to the north of the old line of wells.

"From our investigations thus far we can state:

"1. The source of the Plainfield Water Supply Company's supply is local.

"2. Tests of numerous dug wells from the water-works eastward and northward over the watershed along Front street, Terrill road, Martine avenue, and at Scotch Plains, give evidence of a lowering of the water table, and consequent lessening of the storage basin.

"3. Inquiries disclose the fact that several wells eastward of the water-works have been deepened within two years.

"4. There has been general complaint of lowering of water in all the wells in the city and vicinity.

"5. The action of the Water Supply Company in lowering their pumps and boring wider and deeper wells indicates exhaustion of the storage supply.

"While we do not find that there is immediate danger of an insufficient supply for the needs of this city, reasoning from the experience of other localities [illegible] the probability of a very much diminished supply in the near future is imminent.

"There is, however, a consequence of excessive pumping which directly concerns the people of Plainfield. In the slow percolation through sand and gravel, water is very thoroughly filtered, and is delivered to consumers in safe and wholesome condition: the action of forced pumping is to create a more porous condition of the soil, and, indeed, to create open channels through which the supply of water will be temporarily greatly increased, but at the expense of its purity and wholesomeness: as every drop which reaches the pumps has passed downward from the ground surface through the intervening strata, so must the supply be more or less contaminated at the start by the condition of the soil through which it passes. It is a fact that in the Plainfield watershed are barnyards, manured fields, cesspools, privy vaults, and cemeteries, and a portion of the rainfall which soaks through these is pumped into the pipes of the Plainfield Water Supply Company, and delivered to consumers. Thorough filtration is secured by slow percolation, although absolute purification is not: if a series of channels is induced by forced pumping, is it not clear to any intelligent person that the danger arising from the delivery of possibly contaminated water is greatly increased?

"The remedy for this condition of our public water supply is to secure a sufficient watershed as free from contaminating influences as possible and take from it only such supply as is needed by the citizens of Plainfield and such adjoining communities as can safely be supplied."

Appended to this is an exhaustive opinion from Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, giving no hope of successfully attacking the constitutionality of the Plainfield Water Supply Company's charter, but stating:

"I am clearly of the opinion that the company cannot lawfully take and divert and convey to any place outside of Plainfield and adjoining towns water for public or private use, whether from streams on the surface or streams underground, or from any other body of water to any extent whatever, and this irrespective of the question whether Plainfield's supply would be damaged much or little, or not at all.

"* * * It is equally clear in my opinion that apart from liability to pay for service actually performed by the company and accepted by the city, the contract in question does not estop the city from invoking any remedy based on the alleged unconstitutionality of the city's charter, or any alleged act of the company in the exercise of its franchises, rights or powers. Furthermore, any tax-payer of the city, who has not been barred by laches, would be at liberty * * * to have the validity of the contract reviewed by the Supreme Court on certiorari. * *

"The city of Plainfield is not by the contract in question deprived of the power to obtain a supply of water for any municipal purposes through means other than the instrumentalities of the said company."

At the close of Counselor Marsh's opinion, the committee says:

"* * * * Your committee in conclusion recommend that in view of the importance of the matters under consideration, and the few days left before the expiration of the term of the present Council, the report of the committee and the opinion of the city's legal adviser be referred to the next Common Council."

The report is signed by George H. Frost, E. N. Erickson, S. A. Ginna, Committee on Water and Sewage, and is dated Plainfield, N. J., December 26, 1894.

The Common Council listened to its reading with grave attention; and, after adopting by resolution the recommendation of the committee urging action by the incoming Council, ordered 500 copies of the report printed in pamphlet form.

A REMEDY OF GREAT VALUE.

In an article on proprietary remedies which appeared in a recent issue of the "St. Louis, Mo., Medical Brief," Prof. Willard H. Morse, M. D. F. S. S. Sc., of Westfield, N. J., says. "One notable instance in point of efficacy is offered by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy which has earned reputation as curative of Bright's disease and other affections of the kidneys." In concluding the article, Dr. Morse says. Manifestly therefore, treatment of the kidneys and bladder, both preventive and curative, calls primarily for the exclusion of all factors causative of functional derangements. Diseases of the kidneys demands reestablishment of normal functions, destruction of the micro organism causing the disease and repair of the ravages. These three demands are fulfilled by Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It reinstitutes and regulates the renal functions, it destroys the causal germ and repairs the broken down tissues.

Dr David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is an unfailing specific for such diseases as rheumatism, neuralgia, biliousness, dyspepsia, kidney and liver complaints. In Bright's disease, diabetes, urinary troubles and the sickness peculiar to women, it cures where all else fails.

Pleasant Evening at Whist.

The regular bi-monthly session of the Watchung Avenue Whist Club was held Dec. 28 at the residence of I. B. Woolston on Fairview avenue. A very pleasant entertainment was afforded, during which refreshments were served and social chat enjoyed as the game progressed. Mrs. F. M. Slater was the fortunate winner of the first prize while the booby prize was captured by Mr. Woolston who was anxious that all the honors should remain on Fairview avenue. The club consists of Mr. and Mrs. John Whitenack, Mr. and Mrs. Peter [illegible], Mr. and Mrs. J. F. [illegible], Mr. and Mrs. Fred [illegible], Mr. and Mrs. [illegible]

A FORTUNE TOLD.

"Da—!"

"Oh! papa, how can you?"

The old high bailiff of Krohn pushed away the pretty little hand that his eldest daughter sought to place over his mouth.

"No," he said, "I will not keep quiet. I repeat that the whole custom of sending New Year's cards is a bad one, and it is time to put an end to it. What are the results of such nonsense.

"First, I get my mail bag an hour later than usual, and secondly it is crammed so full with the stupid stuff I can hardly get it open!"

At length the old gentleman's efforts was rewarded, the bag sprang open and he emptied its contents with impatience on the breakfast table.

"To Fraulein Katharina von Krohn," he read. "Are they all for you, Kathinka?"

"Don't be so unbearable, papa, and please don't call me Kathinka."

The old gentleman replied to his daughter's request with an unintelligible growl and went on drinking his coffee.

"Just look what a lot there is for me!" cried Katharina, piling the letters up on the table in front of her and her face lighting up with pleasure.

"Are they all for you?"

"Yes, all. Now you can see what it is to be known as a beauty."

"And an heiress," added her father.

"Yes, and an heiress," she repeated thoughtfully.

"But is there nothing for my little Lili?" asked the father.

Katharina shrugged her shapely shoulders impatiently.

"Why, of course not. If a girl expects to be shown much attention she must be more pushing and important."

"And an heress, too," was the father's laconic addition to the sentences.

"I really should be very grateful, father, if you would not allude so much to my money," was the rather curt protest.

"I can't help it, Katharina, when I see my Lili here, as beautiful as the flower that gave her the name, and—well, she is not an heiress, do you understand? It's the whole thing.

Katharina made no answer. She was busy studying the handwriting on the envelopes.

A young girl who had hitherto sat opposite to her in silence left her seat, went up to the high bailiff and, putting her fair young arms around his neck gave him a kiss.

A world of love shone in his eyes as he looked at her with pleasure and stroked her soft cheeks.

"Never mind, Lili," he said slowly. "I am glad that you don't get such a pile of letters. I'm grateful, too, you're not an heiress. Perhaps then no one will take you away from me."

Tears came into the girl's eyes, for, not though she said no word of the thought that no one had remembered her or cared enough for her to send her a New Year's card made her sad. But she forced herself not to cry and tried to conceal the few tears that would not be kept back by kissing her father again lovingly on the eyes and lips.

The High Bailiff of Krohn, father of the two girls had married twice. His first wife, a lovely, proud but vain woman died soon after the birth of a little daughter and left her the whole of a large fortune. His second wife, daughter of a country clergyman, brought him no wealth but a sweet and beautiful disposition. When she, too, died after two years' married life, he felt so overwhelmed that he had never since wholly recovered from the blow.

It made Katharina feel annoyed to see her father so gentle and affectionate toward her sister, for she said with a sharp look at them both:

"What! kissing again! I cannot understand how you find pleasure in always lying around each others necks!"

"You are out of sorts," Katharina," said her father. "One of the cards you expected has not come, perhaps. I would almost wager that among all these letters there is none from Baron Horn. Eh?"

Katharina grew a shade paler at these words.

"I certainly expected a card from Baron Horn," she replied, trying to conceal her annoyance. "He surely has sent me one! Are you sure you emptied the mail bag thoroughly?"

"Yes, I think so. But you had better look yourself; it would not be the first time that a letter has remained stuck in one of the corners."

"Ah! I thought so," exclaimed Katharina, pulling a crumpled letter out of a deep corner of the bag.

She glanced quickly and sharply at the address, and then with an exclamation of vexation let the letter hurriedly drop.

"Not from Baron Horn after all?" asked her father, picking it up, and yet—that is his writing. Heavens! why it's for you, Lili; it's addressed to you."

"Oh! impossible!" said Lili quietly, while a faint flush rose to her pretty cheeks. "It must be a mistake."

"By no means," returned her fatehr, smiling. "Here, open it. Let us see it. Oh, what a lovely card! Why, Katharina, where are you going?"

But the father received no answer. Katharina hurriedly gathered up her letters and left the room in a whirlwind.

Baron Horn was a young nobleman who had just returned from Africa. It was well known that he took great pleasure in visiting the Von Krohn family, and under all manner of pretexts took every opportunity to be with them. Of course every one thought that the attraction was the rich and beautiful Katharina, and she herself took particular pains to spread this view of the matter.

Accustomed as she was to a large number of enthusiastic admirers she had never for a moment imagined that the Baron could interest himself in her quiet, little sister, until she was reminded to-day in a rather unpleasant manner of the possibility of such a thing.

She read her letters through and became better humored.

"How stupid of me to get so cross," she said, as she smiled at her lovely face in the glass, "it is not possible that he favors Lili when he knows me."

There came a gentle knock at the door, and the servant girl came in and announced that the carriage was at the door.

Katharina at once remembered that Baron Horn had promised to go for a drive with her, and with this thought her face grew bright once again.

A charitable bazaar was to be opened in a neighboring town, and as the father was not able to go, Baron Horn had offered his escort to the two young ladies.

hour before the time, and found Katharina quite ready, to his great astonishment, for as a rule she kept everybody waiting half an hour at least.

Her purpose of frustrating a tete-a-tete between Lili and the Baron was completely successful, for she did not move from his side until they all three were ready to get into the carriage.

The father stood with beaming face on the doorstep and waved a fond farewell after them.

"This Horn is a very sensible fellow," he said to himself, "and I admire his choice. It will be very hard to lose Lili, but I would let him have her rather than any one else."

Although the bazaar was crowded, the arrival of Baron Horn and his two lovely companions caused considerable excitement, and they were speedily surrounded by acquaintances.

Among these was a Capt. Linke, a tall blonde fellow, and one of Katharina's most sincere and faithful admirers.

"How glad I am to see you here," he said.

"Really? Why?"

"May I show you why? Please come with me. At the other end of the hall there is a fortune teller, and I want you to see what she will tell you."

"May we join you?" asked the Baron.

"Certainly. Come; we will all go together."

The mysterious room that held the fortune teller was reached. The fortune teller proved to be a little figure in the middle of a disc.

Round the disc were figures and numbers and slips of paper arranged. Anyone who wanted to see into the future paid a mark, set the figure revolving and took the slip of paper opposite which it stopped.

"Now," said the Captain, taking out his purse, "won't you try your luck?"

But Katharina refused positively to be a party to such nonsense, and inasmuch as Lili could not be persuaded either, the Baron asked permission to inquire of the oracle himself.

He set the figure in motion and took the slip of paper opposite which it stopped.

"Seek her hand and buy the ring. Thy life will be then full of joy," ran the words on it.

The Baron tried to catch a glimpse from Lili, but she appeared to be absorbed in the nature and character of the floor, and would not raise her eyes.

"Pots Blitz!" cried the Captain, turning to Katharina, "that is famous; you really must be persuaded to try it now. Or, shall I do it for you?"

"You may do it for me," she replied, in such sharp tones that everyone looked at her.

The Captain turned the figure and read the words: "Hast thou not often heard it said—" He hesitated; then tore up the paper and threw it on the floor. The conclusion of the sentence seemed to suit the many proposals that Katharina had received too well for him to read it.

"What was the rest, Captain?" asked the Baron in all innocence. But the Captain looked so displeased that the question was not pressed.

"I wonder what it was?" Lili whispered to the Baron.

"We shall learn later, perhaps," he replied. "But did you get my New Year's card this morning?"

"Yes," she answered, softly, with a blush.

"And do you remember what the fortune teller told me just now? If I buy a ring will you wear it?"

He drew a deep sigh of relief as he saw his answer in her happy, blushing face.

She lowered her eyes and said: "I don't know. You must first speak to papa."—From the German.

Mistaken as to the Man.

A slim faced man with a distressing cough was inspecting some trunks in front of a Michigan avenue store a few days ago when the proprietor appeared and asked:

"Looking for a trunk?"

"Yes."

"Here's the best $4 trunk ever made, and I'm the only one that sells'em at less than $6."

"No good," replied the pale faced man with a sorrowful shake of his head. "One of these trunks wouldn't stand the journey from here to Jackson."

"What! I'll warrant 'em to go around the world! Take hold of one and bang it about and convince yourself."

"Do you give me leave to wrassle with one?"

"Of course I do. Take right hold."

The man with the distressing cough drew in a full breath, called out: "Scheneck-ta-day," as if warning a carload of passengers, and then reached for the trunk.

"Rip!" went one of the handles—"rip!" went the other, and as he stood it on end and upset it and flopped it back again one hinge broke loose and the cover split in two. With a twist of the wrist he gave it a slam-bang which completed the wreck, and, with a bow to the trunk man he joined the crowd and disappeared.

"Upon my soul!" gasped the proprietor, as he viewed the ruins, "but I made a big mistake in him! He's a baggage master instead of a dying traveller.—Detroit Free Press.

The Accommodating Man.

There is nothing like the heartlessness of a man. There is a pretty little bride here in Washington who is just coming to know that.

She fell out with her newly acquired husband the other day. I forgot quite what it was about, but it seems to me he had said something about a new gown of hers. At any rate, life was no longer worth living. She shut herself in her room and cried till her head ached. Then she bathed her eyes, brushed a fluff of powder over her red and swollen nose, and called lolly to her husband:

"Fred," said she, "please bring me a spoon; I'm going to take poison."

"Yes, dear," answered the heartless monster from below; do you want a teaspoon or a tablespoon?"—Washington Post.

A. D. 1894, All the Same.

Mr. McRae of Arkansas was making a speech in the House to-day when he used the expression, "In the year of our Lord."

"Please don't," shouted Asher Caruth across the hall. "It was the devil's year to the Democratic party."—Atlanta Constitution.

One On Chicago.

When Seely, the absconding bookkeeper of the Shoe and Leather Bank admitted his identity to the Chicago police a short while ago, he said he was glad it was all [illegible]

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

A NETHERWOOD FESTIVAL.

The Children of St. Stephen's Joyously Celebrate Holy Innocents' Day.

"The dear little Church on the Hill" was filled with children and the parents of the children last Friday at 5. The terra cotta interior of the church was full of light and happy faces; and amid the Christmas decorations stood a Christmas tree, fifteen feet high, covered from top to the lowest branch with beautiful ornaments, the gift of a Brooklyn friend of the school, and with numberless wax candles. The generosity of Anthony R. Dyett supplied the tree itself.

Miss Maude Lord was the organist of the festival. The children first sang "Ring Out the Bells for Christmas", and "Hark! A 'Burst of Heavenly Music". Later in the brief service they gave "List! List to the Chime", and "The Christmas Tree". The brief address of Rev. S. P. Simpson was followed by a joyous outburst of young voices in "Hark! the Angels Singing". The training of the children was a triumph of Superintendent Jeffray Phillips, who assiduously labored to make the most of the one hundred voices in the school.

The distribution of the presents occupied fully thirty minutes. Besides the chief presents addressed to the scholars, a box of oranges, given by Capt. Hand, and 120 boxes of candy were distributed. The beautiful lacquered candy boxes were the gift of Stephen A. Ginna, who generally succeeds in doing good by stealth, but who, in this instance, will be compelled to accept the thanks of the people of Netherwood. Special prizes were given to Clara Winterlich who brought in eight scholars, and to Laura Christiansen who brought in seven more. For attendance, prizes were presented to Christine Frederickson, Fritz Siebold, Osmond Noel, Dorsey Hyde, Willie Beal, and Albert Finch.

The Sunday-school has prospered finely during the present year, and now numbers 103 scholars. The infant class, in charge of Mrs. Loeser, is easily the banner class of the school. It numbers 29, and the attendance is generally up to 25. The other teachers are: Mrs. Beal, Mrs. Hill, Mrs. Woodward, Mrs. Howard, Miss Leake, Miss Maude Lord, S. Seabury Guion, N. P. T. Finch, and Superintendent Phillips.

The sewing class, made up from the school, has an enrollment of 26 girls. It meets on Saturday afternoons, and is under the care of Mrs. Beal, Mrs. Loeser, and Miss Anthony, assisted at times by other women. From their earnings with the needle the class put on the Christmas tree a purse containing $10 50, a gift to the treasury of the Sunday-school.

Trinity Church Entertainment.

Friday afternoon one hundred and fifty members of the infants Sunday-school class of Trinity Reformed Church participated in an enjoyable entertainment and social at the church. After prayer and concert singing by the school the following excellent programme was rendered: Recitation, Bessie Randall; piano duet, Violet Beerbower, Isabelle Edwards; recitation Beulah Rogers; piano solo, Lucy Coriell, recitation, Eva Dunavan; song by a double quartette consisting of Gertie Tier and Jennie Thorn, soloists, and a chorus composed of Violet Beerbower, Lucy Coriell, May Anthony, Eva Dunavan, Alice Mariner, Isabelle Edwards; recitation, May Wilson.

The various numbers on the programme were beautifully rendered and the young people merited the hearty applause which followed each selection.

Mrs. J. M. Tier deserves great praise for the excellent training of the children.

Adjourning to the class rooms, an hour was pleasantly spent in games and merry chat. Refreshments were served and each member of the school received a box of candy. In the evening the larger pupils were entertained by a beautiful series of stereopticon views selected by J. E. Hepburn of Richmond street. Views of England, the Continent, New Zealand and our own country were shown, and many novel and amusing mechanical pictures were introduced for the special benefit of the young people. After the lecture candy was distributed and a sociable rounded out the enjoyment of the occasion.

—The 1895 calendars issued by The Daily Press are especially valuable in Plainfield, containing as they do the list of fire-alarm boxes revised to date. They have been liberally circulated by the regular carriers, but additional copies may still be had on application at the office of The Daily Press.

ONE WAY OF "PUBLISHING".

Water Supply Reports to be Printed in Pamphlets That Will Never Be Read.

The Common Council in deciding Friday night to have the publication of the water supply reports done by means of pamphlets adopted a plan that is ordinarily very successful in limiting the circulation of important public documents. The courthouses and capitols of the State and country are full of the junk of such accumulated supplies of pamphlets. There is just one way to get reports into the homes and the hands of the people, and that is through the newspapers. Five hundred pamphlets held by the City Clerk to be called for will have an actual circulation of possibly one hundred. For about the same money, or possibly less, the report could be officially published in the Plainfield daily newspapers, reaching every home in city and borough, and giving widespread circulation outside of the town. If the Common Council wants the report to get into the possession of the taxpayers, it should authorize its publication in the official papers, and then the taxpayers would get a return for their money; printing the pamphlets is a needless waste.

Exciting Runaway.

A roan mare driven by Mr. Douglass of 33 Washington avenue broke away Saturday at the corner of Washington and Willow avenues, throwing out Mr. and Mrs. Douglass and their daughter.

The runaway ran to Front street, crashed into Rickert's truck, and frightened a horse attached to Smalley's sleigh. The Smalley horse jumped into Albert Hedden's hack, containing Mrs. J. W Jackson and a nurse and child, all of whom escaped injury.

The shaft of the sleigh tore a hole in Hedden's vehicle, and the horse was injured, being pierced in the breast by the carriage spring.

Blair's mare continued down Front street to Sandford avenue, where it encountered a hack driven by Tom Stevenson, who was conveying Mrs. Leland of Sandford avenue to the North Avenue station.

The hack was badly scratched in the back, and broken glass from the window fell in a shower upon the occupant, who, though frightened, escaped injury. Continuing on her way, the mare cleared herself from the sleigh, and was stopped on North avenue by Judge Coddington, and taken to Blair's stable where she was found to be quite badly scratched. The sleigh is almost a complete wreck.

Hope Chapel's Santa Claus.

Hope Chapel, as usual, gave their school an enjoyable Christmas entertainment Dec. 28, which opened with an acrostic, "God Bless Our Sunday-school", by the following girls, all dressed in white: Flora Roseberry, Kate Bodine, Pollie Hall, Nellie Hall, Lillie Duckworth, Florence Weston, Minnie Hartfelder, Ella Simpson, Robina Morning, Cora and Ella Hand, Lizzie Johnson, Mamie Porter, Clara York, Emma Foster, Bessie Walls, Alice Ashworth, Maude Utzinger, Agnes Morning, Helen Higgins. Miss Hunter had full charge, and deserves much credit. Recitations were made by Josie Cook, Bessie Walls, Flora Roseberry, Mary Porter, Emma Foster, Alice Higgins, Katy Bodine, Mary Duckworth. The above was interspersed with singing by the school of Christmas carols, and a most delightful time with Santa Claus, in the personality of Fred Andrews, who made a clever Santa. Candy and presents were given by him to the scholars. Mrs. W. H. Hall received a handsome umbrella from her class.

Santa Claus at Home in Grace.

A unique Christmas entertainment was held in Grace M. E. Church last Friday when the scholars gave a cantata entitled "Santa Claus at Home". Those taking part were:

Girls—E Most, S Winckler, M Garey, A Conroy, E Loomis, N Valiant, M Stevens, A Van Horn, M Hoagland, E Taft, A DeMott, F Conroy, B DeMott, E Doeringer, F Voehl, O Pangborn, A Marsh, and A Morse.

Boys—R Martin, E Loomis, G Schuck F Shepherd, H Vetterlein, C Shepherd, A Gulick, E Pearson, F Voorhees, B Schuck, J Valiant, J Carney, A Pangborn, H Voehl, A Utzinger, F Conroy, S Riker, R VanNest, S Benner.

Winnie Carroll very ably took the part of the Queen and John Steiner was the ever-welcome Santa Claus. Miss Grace Carroll as the accompanist was excellent. The distribution of presents and candy made glad the hearts of all.

Pythian Officers.

District Deputy Grand Chancellor Sears and staff will install the following newly elected officers of Perseverance Lodge, Friday evening, January 5:

C. C.—Jacob Blimm, Jr.
V. C.—Stephen J. Higham,
Prelate—Louis Mohring.
M. of W.—Theo. Mason.
M. of E.—Wm. H. B. Drake.
M. of F.—John F. Wakefield.
K. of R. and S.—Joseph C. Blimm,
M. at A.—Thomas Milligan.
Representative to Grand Lodge—Asa D. Pope.
Alternate Representative to the Grand Lodge—George W. Clark.
Trustee for eighteen months—Morgan Turton.

—During the past year under the direction of Street Commissioner Robert Meeker 12,345 lineal feet of sidewalk and 9.280 feet of curbing have been laid. This makes about two miles and a half of flagging and two miles of curbing.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr., Thursday.

F. C. Phoebus of Bernardsville is visiting O. B. Wright of Leland avenue.

J. M. Carney has returned to his former position with the United States Express Company.

J. M. Burnet and family of 910 Madison avenue will spend a few weeks in New York.

Miss Annie Stowe of North avenue is spending the holidays with relatives in Annandale.

Miss Minnie Cole of Readington, Hunterdon County, is visiting relatives on Grant avenue.

Nicholas Conover of Philadelphia is the guest of his brother, Charles Conover, for New Year's.

Mrs. David McKelway of Philadelphia is visiting her mother, Mrs. J. G. Dalziel of Plainfield avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Coriell of West Front street are visiting friends in Trenton for a few days.

Miss Lucie Davis of East Fifth street is entertaining her friend, Miss Pearl Edgerton of Brooklyn.

Mrs. George F. Meschutt of East Front street intends spending a part of the Winter in the South.

Miss Fanny Cuthbertson of Philadelphia is visiting her sister, Mrs. Charles Runyon of North avenue.

Mrs. James Baker of New York city is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Gross of Belvidere avenue, Netherwood.

Mrs. Herbert Welch of Brooklyn and Mrs. Ashbrook of Philadelphia are visiting their father, James McGee of Willow avenue.

Andrew D. Mellick of Plainfield has been re-elected registrar of the New Jersey Society of the Sons of the American Revolution.

Mrs. Orville Stillman and son of Westerly, R. I., are spending the holidays with her mother, Mrs. D. C. Green of Park avenue.

Mrs. W. H. Seymour, wife of Conductor Seymour of the street railway, is visiting her daughter, Miss Seymour of 150 Plane street, Newark.

Mrs. Thomas S. Harris and son Roy, of Philadelphia, are visiting Mrs. Harris's sister, Mrs. George F. Meschutt of 326 East Front street.

The Misses Annie and Jennie Collins of New York are spending the holiday week with their sister, Mrs. J. H. Blimm of East Third street.

E. J. Olssen of East Second street, after 25 years of faithful service in the New York postoffice, has been dismissed in the general discharge.

Fred Truebella, an employe of the United States Express office, went to Port Jervis yesterday to attend a holiday reception given by Congressman St. John of that city.

Mr. and Mrs. John Reed of Bound Brook, Edward Dawe of Bridgeport, and Joseph Dawe of High Bridge, spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Cox of West Front street.

Mrs. MacLean of 35 West Seventy-third street, New York, gave a reception yesterday at which Mrs. Alven Beveridge of Plainfield assisted in receiving, and Andrew Carpenter furnished the music.

By the death of L. E. Clark, only three of the original Board of Managers of the Dime Savings Institution are left since its organization in 1869. Those three are E. R. Pope, J. B. Coward, Levi Hetfield.

John Naylor has been promoted to be assistant superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in Somerville, to begin duty January 7. This is a deserved promotion of a faithful employe.

The Daily Press is indebted to Ernest R. Ackerman, President of the Lawrence Cement Company, for a copy of the handsome calendar issued by the company for 1895. Its headpiece is a steel-plate of Napoleon Sarony's famous photograph of a majestic lion from real life.

T. J. Cahill, for some time the assistant superintendent of the Plainfield division of the Prudential Insurance Company, will take charge of the Salem territory for the company Jan. 1. Mr. Cahill during his residence in Plainfield has proved himself not only a competent insurance agent but a genial, whole-souled man whose friendship was fully appreciated by a large and constantly increasing circle of friends who recognized his sterling qualities and who wish him the best of success in his new field of labor.

How's This!

We offer One Hundred Dollars Reward for any case of Catarrh that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Props. Toledo, O.

We the undersigned, have known F. J. Cheney for the last 15 years, and believe him perfectly honorable in all business transactions and financially able to carry out any obligation made by their firm.

West & Truax, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Walding, Kinnan & Marvin, Wholesale Druggists, Toledo, O.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of this system. Price, 75c. per bottle. Sold by all Druggists. Testimonials free.

—Jerusalem Lodge, Jerusalem Chapter, Anchor Lodge and Trinity Commandery, have united in renting new and elegant lodge rooms on the fifth floor of the Babcock building. They move in April 1. The rooms are among the finest in the State, embracing lodge room, reception, parlor, smoking, banquet rooms, armory and a well appointed kitchen.

TARS AFLOAT AND ASHORE.

Sailors are Not Always at Sea. How the Time and the Pay are Divided.

The landlubber idea, so prevalent and so erroneous, that navy officers spend the greater part of their time "rocking in the cradle of the deep" "far out upon the the sea," with semi-occasional glimpses of port, obtained when repairs to their vessel or supplies are needed, is offset by the record of the United States Naval Register.

Upon a survey of each officers' time of sea service, shore duty, or unemployed, it would appear that rear admirals are usually credited with from twenty to twenty-five years sea service, from fifteen to eighteen years of shore duty, and from three to seven years as unemployed. With regard to the rank of the commodore the proportions are very much the same.

The time of captains at sea and ashore is pretty evenly divided, on the average, though there are some wide variations, in some cases from one to eleven years in idleness. One of the recently appointed commodores was at sea fifteen years and six months, on shore duty thirteen *years and six months, and was unem*ployed ten years and four months.

Commanders have had from nine to sixteen years at sea, from one to sixteen years' shore duty, and from one to eleven years unemployed. Lieutenant commanders have proportionately the same experience in duty. Lieutenants of both grades have had from six to eighteen years at sea and from three to eleven years on shore, with periods of idleness of from one to four years.

An officer is usually sent to sea for three years, after which he is assigned to shore duty for a similar term. It not infrequently happens, however, that one year of this "sea" duty is spent at the docks in the navy yards, where war ships are detained while undergoing various alterations suggested by navy board of inspection. Shore duty is frequently extended by the Navy Department upon application.

Pay is from $200 to $1,000 a year more at sea, according to rank, than ashore. This inducement leads many officers who need the money to seek sea service. To put a man on waiting orders means a loss in pay of from $400 to $2,000 a year, and it is regarded, if continued for a long period, as a punishment for minor misdeeds.

THE LONG-LIVED ENGINE.

It Outlasted Its Master Because He Kept It Better than Himself.

I once had a curious and instructive conversation with an engineer who then had charge of a large stationary engine. It was a beautiful engine and worked as true as steel could work. The man surprised me by telling me it had been at work nearly ninety years. "And do you know," he added, "it has had eight masters; I am the eighth who has had charge of it; the others are all either dead or worn out, and yet it goes on as if it were as young as ever. Very strange, sir, isn't it, that an engine should live so much longer than a man, and it is not hard work for us, either, or exposed work, for the room is always warm and comfortable, and the place is, of course, clean and light."

"What did the men die from?" I asked.

"Well, three or four, I am afraid, died of drink, another of bad temper, another of worry, and so on, but the engine went on all the same."

The fate of the engine, its long life and continuous industry puzzled the man. He often in his lonely hours thought of it, and wondered how many men would follow him before the engine began to break down.

It did not puzzle me. That engine did work a good many hours a day truly; but it was equable in its work: it never ran loose; it was true in its vocation; it was bright as a new pin, clean in every point; it was served with best but simplest fuel food; it had its furnace tubes clear; it was saved from friction by having its parts properly oiled, and it drank nothing but water. So it lived on through nearly three generations, with a good chance of living through three more; it was allowed, in fact, to make the most of its physical life.

Its masters did not make the most of their lives; they might have been somewhat industrious, but they were not so orderly, so true, so steady, so clean as they made the engine; they had not learned so well how to find the best food and drink for their own labor as had been found for the engine; they did not make the most of their lives, and therefore they stopped, but the engine went still merrily, on its way.—Sir B. W Richardson in Longman's Magazine.

Plainfield Always at the Top.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, with its large universal patronage, is especially proud of its Plainfield office, which, besides giving a service which for promptness and general satisfaction is unexcelled, is managed with such judicious good judgment and thrift that in point of net revenue to the company it ranks third at the top among all the offices of the company. This highly gratifying result is accomplished through the efficient personal supervision of Manager Chas. W. Runyon, who has surrounded himself with a most capable corps of assistants.

Union Village Christmas.

The Union Village Sunday-school held their Christmas exercises last evening. The children had a tree; books and candies for the little ones; Bibles, neatly bound, for the intermediate classes. Miss Soliman sang very sweetly several anthems, accompanying on the banjo. Wallie Kyritz played selections on the organ, Miss Soliman accompanying on the violin. Anna Smith, six-years-old, recited "The Doll's First Christmas".

—The Daily Press alone in Plainfield publishes each Saturday, Sabbath departments for the Epworth League and the Christian Endeavor workers. These columns are of much help to Bible students and Sunday-school teachers.

—Everybody praises The Daily Press calendar for '95. It gives the dates, the moon's phases, and the fire-alarm boxes of city and borough revised to date. Additional copies may still be had on application to The Daily Press office, free of charge. Take one and welcome. They are as handsome as useful.

WIND FILLED TIRES.

WILL THE PNEUMATIC CUSHION ENCIRCLE ALL WHEELS.

Interesting Experiments with Rubber-Covered and Ordinary Steel-Tired Wheels. The Advantages of the Latter on a Perfect Roadbed.

The pneumatic tire is not a new thing. It was made over forty-five years before there was such a thing known as a bicycle. It was applied to a carriage by a man named Thompson of New England. It was not until forty-five years later that the pneumatic tire was applied to bicycles. In 1845, when Mr. Thompson thought to make a pneumatic tire for a carriage, it was considered an absurdity too great to be mentioned.

I will first consider the matter of draught or road friction, and give you the result of some tests which I have recently conducted, and which are now made public for the first time. Two box buggies were employed, one having the usual steel-tired wheels, 44 and 48 inches in diameter, and weighing 250 pounds, the other having pneumatic-tired wheels, 32 and 44 inches in diameter, and the vehicle weighed 232 pounds. The cross diameter of the tires was two inches. An amount of weight equal to the difference was placed in the lighter vehicle, and care was taken to see that the front wheels of the two vehicles bore exactly the same weight.

The surface upon which this first test was made was a new, hard pine floor, and the wheels were drawn lengthwise of the boards. The amount of power required to move these vehicles under the following conditions was carefully noted by means of a registering spring balance. The vehicles empty, it was found that the power required to start the pneumatic tires from a standstill was four pounds, and the power required to haul them at a slow walk was three and a half to four pounds.

The power required to start steel tires was found to average but three pounds, and when started the power required to draw them was but one and a half to two pounds, showing an average difference of about fifty per cent. in favor of the steel tires.

Next, an obstruction 5-16 of an inch high was placed in front of and against the wheels of each vehicle. To haul them over this obstruction from a standstill required, in the case of the steel tires, 25 pounds; with the rubber tires but 11 pounds. Then they were drawn at a slow walk over the 5-16 inch obstruction, and it was found that the power required to draw the rubber tires was 5 pounds, and the steel tires 8 pounds.

The 5-16 inch obstruction was then placed in front of the wheels, and the power required to haul over it was 13 1-2 pounds for the rubber and 40 pounds for the steel tires.

Over the 7-8 inch obstruction the power required to haul the two carriages was 36 pounds for the rubber and 69 pounds for the steel.

To haul these two carriages empty over a moderately sandy road, the extreme power required for the rubber was 26 pounds, the same as when loaded on gravel with an average of 16. The steel-tired vehicle required an extreme of 40 pounds, and an average of 22.

With a load of 150 pounds, the steel tire required an extreme of 57 and an average of 40; and the rubber an extreme of 35 and an average of 16.

After these tests had been made over this particular piece of road, the rubber-tired vehicle was again tried, empty, and it was found that the hauling of it six times over the road had so improved it that instead of the extreme pull of 26 pounds, and an average pull of 16, the extreme was but 16, with average of 8.

If we had a perfectly true surface for a road, and perfectly true metal wheels, nothing better could be desired; but the words "perfectly true" mean, in the case of roads, an impossibility. Even the surface of the best race track is made up of small obstructions.

If the metal-shod wheel meets a gravel stone one quarter of an inch in diameter, and that stone is resting on a hard foundation, the wheel, with its entire load, must be lifted bodily one quarter of an inch high to pass over it, and this takes horse power; but when the rubber tire meets the stone, the vehicle is not raised perceptibly, if at all, but the stone is embedded in the rubber, while most of the weight is borne by that part of the rubber which is still resting on the ground; and the power required to go over it is only that needed to dent the rubber in one spot, or, if it is a pneumatic tire, to slightly compress the body of air which it contains.

There are four reasons why a pneumatic sulky is faster than the old style: and every one applies with more or less force to an elastic tire, of any kind for any vehicle:

First—It draws more easily.

Second—Owing to the small diameter of the wheel, the sulky is much stiffer sidewise, and the soft tire stays on the ground and does not slew in rounding curves.

Third—When a horse is being crowded to his utmost limit, as all horses are supposed to be in a race, his nerves are under an intense strain, and he is kept near the point where he will no longer hold to the unnatural motion of trotting, but will adopt the run which comes perfectly natural to all four-footed animals. The noise and jar of any hard-tired vehicle when at speed has much to do with the action of any horse.

Fourth—The more securely and comfortably any driver is seated, the better attention he can give to the trotter, and a nervous driver tends to make a nervous horse.—The Hub.

He Did Not Take It.

"Say, pop, do people take snuff nowadays?"

"Sometimes, my son."

"Oh, then, it's all right."

"What is all right?"

"Why, I heard mamma telling Aunt Amy that you wasn't up to snuff."—Detroit Free Press.

Valuable Information

"Anything new in your line?" asked the market reporter.

It was growing dark. The hardware man looked about absently and then remarked: "Window blinds are going down."—Indianapolis Journal.

Misunderstood.

"The great misfortune of me life," complained Mr. Dismal Dawson, "is that I am constantly bein' misunderstood."

"So?" asked the benevolent lady, watching Mr. Dawson eat.

"Yes'm. Nigh every time I ask for work folks think I mean it."—Indianapolis Journal.

[illegible]

From the New York Edition of February ..., 189-.

Increasing Use of Drugs in Tablet Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests, a variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions, and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homoeopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. New as the use of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled apothecaries and careful and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 SPRUCE ST., NEW YORK.

MEN WANTED To take orders. No delivering or collecting. Experience not necessary; steady employment; best terms; write at once and secure choice of territory.
ALLEN NURSERY CO.,
Rochester, N.Y.
3 3 4m

EVENTS OF THE YEAR

BRIEF SUMMARY OF THE MEMORABLE ANNALS OF 1894.

Work of the Devouring Element—Cyclones and Earthquakes—The Personal, Sporting and Miscellaneous Record—An Index of the Past Year's History.

The year 1894 is made memorable at home by the enactment of a tariff and income tax law; the great Pullman boycott and railroad strike, with their accompanying tumult and mob violence; the Samoan imbroglio, the Bluefields incident and the new Chinese-American treaty. The leading events abroad were the great Yellow war, which has raised grave problems as yet unsettled; the death of the czar and the interference with British interests by the French in Africa. There has been no great epidemic, and while the king of terrors and terror of kings is never idle the death roll is not unusually large. The white wings of peace have been spread over our own country, and the discussions and events in the realms of finance, industry and labor will serve to hasten a solution of these problems:

FIRE RECORD.

JANUARY.

3. Fire in Toledo destroyed 3 elevators, the Chamber of Commerce, a museum and wholesale drug store; losses, $650,000.
Blackmann & Sons' drug house burned in Detroit; loss, $100,000.
4. A granite block burned in Worcester, Mass.; loss, $140,000.
6. The Albany theater burned at Albany; loss, $125,000.
8. Large fire in the World's fair buildings; loss, about $1,000,000.
10. The Starr Manufacturing company's factory at Richmond, Ind., totally destroyed by fire; loss, $250,000.
13. Tinkham's woolen mill burned at Harrisonville, R. I.; loss $480,000.
2 blocks burned at Ipswich, Mass.; loss, $100,000.
20. Purdue university, Lafayette, Ind., almost destroyed by fire; loss, $180,000.
24. The Sherman oil and cotton mill burned at Sherman, Tex.; loss, $100,000.
25. At Bath, Me., a hotel, 2 banks and several stores were burned; loss, $500,000.

FEBRUARY.

2. In Omaha 2 stores, a Catholic church and a schoolhouse destroyed by fire; loss, $250,000.
6. At Dublin, Tex., a cotton press burned; loss, $150,000.
7. 17 stores and offices burned at Montgomery, Mo.; loss, $133,000.
8. 2 tobacco factories burned at Henderson, Ky.; loss, $200,000.
11. Fire destroyed over $100,000 worth of business property at Wapa-Koneta, O. T.
At Duluth the board of trade building was burned; loss, $94,000.
13. The State Normal school at Oneonta, N. Y., burned; loss, about $100,000.
16. The main building and annex of Knoxville college burned at Knoxville.
18. At Ottawa Stewart's stable of valuable trotters burned; loss, $350,000.
The Griswold Linseed Oil company at Warren, O., lost a mill plant valued at $800,000 by fire.
24. 20 buildings burned at McDonald, Pa.; loss, $100,000.
25. Peebie's sanitarium burned at San Antonio, Tex.
Davis Bros.' bazaar burned in San Francisco; loss, $120,000.

MARCH.

1. Alum Springs hotel, near Danville, Ky., destroyed by fire; loss, $100,000.
Henry's Opera House block burned at North Baltimore, O.; loss, $100,000.
2. At Shreveport, La., a wholesale drug house was burned; loss, $125,000.
5. Deadwood, S. D., nearly destroyed by fire; loss, $125,000.
13. The Lansing Lumber company at Clare, Mich., burned out; loss, $175,000.
17. A block of stores burned at Gloucester, Mass.; loss, $125,000.
19. The Union depot in Denver destroyed by fire; loss, $200,000.
20. Business property to the value of $150,000 destroyed by fire at Fort Worth, Tex.
26. A lumber plant, creosote works, 30 dwellings and a schooner burned at Money Point, a suburb of Norfolk; loss, $300,000.
30. The business portion of the town of Barry, Ills., destroyed by fire; loss, $200,000.

APRIL.

9. The Davidson hotel and theater burned in Milwaukee; 9 deaths; loss, $225,000.
10. Manion's livery stable, with 130 horses and 150 carriages, burned in Baltimore; loss, $400,000; 1 death.
13. The American Glucose works and other property burned in Buffalo; loss, $1,200,000; 12 workmen killed.
14. 24 buildings burned in Santa Cruz, Cal.; loss, $255,000.
17. Iron and steel works burned at Burnham, Pa.; loss, $150,000.
18. The City Electric Power company of Sacramento destroyed by fire; loss, $100,000.
20. The National Linseed Oil works at St. Louis destroyed by fire; loss, $400,000.
25. The village of Townsend, Vt., nearly destroyed by fire.
The Colorado smelter at Butte, Mon., destroyed by fire; loss, $100,000.
27. The business portion of Gasport, N. Y., destroyed by fire.
28. The famous old St. Charles hotel in New Orleans destroyed by fire; loss, $500,000.
29. The Vaughn Library building burned at Ashland, Wis.; loss $120,000.

MAY.

6. The William N. Whitely Reaper and Mower works burned at Muncie, Ind.; loss, $245,000.
10. The town of Norway, Me., destroyed by fire; loss, $225,000.
13. Rev. Dr. Talmage's new Tabernacle and the Hotel Regent adjoining destroyed by fire; losses, over $1,000,000.
15. 12 acres of territory burned over in Boston; nearly 200 buildings destroyed; loss, $1,000,000.
16. Coal and lumber yards burned at Pawtucket, R. I.; loss, $500,000.
18. Hillsboro college burned at Hillsboro, O.; loss, $50,000.
20. Fire destroyed several millinery, lace and trimming establishments in Philadelphia; loss, $250,000.
22. The residence of E. B. Haskell, one of the proprietors of the Boston Herald, burned at Auburndale; loss, $100,000.
28. 3 acres of lockhouses and other property destroyed by fire at Arlington, Mass.; loss, over $100,000.

JUNE.

5. 15 shops and stores and 20 residences burned at Ottumwa, Ia.; loss, $225,000; 2 deaths.
8. Lumber mills and buildings burned at Dubuque, Ia.; loss, $600,000.
11. 2 agricultural warehouses burned in Kansas City; loss, $200,000.
12. 200 buildings destroyed by fire at Panama; loss, $5,000,000.
16. The abattoir of the Central stockyards of Jersey City burned; loss, $1,500,000.

JULY.

2. The mill of the Vermont Marble company at Proctor, Vt., destroyed by fire; loss, $100,000.
4. 27 buildings in Judson, Mass., destroyed by fire; loss, $300,000.
24 buildings burned at Edwards, N. Y.; loss, $85,000.
5. The 6 great structures surrounding the court of honor at the World's fair grounds destroyed by incendiary fires.
18. 73 buildings burned in Salem, O.; loss, $175,000.
20. A fire in El Paso, Ills., destroyed the business portion of the town; loss, $200,000.
25. The Central Market block burned in Minneapolis; loss, $150,000.
26. The Caldwell hotel and other property destroyed by fire at Birmingham, Ala.; losses, over $125,000.
28. The Knox Express company and Adams Express company stables burned in Washington; loss over $100,000; 9 firemen killed.
26. Box factory burned at Norton, Mass.; loss, $150,000.
27. Fire destroyed 20 business places at Celina, O.; loss, $150,000.
The town of Phillips, Wis., wiped out by a forest fire, leaving 2,000 people homeless; loss, $1,250,000; about 20 persons lost their lives.
28. 60 buildings and business concerns destroyed by fire at Belle Plain, Ia.; loss, $450,000.
17 buildings burned at Brooklyn, Ia.; loss, $125,000.
30. $300,000 worth of lumber and other property destroyed by fire at Minneapolis.
Mayo college burned at Cooper, Tex.; loss, $100,000.

AUGUST.

1. Fire destroyed $3,000,000 worth of property in the lumber district of Chicago.
2. The business center of Lamoure, N. D., destroyed by fire; loss, $200,000.
Allen's Opera House at Jamestown, N. Y., burned; loss, $150,000.
5. A $100,000 fire in the business portion of Marion, Ia.
6. 20 business houses and 3 residences destroyed by fire at Adair, Ia.
7. Grocery warehouse burned at Pueblo, Colo.; loss, $250,000.
8. Stryker's pottery burned at San Jose, Cal.; loss, nearly $100,000.
9. Pegeon, a small town in Elk county, Pa., destroyed by fire.
Gifford, Ills., "wiped off the map" by fire.
The Coliseum burned at Minneapolis; loss, $65,000.
17. The Hawley silk mills at Port Jervis, N. Y., destroyed by fire; loss, $500,000.
21. $400,000 worth of property destroyed at Memphis by the burning of a drug plant and a wholesale grocery.
22. 2 blocks burned at Bowling Green, Ky.; loss, $150,000.
30. The town of Elliston, Mon., destroyed by fire; loss, $100,000.

SEPTEMBER.

6. The business portion of Conrad, Ia., burned; loss, $50,000.
9. The business portion of Kitsap, Wash., destroyed by fire; loss, $50,000.
10. 47 buildings at Dalton, O., burned by incendiary fires; loss, $250,000.
25. 2 hotels and 8 stores burned at Cape Vincent, N. Y.; loss, $150,000.

OCTOBER.

5. Fatal fire in Detroit; 6 deaths.
A $100,000 fire in Nashville.
20 houses burned at Buchanan, W. Va.; loss, $80,000.
13. The Morse-Coe shoe factory burned at Omaha; loss, $125,000.
14. A $50,000 fire at Chester Hill, O.
16. The R. C. infirmary and several business buildings burned at Houston, Tex.; 2 deaths; financial loss, $500,000.
17. The village of Latham, Ills., suffered the fifth extensive blaze in years; loss, $40,000.
29. Porter's wholesale millinery establishment in Pittsburg destroyed by fire; loss, $250,000.

NOVEMBER.

3. The Indiana Medical college and Scottish Rite hall burned in Indianapolis; loss, $175,000.
10. At Frederick, S. D., nearly all the leading business places were burned; loss, $100,000.
11. The Arlington inn at Fort Worth, Tex., destroyed by fire; loss, $125,000.
12. 25 thousands bales of cotton burned on a wharf at New Orleans; loss, $750,000.
14. Sheffield, Ia., totally destroyed by fire; loss, $100,000.
17. 21 buildings burned at Columbus, Ky.; loss, $75,000.
Fire in the lace district of Nottingham, England, destroyed values aggregating $750,000.
20. The business portion of Savannah, Mo., nearly destroyed by fire; loss, $80,000.
22. 9 buildings burned at Shiner, Tex.; loss, $100,000.
24. An armory, livery stable and other property burned at Springfield, Ills.; loss, $125,000.
26. 31 dwellings and all the stores in town destroyed by fire at Marion, N. C.; loss, $125,000.
27. The business part of Athens, Ga., burned; loss, $150,000.

DECEMBER.

1. The Charity hospital burned at Birmingham, Ala.
4. Fire gutted a 6 story building on Broadway, New York; loss, $150,000.
In Omaha the Exposition building, a theater and the First Baptist church destroyed.

MARINE DISASTERS.

Events of Interest to Those Who Go Down to Sea In Ships.

JANUARY.

13. The Norwegian bark Havelock, from Pensacola for Calais, France, foundered in a storm in the mid-Atlantic; the crew of 17 rescued by life savers from the steamship France.

FEBRUARY.

2. The famous war corvet Kearsarge wrecked on Roncador reef in the Caribbean sea; the officers and crew were saved.
13. Numerous disasters to shipping on the British coast by a heavy storm.

APRIL.

9. The bark Belmont, from Boston, wrecked on Peak Hill bars, Mass.; 6 sailors drowned.
10. The schooners Albert W. Smith and Kate Markee wrecked on the New Jersey coast; 16 sailors drowned.
The lumber schooner Susan H. Ritchie wrecked at Bay Head, N. J.; the crew taken off by life savers.
21. The coasting steamer Los Angeles wrecked on Little Moro rock, Cal.; 5 sailors drowned, 32 of the crew and 59 passengers saved by boats and a life raft; the vessel a total wreck.

MAY.

18. 20 schooners wrecked in a storm on Lake Michigan; 29 lives lost, including several women. At Port Huron 4 volunteer life savers were drowned in attempting to rescue a crew from the rigging of the waterlogged schooner William Shupe.

JUNE.

4. The Dominion line steamer Texas, from Montreal for Bristol, wrecked off Newfoundland; loss, $400,000.
24. Fishing tug sank off Atlantic Highlands, N. J.; nearly 30 drowned.

NOVEMBER.

13. The schooner Alaska, from Rockport for Boston, wrecked and burned at Portsmouth, N. H.
15. The schooner Antelope capsized in Grand Haven harbor, Mich.; her crew of 3 men drowned.
22. Schooner Gracie Benson cut down in Boston harbor by the steamship Reading; 6 sailors drowned.

DECEMBER.

4. The schooner Clara Simpson run down in Long Island sound by the British steamer Dorian; 3 of the crew drowned.

ANNIVERSARIES AND REUNIONS.

Meetings of Fraternal, Scientific and Religious Societies.

JANUARY.

23. 24th annual convention of the National Board of Trade assembled in Washington.

APRIL.

15. The Missionary society of the Methodist Episcopal church celebrated its 75th anniversary in New York city.
25. Reunion of United Confederate veterans at Birmingham, Ala.

MAY.

1. The 4th annual meeting of the National Association of Military Surgeons opened in Washington.
The 9th annual convention of the National League of American Musicians opened in Baltimore.
17. The 106th general assembly of the Presbyterian church met in Saratoga.
The Southern Presbyterian general assembly met at Nashville.
28. The 80th anniversary of the American Baptist Missionary union held at Saratoga.

JUNE.

5. The 45th annual convention of the American Medical association opened in San Francisco.
6. 50th anniversary of the Y. M. C. A. celebrated by a jubilee in London.
7. The 6th annual congress of the Scotch-Irish society of America began at Des Moines.
The 8th annual convention of the Boot and Shoe Workers' International union met in Boston.
The triennial general council of the Reformed Episcopal church opened at Chicago.
30. The 25th annual convention of civil engineers opened at Niagara Falls.

JULY.

3. The National Music Teachers' association began its annual convention at Saratoga.
12. Christian Endeavor convention opened at Cleveland.

AUGUST.

1. The 24th annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Society of America opened at St. Paul.
7. The National Association of Dentists began its annual session at Fort Monroe.
21. The 9th annual encampment of the Union Veterans' union held at Rochester.
22. The 29th triennial convention of the general grand chapter, Royal Arch Masons, met at Topeka.

SEPTEMBER.

17. The Royal Order of Scotland held its annual meeting at Boston.

OCTOBER.

10. The 20th convention of American bankers met at Baltimore.
The national encampment Union Veteran legion opened at Newark, N. J.

NOVEMBER.

12. Episcopal church congress opened in Boston.
14. Unitarian 10th annual conference began in Baltimore.
The National Grange, Patrons of Husbandry, opened its 28th annual session at Springfield, Ills.
16. The 21st annual convention W. C. T. U. opened at Cleveland.
26. The 7th annual session of the Transmississippi congress opened at St. Louis.

DECEMBER.

4. The American Society of Mechanical Engineers held their annual election in New York.
8. 300th anniversary of the birth of Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden, celebrated in Europe and America.
10. Annual convention of the American Federation of Labor opened at Denver.
12. Annual convention of the American Civil Service Reform league met in Chicago.

POLITICAL AND PERSONAL.

Matters Worthy of Record In an Eventful Year.

MARCH.

3. Lord Rosebery appointed premier of England.
20. Gen. Neal Dow, the prohibition advocate, celebrated his 90th birthday.

APRIL.

2. Patrick Walsh, editor of the Augusta Chronicle, was appointed United States senator from Georgia in place of General Colquitt, deceased.
19. Ex-Gov. Thomas J. Jarvis was appointed United States senator from North Carolina to succeed Senator Vance, deceased.

JUNE.

25. Emma Juch, the prima donna, married in New York city to District Attorney Wellman.

JULY.

4. Lord Randolph Churchill and Lady Churchill arrived at New York from Queenstown.

NOVEMBER.

8. Maj. Gen. O. O. Howard, U. S. A., placed on the retired list.
26. Czar Nicholas II of Russia married at St. Petersburg to Princess Alix of Hesse-Darmstadt.

DECEMBER.

2. John Burns, member of parliament and representative of amalgamated labor in England, arrived in New York city.
7. New emigration convention between United States and China ratified at Washington.

FREAKS OF NATURE.

Work of Cyclones, Earthquakes and Fearful Blizzards.

FEBRUARY.

11. Destructive storm in Mississippi and Louisiana.
13. A blizzard of rain and snow prevailed from New England to Nebraska.
14. Temperature 40 degrees below zero at Fort Fairfield, Me.

MARCH.

18. 16 persons killed and 50 injured in a tornado at Longview and Emory, Tex.

APRIL.

9. Severe gale and snowstorm on the New England coast.
10. Snow fell in central Pennsylvania, the heaviest since 1832.
20. Fatal and destructive earthquake in Greece.
28. An earthquake destroyed 2 towns in Venezuela; heavy loss of life and property.

MAY.

5. A destructive storm of wind, hail and lightning in southern Minnesota.
6. Destructive storm in Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia; also in central New York.
16. Severe storm of wind, hail and lightning in the northwestern states.
17. Storms destroyed property valued at $1,000,000 in Ohio, Michigan and states westward.
18. A fierce storm on Lake Michigan; heavy loss of life among sailors.
20. The middle Atlantic coast swept by a terrible storm; floods in the Schuylkill and Susquehanna rivers.

JUNE.

4. A windstorm wrecked several houses and stores in Tacoma; 6 persons buried under the debris.
24. The city hall and other buildings wrecked by a windstorm at Brazil, Ind.
27. Minnesota and South Dakota swept by a windstorm; 10 deaths; many injured.

JULY.

11. Fatal earthquake shocks at Constantinople.

AUGUST.

9. The heaviest hailstorm in the history of Revere, Mass., prevailed, causing great destruction of garden crops and window glass; stones fell measuring three-fourths of an inch to 1½ inches in diameter.

OCTOBER.

8. Tornado at Little Rock; 4 deaths and $1,000,000 in property destroyed.
10. 2 tenements wrecked by a storm in New York city; 9 deaths.

NOVEMBER.

16. Earthquake shock in Sicily; 100 people killed.

LIST OF FAILURES.

Wrecks Floating Upon the Active Sea of Business.

JANUARY.

2. Theodore Walton, the Plunger, assigned in New York.

MARCH.

10. Morse & Smith, produce commission merchants of Boston and Cedar Rapids, Ia., made an assignment; estimated liabilities, $210,000; assets, $65,000.
18. The Charles L. Webster Publishing company, of which Mark Twain was the principal owner, assigned in New York.

NOVEMBER.

6. The First National bank of San Bernardino, Cal., closed its doors.
9. Schulenberg & Boeckler, St. Louis lumber dealers, assigned; assets, $800,000; liabilities unknown.
23. The Brown National bank of Spokane, Wash., failed.

DECEMBER.

6. The J. W. Fowler Car company of Elizabeth, N. J., went into hands of a receiver.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

Notable Games, Races and Battles In the Prize Ring.

JANUARY.

25. Corbett defeated Mitchell for the world's championship at Jacksonville, Fla.

MARCH.

17. Oxford defeated Cambridge in the annual boat race on the Thames.

MAY.

30. Dr. Rice won the Brooklyn Handicap at Gravesend, N. Y.
30. Lord Rosebery's Ladas won the English Newmarket.

JUNE.

6. Lord Rosebery's colt Ladas won the English Derby.
14. Miss Helen Helwig won the ladies' tennis championship of America at Philadelphia.
27. Cornell crew defeated the University of Pennsylvania on the upper Delaware by 12¾ seconds.
21. Ramapo won the Suburban Handicap, Sheepshead Bay, N. Y.
23. Rey el Santa Anita won the American Derby at Chicago.
28. Yale defeated Harvard in the annual boat race, New London, Conn.

JULY.

4. E. W. Goff won the all round athletic championship of the United States.
16. Oxford defeated Yale in the international athletic games at London.

AUGUST.

25. The Butterflies won the Futurity, Brooklyn.

SEPTEMBER.

14. Robert J broke the world's pacing record in 2:01½ at Terre Haute, Ind.
19. Alix broke the world's record, trotting in 2:03¾ at Galesburg, Ills.

NOVEMBER.

24. Yale defeated Harvard in the annual football game at Springfield, Mass.
29. Pennsylvania defeated Harvard at football in Philadelphia.

DECEMBER.

1. Yale defeated Princeton at football in New York, 24 to 0.
6. Frank C. Ives broke the world's record for balk line billiards at Chicago.

MISCELLANEOUS EVENTS.

All Sorts of Occurrences That Are Well Worth Noting.

JANUARY.

13. British troops defeated 4,000 Sofas in Sierra Leone; 250 Sofas killed.
25. French troops entered Timbuktu.

FEBRUARY.

9. John Y. McKane, the corrupt "boss" of Gravesend, N. Y., sentenced to 6 years in state's prison.

MARCH.

2. Martial law declared in West Virginia on account of a strikers' riot at Eagle.
15. Capt. Frank E. Brownell, the avenger of Col. Ellsworth, died in Washington.
17. Martha J. Fuller, a stenographer and typewriter, mysteriously murdered in the office of her employer in New York city.

APRIL.

1. Major le Caron, the notorious British spy upon Irishmen in America, died in London.
14. The Pollard-Breckinridge suit decided in favor of the plaintiff; damages awarded, $15,000.
17. The famous Brazilian insurgent warship Aquidaban sunk by a government torpedo boat.
18. The dispensary law of South Carolina declared unconstitutional.
20. Landslide at St. Alban, near Quebec, changed the course of the St. Anne river; damage, $500,000.

MAY.

1. Coxey's commonwealers entered Washington, and the leaders were expelled from the capitol grounds.
2. Serious rioting by the unemployed in Cleveland, O.

JUNE.

4. 5 children at a Catholic home near Tarrytown, N. Y., were fatally poisoned by eating a plant mistaken for flagroot.
6. Striking miners at Wesley, Ills., used dynamite in an attack on a mining plant; 3 deaths and many injured.
10. Fatal collision between strikers and deputies at Lamont, Pa.
11. Mrs. Lois Tritton, the last slave sold on New Haven green, died in New Haven; aged 95.
26. The American Railway union declared a boycott of Pullman cars.

JULY.

4. Rioting and incendiarism on the outskirts of Chicago; 225 cars burned.
8. Collision between mob and United States troops at Hammond, Ills.
10. Collision between rioters and regulars at Ladd, Ills.; 2 rioters killed.
15. Strike of the American Railway union practically ended.
28. James Mulligan of Blaine "Mulligan letter" notoriety died in Boston.

AUGUST.

1. Japan declared war upon China.
27. The new tariff bill became a law.

SEPTEMBER.

15. Battle of Ping-Yang, Korea; rout of the Chinese army 20,000 strong.
17. Decisive naval battle won by the Japanese in Yalu river.

OCTOBER.

12. Train held up at Aquia Creek, Va., and express robbed of a large amount.

NOVEMBER.

8. The Texas Cotton Palace fair opened at Waco.
12. The steamship St. Louis, the largest ever built in America, launched at Philadelphia.
Port Arthur taken by the Japanese.

DECEMBER.

4. The state forest commission of New York authorized a state park of 50,000 acres in the Catskills.
5. The magnificent new reichstag building in Berlin opened with ceremonies of elaborate splendor.
6. Train held up near Fort Worth, Tex., and express car robbed of money and bullion estimated at $140,000.

DISASTERS ON LAND.

Record of Deaths Largely Due to Carelessness.

JANUARY.

15. 11 deaths in a telescoping collision on the D., L. and W. at Hackensack Meadows, N. J.; 30 injured.

FEBRUARY.

22. 6 miners killed by an explosion at Blossburg, N. M.

APRIL.

7. 10 killed and many injured by the explosion of a fireworks factory at Petersburg, Va.
8. 7 deaths by the collapse of a tenement at Memphis.

MAY.

30. Several deaths in a wreck on the Wisconsin Central at Manville, Wis.

JUNE.

26. 30 men walled in by flames and smoke in a burning mine near Birmingham, Ala.; 4 deaths.
23. An explosion of fire damp in the Albion colliery, Wales, caused the death of 251 persons.

JULY.

16. 4 United States soldiers killed and 8 wounded by the accidental explosion of ammunition in Chicago.
25. Superintendent Addison G. Mason of the Lehigh Valley collieries and Foreman William Wilson of the Exeter colliery killed in a cage accident at Pittston, Pa.

AUGUST.

2. 3 firemen killed and 9 injured in the burning of a spinning mill in Philadelphia.
9. 12 passengers burned to death and 9 severely injured in a trestle wreck on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific near Lincoln, Neb.
24. Mining disaster at Franklin, Wash.; 37 miners suffocated.

SEPTEMBER.

2. The towns of Hinckley, Pokegama and Mission Creek destroyed by forest fires; over 450 lives lost and many injured.
17. Fatal fire at the Strumph mattress factory, Washington; 7 killed; many injured.

OCTOBER.

11. 27 boilers exploded at the Henry Clay colliery, Shamokin, Pa.; 3 men killed and 6 injured.
30. 7 deaths in a tenement house fire, New York city.

NOVEMBER.

4. Fatal fire in St. Louis; 3 firemen killed at the burning of the Singer Manufacturing company's store.
23. A train struck a coach loaded with football players at Southbridge, Mass.; 7 killed and 9 seriously injured.

DECEMBER.

4. 80 pounds of dynamite exploded at Hull, Que.; 5 men killed and several injured.

In the Methodist Church.

There was a good attendance at the services on Monday evening. Excepting that the exercises closed at 9:45 instead of midnight, they partook of the character of watch-night meeting. The Drew Quartette were present, and greatly aided in the services. Rev. M. L. Anderiese delivered an appropriate address, and the quartette singing amid hushed silence, "Where shall I be", and "Remember me, O Mighty One".

Many took part in prayer and testimony, and several requests were made in behalf of friends. No note was taken of the passing time, and many would have been pleased to remain until the coming of the New Year.

Meetings will be held every evening at 8, at which the quartette will sing and otherwise take part. You are invited.

—Stephen Murphy was held by Justice Nash in $500 bail on the charge of assaulting George Berry.

The young woman with a strange infatuation for the clerk in the gun store, called to see him in a wild mood. He had grown cold, as men are apt to do when there is some one else to keep the fires up, and she had come in to have a talk with him.

"Give me a revolver," she asked after she had not received full satisfaction.

"What do you want with it?" he inquired coyly, for he knew that danger lurked in that sort of a thing, and that it sometimes had a way of coming out of the muzzle of it in a demonstrative and dangerous fashion.

"I'm going to kill myself with it," she sobbed.

"Oh," and he appeared to feel relieved. "What size caliber do you think you will need?"

"A forty-four caliber," she replied as one knowing something about those things, as indeed she did, having heard him talk shop so often.

"My dear young woman," he protested, "don't do that. As sure as you do, some of those heartless reporters, who write up those things, will say you took that size to match your age. Here, here's a twenty-two; try that."

It was a cold-blooded way he had of talking, but he was no fool, and the young woman got so mad that she not only left the place, but shook the young man forever.—Detroit Free Press.

"I OWE MY LIFE TO YOU."

A Wilton, N. J., Girl's Experience With a Noted Massachusetts Woman.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

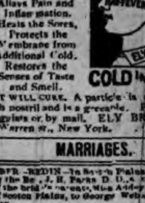
Life is never more precious than in the heyday of youth, when every dream is a promise, and every thought an inspiration.

It is natural that Miss Gertrude Sickler, a young lady who lives at Wilton, N.J., is grateful for the great boon of life.

She suffered terribly with suppressed and painful menstruations. The doctors could only prevent her from having fits each month by dosing her with morphine.

At last, when she was completely prostrated, her father got her a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which at once gave her relief.

That did what the doctors could not do. It cured her. She has no trouble now, and no dread of the coming month. "I owe my life to you," she writes to Mrs. Pinkham. "Oh, if other suffering women could try your valuable medicine they would bless you as I do."



ELY'S Cream Balm CATARRH

Is quickly absorbed. Cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation. Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from Additional Cold. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell.

COLD IN HEAD

IT WILL CURE. A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50c. at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren st., New York.

ELY'S CREAM BALM
CATARRH
CURES
COLD
HEAD
HAYFEVER
ELY BROS

MARRIAGES.

WEBER—REDIN—In Scotch Plains Jan. 1, 1895, by the Rev. J. H. Parks D. D., at the residence of the bride's parents, Miss Addy Anna Redin of Scotch Plains, to George Weber, Jr., of this city.

DEATHS

MILLER—In Scotch Plains, Dec. 28, 1894 Lydia, wife of Cornelius Miller, aged 65 years. Funeral from All Saints Episcopal Church, Scotch Plains Tuesday, Jan 1, at 11 a. m. Interment at Morristown.

Estey Pianos Organs

FULLY WARRANTED.

Moderate Prices.

Cash or Installments.

See Them Before You Buy.

ESTEY & SAXE,

5 East 14th Street, - - New York.

Of people who visit the Invalids' Hotel and Surgical Institute, at Buffalo, N. Y., are many who are sent there, by those who have already, from personal experience, learned of the great Triumph in Conservative Surgery achieved by the Surgeons of that famed institution. Little hurting, or cutting surgery is found necessary. For instance,

TUMORS Ovarian, Fibroid (Uterine) and many others, are removed by Electrolysis and other conservative means and thereby the perils of cutting operations avoided.

PILE TUMORS, however large, Fistula and other diseases of the lower bowel, are permanently cured without pain or resort to the knife.

RUPTURE, or Breach (Hernia) is radically cured without the knife and without pain. Trusses can be thrown away!

STONE in the Bladder, no matter how large, is crushed, pulverized, washed out and safely removed without cutting.

STRICTURES of Urinary Passage are also removed without cutting in hundreds of cases.

For Pamphlet, numerous references and all particulars, send ten cents (in stamps) to World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main Street, Buffalo, N. Y.

LIPPINCOTT'S MAGAZINE, 1895.

The special feature of LIPPINCOTT'S—

A Complete Novel

in each issue, in addition to the usual Short Stories, Novelettes, Essays, Poems, etc.,

All combined make it one of the most desirable magazines now published.

We avoid the objection held by so many readers to a continued story

During the coming year novels may be expected from

Captain King, Amelie Rives, Gertrude Atherton, Mrs. Stickney, Mrs. Alexander, Miss Train, (Author of "The Autobiography of a Professional Beauty") and other well-known writers.

Price $3 per year. Single copy 25c.

Send five 2c stamps for specimen copy.

Lippincott's Magazine, Philadelphia, Pa.

A Wonderfully Liberal Offer!

Five Weeks for 10 cents.

A Trial Subscription for The New York Ledger.

FIVE WEEKS FOR 10 CENTS.

These five numbers will contain the opening chapters of Paul Kemble's powerful and interesting story, "The Ellilule of Ellell," also the opening chapters (with synopsis) of Seward W. Hopkins's story of the great strike in the Pennsylvania coal mines, "On Criminal Charge." The other continued stories in these numbers are by Hall Caine and Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth. In addition to the continued stories, these five numbers of the New York Ledger contain short stories, poems, article on the topics of the day, a brilliant editorial page, a children's column, a correspondence and scientific department, a Woman's World page devoted to everything of interest to women, including a pattern department worth to any woman many, many times the price of the Ledger. The following is a partial list of the authors who contribute to these five numbers:

Hall Caine, Seward W. Hopkins, Paul Kemble, Miss Adelaide Rowlands, Elizabeth Olmis, Mary Lowe Dickinson, Amy Randolph, Hon. Henry L. Dawes, Mary Kyle Dallas, Prof. W. W. Kennedy, William Elliot Griffis, D. D., Lieut. Frederick Schwatka, Oscar Wilde, W. Thompson and others.

This vast quantity of delightful reading matter of interest to all members of the family goes to make the New York Ledger the most perfect National Family Journal ever offered to the American people. Your Postmaster, your Subscription Agent or your Newsdealer will receive your 10 cents for us for your Trial Subscription and send us the money—or you can send the money direct to us. Try it, and judge for yourself what a great paper the New York Ledger is.

ROBERT BONNER'S SONS, Publishers,

NEW YORK LEDGER, William & Spruce Sts., N. Y.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE In 1895

The Simpletons, a new novel by Thomas Hardy will begin in the December number, 1894, and continued to November, 1895. Whoever may be one's favorite among English novelists it will be conceded by all critics that Thomas Hardy's fiction as a master artist in fiction, and The Simpletons may be expected to arouse enthusiasm no inferior in degree to that which has marked Trilby—the most successful story of the year. Another leading feature will be the Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc by the Sieur Louis de Conte, Her Page and Secretary, under which guise the most popular of living American magazine writers will present the story of the Maid of Orleans. In the January number will appear a profusely illustrated paper on Charleston and the Carolinas, the first of a series of Southern papers.

Northern Africa is attracting more attention than at any other time since it was the seat of empire. The next volume of Harper's Magazine will contain four illustrated articles on this region, and three of them will depict the present life there. Julian Ralph will prepare for the Magazine a series of eight stories, depicting typical phases of Chinese Life and Manners. Besides the long stories there will begin in the January number the first chapters of a three-part Novelette by Richard Harding Davis—the longest work yet attempted by this writer. Complete short stories by popular writers will continue to be a feature of the Magazine.

Send for Illustrated Prospectus

The volumes of the Magazine begin with the Numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will be begin with the number current at the time of receipt of order. Cloth cases for binding, 50 cents each—by mail, post paid. Title-page and Index sent on application.

Remittances should be made by post-office money order or draft to avoid chance of loss.

Newspapers are not to copy this advertisement without the express order of Harper & Brothers.

Harper's Periodicals.

Harper's Magazine, one year	$4 00
Harper's Weekly	$4 00
Harper's Bazar	$4 00
Harper's Young People, one year	$2 00

Postage free to all subscribers in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

Address: HARPER & BROS., P. O. Box 959 New York C

Agents $75 a week. Exclusive territory. The Rapid Dish Washer. Washes all the dishes for a family in one minute. Washes, rinses and dries them without wetting the hands. You push the button, the machine does the rest. Bright, polished dishes, and cheerful wives. No scalded fingers, no soiled hands or clothing. No broken dishes, no muss. Cheap, durable, warranted. Circulars free.

W. P. HARRISON & CO., Clerk No. 14, Columbus, O.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JANUARY 10, 1895. No 2

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

A BREEZE AT THE START.

Frazee Furnishes Fun for the New Common Council.

SAUCY TO FELLOW-COMMITTEEMAN

Lively Tilt that Brings President See's Gavel Into Requisition—Westphal Joins the Lonestar Democrat in Resigning from a Committee They Could Not Boss—Saucy to the President—Frazee Finds the Session Without a Quorum, and Brings Back Absentees in Haste—Much Business Done at the Organization Meeting.

The unwonted scene of Plainfield Councilmen talking back to one another enlivened the session of the Common Council of '95, which met for organization Monday night. All was serenity till Mr Frazee got the floor, and after his first taste of blood he was irrepressible. What he did, and what the others did, is chronicled herewith, and will be relished as the account develops.

J. T. MacMurray, Clerk of the preceding Council, called the meeting to order. Those present were Messrs. Erickson, Fisk, Frazee, Frost, Ginna, Moore, See, Stockton and Westphal. The absentees were Messrs. Bird and Dumont.

Mr. Erickson nominated Mr. See for president. Mr. Fisk seconded the nomination. The Clerk was authorized to cast the ballot for Mr. See, which he did. Mr. MacMurray named Messrs. Ginna and Erickson to escort Mr. See to the chair. On assuming his renewed honors, Mr See said:

"I thank you for being chosen to preside over you another year. The Council is practically the same as last year, and gives assurance of friendly relations. Each year as the city grows the work becomes more burdensome. That it will be well taken care of in '95 is apparent from the personnel of the Council. I am satisfied that at the close of the year matters will be found in as good shape as when the Council of '94 transferred the municipal government to you. I again thank you for the honor you have visited upon me."

J. T. MacMurray was nominated for City Clerk. Messrs. Fisk and Frazee served as tellers and gathered an unanimous ballot for Mr. MacMurray's re-election.

Likewise was Wm. V. Mundy re-elected janitor, and came in from an outer room bearing a stepladder as his insignia of office, with which he proceeded to assume an exalted position and restore the illuminating properties of a recalcitrant chandelier. This was rewarded a little later by his appointment as janitor of the city offices downstairs, superseding Henry Frisbee, who had been doing for $6 a month work which Mr. Fisk pronounced unsatisfactory. The wages of Janitor Mundy was put at the total of $200. Last year he drew $111.

The rules of order of the preceding Council were adopted as the rules of the new Council, and Mr. Fisk gave notice that at the next meeting he would introduce them as bylaws.

Mr. See paid a compliment to the committees of last year by reappointing them without change except the substitution of Mr. Moore for Mr. Millington, whom Mr. Moore succeeds. The list:

Alms—Ginna, Dumont, Erickson.

Auditing—Frazee, Westphal, Moore.

Fire and Buildings—Erickson, Bird, Fisk.

Finance—Dumont, Fisk, Stockton.

Laws and Ordinances—Westphal, Frost, Frazee.

License—Moore, Stockton, Westphal.

Police and Public Lights—Stockton, Moore, Dumont.

Printing and Stationery—Bird, Frazee, Frost.

Streets—Fisk, Ginna, Bird.

Water and Sewers—Frost, Erickson, Ginna.

Mr. Ginna was unanimously re-elected to succeed himself on the special sewer committee.

The Plainfield Daily Press and the Plainfield Courier-News were designated in the order named as the official papers of the city for the ensuing year.

Various petitions, legacies from the preceding Council, were presented by the Clerk, and referred to the appropriate committees.

A petition from the Plainfield Water Supply Company for needed lights on North avenue in the Netherwood district was referred to the Committee on Police and Public Lights. To the same committee was referred with power the petition for light on Dunellen avenue between Rock and Jefferson avenues. The Fire and Buildings Committee was given power to grant the application for the removal of the building at 432 West Second street to the rear of 430.

The fifth annual message of Mayor Gilbert was read, as printed in full on this page of The Daily Press, and a copy was ordered given by the Clerk to each Councilman.

A. Vanderbeek, Overseer of the Poor, submitted his annual report, detailing the work of his department in line with the annual financial statement already published in this paper, and pointing out that the present huddling together of the city's dependents was demoralizing. He urged better provision. The report was referred to the Alms Committee.

In response to the request of Chief Grant, the Police Committee was empowered to procure trousers and other supplies for the police.

The corrected bond of Constable Dennis Carney was ordered recorded when it should have been approved in form by the Corporation Counsel.

The Clerk was authorized to procure the usual supply of committee cards and roll calls. Necessary stationery and blank books were ordered through the Printing Committee.

$1,000 was ordered borrowed for use on the streets.

At this point Mr. Frazee took the floor and began a speech.

He said he wanted to protest against the action of a member of the Printing Committee in taking to New York the printing of the report on the water-supply investigation. There were—he said—two reliable printing houses in Plainfield, and he did not consider it right and just to take from them business which would go through them in wages to Plainfield workmen. He wanted it known that he was a member of the Printing Committee but that the action of that committee in this matter was without his advice or consent, and had, he understood, been done at the direction of one member of the committee, with a nod towards Mr. Frost.

In the midst of Mr. Frazee's speech Mr. Erickson suggested that the gentleman was out of order, as there was no motion before the house.

"Better let him go on!"—interposed Mr. Frost,—"But as a fact, two members of the committee settled this matter: what has he to say about it?"

"Perhaps"—was Mr. Frazee's quick retort—"I have as much as you!"

Mr. See pounded vigorously with his gavel, and the disputants took their seats, but as Mr. Frost begged that the gentleman be allowed to proceed, and as Mr. Frazee insisted on his right to be heard in this matter, the president ruled it as a question of privilege and Mr. Frazee went on to say that if the people were to be reached by the report the way to reach them was through the newspapers. He moved that the report be published in the official papers.

Mr. Frost said that the report was to be printed in pamphlet form, and that the papers had absolutely refused to have anything to do with it. They would not give a bid. He called on the editor of The Daily Press to bear him out in that.

Mr. Fisk held that this was all out of order, and moved that the motion of Mr Frazee be tabled. The motion to table was carried with only Mr. Frazee's voice protesting, though Mr. Westphal had been his seconder.

Mr. Westphal raised the next breeze.

"I desire"—said he—"to do now what I perhaps should have done sooner, and that is to resign from the chairmanship of the Laws and Ordinance Committee, a matter I find I have no control over."

"I too positively decline to serve"—said Mr. Frazee.

President See flushed.

"That is an important committee"—he said.—"I trust the gentlemen will on second thought revoke their declinations."

"You served on the committee two years ago: didn't you?"—queried Mr. Frazee.

Mr. See said Yes.

"Two years ago it was an important committee"—continued the Lonestar Democrat.—"But last year not one document was referred to that committee. I don't see the use of continuing it. I move it be abolished".

"You can talk all night and not abolish it"—retorted the President.—"It is in the rules, and they can't be changed without the consent of all the members."

Messrs. Westphal and Frazee said they wouldn't serve. The President said they were appointed under the rules, and they would have to abide thereby. He proceeded to call the committees for reports.

When the Committee on Printing and Stationery was reached, Mr. Frazee said: "Haven't anything to report; perhaps the other member of the committee present has"—with a nod at Mr. Frost. Mr. Frost quietly said No.

A tremendously long ordinance providing for the office of inspector of buildings and for the construction of buildings according to certain requirements, was introduced. It is the development of the ordinance of that title introduced early last year and summarized in The Daily Press exclusively at the time. It was waded through by the Clerk on first reading, and tabled.

While Mr. MacMurray toiled through its forty-odd long sections the President imposed the chair on Mr. Erickson; and most of the Councilmen, who had printed copies of the bill, drifted into the committee room adjoining. Wide-awake Mr. Frazee counted noses, and startled the drowsy atmosphere by exclaiming that there was no quorum. Loud hammering of Mr. Erickson's gavel, and his cry that the members must attend, brought absentees in on a run, and thereafter the quorum was carefully kept full.

On motion of Mr. Fisk, the Finance Committee was instructed to seek additional room for the city offices, either in the Coward Building, or wheresoever available. He stated that the present offices were crowded, and that fireproof protection was wanted for the city's valuable sewer maps and similar documents, and one of the stipulations to the Finance Committee was that the extended quarters must have a fireproof vault.

The final action of the session was the finding of a big job for the rebellious Committee on Laws and Ordinances. On motion of Mr. Fisk, who stated that the ordinances were in a mixed-up condition because they had been so often amended and repealed and yet never compiled in their existing entirety, the committee was instructed to recodify them with a view to having them printed in full and accurate form for distribution among the people.

As the Council adjourned to January 14, Messrs. Frazee and Westphal repeated that the ordinance work mapped out was not for them as they had resigned from the committee.

"Don't you intend to fulfil your oath of office?"—asked Mr. Erickson. They didn't say.

FUNERAL OF LITTLE JOSIE.

Flowers Heaped on the Casket Holding the Mangled Form.

Hope Chapel was a sad place at 1:30 Sunday afternoon, when the funeral of little Josie Cook, who was killed by the Royal Blue train, took place. There was a large gathering of mourners, despite the bad weather, and the little casket was heaped with roses and lilies and other floral bloom, by the many who had held dear the friendship of the life so cruelly crushed out. Rev. G. Kennedy Newell conducted the impressive ceremony, and spoke with rare tenderness of the dear Sunday-school child who had been called to the Jesus whom she loved. He referred to the happiness of the week before, when Josie had spoken a Christmas piece from the platform, and he held out comfort and consolation for the mother and grandmother, who wept through the sad scene. The eyes of most the assembly shed their tribute to the little one gone from the school, and at the grave in Hillside Cemetery tears mingled freely with the rain. The mournful duty of carrying the casket was filled by Messrs Thomas Reed, Walter Mague, Alexander Muir and John Cose.

DEATH FO DANIEL CORY.

Plainfield's Landmark Passes Away at the Ripe Age of 87.

Daniel Cory, a landmark of this section, died at 7:30 Sunday, of his apopletic stroke. He would have completed his 87th year in June, and all of his life was spent at his birthplace, the old homestead at Warrenville. Mr. Cory was a man of great industry, and by his push and thrift amassed a fortune. He studied for the law, and was graduated, but never practiced. He leaves a son, John Cory of Front street, and a widow, his second wife. The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon at 1, at the late home of the decedent.

Illness of R. W. Rice.

A despatch from Wilkes Barre, Pa., says: "A man named Rice, of Plainfield, N. J., who owns a cottage at Harvey's Lake, twelve miles from here, became suddenly insane at the latter place on Saturday last. He was in a violent state of insanity on Sunday, and it was necessary to strap him to a stout board. He was sent to Philadelphia at 2 o'clock this morning. Dr. Long of Harvey's Lake, accompanied him."

The Rice referred to is R. W. Rice of North Plainfield, whose illness has for some time been a matter of great concern to his friends. His family have the sympathy of all in the distressing affliction, and it is hoped he may be fully restored.

To Cure

weak stomach, loss of appetite, flatulence, waterbrash, rising of food, heartburn, nightmare, coated tongue, offensive breath, jaundice, bad complexion, liver-spots, yellow eyes, constipation, palpitation of the heart, and short breath after meals, dyspepsia, and all its symptoms, take

Dr. Deane's

Dyspepsia Pills.

Eat plenty of good nourishing food. A pill after each meal. 25 cents at druggists'.

Send to us for free sample.

DR. J. A. DEANE CO., Kingston, New York.

A BUD AMID ROSES.

Delightful Coming-Out Party of Miss Mabel F. Wilder.

An "at home" was given by Mrs. Edward Payson Wilder at her pretty residence, 922 Central avenue, Saturday afternoon, to introduce the beautiful Miss Mabel F. Wilder, who, artistically gowned in white, and bearing a magnificent bouquet of roses, stood with her mother and the fair Miss Lucy Morris of New York, in the reception room to greet the coming guests. The drawing room, parlors and music room were profusely decorated with LaFrance, American Beauties, and Jacqueminot roses, and the banquet room was a perfect vision of pink. The massive mantelpiece in the reception room was banked in LaFrance, intermingled with English violets and beautiful filmy green. Assisting the fair ones who received were the Misses Howard and Miss Mattie Baxter of New York, Miss Edith Gilbert, Miss Lilly Moore, Miss Phœbe Lovell, and Miss Florence Wilder of Plainfield. At either end of the banquet board, made beautiful by dainty candelabra and artistic clusters of lovely roses, the whole enhanced by banks of ferns and potted plants which filled the alcoves and graced the sideboard, stood Mrs. William A. Cummings of New York, and Mrs. Leander N. Lovell, presiding over the feast of delicacies served by Max Wiertz.

Among the guests assembled to honor the fair hostess and the lovely debutante were many from New York, Brooklyn and Jersey City, who, together with the many Plainfield society people, numbered fully three hundred and fifty.

One of the features which aided much to the enjoyment of the affair was the excellent music provided by Argenzia's Orchestra of Brooklyn.

There was an entire absence of that formality which ofttimes mars similar occasions, the gathering resembling rather a happy house party than a formal reception, and silently bearing evidence of the tact of the genial hostess.

As 7 drew near, the guests began to depart, not neglecting to shower congratulations for the great pleasure afforded them.

After the guests departed the happy house party to the number of twenty-five reassembled in the dining room to partake of an excellent banquet, gay mirth and pealing laughter seasoning the repast.

Dancing was next in order, and the fair women with their gay gallants floated through the beautiful rooms in time with the witching music or sought cozy nooks for rest and quiet chat until near the midnight stroke.

Personally-Conducted Tours to Washington, D. C., via Pennsylvania Railroad.

There is probably no place that offers so much in the way of sightseeing and other things of general interest as Washington, D. C. Apart from being the Nation's Capital, the magnificent Government Buildings and beautifully planned streets and public parks make it well worth a visit.

The series of three-day tours arranged by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, under its perfect personally-conducted tourist system, gives every one an opportunity to visit Washington under most favorable circumstances and at a very reasonable cost.

The tours leave New York on January 17, and at intervals of three week until May 23, 1895, inclusive. The rates, including accommodations at Washington's best hotels, are $13.50 from New York and $11.50 from Philadelphia; proportionate rates from other points.

Detailed itinerary will be sent on application to Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

Exciting Hurdle Riding.

Interest and novel exhibitions of high hurdling were given, both in saddle and bareback, in the Riding Academy Monday. Messrs. A. C. Vail, J. W. Johnson, William J. Roome, and J. J. Coard were in saddle, and cleared the hurdles at 4 feet 3 inches. The most exciting feature of the evening was the wonderful performance of Stephenson's famous hunters, Nimrod, Viewhallca, Glendale and Lyndhurst, which were ridden by Messrs. D. Witherspoon, Branbarul, Fitch and Stephenson, who, mounted bare bareback on the noble animals, cleared the five-foot hurdles amid rounds of applause. The laughter was uproarious when Proprietor Stephenson in executing some especially difficult movements measured his length in the tanbark.

"Nothing Venture, Nothing Have."

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mon., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement. "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, pastor Central Presbyterian Church, Helena, Mon.

It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and is worth its weight in gold. I can use Ely's Cream Balm with safety and it does all that is claimed for it—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

RECEPTION AND DANCE.

Long List of Patronesses to Honor the Columbia College Boys.

A reception and dance to the Glee Banjo and Mandolin Clubs of Columbia College will be given Monday evening, January 14, in the Casino of the Union County Country Club, and promises to be a leading social event. The following is a list of the patronesses: Mrs Marion Ackerman, Mrs Robert L Burnett, Mrs Augustus C Baldwin, Mrs Charles C Cokefair, Mrs Edgar Corliss, Mrs Rowland Cox, Mrs Martin I Cooley, Mrs John B Dumont, Mrs James DeGraff, Mrs George W Endicott, Mrs George Evans, Mrs M E Edgerton, Mrs Henry A McGee, Mrs Alexander Gilbert, Mrs Stephen A Ginna, Mrs Daniel F Ginna, Mrs Ellis W Hedges, Mrs Samuel Huntington, Mrs Benjamin Hegeman, Mrs Frank O Herring, Mrs Walter Haviland, Mrs L N Lovell, Mrs A A Low, Mrs Craig A Marsh, Mrs J P Mason, Mrs J W Reinhart, Mrs Walter A Stewart, Miss Emilie Schipper, Mrs L G Timpson, Mrs Mason W Tyler, Mrs J Evarts Tracy, Mrs Evarts Tracy, Mrs George W VanBoskerck, Mrs Edward VanBuren, Mrs E L Walz, Mrs C G Waring, Mrs Joseph W Yates, Mrs Frederick W Yates.

There will be informal playing and glees by the college clubs at intervals during the evening, and the Casino will be decorated with the college colors.

Over two hundred invitations have been sent, and the college boys are promised an enthusiastic reception.

New Departure at Edsall's.

The phenomenal success of Edsall's Commercial Palace has induced Mr. Edsall to extend even further his department specialties. He will remove his carpet department to the skylighted apartment under the sidewalk, and will replace it upstairs with a department of women's and children's made-up clothing.

In the front of the main store he will exhibit a full line of toilet articles, perfumes, etc.

In the basement he will establish a department of dry and fancy groceries, and will then have as complete a department store as the metropolis.

The reason Mr. Edsall puts in the grocery department is because of the demand of his patrons for these goods, many having been in the habit of buying them at the dry goods stores in New York.

Mr. Edsall says he is doing all in his power to keep the people of Plainfield from going to New York to do their trading.

The Governor's Message.

Governor Werts's second annual message is a plain presentation of such matters in the State government as he considers worthy of legislative attention.

The financial statement may be briefly stated thus: The State has $891,000 of assets in its sinking fund wherewith to pay the remaining war debt of $735,400, when that debt shall become due. There is no other bonded and floating indebtedness. There is a balance in bank of $486,855.91, and the receipts of the present fiscal year are estimated at $2,042 870, while the disbursements for the same period are figured at $2 017,605 86.

The recommendation for the erection of an intermediary prison is made with great force and directness.

The great question of the public water supply is treated with vigor and candor, and the recommendations should be well considered by the Legislature.

All of the points of the message discover the fact that Gov. Werts has given to the subjects presented careful consideration and inquiry, and that each of his suggestions is for the betterment of some element of the State's institutions and elements. He disapproves the proposed initiative or referendum legislation, saying it is no argument that while it may work in Switzerland it would be advantageous in New Jersey.

Plainfielders Their Leaders.

At the annual meeting of the Union County Branch of the State Charities Aid Association held in Trinity Church, Elizabeth, Monday evening, January 7. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Henry B. Newhall, Plainfield.

Vice-President—Rev. F. M. McAllister, D. D., Elizabeth.

Secretary—Rev. Hobart Clark, Plainfield.

Treasurer—Mrs. J. K. Myers, Plainfield.

Executive Committee—Mrs Dexter Tiffany, David P Hall, Plainfield, S C Blackwell, Mrs J M Watson, Mrs A U Trimble, Elizabeth, Anthony Comstock, Summit, E B Clark, Plainfield, William Patterson, Elizabeth, H M Maxson, Plainfield.

All of these officers served last year, and were re-elected with the exception of Mr. Maxson, who was elected to fill a vacancy caused by the death of the late J. Augustus Dix of Elizabeth.

NEW JERSEY LEGISLATURE.

Its Organization Effected, and a Week's Adjournment Taken.

The organization of the Legislature was quietly affected amid a floral display in both Houses that exceeded anything of the kind seen in Trenton before. In the Senate the Senators elect took part in the temporary organization, thus conforming to the Supreme Court's decision and the contention made by the Republicans in the fight for control last year. For years it has been the practice of the old Secretary to call the Senate to order and put the preliminary motions. Senator Voorhees, a hold-over Senator, performed that function, and called the roll of Senators and Senators-elect from a certified list he had procured from the Secretary of State.

Senator Stokes was made President, and Henry B. Rollison Secretary. In his speech in assuming the chair, Senator Stokes intimated that the charges of malfeasance in furnishing supplies and work to the State would be investigated. Senator Ketcham of Essex has a resolution ordering such an investigation, but will not offer it until an understanding is reached as to the methods to be pursued in conducting the inquiry. Senator Daly of Hudson offered a new rule, intended to prevent committees from smothering bills and requiring reports to be made within a week after the bill reaches the committee. It goes over for a week.

Senator Voorhees introduced the first bill. It provides for the abolition of the present county courts and of lay judges and the creation of new courts to be presided over by a single law judge elected by the people. The present judges continue in office till next December.

Senator Winton introduced two bills that carry out the Governor's recommendations for the preservation of the Palisades. Senator Daly presented the Jersey City water bill.

In the house Joseph Cross of Union County was elected Speaker and James Parker of Passaic Clerk. Mr. Codding of Union County presented a proposed amendment to the Constitution prohibiting bookmaking, betting, and all kinds of gambling on race tracks. The law already prohibits it. A resolution was adopted fixing Tuesday next at 4 as the time for receiving from Rev. Dr. Everard Kempshall of Elizabeth and William M. Lanning the petition from the New Jersey Presbyterian Synod asking for the amendment.

Bills were introduced as follows: By Graber, providing for dollar gas in first-class cities; by Schober, providing that last year's Atlantic City charter law shall not apply to Newark and Jersey City; by Drake, giving Governing Boards of first-class cities power to abolish grade crossings of railroads; by Nutzhorn, providing for two-cent ferriage between New Jersey and other States; by Schober, taxing railroads and canals at local rates; by Drake, abolishing days of grace; by Ginder, providing that only native or naturalized citizens shall be employed on public works; by Graber, providing dollar gas in second-class cities, and also one making ten consecutive hours a day's work on electric and street railways; by Eisel, to prevent usury by persons lending money on chattel mortgages, and making the penalty $1,000 fine or two years imprisonment; by Olcutt, [illegible] the Democratic Freeholders's laws of 1889 and 1892, which relate to Hudson and Essex counties; by Bates, requiring the death penalty to be inflicted in the State prison under direction of the prison keeper.

Both Houses adjourned for the week.

Public-Spirited Jersey Central.

In his message to the Legislature yesterday Governor Werts says the Central Railroad of New Jersey has expressed its willingness to execute and file the necessary instrument under the law of 1890, surrendering its claim to a irrepealable contract and submit itself to the general tax laws, and he asks for legislative advice. If none is given he will exercise his prerogative and accept the agreement and surrender the right of the State to take the company's railroad at an appraised valuation.

AN INTERESTING LETTER.

DR. DAVID KENNEDY—Dear Sir—I am 60 years old and generally played out, or so I thought up to two weeks ago, when I commenced to use Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

For years I have suffered with inflammation of the bladder and kidneys, and have gradually grown worse. Besides constant pain in the kidneys and bladder, I have had rheumatic in every muscle and joint, and have often remarked that there was not a man living that had suffered as much as I had, but I must say that I had not for a single day in five years felt as well in every way as I do now. Have improved daily since I began the use of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. About a week ago I gave a man afflicted with bladder trouble part of a bottle of Favorite Remedy, and he said to me today—"That is a great medicine; I am better already," and he drove eight miles to a druggist to get a bottle. Respectfully yours,

S. I. YOUNG, Hiram, Ohio.

COTTON IS KING.

NEW ENGLAND MANUFACTURERS MIGRATE SOUTH.

Better Able to Compete in the Markets With British Spindles by Getting Near the Source of the Raw Material. A New Era Dawning.

The recent decision of two of the strongest cotton mill companies of Massachusetts to build large mills in the South to cost $500,000 and $600,000 is destined to have a far reaching effect upon the business interests of that section. It will also arouse New England people to a realization of the fact that their cotton manufacturing interests, which have been so largely instrumental in developing the wealth of their section, have probably nearly reached the limit of growth.

Of course mills now in existence will be enlarged from time to time, and some few mills will be built for the production of the finest grade of goods. The real growth of this industry in this country will, however, be in the South. The success of the mills in that section has fully demonstrated that no other section can compete with the South in cotton manufacturing. Up to the present time most of the mills in the South have been established by local men with local money.

Southern men have displayed a peculiar aptitude for this industry. Southern capital has sought it as one of the safest and most profitable investments, and Southern working people have proved to be probably the best cotton mill hands, and all things considered, to be found in the country. For years a good many Southern people were sceptical about the ability of their section to become a great iron producing region, but none of them ever questioned the South's ability to make cotton goods at a profit.

Cotton has been the South's idol. Its worship in times past found expression in the production of the staple, but now it is turning to cotton manufacturing. In a large part of the South a cotton mill is now regarded as a necessary sign of progress in every enterprising community. Under many disadvantages the South has labored to build up its milling business. Limited capital and lack of experience, but especially the former, have kept the business from being overdone.

There has been no rush, no hurrah, no boom in this industry. Steadily and solidly it has been developed. Many companies that started in a small way have from time to time enlarged their plant or built new mills out of surplus earnings, accumulated after paying good dividends. Successful mill companies in Georgia and the Carolinas are now spending $2,000,000 in increasing their equipment and building new mills.

The New England people did not, until a year or so, have much faith in the future of this industry in the South. They would not investigate it carefully. Hence they did not understand the South's advantages. They believed that their cheap and abundant capital, their long experience and their intrenched position in the trade would enable them to hold their own forever. But the South went on building cotton mills, and these mills, much to the disappointment of the New England people, kept on paying dividends.

Even during the great depression of a year ago, while many Northern mills were closed Southern mills with rare exceptions, were run on full time. New England cotton manufacturers at last woke up. They commenced to investigate, and during the last twelve months there has been a revolution in sentiment as to cotton manufacturing in the South.

The statements regarding the advantages of the South for cotton manufacturing and the predictions in regard to the future of this industry for a long time met only with ridicule on the part of our New England friends. Neither the press nor the people of that section were willing to admit that the South would be able to compete with the New England goods, even in the production of coarse goods. They claimed that it would be impossible for the South to build up its textile interest to the extent of proving a serious competitor with New England.

This position, however, has been gradually abandoned as far as coarse goods is concerned. It will not be very long before New England will have to admit that the South has just as many advantages for manufacturing the finer grade of goods as it had a few years ago for making the coarser grades. This position is now being emphasized by the course of events, and some of the New England papers are freely admitting all that has ever been claimed, so far as coarse goods is concerned.

Furnishing the raw material for more than one-half of the cotton spindles of the world, the South is no longer content to ship its cotton in its unmanufactured form. Manufactured at home it would be worth annually more than $1,000,000,000 instead of $300,000,000 as now. Such an industry as this alone would revolutionize the South. It would furnish employment for hundreds of thousands of hands, and create wealth on a greater scale than any other manufacturing interest has ever done.

Because of these facts, the realization by New England of the South's destiny as the coming cotton manufacturing centre, bringing about a co-operation of local and outside men and money in the great development of this industry, becomes a matter of more than national concern. Even Great Britain, now having one half of the cotton spindles in the world, must soon see that it has reached the limit of growth in this industry, and that henceforth progress in this line will be in the South.

Madam and Mrs.

Sir Charles Lyell says: "The title of 'madam' is given in Charleston and the south of the United States generally to a mother whose son has married. The daughter-in-law then becomes 'Mrs.' By this means they avoid the inelegant phraseology of 'old Mrs. A.'"

This is also to some extent the custom in some parts of the Pacific Slope. It should be more generally adopted, for no mother-in-law wishes to be known as "old Mrs." Woman's sensitiveness as to age is apparently as old as humanity, for Sarah is the only woman whose age is mentioned in the Bible.

Method in His Madness.

"What are you learning to sing?"

Willie—"Sweet Marie."

"Goodness! that's been sung to death long ago."

Willie—I know; an' the folks will pay me to stop singin'.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

INDIANS.

Chiefs of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Raised to Their Stumps.

A large and enthusiastic party of Indians assembled in the Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque wigwam January 3 to witness the ceremonies attending the raising up of the chiefs to their respective stumps for the current term of office.

District Deputy Westlake of Elizabeth and his staff performed the work in a most satisfactory manner. Following the exercises an hour was pleasantly spent in listening to several very interesting "talks" from the visiting deputation and the newly raised chieftains. After the council fire was quenched Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Council, No. 193½, of Haymakers, went into session.

A commission, accompanied by a cordial letter to the new companions, was submitted from E. J. Lake, President of the State Haymakers Association. President Lake conferred great honor on the new loft by appointing P. C. H. John H. Carney the deputy-president of this district, and when his commission was read Plainfield's popular little Dutchman received an invitation in true Haymakers style. This evening in Sangerbund Hall an invitation entertainment, reception and dance will be given by that growing young tribe No. 193, which, though not yet a year old, is among the largest, most popular, and most influential in the State of New Jersey, embracing, as is well-known, many of Plainfield's leading citizens.

Muhlenberg Hospital.

At the last meeting of the Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital, held Dec. 28, the following resolutions were passed:

Resolved, To extend a vote of thanks to all who participated in the Christmas festivities at the Hospital and by their kind and valuable assistance contributed to make the entertainment for the enjoyment of our patients a marked success.

Resolved, To express special gratitude to the following friends of the institution:

To Mrs. Freeman and her choir of young ladies who in their usual highly satisfactory manner provided the musical part of the programme; also to Miss Nellie Whiton, who rendered a variety of beautiful violin solos, and to Elmer Runyon, who with his ever pleasing tenor voice delighted the audience with a number of choice songs. To William Madden for his untiring and faithful services, having again as in many previous years proved such a valuable help to the ladies committee in dressing the Christmas tree. To our storekeepers and other benevolent friends who so liberally sent in contributions, especially the kind donors of a barrel of flour, boxes of oranges, turkeys, and other provisions.

And last but not least to the editors of our daily papers for their encouraging words and accurate accounts of the entertainment. To all, once more, sincere and grateful thanks.

EMILIE SCHIPPER,
Corresponding Secretary.

Serious Driving Accident.

George Harrison, a helper employed by Carl Kaerth, narrowly escaped serious injuries on being thrown from a heavily loaded sled at the corner of Watchung avenue and Second street. The sled, with Kaerth and young Harrison on the seat, was overturned by the runner being caught in the gutter and the boy was thrown with great force to the ground, striking his head and badly bruising his hand.

Mr. Kaerth had all he could do to gain control of the team, and Messrs. VanEmburgh and Harper, who were passing at the time, kindly picked up the unconscious young man and carried him to Kaerth's house, where he was found to be suffering from bruises about the head and shoulders as well as the lacerated hand already mentioned.

At the time of going to press he was resting quietly and it is hoped will soon recover. About fifteen dozen bottles of "soft stuff" was spilled in the gutters.

A Japanese in Plainfield Tonight.

The war between China and Japan, the contest between belated barbarism and modern civilization, is a subject which is full of interest to everyone—from the school boy, who gazes with amazement at the curious colored cartoons representing the Oriental conflict, to the philosopher, who seeks to know the causes of all events.

A rare opportunity to learn about this singular war, from an inside point of view, will be afforded this evening, when a native of Japan, now living in America, Rev. Watari Kitashima, Ph.D., will speak upon this subject in All Souls Church, Park avenue near Seventh street, at 8. Admission is 25 cents.

Types of American Life.

In the issue of Town Topics for Jan. 3 is begun the publication of an exceptionally interesting series of portraits, in colors, exact reproductions of handsome water-color sketches made from life. The portraits will be representative of the most distinguished "types" of American citizens, and will form a collection worthy of preservation. The originality of the artist's work and the unusual fidelity of the reproduction can hardly fail to surprise and delight people that have become wearied of finding conventional "pictures" in the periodicals of the day. The new portraits in Town Topics will be striking, unique and beautiful.

—The infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Keeding was found dead in bed between them when they woke up in the morning. It had died of sprow.

—The Park Club Whist Committee makes the following announcement of ladies nights: January 15 and 29, February 12 and 26, March 12 and 26, and April 9 and 23.

BRIAR PIPE GIVEN AWAY WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF DUKES MIXTURE for 35 cents
Every pipe stamped DUKES MIXTURE or ATC
2 OZ. PACKAGES 5¢

TRADESMEN MEET.

They Seek to Establish a Uniform Scale for Retailing Flour.

A largely attended meeting of the leading tradesmen handling the Pillsbury flour in Plainfield, Westfield, Fanwood, Dunellen and other nearby towns was held in Trade Temple last Wednesday.

The meeting convened for the purpose of discussing a uniform price for the Pillsbury products, which at present are sold in many instances below cost.

The New York representatives of the Pillsbury interests addressed the gathering, and urged the advisability of a uniform price which would secure a reasonable margin to the dealers and stated that by the middle of the present month a universal schedule would be adopted by all dealers or agents who handle the flour throughout the United States and Europe. No demands have been made by the Pillsbury Company, but it is understood that dealers who refuse to accept the schedule will be unable to obtain the product. The local handlers will doubtless fall into line at once.

A Copper and Lead Party.

Among the novel entertainments put forth by the versatile borough folks New Year's Eve to celebrate the old year out and the new year in, was one provided at the residence of Joseph B. Hall on Washington avenue by his son-in-law Henry M. Western. Each guest on entering the room was furnished with a neatly prepared oblong card, at the top of which was a copper cent, snugly concealed in a small envelope. Under this followed a series of questions, numbered up to twenty-six, which were to be answered on the reverse side of the card with a lead pencil.

The answers were to be suggested by the features and letters on both sides of the penny. For instance, What did our forefathers strive for? Liberty, etc. Prizes were offered to both ladies and gentlemen to those guessing the highest number correctly also a progressive prize to those who came next highest. Each party of the company was supposed to act independently of the others and no conferring or exchanging of answers was permitted, but this rule, however, did not appear to work well as far as two betrothed couple were concerned. The contest created a good deal of merriment, and the representative of The Press came in second best, much to the delight of the company, which inferred that The Press ought to be first in everything. About fourteen couple were present and all joined in singing Auld Lang Syne when the new year was announced.

Barely Won.

The Plainfield Bowling Club went to Cranford last evening and surprised themselves by bad bowling. Several times through the game defeat threatened them. The score by frames shows how closely they were followed, and then just escaped by eight pins.

The score:

P. B. C.		CRANFORD.
VanEmburgh	170	Cox	147
Stephenson	139	Dohrman	142
Bamberger	147	Daymon	157
Maltby	139	Wilber	143
Petrie	180	Heilker	143
Wilbur	125	Voorhis	120
Doane	142	Sharp	138
Van Alstyne	138	Rogers	185
Waters	154	McConnell	127
Vail	125	Page	137
	1459		1451

BY FRAMES.

P. B. C.	167	308	439	561	740	900	1063	1198	1314	1459
Cranford	139	280	444	577	725	860	1002	1175	1321	1451

Borough Property Changes.

Following are North Plainfield real-estate transfers recently recorded in Somerville:

John C. Zimmerman and wife to Gertrude Vandenburgh, $2,200.

William R. Codington and wife to John B. Mills, $1,000.

Mary R. Woolston and husband to Frank E. Woodruff, $3,100.

William G. Morse to Tillie R. Schenck, $900.

Henry H. Brokaw and wife to Newton B. Smalley, $600.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Rates of Advertising

Space	WEEKS 1	2	3	MONTHS 1	2	3	6	12
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50	$15.00
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00	20.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	25.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	32.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	37.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	45.00
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	38.00	54.00	80.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	52.00	85.00	140.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything.

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.
I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.
I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.
I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.
Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
H EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR,
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos, always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.
7aply

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.
Having associated myself with the Master members Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business tail times and in all cases
D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave. Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

L. B. WOOLSTON, J. F. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTER'S SUPPLIES, 141-143 NORTH AV
eodtf

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTION WITH OVER 12,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J H Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depot
Howley Barker Grove and Front sts
G W V M'y 4th and Park avenue
Frank Rowley Somerset and Craig place

Subscriber's Name	Address.
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 7th
Ames, C. J.	15 Crescent ave
Alert Hose Co., No 1	Madison ave
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H.	32 West 7th stree
Adams, Dr D C	46 Grove
Brakeley, F W	Dunellen
Brokaw, Isaac N	Bound Brook
Babcock, Geo H	8th and Union sts
Barkalew & Dunn	16 North ave
Boone, W. C., M. D.	Cor. Front & Central Av
Bushnell, John	Central ave. and 9th st
Beerbower, J E	Park av and 2d s
Berg, Jos F, M D	10 E 6th s
Board of Education—6th st, 8th and	Union st
Booth, E H	66 Madison av
	6th & Liberty, 6th & Monroe
Clark, E D	2 Waynwood place
Children's Home	Jackson ave.
Closson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
CONSTITUTIONALIST Office	3 North ave.
Cook, A D & Bro	Park ave and RR.
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs. F. A.	9 Third Place
Cruikshank, S. A.	128 Carlton avenue
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, B F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy, (J H Leggett, Mgr)	Park ave and Front st
DAILY PRESS	3 North ave.
Depew, Mrs. E. H.	18 Crescent ave.
Day, Frank	63 W. Fourth st.
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Demarest, F M	27 Park av
Dumont, John B.	29 E 7th st
Decker, T—pay station	Westfield, N J
DeGraff, James	22 E 9th st
Doane, T O—Chief P F D	40 W 6th st
Dollner, S L	121 Madison av
Davis & Stevens, coal and wood	Office W Front
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Pa[illegible]ve and 4th st.
Evening News, T.W. Morrison, Editor	7 Som't st.
Engine No 1	West 2d st.
Engine No 2	Front st.
Engine No 3	Somerset st.
Evans, Geo C	37 Washington ave
Fisk, Chas. J	23 West Seventh St
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French, P M & Sons	Somerset st.
Fritts, Dr J T	73 Park ave
Fleming, Howard	38 Park avenue
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
French, C Frank	69 Somerset st
Grant, Geo W, Chief of Police	28 W 6th st
Goddard, C M	17 Third Place.
Griffen, A M	19 E Front st.
Gaston, M. D., W F	5th and New sts
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 8th st
Howell & Hardy	North Avenue
Heyniger, L	81 & 83 Somerset street.
Hegeman, B. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	42 East Front st
Hyde, Chas	141 Front street.
Hedden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Higgins, M. A.	76 East 4th st—26 North ave
Hetfield, John N	204 South 2d st—21 Park av
Harder, Francis C	122 Madison av
Hermance, O	Netherwood
Hoagland's City Express	29 North av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	58 W. Front st.
Jones, Evan	13 Kensington st
Kirkner, J	8th and Division sts.
Kaufman, W T	65 W 7th st
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L N	Crescent ave
Lord, Wm A	Belvidere av
Loomis & Rice	75a 49 Broadway
Laire, J P & Co	8 W Front st
Linke, Frank	3 W Front st
Lounsberry, F C	13 Plainfield ave
Myers, J K	17 East 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave.
Miller, J G	10 E. Front st.
Moore, Geo. A	20 North ave
Muhlenberg Hospital	South ave.
Murray, Dr. Wm. H	167 Broadway
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
Pond Mach Tool Co	Boulevard below Grant av
Pierce Hardware Co	42 W Front st
Reed, Chas A	27 Myrtle ave
Milliken, E F	120 Central
Morrison, T W	11 Somerset st
MacDonald, J F	46 E Front st
yers, Lawrence	E Front st
Netherwood Hotel	Netherwood.
Newhall, Henry B	16 E 7th st
N J Postal Tel Co	4 Park ave
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave.
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Roberts, D S	17 North avenue.
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and North ave.
Runyon, A M & Son	Park ave
Runyon, A M & Son	48 Madison ave
Rushmore, Dr Edward	Park ave. near Fifth st
Roome, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves.
Runkle, H. G	8th s
Runyon, Chas W	Park ave
Rice, R. W. & Co	75b cor. Emily and Duer sts
Randolph, L W	Front st
Rogers, D W	W d st
Rogers, N P jr	26 Westervelt ave
Stover, H W	20 east 9th st
Serrell, Lemuel W	Front st. and Plainfield ave
Seguine, C. J	60 Front street.
Shaw, R J	Front st. opp. Park ave.
Streall, A S	Prospect ave.
Smith, W P	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Shephard A D	Fanwood
Smith, Jas A	13 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Smith, Chas A	Spring st, Westfield, N J
Stelle, Irving G	Sixth st
Terrill & Cole	16 E Front st
Thompson, A. D	29-31 North av
Talmadge, Henry P (Res)	Netherwood
Thickstun, Jno A	Madison av
Titsworth, Jos M	33 W. 7th st.
Tomlinson, Dr T H	La Grande and N B'dwy
Tobin & Enander	51 North av
Tracy, J Evarts	8th and Division st
Thorn, Alex	27 Somerset st
Tweedy, O. B.	11 Crescent avenue
Townsend, Samuel	98 Rockview av
Thompson, A D	Prospect ave
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Thorn, R	76 W Front st
United States Express Co	6 North ave
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle W. J	10 North ave
Wharton, Clifton	17 Central av
Wolfman, C	West Seventh street
Wadsworth, W B	8th and Liberty sts
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Weichers, J F	W 8th st. near Grand ave
Waters, E, Ass't Chief	3d st near Washington
Westfield, pay station	Westfield, N J
Wotherspoon O G	148 E Front s

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION

PLANFIEILD. NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	60c	Hempstead N Y	45c
Astoria, N Y	35c	Hoboken N J	35c
Babylon, N Y	60c	Hunter's Point N Y	45c
Bath, N Y	45c	Irvington N J	40c
Bayonne N J	45c	Islip N Y	60c
Bergen Point N J	35c	Jamaica N Y	45c
Bayside N Y	[illegible]	Jersey City N J	[illegible]
Bay Shore N Y	75c	Keyport N J	[illegible]
Bayville N Y	60c	Kingston N J	[illegible]
Belleville N J	40c	Laurel Hill N Y	[illegible]
Blissville N Y	45c	Leonia N J	[illegible]
Bloomfield N J	35c	Little Neck N Y	[illegible]
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	[illegible]
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	[illegible]
Brooklyn N Y	35c	Madison N J	[illegible]
Caldwell N J	45c	Matawan N J	[illegible]
Carlstadt N J	45c	Millburn N J	[illegible]
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	[illegible]
Chatham N J	30c	Morristown N J	[illegible]
Closter N J	45c	Newark N J	[illegible]
Colt's Neck N J	75c	New Brunswick N J	[illegible]
Coney Island N Y	45c	Newton N Y	[illegible]
Cresskill N J	45c	New York N Y	[illegible]
Dover N J	40c	Orange N J	[illegible]
East Norwich N Y	65c	Pamrapo N J	[illegible]
Eatontown N J	60c	Passaic N J	[illegible]
Elizabeth N J	25c	Paterson N J	[illegible]
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	[illegible]
Fairview N J	45c	Rahway N J	[illegible]
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	[illegible]
Far Rockaway N Y	45c	Seabright N J	[illegible]
Flatbush N Y	35c	Short Hills N J	[illegible]
Flushing N Y	40c	South Amboy N J	[illegible]
Fort Lee N J	45c	South River N J	[illegible]
Franklin Park N J	35c	Staten Island N Y	[illegible]
Freehold N J	50c	Westfield N J	[illegible]
German Settlem't N Y	60c	Woodbridge N J	[illegible]
Glen Cove N Y	50c	Yonkers N Y	[illegible]
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton N J	[illegible]
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	[illegible]

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1894, will draw interest from that date.
JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer

FOR MALARIA
GENERAL DEBILITY
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bot.
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. C.
RAHWAY, N. J.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE NEVERSLIP
THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE
It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.
Shod with the "Neverslip," your horses feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.
The CALKS are REMOVABLE,
Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING
When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.
On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.
S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dealers in hardware blacksmiths' supplies, etc.
sole agents for Union county.

GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

$6.00
........TO........
CALIFORNIA
is our Sleeping Car Rate on the Phillips-Rock Island Tourist Excursion, from Boston and kindred distant cities on the route of this car, to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The cars have upholstered spring seats, are Pullman build, and appointments perfect.
You have a special manager on the car all the way, and excursions run once a week, leaving Boston every Tuesday. Save money by taking this popular mode of travel.
Address for full particulars,
A. PHILLIPS & CO.
296 Washington st., Boston, Mass.
JNO. SEBASTIAN,
Gen. Passenger Agent, Chicago.
8 23 Feb 1

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has moved from 28½ W. Front street, to 241 West Front, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public, generally.

FOR BETTER MORALS.

Borough Legislators Decide to Restrict Amusements.

AFTER THE SALOON ANNEXES.

Billiard Parlors and Bowling Alleys to Be Licensed and Regulated—Borough Council Officially Asks the Court Not to License Bock.

It was 8:20 when Mayor Needham called the North Plainfield Common Council to order last Friday, and in answer to the roll call by Clerk Arnold Councilmen Valiant, Howell, Neal, Winckler and Lounsbury responded, Mr. Peck being the only absentee.

The minutes of the December meeting were read and approved.

Justice Crosley's report showed that $66.50 had been collected for fines during the past three months, and the clerk reported $12.50 received from various sources.

Collector Spencer's report was read and showed that the total amount of taxes paid to date was $7,397.82

Clerk Arnold's statement of the borough finances was:

		Deficit.
Borough		$ 971.82
Fire Department		718.71
Road account	$415.98
Light account		404.05
		$2,094.08
		415.98
Deficit		$1,678.10.

The usual batch of monthly bills was presented and referred to the proper committees, and later ordered paid.

In answer to the question as to how many lights were deducted from the electric light bill, on account of poor service, Clerk Arnold said there were sixteen.

The Mayor stated that he had received a communication from residents of Grove street, in which they said that W. A. Wilson had been engaged as a watchman and they would like to have the Council give him permission to make arrests.

Mr. Needham had given him the privileges of a special marshal till last night meeting.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a resolution later making him a special marshal without compensation.

Mr. Valiant did not like the spirit of the action taken by the residents and thought that if they paid their taxes they should be protected.

Mr. Howell thought that they should have better protection, it being very poor at present.

The resolution was adopted by the Council.

Mr. Lounsbury stated that the Sewer Committee had instructed F. A. Dunham to furnish the map, grades, etc., which they were given power to secure, and that they would be ready in two weeks.

Mr. Lounsbury said that he with Mr. Peck had seen Mr. Cooley of the Electric Light Co., and had instructed him in regard to placing the lights ordered on Clinton avenue.

Mr. Howell of the Printing Committee said that he had purchased an atlas of F. A. Dunham as he was given power to do.

Mr. Lounsbury offered an ordinance which provides for the licensing and regulating of bowling alleys and billiard saloons in the borough.

He had seen Borough Counsel Reed and was informed that it was perfectly legal and proper. It provides that they have to pay a license fee to be decided upon and that the places have to be closed from 11 each night till 6 the next morning, and from the same hour Saturday night till the same hour Monday morning. Violations of the ordinance incur a fine of $50, for each offense or 10 days in jail or both. It was referred to the Laws and Ordinance Committee.

Mr. Valiant offered resolutions that a warrant be drawn for $53 in favor of pay roll, also that warrants for the $1,500 note with interest due Jan. 12, 1895, and the $1,000 note with interest due Jan. 15, 1895, be drawn for H. N. Spencer and charged to road account.

Mr. Lounsbury offered a similar resolution in regard to the $1,000 note with interest due Jan. 12, the same to be charged to Borough account.

A recess of ten minutes was then taken. During the latter, H. N. Spencer presented a handsome map of Plainfield and North Plainfield to the Council on behalf of ex-Mayor William Saunders. It was made by F. A. Dunham.

When business was resumed Mr. Valiant moved that the hearty thanks of Council be extended to Mr. Saunders for his gift, which was unanimously given.

Mr. Howell offered a resolution that a warrant be drawn for H. N. Spencer for the $1,000 note with interest due Jan. 15, 1895 and charged to light account. It was adopted.

Mr. Valiant offered a resolution that the sense of the Council be expressed to the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas, Somerville, against licensing a saloon on Somerset street to be opened by Charles Bock. Mr. Neal stated that it was not a question of temperance, but that Council was charged with protecting the borough. Mr. Howell was in favor of it, individually, but not officially, and Mr. Lounsbury stated that the saloon would add additional duties to the marshals and councilmen, but while he was in favor of the resolution personally he would not vote for it as an official paper. Mr. Valiant had heard where such things had been done before, and as he thought the saloon would be a superlative nuisance, he would vote for the resolution. Mr. Winckler was of the same opinion.

The Mayor spoke at length on the subject and heartily favored the action proposed. He thought the borough and city would be troubled considerable by the saloon, it being on the border line.

Mr. Neal said that he had been informed on good authority that the Somerville Court would look with favor on an official document from the Council.

Mr. Howell thought the hour of closing the saloons should be changed so people could not come from Plainfield at a late hour of the night and fill up on borough liquor.

The resolution was adopted, Mr. Lounsbury alone voting no.

The subject of cleaning sidewalks of snow and ice was brought up by Mr. Lounsbury, who asked if something could not be done to make it practical. It was thought that the borough would be held liable for accidents resulting therefrom. After a long discussion in which compliments were exchanged such as one of the councilmen thought the chairman of the Street Committee should clean the walks, it was said that there was no ordinance compelling a property-owner to clean his walk, and owing to the financial embarrassment of the borough they could do nothing in the matter.

A communication from Engine Co., No. 1, stated that Rudolph Spiegel and Frank Kesselring had been elected members of the company and asked that they be confirmed. It was referred to the proper committee.

On motion of Mr. Howell Council adjourned at 9:30.

"COUNT" VAN NESS ARRESTED.

Got $600 on a Policy After He Had Assigned It as Security for a Debt of $700.

"Count" John K. VanNess, 40 years of age, of Plainfield, was a prisoner in the Tombs Court Friday. The complaint was made by James N. McElhinney, an attorney at 54 East 128th street, who swore that on Nov. 22, 1890, he sued VanNess for $1,840.50 and recovered judgment. VanNess, he said, paid off enough to reduce the amount due to $709.72.

To guarantee the payment of this VanNess assigned to McElhinney an insurance policy for $1,000 on the furniture of his house in Plainfield, which had been burned out a few days previous to Dec. 5, 1893, when the assignment was made. McElhinney was acting for his wife, Jane, in whose name he had recovered the judgment.

The policy of insurance was on the Firemen's Fund Insurance Company of San Francisco. VanNess, McElhinney added, begged him from time to time to delay the presentation of the policy for payment. He complied for a time, but finally decided to write to the company. When he did so he discovered that the claim had been settled by VanNess for $600. He then procured a warrant for VanNess's arrest.

When VanNess was arraigned before Justice McMahon, McElhinney wanted to withdraw the complaint on the prisoner's promise to settle. The Justice refused to allow him to withdraw it, and held VanNess in default of $3,000 bail for examination Jan. 8.

Plainfield has cause to be proud of herself and grateful to her Councilmen for the esplendid condition of her finances as shown in this issue. She ends the year with her bills paid, her wants reasonably satisfied, a cash balance of $13,631.64, and a surplus of $107,430.80. And she has no bonded indebtedness. Verily, Plainfield is blessed among the cities of the State and the admiration of all the world.

The Daily Press has long felt that a practical sanitary plumber ought to be added to the otherwise admirable Board of Health. Especially since the sewers are to become a feature of Plainfield's municipal progress is there need of such a man on the Board. The wisdom of this suggestion will commend itself to the thoughtful consideration of those who know the value of practical knowledge of mechanical detail in sanitary work.

The new Common Council should make speedy endeavor for the completion of Westervelt avenue. The entrance to that thoroughfare has too long been a lopsided eyesore. If the Councilmen turn their earnest attention to completing the western side of the avenue and making it presentable and passable, it will find the task not such a bugbear as has been painted. Past Councils have shunned the prospective improvement because it is understood that a private property-owner holds a strip of land along the western side of the roadway where the sidewalk ought to be. In that event, why not condemn the land, pay the price, and establish the improvement which has so long been crying to be made?

The Board of Trade has an opportunity to distinguish itself in the matter of connecting Madison avenue and Duer street. Since the postoffice is to be established in the Babcock Building the long-deferred project takes on new importance, and the borough and city ought speedily to have the extension established giving an open highway at this now important commercial centre. The Board of Trade has not developed much activity along the line of its name; and if it wishes to live down its nickname of Board of Bowling it should bestir itself in vital matters of this kind and work with all its power to establish just such public improvements. It has the power; now is the time to exert it. No better thing awaits its advocacy than the Madison avenue extension.

Bright's Disease Cured.

Mrs. Laura A. Kempton's (of West Rutland Vt.) daughter was stricken with Bright's disease. Her ankles, feet and eyes were terribly swollen. Four physicians attended her, but her life was despaired of. A mother's love surmounts all difficulties, and she determined to try Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, made at Rondout, N. Y. "How happy I am," Mrs. Kempton writes, "that I determined on that course, for one by one the well-known symptoms of the disease left her. Words cannot express my gratitude and I cannot too earnestly recommend this great medicine. Her recovery was entirely due to Favorite Remedy, which was the only medicine taken after her case was abandoned by the physicians." Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy can be had at any drugstore. It has never yet failed to cure where the disease is within the range of medicine.

—In St. Joseph's R. C. Church the Christmas collection amounted to $220.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

David H. Lenox is spending the Winter in New York.

Mrs. S. A. Davis has gone to Jersey City for three weeks.

Hugh B. Reed has associated himself with Reed & Coddington.

Miss B. J. Beach of Mercer avenue is visiting at The Pines, Lakewood.

The engagement is announced of Miss Lucy Rafferty to William Fiering.

H. K. Southwick and family of 16 Sycamore avenue have moved to Providence.

Ernest Conover of Elmwood place, who has been quite ill with a cold, is improving.

Miss Mary Holton of Grove street is visiting at Watters Park, Wayne County, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Porter and family of Craig place are on a short visit to New York city.

William Stimpson of West Sixth street began a course of journalism at Packard's Institute, New York.

A. E. Faber, Jr., and family of Mercer avenue will spend the balance of the Winter in New York city.

A bright little boy was added to the little family of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Hargrave of Vine street, Sunday.

Walter B. Rittenhouse of East Sixth street has returned to his studies in Stevens Institute of Technology.

Miss Katie E. Saverd and Miss Katie A. Dorgan celebrated New Year's with Miss Minnie Quirk of Flatbush.

Julius Lusardi received a letter a few days ago from his brother, Aleck Lusardi and bride, telling of their safe arrival in Italy.

Isaac Coriell and family of Mount Horeb have moved to their new home, 12 Grandview avenue, lately purchased by Mr. Coriell.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Titus have the sympathy of the community in the loss of their six-year-old son Ellsworth, of diphtheritic croup.

B. Rockfellow and family of Somerville have leased the house on Somerset *street for a term of years, formerly oc*cupied by John H. Kitchen.

James A. Greene, formerly of Simpson, Crawford & Simpson's, has been engaged by Isaac Lederer, for his popular dry-goods house, West Front street.

The wedding of Henry Albert of Coontown to Miss Lizzie Rose of Mount Horeb will take place Jan. 16 at the residence of the bride's parents, Mount Horeb.

Charles J. McNabb of Rahway road has severed his connection with Reed & Coddington to take a year's course of studies in the New York University of Law.

The Misses Ross of Brooklyn and Miss Gendell of Philadelphia, who have been visiting Miss Elsie Horne of Willow avenue, have returned to their homes.

William Rockfellow and family of Somerville have moved into the house of ex-Sheriff Coddington, 196 Somerset street. Mr. Rockfellow is employed by Smalley Bros.

The possession of the George Watson property on Crescent avenue is transferred to Mr. and Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman January 10 and after improvements are completed they will move in about April 1.

Miss Hettie Holman, who has been spending the Christmas holidays with her cousins, Miss Percy Emmons of Prospect place and Miss Laura Emmons of Jackson avenue, has returned to her home in New Brunswick.

Policeman Cooney has been a great sufferer from neuralgia of late. In three years of service he has not lost any time, and though he feels far from being well he does not want to lay off duty now, and therefore pluckily stays on his beat.

A happy New Year's Eve party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Perrine, 220 West Second street, attended by fifty friends. Music for dancing was furnished by Mr. Perrine and John Willis, and refreshments were served in abundance.

Clarence Vandeventer has won high compliment for his management of the *Van club-house in Fanwood. His cater*ing at the New Year's dance of the Four-in-Hand Club was greatly admired. The one hundred guests were warm in their testimonials of appreciation.

W. E. Bailey, formerly of Newark, has taken up his residence in this city, and, in company with Hall of Newark, who has established a bicycle specialty factory at the place used by the Climax Stopper Company on Fourth street, has rented a home of W. D. Thickstun.

The Amateur Opera Society of Plainfield was formally organized at the residence of Miss Jeannette Bryant, 80 Mercer avenue, North Plainfield, last evening. Henry M. Western was chosen musical director of the society, which will give operettas and cantatas.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Weber entertained the choir of the German Lutheran Church of Grove street at their home on East Third street New Year's night. The evening was passed very pleasantly with music, singing and dancing, after which a generous collation was served.

A surprise was given Adam Waglow of New Market, Wednesday evening, in honor of the fifty-second anniversary of his birthday. Those present were: David Blackford, Frank Nelson, David Lawson, B Pixle, J Stein, Mr and Mrs Winges, Miss Dans, Herman Dans, and D Roantree. Dancing was indulged in, for which Lawson furnished the music. A collation was served during the evening.

Councilman Bird is suffering from a severe cold.

The senior Mr. Burgess of Central avenue is seriously ill.

Fred Van Eps of East Fifth street has recovered from his sprained wrist.

Josiah Layton has left the Hospital and gone to the VanPelt Home in Metuchen.

H. M. Stockton is on the Home Committee of the great new Wool Club of New York.

L. B. Mulford of the firm of Hummer & Mulford is very ill at his home on West Second street.

Miss Carrie Bolby of Asbury, N. J. is visiting her cousin Miss Ella Bolby of Netherwood avenue.

Harry F. Rowe of the Drew Seminary at Madison, is the guest of Rev. C. R. Barnes of Grove street.

Miss Sadie Randolph and her sister Lillie of Evona will spend Sunday with relatives in Plainfield.

Miss Miller of Wilmington, Delaware, is visiting her grandmother, Mrs. Esther K. Miller of Netherwood.

Miss Wilkins of Rochester, New York, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Douglass of 44 Washington avenue.

Daniel Cory, whose 87th birthday anniversary comes next June, is very low with an apoplectic stroke.

Miss Ida Randolph of Newark has returned home from her visit with Miss Eva Dunavan of Elm place.

T. E. F. Randolph, a prominent New York flour dealer, is the guest of Mr. Bonnell of East Front street.

J. Howard Leggett, the druggist, is ill at his home on West Front street with a heavy cold, verging on the grip.

Mrs. J. R. Ludlow of Philadelphia is visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. H. VanDeventer of Woodland avenue, Netherwood.

Miss Rosalie Mumford of Vassar College is visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Mumford of South avenue, Netherwood.

Mrs. C. A. Carley of New York has returned to her home after a pleasant holiday visit with her sister, Mrs. Bernard Brady of Central avenue.

John C. Whitney, of East Sixth street, and Fred W. Goddard, of East Ninth street, graduates of the Plainfield High School, have returned to their studies at Amherst College.

James Canfield of Grove street has just finished a seven room cottage on the corner of Johnson avenue and East George street, into which he intends moving about January 15.

Miss Ethel Finch who has been spending the holiday vacation with her parents on Belvidere avenue will return to her studies Monday at the St. Gabriel College, Peekskill, New York.

Miss Carrie Beekman of the Commercial Palace was given a surprise at her home in Evona last evening, when the time was passed in a pleasant social way. It was arranged by Mrs. Kelley and Miss Morton. Those present from Plainfield were Miss McKillop, Miss Morton, Mrs. Kelley, Harry Yaeger and Frank Havens.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Sebring of 40 Craig place had the new year made happy to them by the restoration to health of their dear little daughter, Edna, who through the skilful treatment of Dr. D. C. Adams was saved from that household terror, membraneous croup. The rejoicing parents find words powerless to express their gratitude to the physician.

Union Village Donation.

The annual donation of the Union Village Methodist Church will be held at the residence of Israel J. Coon Wednesday evening, Jan. 9. Those who were at Mr. Coon's at the great Harvest Home last year will be glad to enjoy another pleasant occasion. There will be vocal and *instrumental music and also other enter*tainment. An excellent supper will be served. The Plainfield Quartette will be present and render vocal selections.

—The work of the fire horses on the streets last year earned $214 for the city.

—Superintendent H. C. Squires has started a beneficial savings society among the Hope Chapel people, styled the Penny Provident Fund.

—S. E. Flower has taken the Miller drug store, opposite the postoffice, and will be pleased to see his friends and those desiring pictures framed, etc.

Closing Out Sale.

The music store at 322 West Front street formerly occupied by F. M. Hulette will be opened on Monday. If you need anything in the music line now is your opportunity, as everything will be sold at cost price for the coming week; this includes a fine line of pianos, musical instruments, sheet music and also a number of Domestic sewing machines. Store closes at 6.

Thanks for the Services.

The following was adopted by the Y.M.C.A. Directors:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. be extended to the Chief of the Fire Department and those who assisted him for their gentlemanly and efficient service gratuitously given during the progress of the Fair.

Gilbride May Return.

Mrs. Benjamin Braham, (alias Gilbride), accompanied by Detective Bond of Philadelphia, left town for Elizabeth at 10 this morning. Braham will be taken from the county jail at once on requisition papers mentioned by The Press last evening, and, Mrs. Braham states, bondsmen are ready in Philadelphia as soon as the party arrives and she hopes to return at once to Plainfield accompanied by her husband.

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.
Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 180, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 167 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 304 E. Front treet, corner Elm street. 3jy19t

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROV
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.
OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park Avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.
Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Office cor. Front St. and Park Ave.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security.
Mar30tf

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 31 SOMERSET ST. 3-18-tf

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
30 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N J.
mch30tf

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 308 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to. ap27

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at eir residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. tisfactorily performed. fl7y1

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.
TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.
Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and your work always gives satisfaction.
Kes of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and
Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Offices corner of Park avenue and Second street.—ja6tf

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 122, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of CONSTITUTIONALIST. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES E. THIERS,
Dentist,
48 Somerset street. A new local anesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.—ja6tf

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
[Successor to T. J. Carey.]
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—34 W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1 58. Piano moving a specialty.

NOTICE. June 1, 1894.
Estate of Sarah Doane, deceased.
Pursuant to the order of George T. Parrot, Surrogate of the county of Union, this day made, on application of the undersigned administrator of said deceased, notice is hereby given to the creditors of said deceased to exhibit to the subscriber under oath or affirmation their claims and demands against the estate of said deceased within nine months from this date, or they will be forever barred from prosecuting or recovering the same against the subscriber.
JOHN H. DOANE,
11 15 10 Administrator.

TWENTY
Years experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 2 doors above Peacestree

Mr. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to Shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Liver and Boarding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park Avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No, 114.

Parlor Stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
te Piping, Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning,
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL, 6. 11 11-tf

American Silver Truss
Remains where placed and holds rupture perfectly, causing in many cases a complete cure. It is cool, durable, clean and simple, being composed of one continuous piece of metal wire without nuts, screws or ratchets; is easily adjusted and so light and comfortable the wearer often forgets his ailment or that he has a truss on. The hips and back are absolutely free from pressure, hence may be worn day and night. They are equally suitable for infants or adults. The Silver Truss has received the hearty endorsement of eminent ph[illegible] surgeons in Engl[illegible] [illegible] Street, U. S. A.
For sale only at
L. W. RANDOLPH'S,
Prescription druggist, 143 West Front st., Plainfield, N. J.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid paper, issued weekly, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copies sent free.
Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address
MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

Plainfield, New Jersey.

TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor.

Westfield has adopted a sewer-construction plan differing from Plainfield's. Plainfield first buries thousands of dollars worth of pipe in the streets, and takes her time about picking out land for disposal beds. Westfield believes that the outlet should be provided before the pipes are laid. Therefore she has bought the Zabriskie 100-acre farm, paid $10,000 for it, and will now go ahead and construct her sewers and operate them as fast as built. Westfield is wide-awake in this matter as in all.

Those who have always thought of Gov. Werts as a matter-of-fact, utilitarian person are agreeably surprised at the sentiment he displays in his message to the Legislature. He makes a stirring and poetic plea for the protection of the Palisades, and effects a striking combination of sentiment and sense. Gov. Werts has constantly shown himself a man of head, and now he stands revealed as a man of head and heart, worthy of the sincere affection and deep respect of the great little State which he is governing with such judgment and vigor.

Charles C. McBride is an editor who has won honor and reward in the newspaper world by his enterprising, fearless and powerful conduct of the Elizabeth Journal. He has made politicians, and now he is reaping political reward. Yesterday Speaker Cross appointed him private secretary, a position where the editor with the curly gray locks will have an opportunity to develop a masterly silence on what he knows about the inner workings of the Republican party in New Jersey. As private secretary, Mr. McBride will get on to lots of news that as a newspaper man he 'd itch to publish—but can 't. Still, it 's a pleasant honor, and shows that his integrity and faithful service are appreciated, and The Press extends its sincere congratulations.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

R. F. M. Chase has returned from Europe.

Mrs. James Morning is improving from her recent illness.

Mrs. Wm. Snell and child returned yesterday to Dunellen.

A bal poudre will be given in the Park club-house Jan. 22.

Carlos C. Gallup is confined to his home with an injured knee.

Miss Jennie Quick has returned from visiting at Basking Ridge.

Alfred Noel, son of Netherwood's ex-postmaster, is severely ill.

Miss Fanny Rafferty of Park avenue is visiting in New Brunswick.

David Rushmore of Grove street has returned to Cornell University.

Miss Mary B. Wells of Washington avenue has returned to Smith College.

A severe cold confines Miss Lizzie Dunn of West Fourth street to her home.

The illness of Ernest Conover of Elmwood place has developed into whooping cough.

Eugene Jobes has returned to his home on Third place after several years at military school.

Miss Mattie Wilson of Liberty Corner has returned home after visiting relatives in North Plainfield.

Mrs. A. D. Mallinson very pleasantly entertained her Sunday-school class at her home Friday evening.

Mrs. L. W. Randolph of West Second street is improving from a severe cold which has confined her to the house.

Miss Shreve of Grove street and Miss Martha Tracy of West Ninth street have resumed their studies in Bryn Mawr College.

Dr. G. H. Clark of 434 East Second street is very seriously ill with a complication of diseases. Dr. Zeglio is in attendance

Henry Rider returned today to Yale College; A. Huntington, H. McGee, Clarence Peck and H. Lovell, go back Wednesday.

S. Clinton Crane has returned to the Columbia Law School after spending his Christmas vacation at his home on East Second street.

Ralph Campbell of Netherwood avenue is recovering from a heavy cold which prompt treatment prevented from becoming serious.

Rev. Hobart Clark of All Souls Church will exchange pulpits next Sunday with Rev. Dr. Eaton, of the Church of the Divine Paternity, New York.

Herbert Johnston, who has been spending the Christmas holidays at his home on East Fifth street, has returned to his studies at Columbia College.

Genial and popular Harry Werner received a short visit from his father, J. Werner, this week. The senior Werner is one of Bridgeport's leading clothiers.

A fine entertainment of music and recitations will be given in the Park Club Saturday night. Miss Addie Parker Jackson and the boys orchestra will take part.

Judge Wm. A. Coddington is ill at the City Hotel with a severe attack of the grip.

Elmer S. Garretson of West Front street was kept at home yesterday with a severe cold.

Miss Terrill of Brooklyn is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. W. Stratton of West Third street.

Clarence H. Leland of Plainfield was reappointed doorkeeper of the House, in Trenton yesterday.

Edward Keller, an employe of Blimm's stables, left today for New Market, where he is to be married.

Rev. and Mrs. Edward Love will receive the Ministers Association at their home next Monday afternoon.

The engagement is announced of Miss Amey E. Green of Park avenue to Frank St. John Fitch of Halifax, Nova Scotia.

Miss May Smith of Providence, who has been spending a few days with her uncle Chas. W. Smith, returned home this morning.

Past President Mrs. James Atwood of Trenton was the guest of the Women's Relief Corps at the installation ceremonies last evening.

Asa Collier, who is Vice-President of the Pennsylvania Retail Jewelers Association, is in Philadelphia today attending the monthly meeting of that association.

The marriage of Miss Maude Agnes Bowers to Frederick Banks is to take place in Grace Church Thursday, Jan 24 The reception following will be in Hotel Albion.

P J. McAndrews, the popular Plainfield yardmaster of the Jersey Central has been confined to his home for some days, suffering from a severe cold and an attack of rheumatism.

Miss Luettus Lunger has returned from a two-weeks visit with her grandparents at Stanton, accompanied her sister Miss Mattie, who has spent three months at the same place.

E. H. Clevely, fair, fat, but not forty, leaves for Washington tonight to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Cleveland. Mr. Clevely has recently taken his thirty-third degree in the A. O. U. L., and exhibits his certificate with much pride.

The college boys who enjoyed the holiday season at home are fast leaving to take up their various studies once again. This morning Arthur Serrell departed for Lehigh, and Clarence Peck sadly checked his baggage for Yale, as he bade his friends adieu.

Mrs. Jane Craver of Corning, N. Y., came to Plainfield last Monday and will make her home in the future with her daughter, Mrs. T. B. VanNess of Third street and Central avenue. Although over 80 years of age Mrs. Craver is still hale and hearty.

The bal poudre to be given by the Park Club Jan. 22, of which announcement was made exclusively in The Press of yesterday, will be an event of rare enjoyment. It is in charge of the House Committee, Messrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Charles A. Reed and Julius E. Erickson.

A grand musical reception will be given Miss Lydia W. Dufford in honor of her return to New York from the Conservatory of Music of Boston, which a number of Plainfield friends will attend. Plainfield friends on East Front street will give her a reception at an early date. A good time is anticipated.

W. C. Startup of Westervelt avenue received word Monday of the death of his grandfather, William Startup, who died in Middletown, N. Y., in his 78th year. Mr. Startup had been feeble for some time, and his death was not entirely unexpected. The funeral services were held today from his late home. Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Startup left early this morning for Middletown to attend the services

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

—At a special meeting of Somerset Council, J. O. U. A. M., Saturday evening, Mr. Templin was elected a trustee, and Franklin Howell Assistant Recording Secretary. The officers will be installed tomorrow evening by District Deputy Charles I Young.

THERE IS DANGER for the young girl just entering womanhood. She is especially sensitive, and many nervous troubles, which continue through life, have their origin at this period. If there be pain, headache, and nervous disturbances, or irregularity of monthly functions Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription should be judiciously employed.

In catarrhal inflammation, in chronic disorders and diseases common to women

PIERCE Guarantees a CURE OR THE MONEY IS RETURNED.

Miss Burk.

Miss Mamie Burk, of Everett, Bedford Co., Penna., writes: "When I was fourteen years old I took a bad cold and there resulted internal troubles. I was a great sufferer for four years. I had tried two Physicians but neither gave me any relief. After taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription I can't say enough for it. It cured me so I have no more pains. I am now nineteen years of age."

A MODERN PRINCE.

FAIRY-LIKE REVENGE VISITED ON HIS HEAD.

The Romantic Story Ended in America at an Auction Store in a Most Unromantic Way, Owing to the Prince's Gambling and Other Vices.

Oscar Wilde said that the worst part of owing blue china was that one had to live up to it. The Prince Alexandrovitch Galitzine, who came from Paris about three seasons ago, owned one of the finest collections of blue china in existence, but he failed to live up to it, for the entire lot, together with an immense collection of bric-a-brac, bronzes, furniture and rare paintings, was recently sold at auction to satisfy the Prince's formidable array of debts, which, be it said, he has contracted in wooing the god of chance, and incidentally enriching bookmakers at the race tracks.

The Prince comes from a royal Russian family, and for the last few seasons has been courted by society in New York and at Newport. Before he came to the metropolis he had electrified gay Paris by the magnificence of his establishments, the gorgeousness of his carriages and the extravagance of his entertainments.

His feasts rivalled the spreads of the most noted epicures and his guests carried away diamonds and other precious stones as souvenirs of their visits. The Prince, young and handsome and the leader of a gay and titled set, made the fashion.

The news of his wild life and of his extravagant manner of betting, as well as other particular doings which set the city talking, caused some of the royal persons with whom he was a pet to turn from him. The result was that Prince Alexandrovitch shook the dust of the Bois de Bologne from his patent leathered feet and came to New York.

Here his fame had preceded him, and a certain romantic story was told in many swagger boudoirs. It was this: Anna, of Russia, who was a beautiful and capricious queen, once fell in love with one of her courtiers, a noble prince of the realm, whose blood was as blue as many generations of nobility could make it. She was not coy in expressing her attachment, and, although she was married at the time, she delicately expressed to him her wish that they might love forever and aye, and laughed at any restraints which convention had placed upon such a union.

The Prince, whose ideas of love were still young and beautiful, declined the offered favors, and Anna, of Russia, set about to concoct a scheme of revenge.

She hit upon a most fiendish one. The night that the haughty but injudicious Prince refused her last appeal for his love she issued a mandate that on the morrow he be married to the lowest scullion in the royal kitchen. The marriage was performed, and the wretched bridegroom and his wondering spouse were conveyed to an ice palace, where it was supposed they would die during the night.

But the scullion had a heart and soul, despite her low station, and she set to work to preserve the beautiful young Prince. She succeeded so well that on the morrow Anna, of Russia, heard that the couple were still living.

She sent them to Siberia, and there the Prince was seized with a fever, and when he recovered he heard that the cruel Queen was dead, and he and his bride, whom he had learned to love on account of her devotion to him and her heroism, were allowed to return to Russia, where they came into their own again.

The present Prince Galitzine, who fluctuated between Newport, Tuxedo and New York for the last few seasons, was looked upon with favor by chaperones and mammas. The news of his immense wealth and rumors of the magnificent establishment which he intended starting in the city this winter caused him to be courted everywhere, for, of course, a young society Prince would entertain lavishly if he took a house and furnished it with all the priceless art treasures which were in storage waiting for use.

Then the young Prince's gambling losses began to be talked about. The family jewels, which had been given in charge of his banker, were one by one pledged for thousands of dollars, for the jewels are magnificent, and are said to be worth millions.

The final blow came when the furniture, paintings and art treasures were placed in the rooms of a New York auction house for public sale. The last of the Galitzine diamonds had been pawned, and there was nothing left to do, for the fact is the Prince is in pawn. Only a short time ago his sister wrote him from Russia that he could return and claim another vast estate which awaits him there, but when he applied for his passport to the Russian Consul he found himself so much in debt to that personage that he could not leave the country.

Hair Growing on a Horse Blanket.

Mr. William H. Forbes of Spencer Corners, Fulton county, N. Y., is the possessor of a very old horse blanket, which differs from its fellows in that it has a well-defined coat of hair in various stages of development, alive and growing. While possibly of a finer and silkier texture, it is an excellent reproduction of a horse's coat, which the blanket formerly covered.

Mr. Forbes first discovered this peculiarity in October last, when taking it down from the peg in the barn, where it had hung undisturbed during the summer. He was naturally greatly astonished to discover two patches of growing hair, one on either side, where it had been exposed to the light and air. The hair is of a bright bay color and is now fully an inch in length. Probably the most peculiar feature of the affair, however, is the fact that the hair has spread from the two patches until it has entirely covered the blanket with a fine growth, varying in shade and color. It has not only been subjected to a critical inspection by several reputable men, but it has undergone a microscopic test by two prominent physicians, of whom Dr. Henry C. Finch of Broadalbin makes affidavit, before Judge Gardner, "that the hair now growing on the blanket is true hair, and that the roots of the same are alive and in process of development."—Albany Times-Union.

Edison's Time Not Up Yet.

An English reviewer says that "Thomas Alva Edison is, perhaps, the most marvelous and characteristic achievement of the American continent. He has invented more things at 47 than any other man ever invented in a whole lifetime, but he is not used up."

It is interesting to learn that Edison's great grandfather died at 102, his grandfather at 103, and one of his aunts at 108, while his father 's alive at 90.

A PECULIAR MAYOR.

ECCENTRIC ACTS THAT HAVE MADE PINGREE FAMOUS.

His Municipal Circus, with City Officers as Clowns and Members of a Kazoo Band Organized to Help Out His Potato Patch Scheme.

Mayor Hazen S Pingree, who has been elected Mayor of Detroit three consecutive times, widely noted for his eccentricities, is to-day a unique political figure in Michigan, says a Detroit correspondent of the Chicago Tribune. Recently he has become nationally prominent as the first mayor to secure a 3-cent street railway fare in the United States. This was accomplished after a three years' war with the Detroit Citizen's Street Railway Company.

Recently the mayor came out in a bread crusade. The bakers were robbing the people; there was a bread trust, he said. He wanted the price of bread reduced to a three-pound loaf for 5 cents. If it wasn't he swore he would start a bakeshop himself.

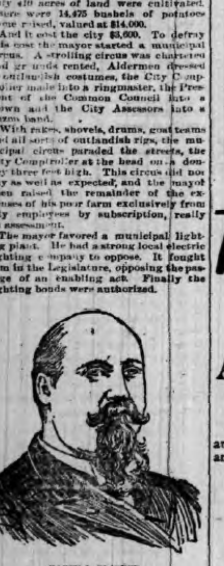
One day last summer the mayor was driving with Mrs. Pingree on the boulevard. She remarked it was pity so much waste land as adjoined the boulevard should lie idle when there were thousands of poor people suffering for food. The next day the mayor visited real estate men and capitalists, and before night he had secured permission to use free over 1,000 acres of land. He appointed an agricultural commission, and within a week had 945 poor families planting potatoes, grains and vegetables.

There were 3,000 applicants from the poor for land, but the season was so late only 410 acres of land were cultivated. There were 14,475 bushels of potatoes alone raised, valued at $14,000.

And it cost the city $3,600. To defray this cost the mayor started a municipal circus. A strolling circus was chartered and grounds rented, Aldermen dressed in outlandish costumes, the City Comptroller made into a ringmaster, the President of the Common Council into a clown and the City Assessors into a kazoo band.

With rakes, shovels, drums, goat teams and all sorts of outlandish rigs, the municipal circus paraded the streets, the City Comptroller at the head on a donkey three feet high. This circus did not pay as well as expected, and the mayor then raised the remainder of the expenses of his poor farm exclusively from city employees by subscription, really an assessment.

The mayor favored a municipal lighting plant. He had a strong local electric lighting company to oppose. It fought him in the Legislature, opposing the passage of an enabling act. Finally the lighting bonds were authorized.



HAZEN S. PINGREE.

Two years ago the mayor secured the passage of an act giving him veto power over the School Board. He vetoed certain school furniture contracts. There was a long delay in the Board of Education over the matter of awarding the contracts. One night recently the mayor appeared before the Board and made a dramatic speech, charging the school inspectors with receiving bribes. One of the inspectors was convicted in the courts, one was acquitted, another attempted to commit suicide, and is soon to be tried, and a fourth left the city, forfeiting his bail bond.

The mayor started a war against the local gas company. He found a clause in the company's charter specifying that the company should sell gas as low as sold in certain other cities. He refused to pay his gas bill, and demanded a rebate in accordance with the price of gas in the cities specified in the company's charter. He publicly advised all gas consumers to do the same, and there were numerous consultations and finally a compromise between the city and company by which a large reduction in the price of gas has been gained, with many minor provisions benefitting the general public.

The mayor wants to build a city hall and county buildings which will last a century. He recently chloroformed his carriage horses, as he did not want to feed them during the winter.

Among other things the mayor has secured a higher taxation of [illegible], a public bath house at Belle Isle park, a reduction of the price of ferry [illegible] rides, the placing of an improved [illegible] grooved rail in the street for street car tracks, an infinitely better system of public sewers and a much better class of pavements.

Patti and Queen Victoria.

Last week for the first time Queen Victoria heard Adelina Patti sing. This will sound strangely to the many who do not know that for many years there has not been the kindliest feelings between Her Majesty and the famous singer. The coolness arose when Patti declined to recognize the Queen's right to command her to appear before her. On that occasion she said:

"There are many queens, but there is only one Patti!"

The trouble, such as it was, must have been fixed up. Patti is now in her fifty-third year, and has, of course, lost much of her charm. For forty years she has been before the public as a professional. Yet the Queen should account herself happy to have heard the wonderful singer even in the decline of her powers.—Chicago Record.

No Time for Her.

Prof. Potterby—Have you ever devoted any study to the new woman, Mr. Grogan?

Mr. Grogan—Oi hov not. The ould woman is enough to kape me busy studyin', sure.—Indianapolis Journal.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osgood,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Dr. J. F. Kincheloe,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

United Hospital and Dispensary,
Boston, Mass.

Allen C. Smith, Pres.,

The Centaur Company, 77 Murray Street, New York City.

AT YOUR OWN PRICE.

Odds, Ends and Remnants.

Amos H. Van Horn, L't'd,

73 Market St., near Plane St.

We find, after stock taking, several styles of Bedroom Suits, Parlor Suits and different patterns of Carpets that we do not intend to keep any more, and we will close them out at nearly your own price.

Parlor suits	$20
Bedroom-suits	$10
Brussels carpet, per yard	50cts
Extra super ingrain carpet, per yard	50cts
Cotton chain ingrain carpet, per yard	25cts
Good bed lounges	$7
Parlor stoves	at your own price.

Note the name Amos before entering the store.

PORTLAND RANGES—The leading range in the city, and we will wager $25 that there is more sold of that range than any other in the city. Why? Simply because it is the cheapest. Cheapest because it is the best; good baker, good draught and several improvements connected with it make it the most complete range manufactured. Easy terms.

STORING FURNITURE—At 88, 90 and 92 Bank st. You will find the largest and most complete storage building in the State. All locked rooms at reasonable rates. Furniture packed and moved with vans in city or county at moderate charges.

Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,

73 Market Street, nearest Plane street. Newark, N. J.

E. P. THORN,

No. 125 Park Avenue,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,

For Family and Medicinal Use,

A SPECIALTY.

3-26-y

Don't Be Afraid

To send the children when they want Shoes. They will be waited upon just as carefully as if you came with them. One price and your money back if you want it.

ALEX. WILLETT & SON,

107 Park Avenue.

Home treatment often prevents the necessity for hospital treatment. Every wise housekeeper keeps an on hand for immediate use for congestion arising from taking cold, for lame back, sore muscles, sprains and all sorts of pains and aches.

Allcock's Porous Plaster

There are Imitations by the score. Beware of them. Get the genuine ALLCOCK'S.

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,

Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills

are of great benefit in cases of torpid liver, biliousness, and rheumatism.

NEWS OF NEAR NEIGHBORS.

Scotch Plains and Fanwood.

Fanwood Council R. A., held their public installation and reception last evening and notwithstanding the inclement weather the hall was nicely filled with the elite of Scotch Plains and Fanwood society. Council met in their rooms over the hall and marched in a body to the strains of Lambert's orchestra downstairs, where seats were reserved in the front of the hall. The hall was decorated with a ship's full colors. After an overture by the orchestra Regent Bowman made a short address of welcome and turned the evening entertainment over to the orator. Hugh J. Emmet entertained the audience with several selections on the violin, after which District Deputy Black proceeded to install the officers elect for the ensuing year. The ceremony of installation was very impressive and entertaining, Deputy Black showing he was well up in his work. After installation Mr. Emmet entertained the audience with imitations of a country dance, on the violin. Deputy Black made an address on the merits and benefits of the order and appealed to the ladies for their support, telling them they could get brother, husband, etc., into an order like the R. A. quicker than men could, and that it was to their interest to do so as they would receive the benefit when the strong right arm ceased to protect them. W. E. Collins, the newly-installed Regent, made a short address and brought the entertainment to a close. The floor was soon cleared. The grand march was led by Regent Collins and Mrs. W. R. Buckley, after which the evening was given over to the tripping of the light fantastic toe. Among those present were: Mr and Mrs George Kyte, Mr and Mrs H Robison, Mr and Mrs Eunand, Mr and Mrs Gwynnett, Mr and Mrs H O Robison, L Tuzo, H Kyte, H Young, Miss Briggs, Miss Florence Kyte, Miss Kyte, and others of Fanwood, Mr and Mrs L W Miller, Mr and Mrs John Robison, Mr and Mrs W R Buckley, Mr and Mrs George W Marsh, Mr and Mrs Hand, Mr and Mrs T J Eicholl, Mr and Mrs William Maguin, Mr and Mrs John Johnston, Mr and Mrs W E Collins, the Misses Colton, Squires, Parse, Bliss, Adams, Randolph, Quereau, Robison, Frentz, Nichols, Carter, Hennedy, Hosinger, Marsh, Messrs. Cortens, Noble, Collins, Cull, Fields, Patterson, Marsh, and others of Scotch Plains. The evening was brought to a close about 2 in the morning and all left with best wishes for the Royal Arcanum and its members. The officers installed for the ensuing year were: Regent—W E Collins; Vice Regent—Frank Quereau; Orator—W R Buckley; Treasurer—Dr F W Westcott; Collector—J E Parks; Past Regent—John Bowman; Guide—George Collins, Warden—John G Cook; Sentry — Irving Quereau. Secretary Dunn was unable to be present to be installed on account of sickness.

The election for Fire Department officers was held at the several companies headquarters last evening and resulted as follows: Chief—F W Westcott; First Assistant—F W Quereau; Second Assistant—W H Lake.

Norman Dunn is confined to his home on Mountain Avenue with a severe cold.

An election for Sunday-school officers for the ensuing year will be held at the Baptist Sunday-school Sunday.

Thursday and Friday evening the Baptist and Methodist churches will unite in holding union prayer meetings at the Methodist church.

Thomas S. Young offers $100 towards crushed stone to be used on Forest avenue if the Township will open Russell road and run the branch of the trolley over it instead of Forest avenue.

A large sleighload of the young people of the town enjoyed a straw ride Saturday evening, Milburn being their destination. After dancing (winning a horse for 10 cents), and partaking of refreshments, the journey home began, arriving about 12 o'clock.

A reception will be tendered the pastor's choir of the Baptist Church Saturday afternoon from 3 to 5. Chocolate and cake will be served.

Miss Mary Hayes is confined to her bed by a severe cold.

Wm. Corey of Albany is spending a few days with George W. Randolph of Park avenue.

—While Rev. Alexander Harrison Tuttle, pastor of the Roseville Methodist Episcopal Church, was at divine service Sunday a sneak thief entered his house at 523 Orange street, and got away with two overcoats.

THE LAW SHOULD BE CHANGED

Injustice to the Taxpayers of the System by Which the People Are Charged $2 a Day as Each Freeholder Wills.

New Brunswick, Jan. 8.—At the investigation today of the methods of the Board of Freeholders, Capt. Joseph Castner, who has been a member of the Board from the Fifth ward, this city, for several terms, admitted that he had charged the county 301 days out of 365 for work that sometimes involved no more labor than walking across a bridge and "seeing that the grass was kept green". Capt. Castner answered the question, "Were there any days for which you did not charge the county $2?" with "Oh, yes, I went fishing six days and I did not charge for them."

Freeholder Kelly said that he had charged the county $2 for writing an order for a pair of shoes for a jail prisoner, and that he had often charged $2 for simply walking over the Albany street bridge, although the work on that structure had been completed and there were bridge tenders there.

It was brought out that members of the County Records Committee had put in a total of 411 days at $2 a day supervising the work of two girls and a man while they bound the records. The binding cost about $300 and the supervision over $800.

Everything at Cut Prices.

In order to facilitate their "stock taking", and to make the labor as light as possible, L. Bamberger & Co., 147 149 Market street, Newark, are holding a "January Clearing Sale", so as to reduce every department to at least half its present size. They recognize the fact that now, after the great buying of Christmas time, unless big bargains are given, purchasing will be light, and they have accordingly cut the price of everything in their big establishment, excepting a few articles whose price is regulated by special agreements, to a lower point than was ever before known. Economical shoppers will be sure to grasp so unusual a chance, for it means the opportunity to buy not only all sorts of needed wearables, but also such things as muslins, flannels, hosiery, linens, men's furnishings, etc., goods whose prices seldom change, at real bargains figures. The sale will continue for some days, for the stock is so vast that it cannot be reduced to the desired limits in a short time.

Parks Badly Beaten.

On the Elizabeth Athletic Club alleys last evening an interesting game was rolled between the Parks and the E. A. C's, resulting in a decided victory for the Elizabethans, though the Parks fought hard and had the satisfaction of scoring the largest individual total of the evening, that of Leonard, who steadily climbed to 205. The result, however, was a victory for the E. A. C's by 171 pins.

The score:

E. A. C.		PARKS.
Ellis	185	Thiers	144
Russ	156	Leonard	205
Davis, R	194	Erickson	177
Bogart	161	Murray, W	139
Myer	179	Faber	159
Vandeveer	128	Murray, J	140
Pepin	142	Waring	117
Fleming	169	Brooks	138
Lane	180	Sanford	139
Dunrock	160	Matthews	165
	1664		1493

Scorers—Frank J. Pope, A. L. C. Marsh. The next contest will be between the Parks and the Columbias of Hoboken at the Club alleys.

"The Finderne."

The proprietors wish to announce to the public that they have, at considerable expense, fitted "The Finderne" as a model Winter home by the addition of ample steam heating appliances, the enclosing of a large extent of its piazzas with glass and other needful features to make it meet the demands of the most exacting. They have also secured, as manager, A. E. White, a caterer of wide experience in the management of resorts whose registers contain the names of many of the most well known pleasure seekers; his latest success being the management for three years of "The Gladys Inn", one of the most popular of the popular "Mountain Resorts of Virginia", and owned by the Chesapeake and Ohio Railway Company, than whose hostleries none better managed are to be found on the continent. "The Finderne" was opened for the year 1895, on Thursday, January 3, and will be maintained in the highest order of excellence as a resort, no pains or expense will be spared to this end. Everything immaculate; cuisine unexcelled; attention all that can be desired. Carriages will be run to all day trains. Postoffice, express and telegraph offices.

A hop will be given every week for those living at "The Finderne" and a few invited guests. They will be full-dress affairs.

—Rogers has just received a shipment of 60,000 oysters.

Coughing.

For all the ailments of Throat and Lungs there is no cure so quick and permanent as Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil. It is palatable, easy on the most delicate stomach and effective.

Scott's Emulsion

stimulates the appetite, aids the digestion of other foods, cures Coughs and Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, and gives vital strength besides. It has no equal as nourishment for Babies and Children who do not thrive, and overcomes

Any Condition of Wasting.

Send for Pamphlet on Scott's Emulsion. Free.
Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

JOINT INSTALLATION.

Grand Army, Relief Corps and Sons of Veterans, Unite in Honors to Officers.

The first joint installation of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., Women's Relief Corps, No. 10, and John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, took place last evening in Post 73 rooms.

It was a very pleasant occasion, and thoroughly enjoyed by all.

The Post officers were first installed by Past Commander James Atwood of Trenton as follows:

Commander—W. W. Coriell.
Senior Vice Commander—M. C. Dobbins.
Junior Vice Commander—W. R. Moore.
Quartermaster—Andrew Cox.
Adjutant—Robert Walker.
Officer of Day—C. B. Stephens.
Officer of Guard—W. C. Smith.
Chaplain—J. A. Goodwin.
Surgeon—H. O. Drake.
Quartermaster Sergeant—W. Hand.
Sergeant Major—J. W. Finck.
Outside Sentinel—S. C Terry, Sr.
Council of Administration—M. C. Dobbins, C. B. Stephens, W. C. Smith, Chas. Graves, Sr., J. E. Stewart.

These officers then vacated their stations, and the officers of the Sons of Veterans were installed by Past Commander Charles B. Stephens of Post 73, as follows:

Captain—W C Dobbins.
First Lieutenant—Willard V Sutton.
Second Lieutenant—C F Stephens.
Camp Council—Clifford Compton, Chas Graves, Jr, and Frank Clarkson.

The appointive officers composing the staff were installed by Captain W. C. Dobbins. They were:

Quartermaster—H C McVoy.
First Sergeant—H J Martin.
Sergeant Guard—H L Thatcher.
Chaplain—Raymond McVoy.
Color Sergeant—Charles Graves, Jr.
Camp Guard—Cyrus Moore.
Corporal Guard—Edward Smith.
Picket Guard—John Naylor.

After this was concluded, Past President Mrs. Morse took the chair and installed the officers of the Women's Relief Corps, the president-elect being unable to be present on account of illness. The officers are:

President—Mrs A E Dobbins.
Senior Vice-president—Mrs Westphal.
Junior " " —Mrs Kline.
Treasurer—Mrs Walter Walker.
Chaplain—Mrs Corwin.
Conductor—Mrs Leland.
Assistant Conductor — Miss Fanny Westphal.
Guard—Mrs Vincent Nash.
Assistant Guard—Miss Lucy Westphal.
Secretary—Miss Ada Nash.

Commander Coriell then took the chair, and remarks were made by several comrades, including the officers. W. Cawley and J. R. Dungan of the Somerville Camp, Sons of Veterans, also made a few remarks, as did some of the women besides.

The installation work throughout was highly creditable, and passed off in an excellent manner.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

GESANG AND TURN VEREIN.

Leader Schrader Presented with a Handsome Baton and Purse.

A happy party of the members and friends of the Gesang and Turn Verein Society gathered in their hall last evening and made merry until a late hour. Nearly two hundred were present, and after a musical entertainment by active members of the society, dancing and bowling were enjoyed. Throughout the evening refreshments were served in the supper room and everyone availed themselves of this excellent part of the evening's enjoyment.

The feature of the evening, however, was the presentation to Richard Schrader, the popular leader of the society, of an elegant writing desk, a handsome baton and a large purse, last evening being the occasion of his 30th birthday.

Mr. Schrader, though taken completely by surprise, feelingly thanked his many friends for their generous remembrances and expressed his desire to serve them as satisfactorily in the future as he had endeavored to in the past. His remarks were greeted with uproarious applause.

The society again demonstrated last evening their ability to give their friends a most enjoyable time.

—Work is nearing completion on the driven well at Leal's School, West Front street.

—Wm. Barrell has recently been transferred from the sub-list to a regular run as conductor on the Somerset street trolley line.

—Popular Mrs. Whittemore, whom everyone knows for her charities and good works, will speak in Music Hall Sunday afternoon at 4:15, under the auspices of the W. C. T. U.

26TH ANNIVERSARY.

Sons of Temperance Spend an Evening in Pleasant Celebration.

The members and friends of Howell Division, No. 97, Sons of Temperance, gathered in Reform Hall last night to listen to an interesting entertainment and enjoy the bountiful collation which followed. It was unfortunate that this, their twenty-sixth anniversary, was held on such a stormy night, as the programme was worthy of a much larger audience. After an ode by the members of the order and an invocation by Rev. Dr. A. H Lewis, a cordial address of welcome was delivered by P. G. W. P. Jas. R. Perrine, in which he touched on the history of the local division since its institution, and spoke of its great benefit to members.

A song by Elmer Bunyon was enthusiastically received and he was obliged to respond to the hearty encore. Mrs. C. Steiner was followed by a piano solo by Mrs. King after which Miss Alice Scribner recited "No Drunkard Enters There" in a very effective manner. Most Worthy Patriarch M. M. Eavenson and Grand Worthy Patriarch A. P. Sutphen both then delivered very interesting addresses and were followed by Miss Try Mattox whose recitation, "The Inventor's Wife", was enjoyed by all. Dr. A. H Lewis made the closing address. A tableau, in three parts, representing the rescue of the drunkard, was effectively rendered by Miss Mattox, George Rockfellow, James R. Perrine, Miss Katie Glen, Harry Mattox, and Ede Mattox. During the tableau the emblems of the the national and subordinate organizations were effectively displayed.

The collation was then discussed, and it was at a late hour when the happy party dispersed.

Death of Geo. H. Burgess.

The death of George H. Burgess occurred this morning at his home, 1057 Central avenue. Mr. Burgess had been complaining for some time, but was able to be about, and it was not until a few days ago that he was compelled to take to his bed.

Since that time he suffered very much, especially last night, when the family was constantly in attendance. Mr. Burgess was a faithful member of the First M. E. Church, and will be greatly missed in the church.

He leaves a widow, a daughter, Mrs. Joseph Yerkes, and a son, George H. Burgess, Jr.

The funeral services will be held from his late home, Friday afternoon at 3 Rev. Dr. C. R. Barnes will officiate.

Rathbone Sisters Install.

Last evening Supreme Deputy Mrs M N Morrison and staff of Elizabeth installed the following officers of Minerva Temple, No 4, Rathbone Sisters, in K of P Hall last evening:

P C—Mrs E H Cox.
M E C—Mrs E Moore.
M E S—Mrs I H Boehm.
M E J—Mrs E T Bowman.
M of F—Mrs McComas.
M of R and C—Mrs A E Dawe.
M of F—Mrs M Thatcher.
P of T—Mrs J Haberle.
G of O T—Mrs A Eagan.
Organist—Mrs A D Pope.

After the installation an interesting programme of songs, speechmaking and recitations was enjoyed, and at its close a bountiful collation was served in the banquet room.

The Elliot Will Case.

In the Elliot will case before Judge Rice in New Brunswick yesterday, Geo. W. DeMeza filed a caveat in favor of William and Walter Elliot on the grounds of undue influence and want of testamentary capacity. Lawyer DeMeza made an application to have the matter referred to Judge VanCleef, and further applied for the appointment of an administrator prudente lite. Messrs. Foley and Powell of New York sustained the will.

Mrs. Elliot's property consists of a large hotel in Lakewood, valuable real estate in Dunellen and a large life insurance policy.

—Joseph Kitchen, contractor, has purchased a horse and wagon for his business.

—Edward White has secured the lease spoken of in The Press yesterday of the adjoining store owned by the Misses Conklin, and will cut three archways in the partition, making an immense store. Mr. White will need every bit of the increased space to accommodate his enormous business.

—Under existing postal regulations the letter-carriers are not allowed inside the postoffice between their regular trips, and they were thus compelled to pass away several hours outside the office as best they could. When the office is removed to the Babcock Building the carriers will have a room in which to pass the time between trips, and being organized they have over a hundred dollars in their treasury with which they will furnish their room.

$100 Reward $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Props., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, 75c.

Popular Minnie Lester.

Minnie Lester and company played to another large and delighted audience in Music Hall last night. The play to be presented this evening is Miss Rora, an entirely new production which is on the same high standard as all the Minnie Lester plays. The popular matinees begin tomorrow. The hour is 2:30, and 10 cents admits to any part of the house. "Killarney" is the play to be given tomorrow afternoon.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

For the city reader or the country home, The New York Times is uncommonly interesting newspaper. Its sixteen pages are brimful of news. It is handsomely printed, accurate, clean, fresh, and vigorous. Every intelligent reader will prize its special departments, comprising literature and book news, social progress, religion, art, science, fashion, the woman's page, and amateur sports.

The unequaled Financial Page of The New York Times is a capital manual for investors, for bankers and the officers of Savings Banks, Trust and Insurance Companies, Railway Earnings, Stock and Bond Quotations, Interest and Dividend Notices, the organization of New Companies, and All Financial News reports are promptly and accurately printed. Its Commercial Reports, including wool, cotton, bread stuffs, meat, butter, eggs, and farm produce, recently much enlarged, are of unequaled fullness and value.

The Times will do its full share of earnest work for sound financial legislation, to repel the assaults of private greed upon the lawmaking power, to establish Democratic principles of equality in taxation and economy in expenditure, and to retrieve the defeat brought upon the Democratic party by errors and betrayals.

The New York Weekly Times

The subscription price of The New York Weekly Times is One Dollar a year. The Weekly Times is a capital newspaper. It contains all the current news condensed from the dispatches and reports of the daily edition, besides literary matter; discussions upon agricultural topics by practical farmers; full and accurate market reports of prices for farm produce, live stock, etc., and a carefully-prepared wool market.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

	1 yr	6 mo	3 mo	1 m
Daily, with Sunday	$10 00	$5.00	$2.50	90
Daily, without Sunday	8.00	4 00	2.00	75
Sunday edition only	2 00	1.00	50
Any one day but Sunday	1.50	75	40
Weekly edition	1.00	50	30

Postage prepaid to all points in the United States, Canada and Mexico, except in New York City, where the postage is 1 cent per copy; to all other countries, 2 cents per copy per day payable by the subscriber.

The Times will be sent to any address in Europe postage included, for $1 50 per month.

The address of subscribers will be changed as often as desired. In ordering a change of address both the old and the new address Must be given.

Cash in advance always. Remittances at the risk of the subscriber, unless made by registered Letter, Check, Money Order or Express order, payable to "The New York Times Publishing Co."

Address all communications thus:

THE NEW YORK TIMES,
Printing-House Square,
New York City, N. Y

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America
Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System

On and after Nov 18, 1894, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 25 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

6.57 P. M., WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

8.34 p. m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8 43 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—1 06 [illegible] a. m., [illegible] p. m. Sundays, 1, 9 06, 9 36 a. m., 9 41 p m.

For Baltimore only 1 57 p. m., week-days

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

For New York only, 6 10 a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—1 00, [illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

(1 57 p. m., with through Buffet parlor car) Sundays [illegible] a. m.

Cape May, Sea Isle City and Ocean City 1 57 p. m. weekdays.

For Rahway—1,1 42 daily ex. Monday, [illegible]

For New Brunswick—1 00, [illegible]

For Woodbridge—1 42 a m daily except Monday, [illegible]

For Perth Amboy—1 42 a m daily except Monday, [illegible]

For East Millstone—7 10 a. m., 12 56, [illegible] p. m., week-days.

For Trenton—[illegible]

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible] p. m. Sunday.

For Flemington—[illegible]

For Freehold—[illegible] p. m., via Monmouth Junction, week-days.

For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—[illegible] week days.

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible] night week-days. Sundays, [illegible] a. m., and [illegible] p. m.; do not stop at Asbury Park on Sundays.

For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—12 46, p. m.

For Boston—[illegible] p. m., daily.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton Street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]

[illegible]

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—A bachelors cotillion is being planned to be given in the Casino.

—The Park Club alleys are being inlaid with walnut spots to set the pins on.

—Mr. Walsh has given up his dancing class, and has moved to Cranford, where he has charge of a class.

—An amateur minstrel performance will be given at the Casino in February for the benefit of the Muhlenberg Hospital.

—Alert Hose Company's beautiful silver carriage was taken from Terrill & Cole's, Saturday evening, and stored in Pliny Fisk's barn on West Sixth street.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Congregational Church packed a barrel Saturday afternoon for the needy people of Nebraska and Kansas.

—Walsh's Hall in the West End is to be transformed into a dwelling-house. Work will be commenced soon, and it is hoped that it will be completed by Spring. Baker & Young will do the work.

—The city ordinance requires that within four hours after the storm ceases, where snow and ice congeal to the sidewalk ashes, sawdust or sand must be spread for the safety of pedestrians.

—Eugene Hoester has purchased the property known as the Jacob Adams homestead, at the corner of Somerset and Race streets, of Dr. D. O. Adams, and will remove his beer-bottling establishment thereto April 1.

EAST GREENWICH ACADEMY,

EAST GREENWICH, R. I.,
About 14 miles from Providence on Narragansett Bay.
FOUNDED 1802.

Both sexes. Steam heat and electric light Endowed. Twelve courses, a good Gymnasium, a Cadet Corps, well appointed class rooms. $200 a year. Opens September 11. Write for illustrated catalogue.

Plainfield reference, W. D. W. Miller, 309 LaGrande ave.

F. D. BLAKESLEE, D. D.,
Principal.

7 25 y—ws—c

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Newark [illegible]

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Somerville, [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Easton [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield 9 54, a. m., 5 06 p. m.

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.
LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

5 48 A. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Mauch Chunk Williamsport and Tamaqua.

7 10 a. m. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge Branch.

[illegible] A. M. for Flemington, D. L. & W. R. R. Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.

9 54 A. M. for Flemington, High Bridge branch D L & W R R, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Nanticoke, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.

12 46 p. m., way for Easton, connecting at Junction for stations on D. L. & W. R. R.

2 08 P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Sunbury and Williamsport, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. Buffet parlor car to Mauch Chunk.

5 06 p. m., way for Easton, connecting at High Bridge for stations on High Bridge branch.

5 14 P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Bethlehem, Bangor, Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Mauch Chunk, Shamokin and Tamaqua. Buffet parlor car to Scranton.

6 19 P. M. for Flemington.

6 30 P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading and Harrisburg.

8 21 P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.

5 48 A. M. Sunday for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton. [illegible] a.m. Sundays for Easton, 1 09 p. m. Sundays for Easton, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Reading and Harrisburg, [illegible] p. m. Sundays for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading, Harrisburg, &c. and at Junction for D. L. & W. R. R.

For Atlantic City, [illegible] a. m. 1 16 p. m.

Long Branch, Ocean Grove, etc.

Leave Plainfield [illegible] p. m. Sundays—except Ocean Grove [illegible]

For Perth Amboy, [illegible]

For Freehold, [illegible]

ROYAL BLUE LINE.

Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia, [illegible] night.

For Trenton [illegible]

For Baltimore and Washington at [illegible] night.

For Chattanooga, New Orleans and all points south with through vestibule sleeper, via Shenandoah Valley Route at 5 24 p. m. Sundays 5 16 p. m.

For Buffalo, Chicago and all points west, weekdays at 9 54 a. m., [illegible] p. m. Sundays [illegible] p. m.

RETURNING—LEAVE PHILADELPHIA, Reading terminal, [illegible]

From 24th and Chestnut—[illegible]

Leave Trenton, Warren and Tucker sts., [illegible]

Plainfield passengers by trains marked * change cars at Bound Brook.

Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket agent at the station.

J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Supt.
H. P. BALDWIN, Gen. Pass. Agt.

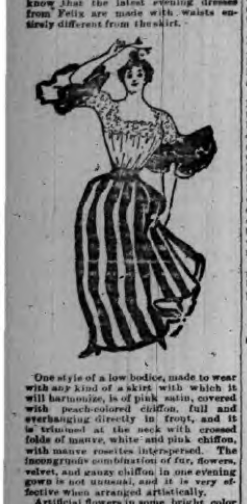
THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

THE EVER UP-TO-DATE FRILLS OF FEMININE DRESS.

The Balloon Sleeve Sags and Hovers About the Elbow. Artificial Flowers a Feature of Evening Dress, to the Chagrin of the Florist.

In this festive season, when gayety of every description is at high tide and variety in dress is such a necessity to the fashionable woman, the weird fancies and varied elegancies of fashion are developed with great effect. It would seem that all the colors of the rainbow had been reassembled, with all their modern variations, and formed into new and heretofore unknown combinations.

Despite fashion's reputation for erratic ways and rapidly changing moods, she is still faithful to the style of bodice which is made of a different material and color from those of the skirt. It may be some satisfaction for those to whom a fancy waist is a necessity to extend the usefulness of one black silk skirt, to know that the latest evening dresses from Felix are made with waists entirely different from the skirt.

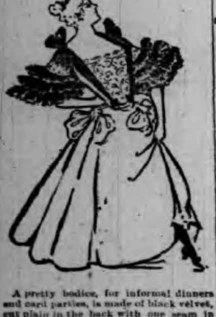


One style of a low bodice, made to wear with any kind of a skirt with which it will harmonize, is of pink satin, covered with peach-colored chiffon, full and overhanging directly in front, and it is trimmed at the neck with crossed folds of mauve, white and pink chiffon, with mauve rosettes interspersed. The incongruous combination of fur, flowers, velvet, and gauzy chiffon in one evening gown is not unusual, and it is very effective when arranged artistically.

Artificial flowers in some bright color are one of the features of evening dresses, especially those worn by young ladies, and are arranged high on the left side of the bodice.

Embroidered silks are much used for dressy gowns, and, like the cloth and chiffon, are made up over plain cloth in contrasting color. It can be used for the waist alone, for the skirt and sleeves, or the bodice and sleeves, just as fancy dictates. Felix dresses of plain heavy silk are sometimes trimmed up the seams of the skirt with embroidery, jet or chenille galoon.

Evening gowns are not the only dresses in demand for the house party outfit, for there must be day gowns, both dressy and plain, and the inevitable tailor-made dress, which, like the brook, seems likely to go on forever. It may vary in cut and decoration, but it is always the dress for real service.



A pretty bodice, for informal dinners and card parties, is made of black velvet, cut plain in the back with one seam in the middle and plain in front. White chiffon, accordeon plaited, forms the wide vest over white satin, which is cut out in the neck above the jet band, which also trims the collar, sleeves and belt. A frill of guipure lace falls over the sleeves and is caught up at each side of the bust with a rosette of satin ribbon. Another effective bodice is made of white moire, with a yoke and side pieces of black satin covered with jet passementerie very open in pattern. The back is like the front, the sleeves of black satin and the collar of white silk muslin.

One of the decided manifestations of fashion is shown in this tendency of the sleeve to droop so that the fullest part shall be near the elbow. One way to accomplish this is by the use of inch-wide bands of fur, velvet or jet, beginning at the shoulder and extending down on the sleeve half way to the elbow, on the top confining the fulness, and graduated so that the longest one is on the inside seam.—New York Sun.

An Inference.

Mrs. Jackson—Did you see Mrs. Brown's collection of rare old China?

Jackson—Yes; her family must have been quite poor.

Mrs. Jackson—Nonsense! Why do you think so?

Jackson—Well, if they had been able to keep servants she never would have had that collection of rare old china.—Life.

Woman Needed.

Bobby—Pop, what's a miracle?

Fond Parent—A miracle, Bobby is that which cannot be accomplished by man alone.

Bobby—Is getting married a miracle, Paw?

HOW SMUGGLERS WORK.

The Canadian Border Infested by Free Traders.

Smugglers? Thousands of them. They swarm along the Canadian border from ocean to ocean. It may be the track of a solitary sledge on the St. Lawrence, or a fishing schooner beating into a quiet bay where there are no fish; or, if you like, a well dressed woman hiding a fortune in gems in the rug with which she protects a silk pug from the cold as the train nears the frontier—the methods change from time to time, for in novelty ofttimes there is safety, but the smugglers, like the poor, are with us always.

The fact now is just what it has been ever since there has been population enough on both sides of the border to make the evasion of the tariff a paying business for adventurous spirits—Uncle Sam cannot police his long line of border fence, nor indeed do any more than make a poor bluff at it, and trust to the moral sense of the people for the rest. And when the fence isn't watched the almighty dollar crowds the moral sense of the people to the wall, and there's an end to it. Give the frontiersman a chance to smuggle and he will arrange the matter with his conscience.

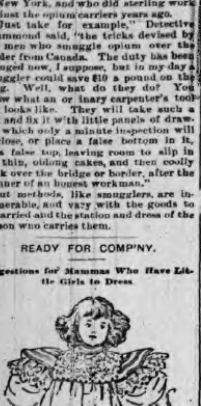
And how do smugglers smuggle? Well I put that question a day or two ago to A. L. Drummond, who used to be the head of the United States Secret Service in New York, and who did sterling work against the opium carriers years ago.

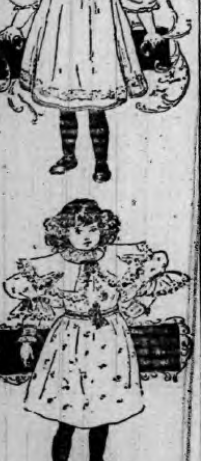
"Just take for example," Detective Drummond said, "the tricks devised by the men who smuggle opium over the border from Canada. The duty has been changed now, I suppose, but in my day a smuggler could save $10 a pound on the drug. Well, what do they do? You know what an ordinary carpenter's tool box looks like. They will take such a box and fix it with little panels of drawers, which only a minute inspection will disclose, or place a false bottom in it, or a false top, leaving room to slip in the thin, oblong cakes, and then coolly walk over the bridge or border, after the manner of an honest workman."

But methods, like smugglers, are innumerable, and vary with the goods to be carried and the station and dress of the person who carries them.

READY FOR COMP'NY.

Suggestions for Mammas Who Have Little Girls to Dress.





PUT UP ON THE MINISTER.

If He Hadn't Had the Tobacco Habit 'Twouldn't have Happened.

The clerks in the office were always on the alert to play some joke on Sniffles, the junior bookkeeper, and the strangest part of it was that they always managed to catch him unawares.

The other day the clerks loaded a tempting looking cigar with an apparently harmless explosive. It was graciously offered to Sniffles, who accepted it with profuse thanks, saying he would smoke it after dinner that evening.

It so happened that this very evening Sniffles' wife, who was a very religious woman, had invited the minister to dinner. The minister loved good cigars and Sniffles, knowing this, proudly asked him to have a cigar and unselfishly and innocently handed him the one which he had received that afternoon from the clerks in the office.

Sniffles' wife was pleased at her husband's generosity to the minister and looked on with pleasure as the minister contentedly lighted the cigar.

Suddenly there was a report, the minister fairly howled with terror, and the air was filled with smoke. Sniffles and his wife were surprised and shocked beyond expression.

"Heavens!" muttered Sniffles, "that's the work of those d——n clerks again."

The minister's face was red with rage. Half of his beautiful side whiskers had been singed and he looked a sight. He gave one terrible glance at Sniffles, then took his hat and departed.

"Never shall I enter this house again," he said with great emotion as he shut the door.

That night there was war in Sniffles' house. His wife accused him of having loaded the cigar on purpose in order to drive the minister away. All his explanations were in vain and now Sniffles and his wife have ceased to speak.

The clerks are still wondering whether Sniffles smoked that cigar, but he is so silent about the matter that they can't get anything out of him.

COUNCIL GOES OUT.

Hears the Balance of Reports and Winds up Affairs.

ITS RECORD A SHINING MARK.

During the Year by Prudent Management the City's Needs Have Been Thoroughly Filled, and the Accounts Are Closed With Balances in the Treasury—Fires, Arrests and Other Statistics, Fully Detailed.

The Plainfield Common Council for 1894 held its final session Jan. 4. All were present but Councilman Frazee.

A petition was received from citizens asking for a fire-alarm box at Watchung and Woodland avenues or Watchung and Belvidere avenues, as the nearest box to the petitioners was nearly half a mile away. This was filed with the City Clerk for reference to the next Council.

Andrew J. Gavett, Constructing Engineer, reported 17,411 feet of sewer laid, at a cost of $12 248.71. The amount of underdrain laid was 7,852 feet. He and the Sewer Committee recommended the early continuance of the work under additional contracts. The report was filed.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh reported that George R. Rockfellow was entitled to the office of constable.

Councilman Ginna reported that the special committee had conferred with the Board of Health in regard to sanitary plumbing and had framed an ordinance which was to be presented to the new Council. The committee was dissolved.

The Alms Committee report showed that 68 persons had received aid during the year. The cost had been less than the previous year, which was attributed to the greater activity of church and other charitable societies and the careful supervision of all cases.

The annual report of the Finance Committee and the balance sheet of the year were submitted, and ordered published in the official papers. They are published in full in this issue of The Daily Press, and show a balance to the credit of the departments and a highly gratifying condition of the municipal finances.

Chairman Dumont explained that the general fund was about $8,000 better off than a year ago, owing to the collection of $4,000 more of delinquent taxes than in previous years and economy in expenditure and saving money on the several appropriations.

The proposed rules and regulations of the fire department being still incomplete, they were referred back to the Board of Engineers.

All pending applications for fire-alarm boxes were referred to the incoming Council.

Chief Engineer T. O. Doane in his annual report stated the number of firemen to be as follows: 153 members, 1 chief, 2 assistant engineers, 4 foremen, 8 assistant foremen, 1 engineer of steamer, 5 drivers and 114 privates. Two members had been expelled, 2 resigned, 1 died and 1 new member was elected. He recommended the addition of a tillerman to the staff, as often the truck was seriously delayed awaiting the arrival of someone competent to manage the tiller. During the year 16 lengths of hose had burst, and the hose was in the following condition: 5,150 feet total; 2,500 in good condition; 650 fair; 2,000 poor. Engine-house at 208-212 West Second street was in good order, having been remodeled and repaired at an expense of $725; it might need a new tin roof soon. The enginehouse at 147-153 East Second street was new and in splendid condition. The fires of the year were as follows: Total alarms 60, an increase of 25 over the previous year; cause unknown, 13; defective flue, 13; defective stovepipe, 1; burning paper, 1; boiler, 2; lightning, 1; celluloid comb, 1; wad from cannon, 1; overheated stove, 5; acid, 1; electric light wire, 1; oily rags, 1; out of town, 3; lamp explosion, 4; false alarms, 4; box of ashes, 2; tree afire, 1; sparks from locomotive, 2; children and matches, 2; brush heap, 1. Though this is a greater number of fires than in any previous year since the city acquired the department, the losses were comparatively small, because of the first-class equipment and the quick responses to alarms. It was hard to tell at a fire which company the men were members of, as they all worked together to attain one end, to put out the fire and put it out quick. Chief Doane reported 231 hydrants, 21 having been added during the year. The average hydrant pressure was seventy-four pounds, but at Netherwood Heights the pressure was only about 40 lbs. The Chief recommended placing an alarm gong at the pumping station, and that No. 1's horse be exchanged for a more satisfactory one. He renewed his previous recommendation for a chemical engine, and pointed out that during the year 22 fires had been put out by chemical extinguishers alone. As Fire Marshal Mr. Doane had made 400 inspections of buildings, cellars and ash-heaps, and had removed many causes for danger. Fire escapes were needed on several buildings, and an ordinance requiring them should be passed. Fire apparatus should be established in the West End, and the reduction in insurance rates would more than offset the increase in taxes. The loss during the year on buildings was $3,015 20, covered by insurance of $79 915; loss on contents, $6,674; insurance, $42,900; total amount of insurance involved, $122,815; collected, $9,689.20. Uninsured property to the extent of $18,000 had been saved during the year—one building of $10,000, and about $8,000 of furniture chiefly owned by poor families whose little all it was. The Chief thanked Manager Charles W. Runyon of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company for his kind and valuable advice and help on the fire alarm system, the Council for providing such an admirable equipment, and the Corporation Counsel for his valuable legal advice. He urged better restriction of the stringing of wires on poles.

Chief of Police George W. Grant reported the total number of police as 38, 8 regulars and 30 specials, one regular having resigned because of ill health. Their duties, he remarks, have been performed in a worthy manner. The total number of arrests was 529: 505 white, 24 colored. Of these 493 were men, 36 women. They are classified as follows: For being drunk and disorderly, 60; drunkenness, 76; disorderly conduct, 202; larceny, 15; violation of hack ordinance, 6; violation of street ordinance, 1; violation of liquor ordinance, 7; violation of bicycle ordinance, 30; gambling, 1; disorderly house, 5; fast driving, 3; peddler's license, 15; riding on trains, 68; assault, 3; non-support, 2; vagrancy, 2; contempt of court, 1; fugitive from justice, 1; miscellaneous, 31. Of these prisoners, 193 were fined, 170 had sentence suspended, 93 were sent to the county jail for periods ranging from 10 to 60 days, 9 were held for the grand jury, 35 were discharged, 1 was sentenced to State Prison, 18 were held to keep the peace, 4 cases were appealed, 1 was held on requisition papers, and five are unsettled.

The report of Street Commissioner Robert A. Meeker, which was published in full in The Daily Press of yesterday, was presented, and not read because it had already been read in the paper. Mr. Dumont criticized the fact of publication being made before the report was submitted to the Council. Mr. Fisk laughed and said it was a case of the reporters getting ahead of the Council.

Mr. Erickson reported that the last of the old fire bonds had been paid, and there was no further outstanding indebtedness. The trust mortgage was ordered cancelled.

After a recess in which the Clerk wrote his minutes of the session, they were adopted, and the Council adjourned. At the closing moment Mr. Ginna put through a vote of thanks to President See for his courteous and gratifying administration of the year, and to the Clerk for his satisfactory work. Mr. See in turn thanked the Councilmen for their labors, and congratulated the city on the success and progress of the year. He spoke of the immense amount of business done in committee, and complimented the committees on their work.

A LITTLE GIRL'S DEATH.

JOSIE COOK KILLED BY A ROYAL BLUE TRAIN.

The Little Girl Heedlessly Stepped in Front of a Flying Express and Was Frightfully Mangled.

Little Josie Cook, the 11-year-old daughter of Mrs. Ida Cook who lives in Palladelphia, met with a terrible death Friday afternoon, being struck by the west-bound Royal Blue flyer at 4:45.

Josie and her cousin, Mabel Ayers, who is a few years her senior, were making a short cut across the Central tracks going toward Lafayette place and taking the path back of Cadmus's milk. They were obliged to wait for the passage of an east-bound coal train the noise of which was such that they did not hear the roar of the flyer which was going at 60 miles an hour to make up lost time.

Little Josie started to run to the other side and before Mabel's cry of warning could be heard.

Her little body was hurled through the air with frightful force and struck between the tracks. Horror-stricken Mabel not realizing the awful truth ran to the Ayers home on Spooner avenue and told them Josie was hurt by the train.

The anxious grandparents hurried at once to the track, first, however, sending Mabel to Muhlenberg Hospital nearby for a stretcher. Josie did not live until the stretcher arrived. A sheet mercifully hid the mutilated little body from view, and the grief-stricken relatives notified the undertaker.

Little Josie was a great favorite in Hope Chapel Sunday-school, where she appeared at their Christmas entertainment as an angel. Her mother in Philadelphia was at once notified, and arrived at a late hour last night.

The sad affair has cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood. The engineer claims he did not see the accident and the train sped on. Great indignation is expressed at the fact that the little body lay where it fell until the arrival of the undertaker about 8. Friends who attempted to move the remains to shelter were threatened with arrest if they touched the body. Officer McCue had charge of the body.

—The Christian Endeavor society of the Congregational Church is planning for a grand concert to be given in the church on Thursday evening, January 17. Instrumental and vocal music of a high order, together with recitations by Plainfield's talented elocutionist, Miss Addie Parker Jackson, will provide an evening of rare pleasure.

—The gymnasium in the new Y. M. C. A. building is almost completed, and will be opened about the middle of next week. Work will be commenced on the bowling alleys the first of next week.

PLAINFIELD LEADS.

Three Out of Four Suits Tried this Term are Plainfield Cases.

Four cases were tried at Elizabeth this week and three of them originated in Plainfield. Reed & Coddington won two of them—the suit of Frederick Durand against Meyer Lichtintritt, and Andrew Love, receiver, against Robert McNabb; and Craig A. Marsh won the other for Augustus Frazee against George Frazee. Three other Plainfield cases were postponed until next term.

Heart Prizes.

A card club, composed of a number of young people of Plainfield and North Plainfield, met Thursday evening at the residence of S. P. Smith of Central avenue. Progressive hearts was the game enjoyed, and after an exciting game the prizes were awarded. The first feminine prize, a silver belt buckle, was won by Miss Bessie Baldwin. Miss Lillian Glenn received second prize, a silver nail-file. Allen Taylor received first masculine prize, a silver lead pencil; Seymour P. Smith, Jr., received second, a pair of silver cuff buttons.

Those who attended were Miss Bessie Baldwin, Miss Lillian Glenn, Miss Lillian Schoonmaker, Miss Elsie Jobes, Miss Florence Serrell, Miss Clara Long, Miss Percy Emmons, Miss Ethel Green, Volney V. Green, Clifford Crane, Seymour P. Smith, Jr., Geo. F. Smith, Sydney R. Titsworth, Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr., Allen Taylor and Fred Smith.

After refreshments had been served dancing was in order for the rest of the evening.

Negotiating for Netherwood.

J. Fred MacDonald, the real-estate hustler who is always working for Plainfield's best interests, is engineering a transfer of the Hotel Netherwood property.

The prospective purchaser is Mr. Noble, a hotel manager of wide experience, operating a hotel in Lakewood and one in Asbury Park. The Latimer estate, Charles Hyde, John Ludlum, W. P. Smith, the City National Bank, E. R. Pope, and G. W. Rockfellow, are the owners about to transfer the property to Mr. Noble.

The property cost $250,000, and it is understood Mr. Noble will acquire it for $100,000. The deal will be closed in a short time.

Sympathy for John Ulrich.

District Deputy Sears and staff installed the newly-elected officers of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., last evening, in a beautiful and impressive manner, after which the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the sympathy of this Lodge be and the same is hereby extended unto Brother John Ulrich, Past Grand Chancellor of the K. of P., a member of this Lodge, in this hour of his affliction, and that our earnest prayer is that he may be speedily restored to his usual health.

Petition Against Bock.

A petition is being signed against the granting of Charles Bock's application for a license on Somerset street. The reasons for the protest are stated to be the nearness of the location to other barrooms, and because there is no public necessity for another hotel.

REPORT

OF THE

City Treasurer,

FOR THE YEAR 1894

CASH ACCOUNT.

Balance on hand Jan. 1, 1894, as follows:

FIRST NATIONAL BANK.

General Fund	$ 246 33
Peace street opening	1,214 60
License trust fund	15 00
Fire Department	4,680 63
		$6,156 56

CITY NATIONAL BANK.

Library	1,257 57
Poor Fund	2,619 66	$3,[illegible]	$[illegible] 79

RECEIPTS.

STATE AND COUNTY TAXES.

1881	7 44
1882	7 24
1883	15 80
1884	19 32
1885	20 07
1886	22 77
1887	16 55
1888	41 26
1889	103 67
1890	65 18
1891	215 49
1892	3,200 95
1893	8,126 86
1894	44,480 75
		$[illegible]

CITY TAXES.

1881	1 42
1882	20 [illegible]
1883	19 90
1884	21 05
1885	29 01
1886	27 48
1887	20 59
1888	38 95
1889	75 75
1890	49 59
1891	147 74
1892	1,059 23
1893	5,364 90
1894	27,265 40
		$34,[illegible] 28

FIRE DEPARTMENT TAXES.

1888	8 55
1889	21 82
1890	11 96
1891	39 91
1892	745 75
1893	2,325 21
1894	13,456 21
		$ 16,[illegible] 21
		$117,[illegible]

POOR FUND TAXES.

1881	[illegible]
1882	[illegible]
1883	[illegible]
1884	[illegible]
1885	[illegible]
1886	[illegible]
1887	[illegible]
1888	[illegible]
1889	[illegible]
1890	[illegible]
1891	[illegible]
1892	[illegible]
1893	[illegible]
1894	3,[illegible] 29	$ 3,817 30

LIBRARY TAXES.

1881	[illegible]
1882	[illegible]
1883	[illegible]
1884	[illegible]
1885	[illegible]
1886	[illegible]
1887	[illegible]
1888	[illegible]
1889	[illegible]
1890	[illegible]
1891	[illegible]
1892	[illegible]
1893	[illegible]
1894	2,4[illegible] 74	$ 3,[illegible]

Fines and Dues, Library Fund		$ 208 12
Penalties, Delinqu't Taxes, General Fund	$ 2,686 98
Judgment, General Fund	1,183 40
Dog Tax,	[illegible]
Dog Registry, Gen. Fund	128 56
State, Railroad and Canal Tax, General Fund	[illegible]
Board of Education, Gen. Fund	13,[illegible]
Fines from City Judge, General Fund	735 30
Peace Street Widening, General Fund	[illegible]
Interest on Peace Street Widening, Gen. Fund	6 38
From Board of Education, their proportion for collecting taxes, 1893, 903 13, 1894, 902 48, General Fund	1,805 60
Orchard Place Opening, General Fund	98 11
Interest on Orchard Place Opening, Gen. Fund	18 28	$ [illegible]
Fire Dept., Sale Gazelle Engine No. 1	$ 1,000 00
Sale Manure	25 00
Profit on exchange of horses	25 00
Sale of bell and gong	625 00	1,675 00
Printing, Stationery and Advertising repaid by applicants for liquor license		$ 96 25
Bills Payable, Gen. Fund	$28,500 00
Fire Fund	14,300 00
Poor Fund	2,500 00
Sewer Fund	12,000 00	$ [illegible]

LICENSES.

Liquor	$ 9,050 00
Hack, Peddler and Show	1,043 00
Board of Health	116 00	$ [illegible]

SUBSCRIPTIONS.

Subscriptions by property owners for street improvements	$ [illegible]
	$213,[illegible]

DISBURSEMENTS.

STREETS.

Paid by City	$11,401 95
Paid by subscriptions	588 76
		$11,990 71

Distributed as follows:

Labor	$8,045 76
Crushed stone	1,877 64
Tools and suppl's	119 96
Blacksmithing	134 68
Crosswalks	509 23
Culverts	1,108 90
Rent	60 00
Surveying	15 00
Water	58 50
Expense	22 06
Sewer Basins	39 28
	$11,990 71

Peace street opening—return of assessment	$	797 [illegible]
Preliminary work on sewers		239 [illegible]
Constructing sewers		12,248 71
Street lights		9,644 [illegible]

POLICE.

Regular police	$8,290 15
Special	612 08
Clothing for police	171 54
Station house	295 69
	$	9,[illegible]

MISCELLANEOUS EXPENSES.

Printing, stationery and advertis'g		$1,349 12
Town clock winding		7 50
Postage, etc		198 55
Office Janitor	72 00
Council Janitor	106 53	[illegible]
Bank discount		451 [illegible]
Legal expenses		365 14
Rent Council room and offices		600 00
Dog pound		[illegible]
Election expenses		1,062 01
Board of Health		955 96
City Court rent		144 00
Commissioners of Appeal		18 00
State and county taxes		56,779 [illegible]
Board of Education		12,328 [illegible]
Return of taxes paid in error to N. Messerschmidt		[illegible]

SALARIES AND COMMISSIONS.

Assessor	$1,000 00
Collector	1,500 00
Delinquent Tax Collector	982 92
Treasurer	700 01
Street Commissioner	1,750 01
Accountant	50 00
City Clerk	700 01
City Auditor	165 32
Corporation Counsel	1,000 00
City Judge	600 00
		8,449 27

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Running expenses—
Salaries	$3,985 94
Extra help	124 60
Repairs to bu'ld's	1,189 14
" " appar's	294 87
Supplies	746 50
Keep of horses	989 77
Rent of building	98 75
Rent of horses	30 00
Lights	371 96
Fire alarm	463 27
Printing	41 20
Interest & disc'nt	208 75
Equipments	65 29
Incidentals	907 19
Fuel	391 80
		9,895 00
Other expenses—
Hydrants	$3,356 50
Three fire bonds	1,500 00
1600 ft new hose	1,076 75
Improvements to fire-alarm and new boxes 21, 25, 46	809 21
		7,842 07
			17,740 07
Poor fund			4,122 53
Library			2,198 97
Bills payable—
General fund		$28,500 00
Fire department		17,400 00
Poor fund		1,500 00
			47,400 00
			$200,604 [illegible]
Dec. 31, balance—
First National Bank:
General fund	$5,406 27
Peace St. opening	391 05
Lic'se trust fund	15 00
Fire department	2,275 77
Poor fund	6 50
		8,094 59
City National Bank:
Poor fund	$1,985 74
Library	2,890 02
Sewer	751 29
		5,[illegible] 05
			13,[illegible] 64
			$213,625 65

A. TITSWORTH, City Treasurer.

J. T. MACMURRAY, City Auditor.

December 31, 1894.

CITY OF PLAINFIELD.

Balance Sheet, December 31, 1894.

GENERAL FUND.

Assets—
Cash—Peace St. ope'ng fund	$ 391 05
License trust fund	15 00
General account	5,406 27
			5,812 32
Uncollected taxes 1882 to 1894 inclusive	$58,785 13
Assessments Peace street widening	180 82
Assessments sundries	686 26
Uncollected North avenue sewer rentals	75 00
			59,707 21
			$65,519 53
Liabilities—
Bills payable	$11,500 00
Contributions—
Peace St. op'ng	391 05
License fees overpaid	15 00
		11,906 05
Surplus		53,613 48
			$65,519 53

POOR FUND.

Assets—
Cash		$1,992 [illegible]
Uncollected taxes 1891-94 inclusive		1,343 54
		$3,[illegible] 78
Liabilities—
Bills payable	$1,000 00
Surplus	2,245 78
		$3,[illegible] 78

LIBRARY.

Assets—
Cash	2,890 02
Uncollected taxes 1891-94 inclusive	1,112 29
	$4,002 31
Surplus	$4,002 31

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

Assets—
Cash		$2,275 77
Uncollected taxes 1888-94 inclusive		8,342 60
Real Estate, Eng. House No. 1	9,550.00
Department headquarters	13,405.82
		$22,955 82
Equipment		12,[illegible]
Fire alarm system		5,486 08
			51,[illegible]
Liabilities—
Bills payable		4,000.00
Surplus		47,[illegible]
			$51,[illegible]

ROYAL

BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

FAIREST OF THE FAIR.

A Brilliant Gathering Does Honor to the Mayor's Wife.

The beautiful mansion of Mayor Gilbert was once more transformed to a bower of beauty Tuesday afternoon, the occasion being the last of the delightful series of receptions and "at homes" given by the popular hostesses, Mrs. Gilbert and her sister, Miss Alice Randolph.

The large reception hall drawing room, parlors and banquet room were a perfect vision of pink—indeed, so beautiful was the rare profusion of pink pinks and pink roses massed in enormous vases, banked in convenient corners or clustered with graceful effect on mantelpiece and table, and all enhanced by the genial presence of the artistically gowned hostesses and her guests that it would be difficult to imagine a more beautiful picture set in a fairer frame.

The guests who assembled to honor Mrs. Gilbert and Miss Randolph numbered over two hundred and fifty and the happy party of friends—for such in truth it was—did not fail to express to their entertainers the unbounded pleasure afforded them in being present.

Mrs. Walter Stewart assisted in receiving, and presiding at the samovars of tea and chocolate were Mrs. Fredrick G. Mead, Mrs. A. C. Baldwin, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna and Mrs. B. Arrowsmith Hegeman. Flitting in and out among the guests were Miss Bessie Ginna, Miss Grace Cooley, Miss Sadie VanBoskerck and Miss Marion Dumont, four beautiful young women, who gracefully assisted in making light the pleasant duties of the artists at the table. A more successful function could not have been given than this last "at home". An unusually large number of men did honor to the occasion, and the affair will be long and pleasantly treasured in the memory of all who participated.

PLAINFIELD'S STREETS.

Annual Report of Robert A. Meeker, Commissioner.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

The following is the amount of flagging and curbing laid and set during the year:

Name of St. or Ave.	Side-walks.	Curb-ing.
Plainfield avenue	2680	1670
West Eighth street	280	280
Liberty street	1380	930
Central avenue	630	625
Madison avenue	440	280
Arlington avenue	310	210
West Fourth street		525
Park avenue	80	180
West Front street	1430	1450
West Third street	650	650
Watchung avenue	410	70
Hillside avenue	210
Third place	320
East Fourth street	140	250
East Sixth street	50
East Third street	1500	2000
Richmond street	265	250
LaGrande avenue	1180
Second street	1060	200
Total	13015	9550

The moneys expended on the streets of the City of Plainfield during the year 1894 were as follows, viz:

Labor	$8,045 76
Crushed stone	1,877 64
Tools and suppl's	119 06
Blacksmithing	134 68
Crosswalks	506 93
Culverts	1,108 80
Rent	60 00
Surveying	15 00
Water	58 50
Expense	22 06
Sewer basins	39 28
		$11,990 71
Amount received from assessments and sale of old material		600 76
Leaving am't expended by city		$11,389 95

Respectfully submitted,
R. A. MEEKER,
Street Commissioner.

OBITUARY.

Henry McLean.

In the death of Henry McLean of Liberty street, which occurred Wednesday, Plainfield loses an excellent citizen. He had been ill for the past eight weeks with Bright's disease, a great sufferer.

Mr. McLean was sixty-four years old, and had been in the employ of Charles Potter twenty-four years, having engaged with him in Norwich in 1871. Later on he worked for him in Hope Valley. He came to Plainfield between 15 and 16 years ago, and has resided here since that time. He had charge of the gear-cutting department at Potters, and was highly esteemed by his employer as a good workman. The only society of which he was a member was the Potter Press Works Aid Society. He was a regular attendant of the First Methodist Episcopal Church.

A widow, Sarah McLean, one daughter, Maggie, and two sons, Harry and James, survive him.

—The Ladies Aid Society of the Park Avenue Baptist Church cleared over $50 for their treasury, by the Brown Glee Club concert.

DURAND WINS.

Awarded $200 Damages, and Given a Complete Vindication.

Another Plainfield case was decided in Elizabeth Thursday. Frederick Durand of Plainfield sued the Sherman Outfitting Company and its manager for damages for false arrest and imprisonment. The case, as the testimony showed, was as follows:

Durand had purchased of the Sherman Outfitting Company some furniture under the installment plan. He was away in Canada for a while and the payments defaulted. The company took away the furniture. Durand on returning home was incensed, and went to the store. The manager was not in, but Durand expressed his wrath freely, and made the remark "that he had friends in Plainfield and would get even with the company" The next night or very soon after a plate glass window was broken in the store by some one throwing a stone through it. The manager suspected Durand of this offense because of his threat, and an hour after the breaking saw him on the street and ordered a policeman to look him up. Without a warrant the policeman undertook to take Durand to the station house, but in passing where he lived it was shown by several witnesses that he could not have committed the offense, as at the time the glass was broken he was downstairs in the saloon under the rooms where he lived.

The policeman let him go, but the manager of the company had a warrant issued for his arrest. Durand was held until he got bail, and when he was tried was acquitted, his alibi being conclusive

Judge VanSyckel granted a non-suit so far as the Sherman Outfitting Company was concerned, holding that it could not be held responsible for the unlawful act of its manager, as he was not authorized to cause Durand's arrest.

The case was proceeded, and finished yesterday.

The jury were out some time, when they returned with a verdict for Durand, assessing his damages at $200. This award is against the manager of the company.

The company had no witnesses whatever against Mr. Durand, and instead gave him a complete vindication, stating that they would cheerfully publish his exoneration in all the papers. This vindication he feels to be of more value than all the damages.

Reform Club Installation.

The new officers of the Reform Club were installed last Thursday by H. N. Spencer. The attendance was unusually large, and a very enjoyable time was furnished. Following are the officers installed:

President—W C Smith.
1st Vice-president—M F Marcley.
2d " " —E B Titsworth.
3d " " —E Lanphear.
Sergeant-at-Arms—W C Smith, Jr.
1st Marshal—John Hennessy.
2d " —George Rockafellow.
Financial Secretary—J W A Bauersachs.
Treasurer—J D Spicer.
Recording Secretary—W B Ayers.

The committees appointed by President Smith were:

Executive Committee—A M Vanderbeek, H N Spencer, Joseph Hubbard, Jacob Voehl, L Coddington.

Speaking Committee—J King, E B Titsworth, M F Marcley.

Printing Committee—J W A Bauersachs, Wm Ayers, John King.

The president was allowed one month to appoint a Finance Committee.

After the business had been transacted all adjourned to another part of the hall, where excellent refreshments were served by the women.

Grand Officers Install.

A special convocation of Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M. was held Friday evening, at which Dr. H. O. Wagoner of Somerville, Grand King of the Grand Royal Arch Chapter of New Jersey, and Joshua Doughty, Past High Priest of Keystone Chapter, Somerville, installed the newly elected officers. The Marked Masters Degree was conferred on two members. There was a large delegation of the home chapter present, also a number of visitors which included Robert Day, Stewart Hoffman, T. H. Hoffman, John Ringleman, and Richard Brokaw of Somerville; C. C. Howard formerly of Massachusetts, and F. K. Van Auken of Washington, D. C. At the close of the ceremonies all were invited to the banquet hall where a sumptuous supper was served.

High Priest—C. H. Rugg.
King—C. M. Ulrich.
Scribe—D. C. Adams.
Captain of Host—W. H. Sebring.
Principal Sojourner—Henry Woodland.
Royal Arch Captain—Edward Nelson.
Grand Master Three Veil—W. E. Alpaugh.
Grand Master Two Veil—C. H. Westphal.
Grand Master One Veil—J. T. Odam.
Treasurer—Henry Leifke.
Secretary—B. F. Coriell.
Chaplain—E. M. Rodman.
Tyler—I. D. TenEyck.

Shot in the Hip.

Harry Dodwell, the seventeen-year-old son of Conductor Dodwell of the Central, while removing a revolver from his pocket New Year's morning caught the hammer, discharged the weapon, and received the bullet in his hip. Dr. Brakeley found the bullet imbedded in the fleshy part of the thigh. The plucky young man started for school after the operation.

E. C. Stahl, President of the New Jersey Editorial Association, has been induced by friends to allow his name to be used in connection with the commandership of the Department of New Jersey, G. A. R., the election for which will take place at the annual meeting of the Department in Trenton, February 7. He has been an active member in the G. A. R. for the last twenty-two years, and his aspirations for this high office are based solely on his services in the field and in the order. He deserves winning votes.

The municipal matter most talked of in Plainfield today is the report of the councilmanic committee on the water supply, published exclusively in The Daily Press of last Saturday. That portion which speaks so broadly of the danger of contamination is severely criticized. The committee is blamed by many for going so broadly into the details of that portion of their investigations. And there are those who hold that the committee are inconsistent. These point out that a short time ago the Councilmen were arguing (for the sake of getting the people reconciled to the filtration idea for sewage disposal) that sewage became by filtration a harmless and palatable liquid, whereas now they hold that the water supply, procured from deep wells whose source they say is Springfield, is endangered by the surface, cesspool and cemetery germs, in spite of the filteration through the earth. Regarding the claim that the company has no right to divert the Plainfield water to other places, the query is now put if Springfield cannot step forward and object to Plainfield's pumping away for her own sole use the water that the committee acknowledges comes from Springfield. These and many other arguments and criticisms are being discussed by the householders who have found no fault with the Water Supply Company for supplying Plainfield with the cheapest public water service in the country, and who object to having the world told what they do not believe, that the water they are drinking from the Plainfield mains is likely to become unfit for use just because other towns than Plainfield are drawing from the wells and opening up underground channels for the freer passage of the "subterranean river" which we have been boasting could supply all New York. The people do not take kindly to this shattering of their aqueous idol.

The gratification of accomplishing important progress for its town is the continual happy portion of The Daily Press, and it is with satisfaction that this the people's paper views the prospect for trolley railroad extension in the early Spring. Through all the past year The Press has been untiring in its agitation of this great public improvement, and the trolley warfare it has maintained has been effective. While such public-spirited men as ex-Councilman Spangenberg have been abroad looking up capital to invest in the road and in Plainfield, The Daily Press has been developing local patriotism here at home, and by its articles and arguments and urgings has fostered the growth of the enterprise. It has been no easy matter to overcome prejudice and bring heedless property-holders to understand the merits of the trolley in town-building, and the task of The Press has required courageous and patient persistence. The entire people have at last been brought to realize that unless Plainfield speedily provides popular rapid transit throughout its parts she will fall behind in the suburban competition for home-seekers from the metropolis. And, while this has been accomplishing at home, and the landowners have been shown that they must welcome and help the trolley extension project if they want their property developed and increased in value, Mr. Spangenberg has been negotiating with trolley builders and has found a capitalist who is ready to begin and push the work as soon as the town fathers say the word. The fact of his securing a desirable party for the work has already been recorded in this paper. Mr. Spangenberg first sought to get the Plainfield company to make the extensions, but says that their apathy forced him to the conclusion that they did not mean business, and he was obliged for the town's best interests to look elsewhere. When he announced in The Press that his search for a town-builder had been successful, and that the Mayor and Council were considering the plans of the capitalist whom he had procured, he found the Plainfield company developing unwonted activity, and, as he expressed it, now that others were after the franchise the Plainfield company were getting anxious. The Council will of course receive all applications that may come before it, and the people trust them to grant the franchise to the applicant whose pledges are most advantageous to Plainfield's interests. The capitalist who has been interested by Mr. Spangenberg wants only one concession, and that is that he be given the exclusive franchise for a term of years. This he insists on because he purposes to invest heavily in Plainfield, and too brief a contract, or competition, would prevent him from getting adequate return for his money. The entire matter is now under careful consideration by the Councilmen, and early in the year action will be taken. Meanwhile, agents are active in applying for rights of way, and the Plainfield company claims to have secured all that are necessary. Plainfield's four corners should most certainly be provided for by local trolley branches before the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company acquire a thoroughfare through the place. Plainfield must give its present population a cheap and pleasant medium for getting about before she can hope to acquire much greater growth.

NEW YEAR THOUGHTS

WHAT THE DAY HAS BEEN AND IS NOW.

The Superstitions and the Calling Practice—Why the Custom of Making Calls Has Abated—A Day of Freshness and Recovered Hope.

NEW YEAR'S DAY, though not Jan. 1 always, has been celebrated religiously or socially from time immemorial. The ancient Romans consecrated it to Janus, who, it was thought, controlled all beginnings and made sacrifices to him. They exchanged gracious greetings and wishes and gave presents to friends and kindred. The church condemned its social observations and turned it into a religious festival. The Hebrews, the Chinese and other peoples, pagans and nonpagans, regard it superstitiously, attaching the utmost importance to its celebration.

We Americans in the last quarter of the nineteenth century are supposed to be wholly free from superstition. But are we? Not a few of us still imagine that there is something auspicious in New Year's day; that as we begin the year we may so close it. We are solicitous, therefore, to resolve to relinquish bad habits then, under the impression that we shall relinquish them altogether. In other words, we determine on that day to turn over a new leaf, as we have probably determined for many previous years, and there our determination and reformation end. This is exactly the way the old Romans acted more than 20 centuries since, which proves that we have not advanced much in reasonableness, despite our assumptions to the contrary. It is a problem whether men who continue in mature life to yield to their weaknesses or fail to rectify their faults are capable of correcting themselves Whether capable or incapable, they rarely do so. Their good resolutions seldom bear fruit. They terminate, for the most part, in words, in promises to themselves, in mockeries of performance. What a man is at 40 he is apt to remain. No amount of New Year's re*solves will help him who is not full of* virtuous endeavor. Jan. 1 dawns brightly to the mind, but the succeeding days conclude dismally as to achievement. Nevertheless its recurrence must ever be pleasant. If it does not bring accomplishment, it at least brings hope, and hope nerves us to bear our burdens, to discharge our duties. Then welcome New Year's. We dearly love to think that the cares and troubles of the old year, which so largely spring from our temperament, will not invade the new one.

Originally New Year's was intended not for a universal, miscellaneous calling day, without motive or propriety, into which it ultimately degenerated. It was intended for a day when men who had been prevented during the year by business or any condition of circumstances from keeping up their friendship or acquaintance with women they liked or esteemed should make social atonement for apparent neglect and renew their pleasant relations. The idea was excellent and commendable, as was the custom, and before this city grew to be such a Babylon the calls were agreeable, often delightful, to makers and receivers. But the city became too big, and the community that assumed to represent society in some manner, more or less remote, became too heterogeneous. The custom was grossly abused. Many men and women thought only of the number of calls, ignoring quality for quantity, and sometimes the scenes indoors and outdoors waxed disreputable from overindulgence.

The better sort of people, repelled by the license prevalent, refused to "receive" any longer. The smart set who had long believed calling too "common"—they declared, with their pretense of superiority, that it had grown vulgar—set themselves and their influence firmly against it. They refused to see visitors on that day and soon after shut up their houses and fled to the country, thus setting the seal of fashion on their last decision, which speedily met with social approval. The fact was that respectable folk had got tired of the extreme to which calling had been carried, and the coarse, objectionable class could not sustain it alone. So the whole thing fell to pieces here, and there is no probability of its reconstruction in the immediate future.

The custom extended long ago to other cities and is still followed. But as the metropolis makes the mode its duration is doubtful. New Year's is yet a holiday—holidays are always whole*some—and business of all* kinds is suspended. Sons, husbands, fathers, now stay at home, instead of racing about town, tiring and boring themselves to little purpose, and they are gainers, along with their families, by the change. New Year's in its old guise has passed away. But New Year's with its quiet, domestic accompaniments has come to remain. The world moves. And New Year's is still New Year's, with its sense of freshness, repose and recovered hope.

CHARLES APPLEBEE.

New York.

THE NEW AND THE OLD

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE ON THE LESSONS OF THE DAY.

He Suggests Turning Back Old Leaves Instead of Turning Over New—The New Year Fetich—A Fitting Present—A Welcome Call.

The old year is dead. Long live the new! Jan. 1 is not materially different from any other day of the year, but it seems the more important because it appeals to our hope and our imagination.

Such hosts of people have a kind of superstition concerning Jan. 1 that it might be called, as April 1 is, All Fools' day.

The greatest "call" ever made in the western hemisphere was not on Jan. 1, but on Oct. 12, 1492, when Columbus discovered a new world.

An old proverb says, "What you are on New Year's day you will always be." This, in a sense, is true, but it is equally true of any other day.

Nature would seem to be opposed to the custom of calling on New Year's, since she generally makes the day very unpleasant, as if to discourage the practice.

The Romans dedicated January to the god Janus, who was represented as two faced. To be two faced is to be hypocritical. Did they intend to intimate, satirical rogues, that the people who made vis*its, exchanged presents and good wishes* were insincere and double dealing?

An analytic New Yorker, who used to make it a duty to pay social visits on Jan. 1, when such visits were in vogue, arose one New Year's morning determined to "call on his friends." The phrase set his analytic faculties in motion, and he concluded that he had but one friend. So he staid at home and called on himself.

The most fitting present perhaps we could make on New Year's would be to give the devil his due.

The old Romans named the presents exchanged on New Year's strenæ, whose derivative meaning is strength. If we could only give strength on this day to our weak fellow mortals, what a blessing it would be to them and to us and all the world!

Strenia was a Roman goddess who, according to Augustine, gave cheerfulness to work and also presided over New Year's presents. If any goddess could give cheerfulness to work in this discontented age, how many statues we should raise to her and how zealously we should invoke her influence!

This is the day when many of us who perceive that we have committed various follies and are generally derelict to our obligations believe that we ought to turn over a new leaf. We do turn it over repeatedly, but if we examine the new leaves impartially we will find that they are no improvement on the old. This is likely to irritate us and to make us think that we do about as well as we can anyhow. We are all inclined to believe when our will is weak that circumstances have conspired against us. It is astonishing how much we help circumstances.

Turning over a new leaf is usually little else than making promises to ourselves that we never keep.

We forget at each recurrence of the New Year that it will soon be the old year, and that at its close most of what we meant to do will still remain undone.

New Year's is a day when most of us hastily review the previous 12 months with an ardent prejudice in our own favor. We decide, on the whole, that we have been pretty good fellows, readily forgetting or explaining our errors of omission and commission. But such slight infringements as we have made of morals and rectitude we resolve to correct, and we are so satisfied with our resolve that we seldom attempt to alter our conduct at all.

If a man, instead of turning over a new leaf on New Year's, would turn back some of the old leaves on any day, read them without bias and take them to heart, he would become stronger and better.

The majority of us make a fetich of New Year's. We decorate it with crimson patches of vain regrets and tawdy rags of hollow repentance and declare ourselves reformed.

Everything new appeals to us as opposed to and different from the old. And we naturally, though unwisely, expect from this New Year what the old has not brought, unconscious that the new will not bring it either.

The fact that every people from the ancient Egyptians down to the practical Americans have either worshiped or observed New Year's is merely added evidence that the whole human family lives on hope. Hope is a divinity enshrined in every heart, whose very pulsations depend on such enshrinement.

It is not strange that the citizens of this republic have looked with dissatisfaction and disfavor on 1894, one of the hardest, gloomiest, most disastrous years in our recent history. We have reason this time to welcome New Year's as the harbinger of better days, as an earnest of prosperity and content. It is entirely safe to say that 1895 cannot be worse than its predecessor.

Since people have ceased to make calls on this day they remain at home, they declare, and get acquainted with their own families. If they should get better acquainted with themselves, it might be well, but it would scarcely add to their gratification.

Instead of talking today about turning over a new leaf, which must be by this time a pretty old leaf, we should perform some act of kindness, some deed of humanity. One such performance is worth a thousand promises.

To begin the year with uniform courtesy and consideration for every one with whom we come in contact is the fittest observation of the ever welcome day.

If we would all try to do what little good we can for those more unfortunate than ourselves, the New Year would be better than our most sanguine expectations depict it.

The old year is always as much discredited and condemned as the New Year is overrated and idealized.

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

Puritans Worked on New Year's.

The sole record of the observance of the New Year by the Pilgrims in the new world named New England was most prosaic, most brief, "We went to work betimes." Many of the good Puritan ministers thought the celebration or even notice of the day in any way savored of improper and un-Christian reverence for the heathen god Janus. Yet these English settlers came from a land where New Year's eve and New Year's day were second in importance and in domestic observance only to Christmas. Throughout every English county New Year's eve was always celebrated; in many it was called by the pretty name of Singing e'en, from the custom which obtained of singing the last of the Christmas carols at that time.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.

From the New York Sun of February 5, 1894.

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the va*riety of drugs and prescriptions thus pre*pared was extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homœopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. New as the use of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled and careful apothecaries and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 SPRUCE ST., NEW YORK.

MEN WANTED To take orders. No delivering or collecting. Experience not necessary; steady employment; best terms; write at once and secure choice of territory. ALLEN NURSERY CO., Rochester, N.Y.

A HINDOO POEM.

A Hindoo died—a happy thing to do—
When fifty years united to a shrew.
Released, he hopefully for entrance cries
Before the Gates of Brahma's Paradise.
"Hast been through Purgatory?" Brahma said.
"I have been married!" and he hung his head.
"Come in! come in! and welcome, too, my son Married and Purgatory are as one."
In bliss extreme he entered Heaven's door,
And knew the bliss he had ne'er seen before.
He scarce had entered in the garden fair,
Another Hindoo asked admission there.
The self-same question Brahma asked again:
"Has been through Purgatory?" "No. What then?"
"Thou canst not enter!" did the god reply.
"He who went in was there no more than I."
"All that is true, but he has married been,
And so on earth has suffered for his sin."
"Married? 'Tis well, for I've been married twice."
"Begone! We'll have no fools in Paradise."
—Charles Hills.

OTERO AND THE CZAR.

Once Expelled by Him From Russia, She Now Returns in Splendid Style

Most persons who remember the first mania for Spanish dancing some four years ago have not forgotten Otero. After she left New York she appeared in Berlin, Paris, Vienna, and Budapest. In all four cities she was known as the diamond queen, because her neck, wrist and bodice were ablaze with gems whenever she danced. The German newspapers gave her and her diamonds columns of free advertising, but stopped short when informed that she had sold all her gems at auction for $37. The sale took place in Budapest about two years ago; the purchaser was a Hungarian soubrette. From that time until a few months ago little was heard of Otero. A few weeks ago, however, this paragraph went the rounds of the Berlin and Vienna dailies:

"We hear from Madrid: One of the celebrities who has come into public notice in connection with Alexander III's death and burial in St. Petersburg is our fellow country woman, Carolina Otero. She was expelled from Russia long ago because at a stag party given by a Grand Duke she gave a too life like representation of Truth, that is, she appeared in the costume of Eve before the fall. As is well known, she has been the favorite of whole families of princes and noblemen.

"After the Czar's funeral she took it for granted that the order expelling her from Russia would become a dead letter, and she started for St. Petersburg. In itself her journey would have passed unnoticed had not she herself made it a topic of the times by carrying it out with royal and theatrical splendor. Miss Otero rode away from Paris in a special train consisting of a hotel car, a first class carriage, and a baggage van. The train was to stop only for changes of locomotives.

"This piece of amusement, which cost some $22,000, was paid for by the present admirer of the Spanish beauty. He is a half crazy English lord, who wastes his time and millions in Paris. The friends of Carolina Otero fear that she will be sent back from St Petersburg as swiftly as she went there."

The Wig-Wag Language of Dogs.

It is no doubt a startling conclusion, but Dr. Louis Robinson, who has been investigating the mysteries of canine language, has practically set up the theory that a dog speaks with his tail tip.

In the case of all hunting dogs which pack together the tail is carried aloft, and is very free in movement. There is no doubt that foxhounds habitually watch the tails of those in front of them when drawing a covert. If a faint drag is detected, suggestive of the presence of a fox, but not sufficient to be sworn to vocally, the tail of the finder is set in motion, and the warmer the scent the quicker does it wag. Others seeing the signal instantly join the first, and there is an assemblage of waving tails even before even the least whisper is heard.

Should the drag prove a doubtful one the hounds separate again and the waving ceases but if it grows stronger when followed up the wagging becomes more emphatic, until one after another the hounds begin to whine and give tongue and stream off in Indian file along the line of scent. When the pack is at full cry upon a strong scent, the tails cease to wave, but are carried aloft in full view.—London Dispatch.

Somerset Installation.

District Deputy Charles I. Young installed the officers-elect of Somerset Council, J. O. U. A. M., last evening. The officers were not all present. Following is the list of those installed:

Councilor—Dr. Bedford.
Vice Councilor—W W Walker.
Warden—Wm Scribner.
Inside Sentinel—J A Kitchen.
Outside Sentinel—Joseph Newman.
Conductor—John Smith.
Representative to State Council—I. D Anderson.
Alternate—Frank Kesselring.

WHAT ARE THE "BLUES"?

Woman's Color is an Unfailing Thermometer.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

A woman's thermometer is her color.

MRS. ANNA MILLER

She is red with embarrassment or some deep emotion; she is white with fright; she is supposed to be green with envy; but when she is blue it means that she is sick.

It is not the fault of the woman if she has the blues and that "want-to-be-let-alone" feeling. It is the fault of her condition which makes happiness impossible.

No woman can be happy and light-hearted when painful female complaints crush out her life.

If she is melancholy, excitable, nervous, dizzy, or troubled with sleeplessness or fainting spells, they are symptoms of serious female weakness.

A leaf out of the experience of Mrs. Anna Miller, who lives at Duhring, Pa., shows that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure that terrible weakness and bearing-down pain in the abdomen, the dizziness in the head, the feeling of irritability, and loss of appetite.

"I can highly recommend your Vegetable Compound," she writes, "for all female complaints. It's my greatest friend."

A BRAKEMAN'S STORY

It was so quiet outside that when the long freight train would come to a standstill with an abrupt, awkward jerk, we could almost hear the big, drifting flakes as they fell. Not a breath of air was stirring, and the big, round moon filtered down through the snow storm with a white softened light that revealed nearby objects in a strange, ghostly sort of way. The soft coal fire that spluttered fitfully in the old-fashioned cast iron upright stove lacked cheer enough to break the spell of the outside air.

Without knowing precisely why, we sat mostly in silence or muttered an occasional monosyllabic observation as to how soon we might reach Jersey City. We were four hours behind time, and somewhere back of us we knew was the West Shore Express likewise behind time, and endeavoring to make up something of its lost run.

Sitting in the small red caboose in the rear of the big freight train, rumbling along through a blind fog of snow with a flying express at our heels, gave an uncanny sensation, that I for one, did not relish in the least. The drummer who had boarded the train at Newburg sat morosely on a pile of grips, which afforded him a softer seat than the hard, wooden benches strung along the sides of the car. A couple of shippers anxiously discussed the prospects for getting their stock to market without having them half frozen to death.

At the entrance of Joe, the brakeman, however, the glum party seemed to thaw at once. He swung down off the roof of the last box car and in through the door in a cheery, wholesome sort of fashion that warmed us at once.

"Joe," said one of the shippers, "be we going to reach Jersey City before night?"

"Isn't this good enough for you to live in? How'd you like to be out braking to-night?"

"'Taint no snap, that's a fact," the shipper assented.

"No, you bet it ain't," said Joe, decisively. "But this ain't a patching to what it is sometimes."

Something in the manner in which Joe carefully filled his cob pipe, took a bit of stick from the floor, poked it into the fire and lit his pipe slowly and thoughtfully indicated that a story was coming.

"Strange," said Joe at last, with a ruminant look into the fire and a long steady pull at his pipe, "somehow tonight reminds me of the day in January two years ago. That was when we brought Johnny Haines home. Guess you must 'a known Johnny," he added, turning to the shipper.

"Nope. Heard of him. Go on, Joe. What was the story?"

"Not much of a one," Joe replied deprecatingly. "Just a brakeman's yarn, only it's a little out of the common run. The first day I ever saw Johnny Haines I thought him the handsomest lad I ever set my eyes on. He came up on No. 6 on her first trip. We used to meet often up and down the road and get to know each other pretty well. He was one of these lads with a fresh, pink and white complexion and a jolly laugh that made you warm up to him at once. He was straight and strong, and when he used to stand jauntily on top of the car, the train going forty miles an hour and he not thinking it was going at all, there wasn't a girl along the road that hadn't a smile for him as he went by. The lad was anxious to stick and worked hard, and, as he kept his mouth pretty well closed, it was a long time before we found out anything about who he was. He had little ways about him that made us think once in awhile that he hadn't been brought up to work, and his hands at first were as soft and white as a girl's. One of the fellows told us a story of how Johnny belonged to a good family, but got kicked our for some reason or other; but we always thought he made it up, and, in fact we never did find out his story until that night. I mean the night we took him home."

Joe stopped, pulled vigorously at his pipe for a few minutes, blinked rather suspiciously several times, and finally the rather husky voice went on:

"It seems that the lad's name wasn't Haines at all. He took that to conceal his own. His first name really was Johnny, though, and, as that was what everybody called him, the last didn't seem to make so much difference. When he first came on the road he was a little past twenty, and his open, boyish ways made some of the fellows guy him and play tricks on him at first. But it didn't take them long to find out that he had plenty of mettle. A gang of us were laying around the Albany round house one day, waiting for a train to be made up, when Bill Lawson began to nag him and see if he couldn't get a fight out of him. It seems they had some trouble down the road, and when Bill had offered to fight Johnny had refused. He tried to keep out of Bill's way, but when Bill said he was afraid, Johnny turned and walked squarely up to him and said quietly: 'You take that back.' I never knew just how it was done, but Bill made some sort of a feint, and the next moment the big hulking lubber was lying on the ground. Bill didn't seem to know what hit him. But he went at Johnny with such a savage look that a lad without genuine pluck would have turned feather. But when Bill lay sprawling on the ground a second time we found out that Johnny was a scientific boxer. There was an ugly gleam in Bill's eye when he got up, and as he got close up to Johnny, all of a sudden he flashed a big jackknife he always carried. How he got it out of his pocket I never could tell. He made a lunge, but Johnny dodged cleverly and the knife just grazed his face. He was on Bill quicker than it takes to tell it, choking the life out of him. We started to separate them, but when we found that Johnny had Bill so that he could do no damage with the knife, we let them fight it out. Bill finally held up his hand for mercy, and Johnny then let up. After we got them cooled off, Johnny made him shake hands, and, though he didn't show it then, I think afterward Bill came to think as much of him as the rest of us.

Up the road not very far from Albany there is a farm that runs down to the river, and right at the corner of it was a water tank. It happened that on this farm there was a dark eyed little girl who was the idol of all the boys along the road. She wouldn't flirt with us, but she used often to come down to the water tank and get little packages which the engineer, who was a friend of the family used to bring down from Albany. She was plump and peachy, with dark eyebrows and long lashes, and under them the prettiest pair of eyes I ever saw. There wasn't one of us who wouldn't have married her quick if she'd had us. But she was sort of reserved and shy and none of us had nerve enough to make love to her. All except Johnny. All the girls smiled on Johnny and he smiled on them. He didn't have to see the lass twice before he was head over heels in love with her and it wasn't very long before he made her know all about it. To woo was to win with Johnny, and regular as his train passed the farm Jenny—that was the damsel's name—was always there to meet him. We used to chaff Johnny a good deal over the matter, but we couldn't get much out of him.

Somehow, through the engineer or somebody, though, we found out that Johnny was going to marry the girl if he could get his father to consent. He couldn't very well marry on the salary he was getting as a raw brakeman.

"Things ran along through the summer and into the fall, and we noticed that Johnny had got very quiet and reserved like, and was evidently brooding over something. At last we found out that Johnny had been promised a raise, and that along about the holidays he was to be made a passenger brakeman, and then he was going to get married. There wasn't one of us that wasn't glad of it, or who envied him his good luck. The fall stretched way into the winter, I remember, and my, wasn't it beautiful weather! You'd stand up on top of a car, and as the train wound along the river shore mile after mile, just drinking in the air and view. Braking is a hard life, with lots of danger and pretty slim pay. But those days we'd forget all about the hardships and everything else. Johnny was on the same train with me and happy as a lark, thinking how he would marry and go up to Albany to live. I used to notice, though, that every once in a while his brow would cloud up, as if he was thinking of something that hurt him.

"Such weather couldn't last, though, and when the end came, it came with a squall. The thermometer dropped forty degrees, and a cold, driving rain that had set in the afternoon turned toward night into a drifting, blinding snow. We had a big train that night, and with the snow and the sleet and the cold it gave us no end of trouble. She parted three or four times, going not more than twenty miles, and it was cold, dangerous work slipping along the top setting brakes or getting down to make couplings. The wind howled and whistled and the snow cut your face, like going through a hedge. It was dark and the lanterns didn't show plain through the snow, and everything seemed to go wrong. Several times we thought we were stalled in the drifts, but we'd uncouple and send the engine and two or three cars through the drift, and then back up and take the rest of the train through. We wanted to get through to Albany, for the next day was a lay off.

"Johnny and I fought like beavers against the cold, and, I tell you, it was ticklish work. I felt more anxious about Johnny than I did about myself, for I was old at the business and he was new, and I knew how easy it was for a sudden jerk to send a man flying down between the wheels. But Johnny wouldn't listen. He said he wasn't afraid, and just then the whistle sounded 'down brakes.' We were sitting in the caboose, shivering around a dirty little fire. I had frozen three of my fingers, and I thought my ears were frosted, too. You see the storm came so sudden we didn't have time to get on any mufflers, and the mittens were pretty thin. Well, we climbed out, and Johnny ran on ahead, saying that he was all right and he'd take the front. The cars on top were as slippery as glass, and we had almost to creep along from one car to another to keep from falling off, for she was running at a good pace, and the snow on the tracks made the cars lurch and swing. I looked up, and through the snow and the dark I recognized the landmark, and knew we were nearing the water tank, where Johnny's girl lived. Just at that moment the train gave a frightful jerk, and I saw the engine go rearing in the air, and about a hundred feet ahead I saw a lantern swing wildly in the air and go down. I went flat on the car and hung there for dear life. We stopped in ten or twenty yards and I swung off the car like mad. 'Great God, I thought, if that was Johnny!'

"Something made me feel that he had gone under the wheels, and when I crawled ahead a few cars there I found him, lying all white and still. He was too much stunned to say a word. We picked him up and started to carry him to the house—where Jenny lived. We saw that the wheels had gone over both legs—over one near the thigh and the other below the knee. My, but he was a game lad, for all the torture of bringing him up the hill couldn't wring a word from him. We knocked at the door and said that one of the boys had got hurt, and that the engine had jumped the track. A white little face came to the door and looked at us a moment, and then as soon as she saw me and my face Jenny shrieked out:

"'It's Johnny!'

"But she didn't faint or cry, or say another word. We just carried him in and put him on the bed, and she took charge of him. One of the boys rode over to get a doctor, but when he came he saw at once that it was no use. It was only a question of how long Johnny could survive the shock. He lay there very quietly, and finally, when the doctor's examination was finished, he said:

"'Is there any show, old man?'

"I couldn't reply, but he knew as I turned my head away what the answer was. Johnny was quiet for a moment, and then pulling Jenny's hand with his own weakly, he said in a husky voice:

"'Little girl, I want to go home.'

"And that he insisted on all the night. We didn't think that he would be alive by the morning. But he was, and we decided to put him on board the morning express. The wrecking train had thrown the engine out of the road and cleared the track, and when the express came down we flagged her and took Johnny aboard. All Jenny would tell us was that his father lived in New York, but gave the conductor an address for a wire.

"We didn't think that he would last the journey, and about half way down he suddenly clutched Jenny's hand hard, and then lay back still. The little girl threw herself upon him sobbing as if her heart would break, but it didn't do any good. Poor Johnny was gone."

Joe paused a moment and looked into the fire.

"Well," he said, "to cut it short, when we got into Jersey City Johnny's father was there. It didn't take more than a glance at his clothes and his portly bearing to tell me that he was a rich man. He sprang into the car, and would have pushed me out of the road. I knew who he was and I held onto him, and I said:

"'Wait a minute. Johnny was pretty badly hurt.'

"He grabbed me like a vise and said, in a sweet voice:

"'Can he live?'

"I shook my head, and he gasped:

"'Is he—'

"I led him over to where the boy lay, but he didn't want to see him. He looked very hard at the little girl who sat there sobbing, and said slowly:

"'Is this Jenny?'

"And then he took her very quietly in his arms and kissed her.

"I went to the funeral the next day. The old man's hair was turned white, and his face was as lined and rigid as though he was mounting a scaffold. He was twenty years older than the morning I saw him first. It seems that Johnny was brought up, like most boys, to have all the money he wanted. He got wild and in with a fast gang, and, to try to curb him, his father, who was a wealthy banker, got him a place in a store as cashier. Johnny's allowance wasn't enough, and he made it up out of the cash drawer. When it was discovered his father made up the amount, and then sent Johnny adrift. He never spoke to him afterward, and when Johnny, after a year's good service on the road, appealed to him for money enough to get married on, the old man returned his letter. I found it in Johnny's coat pocket the morning we took him home."

The train whistled for a station, and Joe, grabbing his lantern, escaped into the night and the falling snow.—New York Herald.

The Original Dime Novel Man.

The original dime novel man is dead. Who has not heard of Beadle? What man of to-day has not declaimed pieces out of Beadle's Dime Speaker in his schoolboy days? Who has not smuggled Beadle's novels into his room and kept himself out of mischief for many an hour with them? Though Beadle never wrote a line in his life, no author's name was more familiar to a larger class of readers than his a quarter of a century ago. Such is the fortune of publishers. They get the literary fame for what others do.

A Considerate Wife.

She—I need a new dress.

He—But you should take the hard times into consideration.

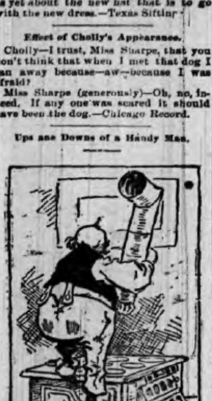
She—I have taken them into consideration; that's why I haven't said anything as yet about the new hat that is to go with the new dress.—Texas Siftings.

Effect of Cholly's Appearance.

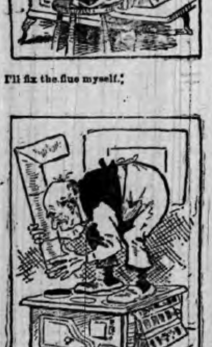
Cholly—I trust, Miss Sharpe, that you don't think that when I met that dog I ran away because—aw—because I was afraid?

Miss Sharpe (generously)—Oh, no, indeed. If any one was scared it should have been the dog.—Chicago Record.

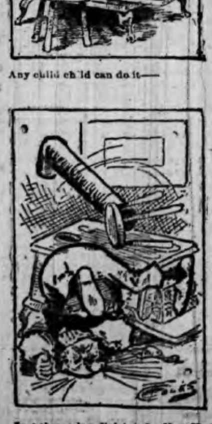
Ups and Downs of a Handy Man.



I'll fix the flue myself.



Any child can do it—



Just then a leg disjointed.—New York Herald.

BAMBERGERS

"THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE,"

Newark, N. J.

OUR ANNUAL

January Clearing Sale

Is Now in Progress.

Its purpose is to reduce every department to at least half its present size, and to make the accomplishment of this task a certainty we have (with the exception of a few articles whose sale is regulated by agreement)

CUT THE PRICE
OF EVERYTHING
To the Lowest Levels
Ever Reached.

To the economical this sale offers the greatest opportunity ever given, and only a sight of the goods can convey to your mind how big the bargains are. In connection with our Clearing sale is the Annual Muslin Wear Sale.

Women's Muslin Garments of every description, made especially for us, perfectly made and finished, cut full in size and of the best muslins and cambrics,

AT AND BELOW MAKER'S COST!

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,
147 and 149 Market Street,
Near Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

A Wonderfully Liberal Offer!

Five Weeks for 10 cents.

A Trial Subscription for

The New York Ledger.

FIVE WEEKS FOR 10 CENTS.

These five numbers will contain the opening chapters of Paul Kemble's powerful and interesting story, "The Killuloes of Killall," also the opening chapters (with synopsis) of Seward W. Hopkins's story of the great strike in the Pennsylvania coal mines, "On Criminal Charge." The other continued stories in these numbers are by Hall Caine and Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth. In addition to the continued stories, these five numbers of the New York Ledger contain short stories, poems, articles on the topics of the day, a brilliant editorial page, a children's column, a correspondence and scientific department, a Woman's World page devoted to everything of interest to women, including a pattern department worth to any woman many, many times the price of the Ledger. The following is a partial list of the authors who contribute to these five numbers:

Hall Caine, Seward W. Hopkins, Paul Kemble, Mlle Adelaide Rowlands, Elizabeth Olmis, Mary Lowe Dickinson, Amy Randolph, Hon. Henry L. Dawes, Mary Kyle Dallas, Prof. W. W. Kennedy, William Elliot Griffis, D. D., Lieut. Frederick Schwatka, Oscar Wilde, W. Thompson and others.

This vast quantity of delightful reading matter of interest to all members of the family goes to make the New York Ledger the most perfect National Family Journal ever offered to the American people. Your Postmaster, your Subscription Agent or your Newsdealer will receive your 10 cents for us for your Trial Subscription and send us the money—or you can send the money direct to us. Try it, and judge for yourself what a great paper the New York Ledger is.

ROBERT BONNER'S SONS, Publishers,
NEW YORK LEDGER,
Williams & Spruce Sts., N. Y.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE
In 1895

The Simpletons, a new novel by Thomas Hardy will be begun in the December number, 1894, and continued to November, 1895. Whoever may be one's favorite among English novelists, it will be conceded by all critics that Thomas Hardy stands foremost as a master artist in fiction, and The Simpletons may be expected to arouse enthusiasm not inferior in degree to that which has marked Trilby—the most successful story of the year. Another leading feature will be the Personal Recollections of Joan of Arc by the Sieur Louis de Conte, Her Page and Secretary, under which guise the most popular of living American magazine writers will present the story of the Maid of Orleans. In the January number will appear a profusely illustrated paper on Charleston and the Carolinas, the first of a series of Southern papers.

Northern Africa is attracting more attention than at any other time since it was the seat of empire. The next volume of Harper's Magazine will contain four illustrated articles on this region, and three of them will depict the present life there. Julian Ralph will prepare for the Magazine a series of eight stories, depicting typical phases of Chinese Life and Manners. Besides the long stories there will begin in the January number the first chapters of a three-part Novelette by Richard Harding Davis—the longest work yet attempted by this writer. Complete short stories by popular writers will continue to be a feature of the Magazine.

Send for Illustrated Prospectus

The volumes of the Magazine begin with the numbers for June and December of each year. When no time is mentioned, subscriptions will be begin with the number current at the time of receipt of order. Cloth cases for binding 50c. each—by mail, post paid. Title-page and Index sent on application.

Remittances should be made by post-office money order or draft to avoid chance of loss.

Newspapers are not to copy this advertisement without the express order of Harper & Brothers.

Harper's Periodicals.

Harper's Magazine, one year	$4 00
Harper's Weekly, "	$4 00
Harper's Bazar "	$4 00
Harper's Young People, one year	$2 00

Postage free to all subscribers in the United States, Canada and Mexico.

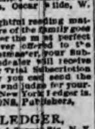
Address HARPER & BROS.,
P. O. Box 959 New York

DIRECTIONS for using

CREAM BALM

Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostrils. After a moment draw a strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

CATARRH



COLD IN HEAD

ELY'S CREAM BALM opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. Price 50c at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

DEATHS.

TITUS—In North Plainfield, N. J., Jan. 2, 1895. Elsworth B. Titus, aged 5 years 8 months 23 days. Son of Samuel M., and Jane M. Titus.

Funeral services from his parents residence, 10 Howard street, Friday, January 4, 1895, at 1 p. m. Funeral private.

McLEAN—In this city Wednesday, Jan. 2, 1895, Henry McLean, aged 64 years.

Funeral services from his late residence, 131 Liberty street, Saturday, Jan. 5, at 2.30 p. m.

Estey
Pianos
Organs

FULLY WARRANTED.

Moderate Prices.

Cash or Installments.

See Them Before You Buy.

ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

THE RAPID DISH WASHER

General or local Agents. $75 Ladies or gents. a week. Exclusive territory. The Rapid Dish Washer. Washes all the dishes for a family in one minute. [illegible]

W. P. HARRISON & CO., Clerk No. 12, Columbus, O.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JANUARY 17, 1895. No 3

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

POSTOFFICE HAMPERED

Under the New Rules Postmaster Hetfield is Prevented from Giving the Service He Desires—His Efforts to Better Conditions.

Postmaster Hetfield has been greatly annoyed for some time because of the unavoidable impairment of his service through the introduction of the following rules:

1. Carriers are strictly prohibited from reporting prior to schedule time, either for morning arrival or for the beginning of any subsequent trip during the day.

2. Carriers must not remain at their desks, or in the working room of the office, during any interval or "swing" between trips or during the dinner intervals; nor must they remain in the postoffice after reporting from the last trip of the day.

3. Carriers must record the exact time consumed by them each day, specifying the beginning and closing of each trip, and the time spent in routing mail and looking up and marking undelivered matter. Only the actual time employed is to be recorded, but all service rendered must be recorded.

4. Carriers will continue to make their daily trip reports, making their entries at the beginning and end of each trip. The practice of filling out the entire report at close of day must be discontinued, and any carrier found continuing such practice will be promptly removed.

5. Under no circumstances must carriers or superintendents conceal the fact that overtime—even to the least extent—is being made. Any attempt to do this will result in the removal of the offender, regardless of his rank. It will be equally contrary to this order for any carrier whose route requires less than eight hours to expand the actual working time thereon, or attempt to record unnecessary time in order to have his trip reports show eight or, approximately, eight hours work per day.

6. Where collections are made prior to morning report, the first entry to the left on the trip report must cover the time so expended and be accompanied by this note: "Including Collection."

7. Men detailed exclusively in collection service should not be allowed to enter the work room of the office, except to deposit their collections. They must then leave the postoffice, reporting again on schedule time for beginning of next collection at the first box on their route.

8. The performance of clerical work by carriers is absolutely prohibited. Their work must be confined to the collection and delivery of mail; the routing of their mail for delivery; the marking up or "logging" of undelivered matter; and the facing up of mail by collectors upon their return to the office. All other work, except the duty at the delivery windows on Sundays, must be discontinued by carriers. All other work is clerical, and must be performed by clerks alone.

The custom at the Plainfield office has been to utilize the carriers in assisting in prompt service at distribution of mails in the office, and in giving extended free delivery over additional territory. All this was overtime, and added justly to the wages of the carriers. The new rules operate to limit the free delivery to the more populous territory, and to prevent the carriers from serving as clerks. They may deliver only in such territory as they can cover in their regular eight hours, and cannot be used to assist in distribution. The intent of the new order was to curtail extra expenses in those cities where the overtime amounted to large sums, but the rules had to be made general, and therefore Plainfield is unjustly affected. The new rules have already been the cause of delay in getting the mails distributed, and have caused the postmaster much worriment. Short routes are to be the order, and the outskirts will have to be neglected. The stamp window clerk will have to attend to the carriers window, and Mr. Hetfield himself will be obliged to attend the stamp window, even at the expense of his supper.

Mr. Hetfield has made application for an additional clerk, and will do all in his power to secure efficient service to the public. Plainfield is a highly profitable postoffice to the Government, and deserves more generous treatment than is possible under the new rules. A protest from the people to Uncle Sam is in order.

Death of J. J. Lang.

The many friends of John Jacob Lang who was well known in Plainfield will learn with sorrow of his death which occurred Monday afternoon at his home in Mt. Bethel, from heart disease. He had only been seriously ill for the past two weeks.

Mr. Lang had been a resident of Warren Township for thirty years, and in 1868 began the grocery business in Union Village. From there he went to Mt. Bethel where he continued in the same business for 25 years.

One year ago last April he sold out the business to his son-in-law, N. H. Heidcloff, and has lived a retired life since that time.

For many years he was a member of the Township Committee and was also treasurer for a long time. A widow and two daughters, Mrs. H. Scheuerman and Mrs. N. H. Heidcloff, and one son, Jacob F. Lang, survive him.

Funeral services will be held from the Mt. Bethel Church Thursday afternoon at 1:30.

"Nothing Venture, Nothing Have."

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mon., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement. "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, pastor Central Presbyterian Church, Helena, Mon.

It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and is worth its weight in gold. I can use Ely's Cream Balm with safety and it does all that is claimed for it—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

CHILLY COMMON COUNCIL.

Tedious Cold Braved in the Public's Interest.

It was so cold in the Council chamber Monday that there was ice in the City Clerk's water-tumbler and a haze that was said to be frost on the electric lamps. For three hours the members and reporters shivered, while the long ordinances concerning fire and buildings were discussed on second reading. They were adopted section by section and tabled for future action.

The Laws and Ordinance Committee was instructed to protect the city against the trespass of the Edison Electric Light Company of North Plainfield on Rock avenue and Front street.

Alexander D. Findley petitioned for ordinance protection against landlord's threatened withdrawal of consent to operate a bar room on the premises. He claims a 20-years lease with privilege to operate his present business. The mat-matter was referred to the License Committee.

The Finance Committee reported they had not yet found headquarters providing a fireproof vault.

The Laws and Ordinance Committee said they needed $1,000 to print the recodification of the laws. The matter was discussed with some warmth, but no action was taken.

The Mayor was by unanimous vote authorized to add four regulars to the police force.

The various sections of the Mayor's message were referred to the appropriate committees.

The Councilmen shook off their icicles and went home, after detaching the Clerk's stenographer from the frosty register he had been hugging.

THREATEN COMPETITION.

Grocers Talk of Adding Dry Goods to Their Stock.

A meeting of the Grocers Association was held in the Board of Trade rooms last Monday at which time the following officers were elected:

President—J. Fred MacDonald.
Vice-president—J. A. Smith.
Secretary—R. W. Barnes.
Treasurer—F. W. Dunn.

Delegates elected to semi-annual meeting of Retail Merchants Association, which is held in Y. M. C. A. building, Trenton, tomorrow were: G. W. Rockfellow, J. A. Smith, R. W. Barnes, J. Fred McDonald.

The principal subject discussed was that of annexing dry goods departments, and it seemed to be the popular opinion that the grocers should conduct dry goods departments with their own business.

It was said that inasmuch as some dry goods merchants combine a number of branches in one business, they think it only fair that they should have an opportunity of doing the same. The above subject will be considered tomorrow in Trenton, as the trouble seems to be general throughout the State, and at the next meeting of the association in this city, two weeks from last night, it will be thoroughly ventilated, with a view to a decision in the matter.

The grocers in the association were asked to hand in their revised black list at the next meeting.

Defendant Scores a Point.

Judge Van Syckel yesterday decided in a written opinion in the Circuit Court that the release signed by E. Mercier & Co., and which was the point at issue in the mechanics lien case of Love, Receiver of E. Mercier & Co., against McNabb, was valid, and that the plaintiff could not claim a lien for materials furnished prior to the signing of the paper. The report published at the time the case was argued during the first week of the term that the case had been decided the other way was erroneous. Reed & Coddington appeared for the receiver and W. S. Angleman for the defendant.

Fire in the Burnt District.

Policeman Frederickson found a lively blaze in progress in the old lumberyard of Cook Bros., on Park avenue, Saturday morning. He signaled for Policeman Cooney, and the two investigated preliminary to sending in an alarm. They found that the boards covering the kiln of the stoneyard occupying a portion of the old lumberyard site had taken fire. By pulling the boards away, and threshing them about, they subdued the flames and saved the firemen from a cold run in sleepy time.

A Big-hearted Poormaster.

A ring at the door bell at 6:45 Sunday evening called Borough Poormaster David Weaver to his door, where he found a young man, his wife and three-year-old child shivering in the cold. Starting at noon they had walked all the way from Madison, a distance of fourteen miles, pushing the little one along in a baby carriage. They had started out in search of work but being overcome with the cold were forced to seek food and shelter. Big-hearted Brother Weaver as soon as he caught sight of the poor little face of the half frozen infant, at once gave the parents an order on the Somerset Hotel, where they were comfortably housed and sent away rejoicing in the morning with a good hot breakfast.

DEATH OF PETER WOODEN

He Was North Plainfield's Oldest Inhabitant.

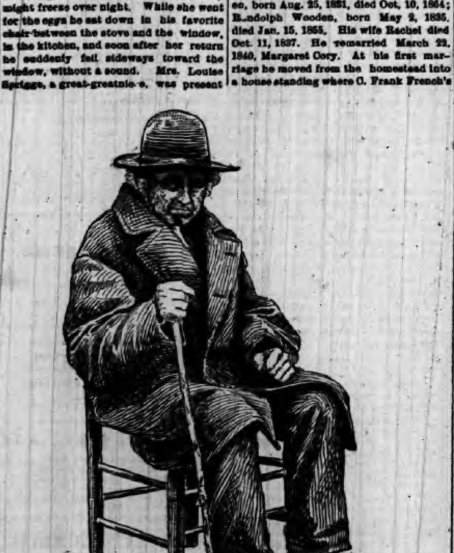
FELL DEAD FROM HIS CHAIR

Had Been Doing His Chores as Usual, and Had Just Brought Eggs from the Barn—Was in His 95th Year, and Sturdy to the Last.

Peter Wooden, known to all as "Uncle Peter", died suddenly January 14, at his home in North Plainfield. He was the oldest inhabitant, and would have completed his 95th year in May.

"Uncle Peter" was in good health and active in his daily work up to the very last. Even as late as Sunday he took a lively interest in all that went on in the town, and had planned to go to the W. C. T. U. meeting in Music Hall, but was disappointed on account of the snow storm that came up. He was a frequent attendant at church, going to service whenever it was possible, his usual attendant being his 10-year-old great-greatniece, Isabel Sprigge.

Yesterday morning he was about the yard and barn, shelling corn in the hand-mill, and cleaning up the place. He made his daily visit to Spencer's store, and was apparently as well as usual. He ate a hearty dinner at home, and followed his accustomed routine. About half-past three he went to the barn for eggs. When he came in, his niece, Miss Smalley, who lives at the place, asked him how many eggs he had got. He answered that he had brought three in, and had left one in each nest. She said she would better go and bring the nest eggs in because they might freeze over night. While she went for the eggs he sat down in his favorite chair between the stove and the window, in the kitchen, and soon after her return he suddenly fell sideways toward the window, without a sound. Mrs. Louise Sprigge, a great-greatniece, was present with Miss Smalley. They thought he had a fainting spell. While Miss Smalley lifted "Uncle Peter" to the bed, Mrs. Sprigge ran across to Spencer's and got Mr. Spencer and John Goodwin to go over and assist. They found "Uncle Peter" motionless on the bed, and finding no pulse applied camphor in an effort to revive him. Ann Dickinson happened in just at that time, and went for a doctor. She tried to get Dr. Carman, but he was not at home. Dr. Probasco also was out. Mrs. Probasco telephoned for Dr. Tomlinson, "Uncle Peter's" family physician, but Dr. Tomlinson was on his rounds. Mrs. Dickinson stopped for Dr. Carman again, but he was still out. Meanwhile Dr. Mattison had been reached, and he was the first physician to attend. He was soon joined by Drs. Carman, Probasco, and Tomlinson. They found "Uncle Peter" dead. Louis Sprigge went for "Uncle Peter's" spiritual adviser, Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, who offered consolation in the bereavement and tendered pastorly counsel and aid. A. M. Runyon & Son were notified, and the body was put in their care. The funeral was set for Thursday afternoon at 2:30 at the house, the officiating clergyman to be Dr. Lewis.



The burial will be in a lot bought by "Uncle Peter", unknown to most of his friends, in Hillside Cemetery. His family burials have been in North Plainfield.

Ann Dickinson lived with "Uncle Peter" twenty years, and for the past seven Miss Smalley had been his housekeeper, faithfully caring for him. Last Sunday Mrs. Dickinson stopped in at "Uncle Peter's" on her way from church, and took dinner with him. "Little did I think"—she says—"that that was to be my last meal with him."

A few days ago "Uncle Peter" told his great-greatniece, Rachel Sprigge, that he had lived to see '95 and was prepared to go. He was continually speaking in a strain showing his spiritual condition, and his readiness to enter the rest that must soon come to crown his years. He was found at prayer on his knees, four or five times a day, in his bedroom or in the parlor, and his mind was at perfect rest and content. And thus he died.

Wm. M. Stillman was "Uncle Peter's" legal adviser, and because of his being in Bermuda at the present time the matters of his estate cannot be detailed. A short time ago it was estimated that "Uncle Peter" was worth $200,000, but this of course cannot be verified until an accurate inventory is made.

She said that the birthplace of "Uncle Peter" was in a frame house long ago moved, from its original site on Greenbrook road near Somerset street, to Regent street, where later it was torn down. Peter was the youngest of Ezra's and Ruth's sons. He was 16 when apprenticed to the blacksmithing trade with Ezra Williams at the smithy near Union Village. His first marriage was April 28, 1825, to Rachel Randolph, daughter of Nehemiah Randolph of Piscataway. By her he had three children: John Williams Wooden, born April 22, 1829, died Feb. 19, 1837; George Washington Wooden, born Aug. 25, 1831, died Oct. 10, 1864; Randolph Wooden, born May 2, 1835, died Jan. 15, 1855. His wife Rachel died Oct. 11, 1837. He remarried March 22, 1840, Margaret Cory. At his first marriage he moved from the homestead into a house standing where C. Frank French's feed store now stands. They lived there a short time, and "Uncle Peter" built the house where he lived ever since. His second wife died March 22, 1890, leaving no offspring. Several years before his second wife's death he gave up the blacksmithing business which he had conducted at the corner of Chatham and Somerset streets, and devoted his time to home duties, raising vegetables, caring for cows and poultry. He tilled the greater part of fifteen acres in the locality where Duer and Grove streets now run, selling the land for town development. Some of the land was bought and improved by the Mr. Duer after whom the street was named. "Uncle Peter" opened Vine street, and some of his land he sold for the public school site.

The cause of "Uncle Peter's" death is attributed to heart failure.

Fell from a Trestle.

Fred Hand of North avenue, while engaged Tuesday in dumping coal from a car standing on the trestle in his yard, slipped on the ice and fell a distance of fourteen feet, severely bruising his right arm. Although so badly bruised, Mr. Hand is able to attend to his business.

DISCERNS THE EARS.

American Penetrates the Disguise of Mr. Tettemer.

APPLICATION OF A WELL-KNOWN FABLE.

Former Statements of American Reiterated—The St. Louis Correspondent Challenged to Produce Documentary Rebuttal—Facts Still Count, and American Does Not Recede.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—The community thank you for maintaining a paper impartially open to all parties and creeds, without fear or favor. St. Louis bulldozing is not needed in Plainfield.

I read the vituperative communication from Mr. Tettemer, and the Ainsworth letter, which he so bombastically flourishes, and it reminds me of a fable. A short, long-eared, four-legged creature, with a hoarse voice, stole a lion's skin, and wrapping it about him strode forth alarming those he met. At last he met a fox, and with a tremendous noise sought to frighten him—but the fox did n't scare. Then this creature with the hoarse voice asked, "Did n't you think I was a lion?" And the fox replied, "Oh, no, I knew you by your ears".

So we have the spectacle of Mr. Tettemer of St. Louis, holding in front of him the War Department, while jumping up and down, frothing at the mouth, and screaming, "'Tis all false; American is an unvarnished liar". But Mr. Tettemer's communication shows those abominable ear-marks; 'tis not the voice of a lion: only a bray. Nobody said the printed table of comparative desertions from which I quoted, came altogether from Washington. All the official war records are not there; and there are obtainable comparisons, Ainsworth, Tettemer & Co. to the contrary notwithstanding. Using the precedent established by your correspondent from St. Louis, I will take my time to procure the documentary evidence to substantiate the figures of the table, which raises so loud a "bray".

But the peculiar mental qualities of the St. Louis "voice" are furthur exhibited in the wild flourishing of that same document, to disprove statements with which the War Department is not connected. The "voice" declares, "Ainsworth's letter proves that there is not a scintilla of truth in American's whole letter to Wilbere". Wonderful logic! Marvelous deduction! Mr. Tettemer has certainly lost his head—if not his ears. No is the time for the gentleman to be consistent in his self-imposed task of exposure (s'c). Documentary rebuttal to prove one statement false, documentary rebuttal to disprove all the alleged "glaring falsehoods". Glaring falsehoods are easily disproved. Not a "scintilla of truth" is easily exposed. Besides, the gentleman is not known in these parts—his language indicates that his usual place is among the toughs.

Now American challenges the aforesaid "voice" to produce documentary evidence that the Pope did not hold confidential correspondence with Jefferson Davis during the war. He is challenged to produce documentary rebuttal that all who had anything to do with the murder of Lincoln were not Romanists, (see Lansing's Romanism and Republic, page 272). He is challenged to produce documentary rebuttal disproving Father Chiniquy's awful charge, which I quoted, that the assassination was a Romanist plot, (see Chiniquy's Fifty Years in the Church of Rome). He is challenged to disprove the history which John Heord, Jr., writes in Scribner's (June, 1894), to the effect that Napoleon's attempt in Mexico, at a critical point in our war, was a Catholic conspiracy to erect on this continent an empire to check the growth of American spirit and institutions. American also quoted the Duke of Richmond's notorious affirmation that the Government of the United States ought not to stand, and would be destroyed by subversion. Go on, Mr. Tettemer, if there is not a "scintilla of truth" in these authorities from whom I quoted, nothing is easier than to expose them—go on, produce the documentary rebuttals—or shut up. The other portions of the "Reply to Wilbere" will stand the same treatment. It still remains true, "Facts count". We want "facts", not St. Louis "brays".

Finally, Mr. Tettemer, you accuse American of "stirring strife in a peaceable community"—it sounds large. I fling the accusation in your teeth, sir, and accuse you, and your tribe, of being unpatriotic, and the disturbers of peace. The war was to maintain the Union, an integral part of the foundation of that Union is the public school. Yet we find you and your party attacking our most cherished institutions. Here is patriotism for you—here is the writing that disturbs the peace of communities. Listen to this absurd fling: "The experience of every day shows more and more plainly that serious evils and great dangers are entailed upon Catholic youth by their frequentation of public schools in this country. The morals and examples of their fellow scholars are so corrupt, and so great their license in word and deed, that through continued contact with them the modesty and piety of our children, even of those who have been best trained at home, disappear like wax before the fire."—(Judges of the Faith, page 35). Now, Mr. Tettemer, the attitude of Rome during the war is written in blood red letters which even your "bray" cannot obliterate. The attitude of Rome today towards our institutions is exposed in thousands of gross attacks like the above. With such testimony confronting you, it is idiotic to talk about "stirring strife" in peaceable communities. What do you mean, sir, by your hypocritical plea against "stirring strife", when we are confronted by Brownson, who dares to tell us "If the Pope should curse the government of the United States, every consistent orthodox Roman Catholic would thereby be absolved from his allegiance to it". What do you mean by talking "peace", when the Western Watchman, published in your own city, sends out broadcast the following beautiful editorial: "Protestantism—we would draw and quarter it. We would impale and hang it up for crow's meat. We would tear it with pinchers and fire it with hot irons. We would fill it with molten lead and sink it in a hundred fathoms of hell fire." Mr. Tettemer, before you come to Plainfield to talk "peace", do a little missionary work with the blazing, bloodthirsty, unpatriotic, peace-breaking friend of yours in St. Louis. Till my next,

AMERICAN.

LOOKING FOR ARMS.

Sons of Veterans to Ask for Muskets, and Accepting Social Invitations.

At the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, January 15, the new rituals were first used, and all were much pleased. Three degrees, representing the cardinal principles of the order, are additional features. The first degree was exemplified, and proved to be very interesting. The Captain was authorized to confer with the Commander of Post 73, in regard to securing arms for the Camp. It was also voted that an entertainment or lecture be given at a date to be decided by the members. An order was received from Headquarters stating that the thirteenth annual encampment of the division would be held in Trenton, Thursday, Feb. 21, at 10 a. m. An invitation was received from the Women's Relief Corps to attend the installation of the Corps President, Friday evening, Jan. 25, when a programme of music and recitations will be given. Another invitation was received to attend a social at the home of Mrs. Andrew Cox, tomorrow evening, which is in charge of the Rathbone Sisters.

Master of Ribbons.

Few people not directly interested realize the experience, caution and judgment necessary in handling the carriages at the big receptions, parties and teas which have been of such frequent occurrence among the social leaders of Plainfield this season. But wherever there is a special demand there is usually a man specially fitted to fill it, and in this present instance genial and popular Frank Hedden is decidedly the man. On several occasions at the Casino and other of the larger affairs Mr. Hedden has had as many as seventy-five carriages to handle, and although this amount of work, which must all be done in a very short time when guests are ready to depart, would hopelessly confuse one less careful than Frank, he invariably handles everything with promptness and avoids the least confusion. Plainfield people have learned to feel perfectly at ease as to their prompt departure at the desired time whenever they see the sunny smile and the covert coat of the East Fourth street master of the ribbons.

Additions to the Club.

Several recent additions are noted in the morning and afternoon classes at the riding academy. Some of the women especially are becoming quite proficient under the careful tutelage of Proprietor Stevenson, and will soon be able to join the popular riding club which has been increased by several men and women in the past weeks.

CAPT. ROBT. COOK, Camden, N. J., says:

"I had been seriously troubled for some time with indigestion, constipation, and a weak stomach, my system becoming all run down, and losing fifty pounds in weight. I had about given up hopes of again being a well man, when I came across which soon restored me to health, I gaining twenty-five pounds in three weeks. Give them a trial and see what they will do for you."

Dr. Deane's
Dyspepsia Pills,

At all druggists', 25 cents. Send to us for a free sample if you have indigestion.

DR. J. A. DEANE CO.,
Kingston, New York.

TALMAGE'S CHURCH.

A THEATRE WEEK DAYS—CHURCH SUNDAYS.

The Doctor Tells How He Came to Decide on New York as His Future Field. He Considerately Holds Services at Four o'clock.

The Rev. Dr. T. De Witt Talmage bids adieu to the pulpit in the City of Churches. Henceforth he will preach the Gospel from the stage of the building so lately occupied by the members of the Black Crook company, whose risque dancing and other approaches to naughtiness startled and attracted the most blase of New York's men about town.

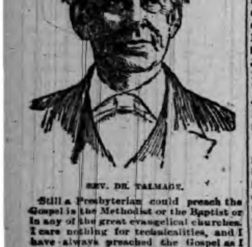
While Dr. Talmage will have the stage of the Academy of Music for his platform, he means to have the entire world for his audience by means of the newspaper syndicate, which will publish his sermons. It is not his intention, he says to preach strict Presbyterian doctrine, but rather to give the Gospel to the public in a broad and liberal treatment. A group of his personal friends will contribute the necessary financial backing, and have guaranteed that his new venture will be permanent. Who these friends are, or what salary he will receive, he refuses to tell at present. The fact, however, that he has been in receipt of a salary of $12,000 a year and an allowance for house rent while conducting the Tabernacle in Brooklyn is an indication that his present retaining fee as a Gospel expounder is by no means a small one. What the precise amount is he will not disclose at present, contenting himself with the statement that all these minutiae will come out later. It suffices for the present for the public to understand that we have the Academy of Music for as long a period as we desire."

"My work is over in Brooklyn," said Dr. Talmage. "The departure of my third church and the necessity for building a fourth church if I remained decided me.

"A syndicate of gentlemen in England had been formed, and were anxious that I should conduct a church over there. Not less than nine churches in the United States were anxious to secure me for their pulpits, but I never allowed any of these overtures to go beyond the preliminary correspondence.

"My work henceforth will be in New York and it will be permanent there. The afternoon hour in some respects is a better hour for religious services. I would prefer to hold the services either in the morning or evening, but selected the afternoon in compliance with the wishes of many pastors, who did not wish me to interfere with their services.

"I propose to give an independent religious service, a service which will be undenominational and which will not attach itself to any special form. It will be a Christian service. There is room enough in the Presbyterian Church for a man to preach the full gospel of pardon and sympathy and life. A sympathetic gospel is what the world wants and that is the gospel which should be preached.



REV. DR. TALMAGE.

Still a Presbyterian could preach the Gospel in the Methodist or the Baptist or in any of the great evangelical churches. I care nothing for technicalities, and I have always preached the Gospel as I found it. There are certain great theories in religion on which all Christian people agree. My chief work in the ministry is yet to be done. I never felt so vigorous as I do now.

"I have more sermons in my head, unborn sermons, than I ever preached. I shall be more free than I have ever been, because I will not have to spend my energy in building churches. New York is a great centre of influence, and I know its people. I have not decided whether I will in my sermons consider politics from a religious standpoint. In the ministry a man must get his instructions from headquarters.

"The place in which I preach is not of so much importance, because the audience which confronts me is as nothing to the people I actually address. The newspaper syndicates print my sermons and have been doing so for years. My late friend Grady, of the Atlanta Constitution, once told me that he believed that 10,000,000 people were readers of my sermons each week. Since then other newspaper syndicates have sprung up and the number of sermons published has correspondingly increased. I do not think I overestimate the matter when I say that there are not less than 15,000,000 readers of my sermons each Sunday. The number of readers of these sermons, of course, is out of all proportion to any congregation I could address with my voice. I have not missed sending out a sermon any one week in the last 24 years. I keep my vast audience through the kindness of my newspaper friends, who are always willing to publish my sermons. The newspapers may be credited with bringing about a complete change in Christian work. Only a few years ago the secular newspaper did not touch religious topics; now there is more information of a religious character published in the secular journals than goes through the religious journals. The result is that the people do not put aside one portion of their life for religion and another for secularity."

Just 126 members of the scattered flock of the Brooklyn Tabernacle met recently in the Centennial Baptist Church to take their bearings and decide on their future as a church organization.

There is still an indebtedness of $40,000 or more resting on the church, without any available funds to meet it. In this is included $8,470 in bonds, $5,000 to Dr. Talmage for money advanced in a crisis in the building of the last church, $7,500 to various small creditors, and $20,000 or more to contractor Wells, who built the Tabernacle. On a formal vote there was a small majority in favor of dissolution.

PLAY AFTER MINSTREL.

"Tea After Four o'Clock" to Be Given by Plainfield Amateurs.

Those who have been curious to know whether the season would pass without amateur theatricals of any kind will be glad to hear that the players who have won so many laurels in the past will be seen in at least one short play this Winter. The minstrel show that is to be given at the Casino Feb. 21 in aid of Muhlenberg Hospital will be supplemented by a short comedy by Mrs. Burton Harrison, entitled "Tea at Four o'Clock".

The cast will include such well known amateurs as Mrs. J. Parker Mason, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. Irving Brown, Mrs. L. W. Serrell, W. B. Cock, Fred Waltz, James S. Anthony, Geo Taggart and Richard Colburn.

Local McAllisters to Co-operate.

A plan to maintain a high grade of patronage for the hops of the Finderne hotel is to have them strictly invitation affairs, the cards to be distributed by some recognized leader in each of the towns of Somerville, Bound Brook, New Brunswick and Plainfield. Mr. Timpson has been requested to act as the social monitor for Plainfield in this respect, and other equally qualified men have been asked to co-operate in the other places mentioned. The system is a good one, and under its careful restrictions the Finderne has an era of success before it. A special feature of the hotel is that its Sunday dinner hour is to be from 1 to 3:30, to accommodate driving parties, and if the high quality of the cuisine can be maintained at that price the table d'hote will be but $1 a head. The house will be managed in true southern style, with an atmosphere of personal hospitality, and the service will be by the best servants in the world, trained Virginia Negroes. Being a pleasant driving distance from Plainfield, the Finderne is sure to become a popular resort for fastidious people of this section, as well as the New Yorkers who are finding out its merits.

Delightful Social Gathering.

A delightful social gathering took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Beveridge at their charming home on West Seventh street last evening, in honor of their sons, Harold and Wallace Beveridge.

The time passed all too quickly. Music for dancing was furnished by A. G. Carpenter. About 9 the happy company enjoyed the excellent supper served by Max Wiertz. Dancing was then continued till 11:30.

Those who participated in the festivities were: the Misses Fish, Lela Howard, Florence Patterson, Grace Day, Ida Stewart, Lela Cruikshank, Holly, Helen Reinhart, Bowen, Gilbert, Marion Dumont, Marion Woodcock, Lillian Richardson, and Miss Postley, Miss Gelston and James Kingam of New York; Bert Fish, Paul Kimball, Louis Squires, Walter Squires, Charles Squires, Walter Probasco, James Stewart, Claire Stewart, Morris Dumont, John Dumont, Charles Davis, Wells Taylor, J Wells, Howard Wells, B Johnson, H Woltman, J Middledith, Bert Richardson, Rufus Finch, and T Lawrence.

A handsome and valuable souvenir, representing faithfully the wealth and beauty of Plainfield, will soon be issued from the office of The Daily Press. Work on this book, "Plainfield, N. J., Illustrated", has been in careful and steady progress, and is now nearing completion. It will add substantially to Plainfield's glory; and its foreign circulation, already largely provided for, will bring material profit to Plainfield interests.

The letters of Mr. Tetterman and Col. Ainsworth in this issue are important additions to the controversy which was started in these columns as a result of the complete publication therein of the speech of Judge Withers in this city. The reply to "American" loses none of its strength by being late, and on the contrary is the more convincing because it proceeds from such careful investigation. Aside from the issue at stake, the correspondence gives additional proof of the widespread circulation and national high regard enjoyed by The Daily Press, which is respected everywhere for being a newspaper whose columns are open to all the people without fear or favor.

North Plainfield School Notes.

Library books were received by the scholars this week.

Miss Shafer, who was the Junior teacher a few years ago is again teaching in the absence of the Junior teacher, Miss Petrie, who is detained at home on account of illness.

Miss Grant of Plainfield is teaching the Third grade in the absence of Miss Dalley, the regular teacher.

Daniel Cory's Public Office.

[From The Somerset Messenger.]

At one time Mr. Cory was a power in Somerset county politics, and had filled nearly every office within the gift of the people of Warren township, besides serving two terms in the Legislature—1864 and 1865. He served as Collector of Warren township from 1872 to 1874; Assessor, 1843 to 1845 and 1860 to 1863; Town Committeeman 1867 to 1869 and 1872; Township Superintendent of Schools, 1847 to 1853; Freeholder, 1856 to 1862, 1867 to 1870 and 1874 to 1880.

They Wear a School Pin.

Leal's School have decided on a school pin, and already several of the school are wearing it. The pin consists of a small flag enameled with maroon and old gold, the school colors, with L. S. engraved on it.

BRIAR PIPE GIVEN AWAY

WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF

DUKES MIXTURE

for 35 cents

Every pipe stamped DUKES MIXTURE or

2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

NO LICENSE FOR BOCK.

The Somerset Court Unanimously Decides Against the Application.

North Plainfield was well represented in Court in Somerville today, by those interested in the fate of Charles Bock's application for license to open his new hotel on Somerset street.

Judge Bartine stated that a remonstrance had been received from the Borough Council, and a petition with 70 signers, and he and his associates were unanimously agreed to refuse the application.

Alvah Clark, counsel for Bock, demanded that decision be withheld and a date be set for a hearing. This was refused. He then asked for a rule to show cause why a re-hearing should not be granted.

The Court said it was useless to talk, as the Court had made up its mind and saw no necessity for another bar room in North Plainfield.

Still, it would admit the rule, and set next Friday as the date for hearing Mr. Clark's arguments.

Union County's Morality Leadership.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

Mr. Codding, of this county, has the honor of having introduced in the House the amendment to the State constitution forever doing away with race track gambling. It is an honor to which any man might well aspire, an honor which especially belongs to Union County. Moreover it was an act of justice as well as of courtesy, that the House unanimously granted a hearing to Rev. Dr. Kempshall and Judge Lanning, on Tuesday afternoon next, in the interests of this amendment. Union County was the first to charge against this monstrous evil, and, not enforcing this time the Journal's claim to priority of attack, Dr. Kempshall was the leader in this great moral movement against the entrenched powers of corruption and infamy. It is right that, in the hour of the grandest victory this State has ever known, after the bitterest struggle in its history, the victorious general should deal a death blow to the monstrous system of gambling which he did so much to overthrow. This constitutional amendment has not, and ought not to have, any opposition, and when the people have passed upon it the question will never again be a question in New Jersey politics.

The Proper Bait.

"Papa," said Benny Bloobumper, who knew his father's weakness, "you know all about fishing, don't you?"

"Yes, my son," replied the elder Bloobumper, graciously. "There is very little about that gentle sport with which I am not familiar."

"You know all about the right sort of bait to use, don't you?"

"Certainly."

"That's what I was telling Freddy Fangle, and we agreed to leave something about fishing for you to decide. We had a discussion about it."

"Well, Benny, I am very glad to see you taking such an interest in fishing, as well as to see such confidence in your father's judgment. What was the point on which you and Freddy differed?"

"I don't know as we differed, exactly. Freddy didn't seem to quite agree with me, though."

"State the question, Benny."

"Well, fish run in schools, sometimes, don't they, papa?"

"Yes."

"That's what I told Freddy."

"Didn't he believe it?"

"Oh yes, he believed that all right."

"Then what is it you wish me to decide?"

"Well, I told him that when fish run in schools the proper bait to use was bookworms. Now ain't I right, papa?"

Mr. Bloobumper reached for his slipper, and Benny disappeared out of doors.—Harper's Bazar.

—The paper to be read by Rev. G. Kennedy Newell before the ministers next Monday has been wrongly announced by another paper. The correct title is "Municipal Outdoor Relief".

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Rates of Advertising

Space	WEEKS 1	2	3	MONTHS 1	2	3	6	12
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50	$15.00
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00	20.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	25.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	32.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	37.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	40.00
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	32.00	54.00	80.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00	140.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes (Menus)
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything.

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
B EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR,

The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.
7apl y

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in a strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers' Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave. Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

L. S. WOOLSTON, J. F. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS' SUPPLIES. 141-43 NORTH AV
sep8tf

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTION WITH OVER 12,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J H Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depot
H [illegible] Barber Grove and Front sts
G W V M [illegible] 4th and Park avenue
Frank Bowley Somerset and Craig place

Subscriber's Name	Address
Albion Hotel, The	Park ave and 5th
Ames, C. J.	13 Crescent ave
Alert Hose Co., No 1	Madison av
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H.	32 West 7th street
Adams, Dr D C	46 Grove
Brakeley, P W	Dunellen
Brokaw, Isaac N	Bound Brook
Babcock, Geo H	8th and Union sts
Barkalew & Dunn	15 North ave
Boone, W. C., M. D.	Cor. Front & Central Av
Bushnell, John	Central ave, and 9th st
Beerbower, J E	Park av and 2d st
Berg, Jos F, M D	10 E 6th st
Board of Education—6th st, 8th and Union st
Booth, E H	48 Madison av
	6th & Liberty, 6th & Monroe
Clark, E B	2 Waynewood place
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Closson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
CONSTITUTIONALIST Office	3 North ave.
Cook, A D & Bro	Park ave and RR
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs. F. A	9 Third Place
Cruikshank, S. A	126 Carlton avenue
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, P F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy, (J H Leggett, Mgr)	Park ave and Front st
DAILY PRESS	3 North ave.
Depew, Mrs. E. H	15 Crescent ave
Day, Frank	33 W. Fourth st.
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Demarest, P M	27 Park av
Dumont, John B	[illegible] E 7th st
Decker, T—pay station	Westfield, N J
DeGraff, James	22 E 9th st
Doane, T O—Chief P F D	49 W 6th st
Dollner, S L	121 Madison av
Davis & Stevens, coal and wood	Office W Front
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave and 4th st
Evening News, T. W. Morrison, Editor	7 Som't st.
Engine No 1	West 2d st.
Engine No 2	Front st.
Engine No 3	Somerset st.
Evans, Geo C	37 Washington ave
Fisk, Chas. J	23 West Seventh St
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French, F M & Sons	Somerset st.
Fritts, Dr J T	[illegible] Park ave
Fleming, Howard	38 Park avenue
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
French, C Frank	69 Somerset st
Grant Geo W, Chief of Police	28 W 6th st
Goddard, C M	17 Third Place
Griffen, A M	13 E Front st
Gaston, M. D., W F	5th and New sts
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 8th st
Howell & Hardy	North Avenue
Heyniger, L	81 & 83 Somerset street
Hegeman, B. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	47 East Front st
Hyde, Chas	141 Front street
[illegible] Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Higgins, M. A	76 East 4th st—38 North ave
Hetfield, John N	204 South 2d st—21 Park av
Harder, Francis C	123 Madison av
[illegible], O	Netherwood
Hoagland's City Express	39 North av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	58 W. Front st
Jones, Evan	13 Kensington st
Kirkner, J	8th and Division sts.
Kaufman, W T	65 W 7th st
Lowry Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L N	Crescent ave
Lord, Wm A	Belvidere av
Loomis & Rice	78a 49 Broadway
Laire, J P & Co	3 W Front st
Linke, Frank	43 W Front st
Lounsberry, F C	18 Plainfield ave
Myers, J K	17 East 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
Miller J G	10 E. Front st
Moore, Geo. A	20 North ave
Muhlenberg Hospital	South ave
Murray, Dr. Wm. H	107 Broadway
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
Pond Machine Tool Co.,	Boulevard below Grant av
Pierce Hardware Co	42 W Front st
Reed Chas A	27 Myrtle ave
Milliken, E F	120 Central
Morrison, T W	11 Somerset st
MacDonald, J F	36 E Front st
yers, Lawrence	E Front st
Netherwood Hotel	Netherwood.
Newhall, Henry B	16 E 7th st
N J Postal Tel Co	4 Park ave
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave.
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Roberts, D S	17 North avenue.
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and North ave.
Runyon, A M & Son	Park ave
Runyon, A M & Son	46 Madison ave
Rushmore, Dr Edward	Park ave. near Fifth st
Roome, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves.
Runkle, B. G	8th st
Runyon, Chas W	Park ave
Rice, R. W. & Co	75b cor. Emily and Duer sts
Randolph, L W	Front st
Rogers, D W	W [illegible] st
Rogers, N P jr	24 Westervelt ave
Stover, H W	20 east 9th st
Serrell, Lemuel W	Front st. and Plainfield ave
Seguine, C. J	60 Front street.
Shaw, R J	Front st, opp. Park ave.
Streuli, A S	Prospect ave.
Smith, W P	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Shephard A D	Fanwood
Smith, Jas A	13 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Smith, Chas A	Spring st., Westfield, N J
Stelle, Irving G	Sixth st
Terrill & Cole	16 E Front st
Thompson, A. D	29-31 North av
Talmadge, Henry P (Res)	Netherwood
Thickstun, Jno A	Madison av
Titsworth, Jos M	22 W. 7th st.
Tomlinson, Dr T H	La Grande and N B'dwy
Tobin & Enander	51 North av
Tracy, J Evarts	8th and Division st
Thorn, Alex	37 Somerset st
Tweedy, O. B	11 Crescent avenue
Townsend, Samuel	62 Rockview av
Thompson, A D	Prospect ave
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Thorn, R	76 W Front st
United States Express Co	5 North ave
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle W. J	10 North ave
Wharton, Clifton	17 Central av
Woltman, C	West Seventh street
Wadsworth, W B	8th and Liberty sts
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Welchers, J F	W 6th st., near Grand ave
Waters, E, Ass't Chief	2d st near Washington
Westfield, pay station	Westfield, N J
Wotherspoon O G	148 E Front st

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	60c	Hempstead N Y	45c
Astoria, N Y	50c	Hoboken N J	35c
Babylon, N Y	60c	Hunter's Point N Y	45c
Bath, N Y	40c	Irvington N J	40c
Bayonne N J	45c	Islip N Y	60c
Bergen Point N J	35c	Jamaica N Y	45c
Bay Shore N Y	75c	Keyport N J	[illegible]
Bayville N Y	[illegible]	Kingston N J	[illegible]
Belleville N J	40c	Laurel Hill N Y	[illegible]
[illegible] N Y	[illegible]	Leonia N J	[illegible]
Bloomfield N J	35c	Little Neck N Y	[illegible]
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	[illegible]
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	[illegible]
Brooklyn N Y	35c	Madison N J	[illegible]
Caldwell N J	45c	Matawan N J	[illegible]
Carlstadt N J	45c	Millburn N J	[illegible]
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	[illegible]
Chatham N J	50c	Morristown N J	[illegible]
Chester N J	45c	Newark N J	[illegible]
Colt's Neck N J	75c	New Brunswick N J	[illegible]
Coney Island N Y	45c	Newton N J	[illegible]
Cresskill N J	[illegible]	New York N Y	[illegible]
Dover N J	40c	Orange N J	[illegible]
East Norwich N Y	60c	Pamrapo N J	[illegible]
Eatontown N J	60c	Passaic N J	[illegible]
Elizabeth N J	35c	Paterson N J	[illegible]
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	[illegible]
Fairview N J	45c	Rahway N J	[illegible]
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	[illegible]
Far Rockaway N Y	45c	Seabright N J	[illegible]
Flatbush N Y	35c	Short Hills N J	[illegible]
Flushing N Y	40c	South Amboy N J	[illegible]
Fort Lee N J	40c	South River N J	[illegible]
Franklin Park N J	35c	Staten Island N Y	[illegible]
Freehold N J	50c	Westfield N J	[illegible]
German Settlem't N Y	60c	Woodbridge N J	[illegible]
Glen Cove N Y	60c	Yonkers N Y	[illegible]
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton N J	[illegible]
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	[illegible]

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1894, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer

FOR MALARIA
GENERAL DEBILITY
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. Co.
RAHWAY, N. J.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE NEVERSLIP
THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE.

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.
Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,
Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.
On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dealers in hardware blacksmiths' supplies, sole agents for Union county.

$6.00
........TO........
CALIFORNIA

is our Sleeping Car Rate on the Phillips-Rock Island Tourist Excursion, from Boston and kindred distant cities on the route of this car, to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The cars have upholstered spring seats, are Pullman build, and appointments perfect.

You have a special manager on the car all the way, and excursions run once a week, leaving Boston every Tuesday. Save money by taking this popular mode of travel.

Address for full particulars,

A. PHILLIPS & CO.
295 Washington st., Boston, Mass.

JNO. SEBASTIAN,
Gen. Passenger Agent, Chicago.
8 23 f b

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has moved from [illegible] W. Front street, to 261 West Front, one door east of Madison avenue, and solicits the patronage of his friends, and the public generally.

THE MEN TO BLAME.

'TIS THE LORDS WHO ENCOURAGE TO LAVISH DISPLAY.

Humanity Seeks to Clothe Itself After the Fashion of the Class Above It. Women Dress to Indicate Their Husbands' Financial Standing. Modesty Defined.

That ever sensible writer, Mrs. Amelia E. Barr, thus discourses in the New York World:

Dress has deeper signification than mere mode; it is, in fact, the outward and visible sign of that harmony which always subsists between man and his artificial covering.

The scant, square, graceless clothes of the Egyptians were as characteristic as their obelisks and pyramids. The loose, ample robes of the Asiatic, the homeliness of Saxon fashions, the picturesque taste of the Stuarts, the hundred different styles which fashion has tried on the women of the last two centuries, have a far deeper meaning than mere personal pride or vanity. They touch religious, social and even political aspects, and are the mirror of their periods.

The world is growing rich and we are passing from the old to the new, because making money is slowly altering all our opinions. Hardly any one is now content with "the station in which it has pleased God to place them," and they disdain all the signs peculiar to it. Servants wear sham silks and jewels and clerks dress like their employers, and the first thought of every one who makes money is to live and to clothe himself as the class above him lives and dresses.

The philippics against the extravagance of the fashionable woman's dress, coming as they usually do from fashionable men, seem rather funny. For no doubt the tailors' and the dressmakers' bills of any couple in that particular set keep up a very fair average. And if a wife did not dress up to her husband's extravagances, if her dress was laughed at, then she would compel her husband to compare her unfavorably with other women, and what wife would willingly contribute to that comparison? Men compel women to dress up to the last bow and color—they like extravagantly dressed women to illustrate themselves withal Yes, they do!

Their talk is indeed of the home virtues, and they affect to long after good, sensible girls, industrious and patient, whose hearts are in their knitting and sewing and cooking duties, but as a matter of fact they leave such women to the solitary enjoyment of their virtues. Their innocence would bore them; and the majority of fashionable men would rather parade themselves with a woman whose dress began much too late and ended much too early than with the most virtuous of her sex if she was without style or behind the fashions.

Dress also is now a token of financial standing. We have no titles to measure rank, and the dress of a man's wife and daughters is the insignia of the class to which they belong. They cannot pin the certified amount of his bank balance across their breast, but they can indicate it by their expensive trimmings and jewelry; and so long as wealth is our social standard, dress seems to be a very satisfactory token of it.

What is modesty? "It is the fact put before all our perceptions, the instinct which resents whatever is forbidden, the blind discernment, the mute indicator of whatever should be avoided or not known. It is an indescribable fear connected with our sensibility; a marvellous veil between our mind and our eyes; a feeling so positive and yet so delicate that it will hardly bear to be named."

Indelicacy of dress is bad indeed, if it implies a corresponding indelicacy of mind; but this in the case of our present evening gowns is beyond likelihood or supposition. It is thinking makes whatever is either good or evil, and girls to whom very low-necked dresses are everyday affairs attach no moral importance to them.

The truth is that if low dresses were an evil they would long ago have disappeared. But men like and encourage them; they complain of high sleeves, of big hats, of long skirts, etc., but they never complain of low dresses, and the assurance of moralists that they do not marry the sooner for this display of beauty is not warranted by the facts. And if it were, it is offering modesty of appearance a bribe; for if women are to dress modestly, because it pays matrimonially, the reason is in itself more immodest than the dress complained of.

There is an immodest tendency, however, in the dress of women of the present day which cannot be too strongly deprecated—the attempt more and more to assimilate women's dress to that of men. Smoking cigarettes; frequenting risky places; talking doubtfully or slangy, naturally follow this assimilation.

There is no question that to a certain extent the costume of a woman is a type of modesty and that it has a restraining influence upon her manners. Thus, a man can get over a wall, or climb a tree, but a woman has to think of her skirts, and this kind of compelled self-restraint is a strong adjunct to modesty and good manners. Some complaint also might justly be made concerning the bathing toilets of the last decade, for they have gradually dwindled away to a smock, a waistband and a frill—and tights!

Now there may be no intentional seduction in such a toilet, but the appearance of evil is to be avoided, and before international vice there always comes that sort of bravado which makes light of safeguards and so prepares for disaster. For contempt of forms is quickly followed by baseness of manners, and many a woman not naturally vicious is lost on this dangerous road. This may be considered a truism, but it is a truth old as the hills, and, new or old, it is most worthy of constant recognition.

Washington on Wheels.

An illustration of reversion to type may be witnessed in Washington. The miles of asphalt streets rightfully win for the capital the name of the Wheelman's City, and man, woman and child avail themselves of the bicycle. District messenger boys have bicycles, which they manage with the ease and dexterity a Wild West cowboy shows in riding his broncho. What impresses the visitor is the sight of one of these blue-suited Mercurys astride of his wheel pedaling his way along Pennsylvania avenue hands off, contentedly perusing a copy of some work of yellow covered literature.

Realistic.

The recently married editor of a comic weekly now declines all jokes about mothers-in-law on the ground that a mother-in-law is no joke.—[illegible] Notes.

TO ROUGE MAY BE A DUTY.

The Point of View from Which a Frank Woman Viewed Colorless Cheeks.

She was a woman perhaps 30 years old, with pretty, soft hair, eyes of no especial color and pink cheeks; in fact, a woman entirely fascinating in manner and appearance. Suddenly she stopped reading and put the book down.

"You will not like this story," she exclaimed. "It's all about a plain woman who made herself beautiful. She did a great many wonderful things to her face, and in her method was included a little judicious rouging."

The speaker was looking in the faces of the other women as she spoke, and the expected look of disapproval appeared in every face. Then she said: "You don't think she was justified in rouging, or that it is ever excusable in any woman?"

"It is repulsive," said a matron of forty-five, embroidering very fast and speaking very decidedly, "and I cannot see how there can be two sides to the question."

"I do not agree with you," answered the young woman who began the discussion. "I am going to tell you a secret now—I do it myself!"

"Horror!" cried three or four voices at once.

"I have always had an idea that your color was not natural," said the matron of forty-five, disapprovingly.

"Now that does not annoy me in the least. I am not at all ashamed of it. You see," continued the young woman who rouged, "it was all a mistake, my being created with nice enough hair, good but colorless eyes and a skin that I must say is faultless in texture, and then to have it all spoiled by a fatal sallowness. It was not artistic. I think if nature makes a mistake we should make an effort to remedy that mistake.

"You, my dear," she said sweetly to the young girl who had called the process of rouging "uncleanly," "it is your misfortune to have hair that does not curl. In your case nature's mistake is very prettily remedied, I must admit," observing the fluffy waves in the hair of the rather discomforted maiden.

"Now, I," went on the champion of color, "do not have to use curling tongs. My hair behaves itself. But the blood that belongs in my cheek does not behave itself, and so I make an effort to do without it."

"Does your husband know that you rouge?" asked the demure maiden.

"Soon after we were married, he found it out, and one morning," she went on, with a contented little laugh, "when I came down to breakfast he looked up from his newspaper and said: 'Janet, you will oblige me by going up stairs and washing that stuff off your face.' 'Certainly,' I said, and I washed off my beautifier and reappeared before my good husband. Again he looked up from his paper. 'Go and put it on again,' he said, crossly. 'Certainly,' I said, and we have never mentioned the subject since. I assure you, it is very exciting to know that people, men especially, are looking at you very closely, and trying to make up their minds whether the color is natural or not. Just because vulgar women plaster their faces with rouge, that is no reason why the whole thing should be called an abomination. The use of strong perfumes is disgusting, but we should not on that account be obliged to refrain from putting orris and sweet scented sachets in our clothes presses. Moreover, I am pleased with myself when I look well, and one cannot be charming unless one is pleased with one's self. With my rouge on I can be sparkling and clever, without it I am as dull as my skin is. It is like the consciousness of being well gowned.

SECRET OF THE MANGO TRICK.

A French Scientist Discovers How the Yoghis Work Their Greatest Wonder.

A French scientist, M. Ragonneau, has just discovered how to make a plant grow from a seed in thirty minutes as much as it would under ordinary circumstances in as many days. Heretofore nature has shared this secret with the Yoghis of India alone, and the methods pursued by these clever magicians in performing this trick have often been described. They plant a seed in the earth and cover it with a cloth. In a few moments the cloth begins to be pushed upward by the growing plant, which in a short time attains the height of several feet. Various theories have been advanced as to the modus operandi of this miracle, one of the latest being that the spectators are all hypnotized by the magician.

During his travels in India M. Ragonneau saw this trick performed frequently and noticed that the Hindoos always imbedded the seed in soil which they brought with them especially for the purpose. At last he learned that they obtained this earth from ant-hills. Now as every one knows who has inadvertently eaten one of these industrious insects, ants contain a large proportion of formic acid, with which in time the soil of their habitations become charged. This acid has the power of quickly dissolving the integument surrounding a seed and of greatly stimulating the growth of the germ within.

After a little experimenting with this acid the learned Frenchman was able to duplicate perfectly the Hindoo trick. His further researches have led him to believe that this discovery may be profitably applied to agriculture. By infusing ants in boiling water acid as strong as vinegar can be obtained. M. Ragonneau has achieved the best results and most perfect growth by using earth moistened with a solution of 5,000 parts of water and one of acid.

Figuring It Out.

The journey was long, and the old lady with the plaid shawl thought to beguile the time by a conversation with the tailor-made girl who sat with her.

"Live in the city?" asked the old lady.

"Yes. Work there," answered the girl, and said nothing more.

"Might I ask what you work at?"

"Figures."

This seemed discouraging, but the old lady plucked up her nerve and asked:

"Figures? Livin' picters, or bookkeepin'?"—Washington Evening Star.

Drew the Line.

Mrs. Hicks—Here I am, keeping two girls, and I have to work like a slave myself.

Hicks—Why don't you get another girl?

Mrs. Hicks—Not much; come what may I simply won't work nights.

A Selfish Hope.

A man in Bay City, Mich., has written up poems which are to be published after his death. Here's hoping that he may live to a ripe old age!—Cleveland Press.

VALUED ENDORSEMENT.

SCHAGHTICOKE, N. Y.—It is ignorance rather than anything else that makes life miserable, but ignorance of the value of Dr David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy does not exist in Schaghticoke today, as a blood medicine and nerve tonic it stands supreme. One of the principal reasons for its popularity comes from the great benefit our fellow townsman, Andrew Sipperley derived from its use. Mr. Sipperley has suffered for years past with a chronic kidney trouble, frequent bilious attack, and, at intervals with violent neuralgia in the head and face. Up to last fall he rarely knew a well day. At that time his wife who had learned of the good of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy had accomplished, determined to have him use it. In writing about his sickness, Mr. Sipperley said

"For several years I was subject to attacks of kidney trouble and gravel, which was attended with most excruciating pain but since I began the use of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy I have had no serious trouble and my general health is greatly improved. I know of a great many people about here who have used Favorite Remedy, and in every instance benefit has followed. One of the officers of the Albany, N. Y., Hospital recently said, in speaking of Favorite Remedy—"I know of its great medical value, and to my knowledge it cures the diseases for which it is prepared."

The great value of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy lies in the fact that it dissolves the excess of uric acid in the blood. Such ailments as rheumatism, neuralgia, nervousness, dyspepsia, kidney, liver and urinary troubles, and the sickness peculiar to women all come from this one cause. Favorite Remedy dissolves this acid and expels it from the system, thus curing the disease. In cases of scrofula, diabetes and Bright's disease, it has cured where other treatments have failed.

THE SEWER QUESTION.

Criticism of a Boroughite's Objections, by a Well-Informed Plainfielder.

A critical reader of The Daily Press desires to call the attention of the "prominent citizen of the borough" to the fact that it was not "intermittent filtration" which East Orange abandoned but "chemical precipitation"—quite another system.

Also that Pullman has been for some eight years a notorious example of how to make a failure of sewage irrigation—by running it solely to make money.

As long ago as 1886, he says, crude sewage was turned for months at a time into Lake Calumet, a sheet of water 3½x1½ miles in extent, and only from one to eight feet deep.

If the prominent citizen, he further says, will agree to give this city a guarantee that a sewer run to the Raritan River below the dam will "settle the matter permanently", he will earn the everlasting gratitude of every Plainfield citizen, and the Duellenites will make him their patron saint.

By the way, it is asked, why should such constant reference be made to South Framingham? Why not refer once in awhile to other good examples of land disposal—Freehold, for instance, in our own State; or Wayne, Pa., besides a number of others in Massachusetts and many more in the Western States.

NEARING THE CENTURY MARK.

Plainfield Foresters Review Their Successes and Take Hope for Greater Growth.

Court Plainfield, Independent Order of Foresters, at their meeting on Friday, initiated four members in the mysteries of Forestry, and High Chief Ranger Bingham of Elizabeth, assisted by Brothers McIntosh, Hansen and Casey as Supreme Marshal, Supreme Vice-Ranger, and Supreme Secretary, respectively, installed the officers for the ensuing year. James McClinton was appointed Senior Beadle, and Joseph Bird was unanimously chosen to fill the important office of District Deputy Chief Ranger for one year. In good and welfare the officers installed. In a few words each thanked the Court for the various honors conferred upon them, and High Chief Ranger Bingham paid an eloquent tribute to the energy displayed during the past year, when an addition of fifty was made to the membership. He also lauded the officers for the manner in which the ritualistic work was conferred, and had no hesitation in saying that the Court was officered second to none in his jurisdiction. The Court commenced the new year with 78 members and a good treasury, and an effort will be made to reach the century in membership before June.

HINDERED TRAVEL.

A Bent Axle Causes Delay on the Jersey Central.

At 3 Thursday afternoon as engine 400, which was pulling the fast freight from Jersey City to Bound Brook on track No. 2 the axle of one of the cars was bent in such a manner that the train was obliged to stop near Richmond street and leave the crippled car for the wreck train, which was at once ordered from Elizabethport.

When the wrecker arrived it was found necessary to jack up the freight car where it stood, remove the old axle and replace it with a straight one.

Traffic was of course suspended on No. 2 track during the three hours necessary for the job, but very little delay was occasioned as track No. 3 was used temporarily by the express trains.

The car which caused the trouble was picked up by a westbound freight at 6:10 and proceeded on its way.

—The Government lease on the present postoffice expires April 15. The removal, however, will be made March 1.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—E. H. Holmes, the coal merchant has put in a 'phone, No. 49a.

—Edsall has found it necessary to rent a portion of Laing's Hall, in the rear of the Babcock Building, for his increasing business.

—The Sabbath Recorder appears in handsome new dress and with other improvements from its new office in the Babcock Building.

—But the barber is preparing to move to the barber shop now occupied by Eugene Laine, who does not yet know where his new quarters will be.

—The amateur opera company in Cranford are rehearsing frequently, in preparation for the production of an opera, a leading part of which is taken by Wm. Holmes of this city.

—The promenade of Swiss ragamuffins in Central Hall Thursday evening, Jan. 31, for the benefit of Emmanuel Baptist Church, will begin at 10, led by William Douglass. A floral crown will be awarded the woman most tastefully dressed.

—A valuable gray horse belonging to George Wise of Grandview avenue owes its life to the skilful treatment of Dr Herbert, who brought it back to health after a severe attack of pneumonia, combined with spinal meningitis, much to the satisfaction of the owner.

—The entertainment in the Congregational Church, Thursday, January 17, will begin with an instrumental quintette, and close with an instrumental trio. The solo work will be of high order, and Miss Addie Parker Jackson will give the most powerful selection which she has yet rendered.

—The report that N. H. Spencer of North Plainfield is about to sell out and retire from business he pronounces unwarranted at present. Mr. Spencer last evening told a Press reporter that he had intentions of retiring some time, but nothing definite was decided upon, and not likely to be for some time to come.

—In addition to the big safes for all purposes sold by the Mosler Safe Company through their general agent, S. W. Clark of 118 West Fifth street, is a complete line of secretary safes for the convenient security of jewels and other valuables from housebreakers. The Mosler safes are both fire and burglar proof, and no house, store or office should be without one.

—The Junior League of the M. E. Church, Scotch Plains, will hold an entertainment Jan. 28 in Excelsior Hall. The proceeds will be for the benefit of the church and league. Admission, 20 cents. It is hoped that many will be present, for the children are doing all in their power to please their friends and parents. The programme consists of readings, recitations and tableaux; also singing.

—From its own experience The Daily Press can testify that a great help in manuscript writing and correspondence is the Bar-Lock Typewriter, which has merits above ordinary machines. A high-grade typewriter is an essential part of office equipment nowadays, and the Bar-Lock leads. The local representative is Arthur P. Miller of West Fourth street, who will be pleased to place a machine on trial with any responsible inquirer.

International Sunday-school Work.

The Executive Committee of the Essex County Sunday-school Association have arranged for a grand rally and mass meeting of the Sunday-school workers of their county and adjoining counties to hear the officers of the International Sunday-school Association speak and tell of the great work that is being done by their association. The meeting is to be held in the First Presbyterian Church, Newark, Friday evening, Jan. 25 at 7:45. William Reynolds of Peoria, Ill., Superintendent of Organization, and B F. Jacobs of Chicago, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the International Convention, are expected to speak. This will be a meeting of unusual interest to the Sunday-school workers, and the only one of this character to be held in northern New Jersey.

Press News Goes Everywhere.

Not only in Plainfield but universally is The Daily Press regarded as the oracle of this section. Even Town Topics, the bright and shining journal of society, comes to The Press for matter of interest to the people of the metropolis and the country, and in its current issue quotes from The Daily Press report of the masquerade ball in the Casino. Town Topics has a good eye.

'Twas Ever Thus with Press Ads.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—Please discontinue notice "Want of Girl". We are swamped. Had to hire a boy to answer the door bell. With thanks.

C. H. S.

Hibernian Officers.

County President J. Casey of Elizabeth, assisted by other State officers, installed the officers-elect of the Ancient Order of Hibernians on Thursday. The officers are:

President—P. Casey.
Vice-President—B. Birmingham.
Recording-Secretary—William Carty.
Financial-Secretary—C. Regan.
Sergeant-at-Arms—W. Casey.

Arrangements were made for the annual ball which takes place in March. It will eclipse all previous events of this kind.

—W. C. Smith, the mason and builder of North Plainfield, has commenced the erection of two houses on Watchung avenue. The contract has been given to Uhinger & Kline for the carpenter work.

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.
Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by post, P. O. box 166, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 167 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 30, E. Front street, corner Elm Street. 3l3l94

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROV
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.
OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.
Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Office cor. Front St. and Park Ave.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security. Mar30tf

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS.
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 21 SOMERSET ST. 3-18-tf

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
30 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N J.
mch30tf

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 5'3 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to. ap1y

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed. f17y1

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.
TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES.
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.
Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.
Keys of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODINGTON.
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery Notary Public. Office corner of Park avenue and Second street.—jestf

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 132, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of CONSTITUTIONALIST. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES E. THIERS,
Dentist,
48 Somerset street. A new local anaesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.—jestf

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
[Successor to T. J. Carey.]
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—24 W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1 [illegible] Moving a specialty.

NOTICE. June 1, 1894.
Estate of Sarah Doane, deceased.
Pursuant to the order of George T. Parrot, Surrogate of the county of Union, this day made, on application of the undersigned, administrator of said deceased, notice is hereby given to the creditors of said deceased to exhibit to the subscriber under oath or affirmation their claims and demands against the estate of said deceased within nine months from this date, or they will be forever barred from prosecuting or recovering the same against the subscriber.
JOHN H. DOANE,
Administrator.
11 15 10

TWENTY
Years experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 3 doors above Peace street
Mr. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Livery and Boarding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No. 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
Gas Piping. Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning,
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL. 6. 11 11-tf

Estey
Pianos
Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Installments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free.
Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. This splendid paper, issued weekly, elegantly illustrated, has by far the largest circulation of any scientific work in the world. $3 a year. Sample copies sent free.
Building Edition, monthly, $2.50 a year. Single copies, 25 cents. Every number contains beautiful plates, in colors, and photographs of new houses, with plans, enabling builders to show the latest designs and secure contracts. Address
MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

The Constitutionalist
A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.
PUBLISHED AT
Plainfield, New Jersey.
TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.
A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. Wiechers is home from the South.

Hiram Hornish is still very ill at the Hospital.

Miss Edith VanWinkle of Elm place is ill with the grip.

John Donohue is suffering from a severe attack of neuralgia.

Miss Grace Rowland spent Sunday at Hampton Junction.

A letter to Mrs. R. W. Rice today, tells her that her husband is slightly better.

City Clerk and Mrs. J. T. MacMurray spent Sunday with relatives in Perth Amboy.

Gustave Butterlin of Greenbrook road is confined to his home suffering with the grip.

Charles Hall of Reynolds's pharmacy enjoyed a Sunday visit among Amboy friends.

Miss Cora Laire of East Fifth street is confined to her home with an attack of the grip.

Mrs. Charles B. Clifton of West Second street is another of the numerous victims of the grip.

E. H. Clevsley of North avenue returned Saturday evening from a trip to Washington.

A little boy brightens the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hinkson of Princeton since January 2.

Charles Terrill of Newark, brother of Moses Terrill of this city, is dangerously ill with pneumonia.

Miss Katie Reigel of Netherwood avenue is confined to her home with a slight attack of the grip.

Miss Sadie Vroom of Somerville is visiting her sister, Mrs. F. C. Adams, Washington street.

Master Bertram Leggett and little Miss Margaret, his sister, are nearly well, after an attack of grip.

Mrs. A. B. Dunavan of Elmwood place is visiting her mother, Mrs. Randolph, in Newark, who is ill.

Thursday evening of this week, Mrs. F. O. Herring of Park avenue will give a progressive euchre party.

Rev. W. E. Honeyman has leased Wm. Shotwell's house 56 Emily street, and will reside therein after April 1.

The friends of Horace Doty are glad to welcome him back as conductor on the main line of the street railway.

Max Wiertz has received a cablegram announcing the sad news of the death of his mother in Belgium, aged 75.

Mrs. John Bicknell has returned to her home on South avenue after spending a few days with friends in Newark.

Mrs. Clark Dillenbeck of Philadelphia is stopping with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Morrison of North Plainfield.

Adon Smith, of Putnam avenue, who is spending the Winter in New York, is visiting in Plainfield for a short time.

Dorsey W. Hyde, the master of harmony and composition, has issued a beautiful piano solo, Souvenir de Netherwood.

J. B Bovey of Somerset street is unable to attend to his business in New York city owing to a severe attack of the grip.

Charles Van Middlesworth, who has been working at Pearl River, N. Y., spent Sunday at his home on Liberty street.

John Wedemeyer of New York city spent Saturday and Sunday with his brother Henry, proprietor of the Arlington Hotel.

Jacob Marx, who has been a prisoner for the last ten days at his home on East Front street, suffering with the grip, is now able to be out.

Charles C. McBride, editor of the Elizabeth Journal, who has been chosen private secretary of Speaker Cross, is cousin of J. C. VanDyke of East Front street.

J. Van Herwarden and family of Flushing have rented the cottage belonging to Edward Willis of South avenue, Netherwood, and will take possession Jan. 15

Walter L Hetfield is very much concerned about his son Walter, who lies very ill with pneumonia. Mr. Hetfield has been constantly at his bedside for three days and nights.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Bowne of Wheeling, W. Va., are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Smith of Westervelt avenue. Mr. Bowne brought with him his valuable registered mastiff, Beau Brummel.

W. C. Strong of Fanwood has been grievously afflicted by the loss of his wife, Florence L., who died Saturday in her twenty-ninth year. The funeral takes place from the residence of the afflicted husband on South avenue tomorrow afternoon at 2:30.

The death occurred Friday in Irvington of Mary E. Hayes, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Hayes of Samptown. The funeral services were held yesterday in Samptown, where decedent had lived for many years and was well-known.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

From The Press of January 26.

B. A. Hegeman, Jr., is detained from business with a severe cold.

Miss Waring of Park avenue is kept at home with an attack of the grip.

John Richter, Doane & Edsall's faithful cobbler, is recovering from the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. John L. Edsall went to New York yesterday for a short visit.

Mrs. C. E. Wright is confined to her home on LaGrande avenue with the grip.

Miss Maud Lord of Belvidere avenue is visiting Mrs. C. L. McMillen of Jersey City.

Miss Emma Wyckoff has returned to the Commercial Palace after a two-days illness.

Mrs. Freeman of Watchung avenue is home again after a visit to relatives in Albany.

Dr. E. W. Hedges did not escape the grip although he is recovering and able to be around.

Miss Mamie Allison of Brooklyn formerly of this city is visiting friends in Plainfield.

Miss Alice Chandor of East Fifth street has returned from an extended visit in New York.

Mrs. F. A. Pike of Rockview terrace will spend the balance of the Winter in Baltimore.

W. A. Garrigues has removed from 111 East Sixth street to 1200 Walnut street, Philadelphia.

Miss Gertrude Marchand of Pittsburg is the guest of Miss Maude Agnes Bowers at Hotel Albion.

Miss Harriet Loomis of New York who has been visiting Miss Morse of Franklin place has returned home.

John D. Miller of East Ninth street is visiting in New York, where he will remain the rest of the Winter.

George Parrot of Key West is making an extended visit at the home of George P. Bull of East Ninth street.

Dancing-Master Walsh, late of this city, is seriously ill with an attack of the grip at his home in Brooklyn.

James Brown has completed a ten-room house at the corner of North and Leland avenues, Netherwood.

Joseph Angerbauer of Brokaw Bros., New York, is spending a three-weeks vacation at his home in this city.

Phillip Bens of New Brunswick was in town yesterday visiting his old friend George Richter of Somerset street.

Matt. Walker formerly clerk in Rockfellow's grocery, is very ill with pneumonia at his boarding house in Westfield.

E. Leonard of Madison avenue is again able to be out, after being confined to the house with a severe case of the grip.

Miss Sadie Barrett of Dunellen left today for Marlborough-on-the-Hudson, where she will visit friends for a few days.

Miss Grace Wilkins of Rochester has been spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Edward Douglass of Washington avenue.

Mrs. Henry Thorne of Lake Placid is spending a few days with her mother-in-law, Mrs. H. A. Thorne of LaGrande avenue.

Herbert Schutt of Duer street has accepted a position with Wooley, Raymond & Co., hardware dealers, 89 Reade street, New York.

Gordon Brady has returned to his home in Brooklyn, after a short visit at the home of George M. Rittenhouse of East Sixth street.

A pen and ink sketch by Miss Alice E Loomis has been placed in the corner window of Garret Q. Packer's store on Park avenue.

Miss Jennie Pierson of Liberty, N. Y., who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. T E. Morgan of 121 West Front street, has returned home.

When skating on Hyde's millpond Monday afternoon, Fred Smith sprained his ankle, and is confined to his home on Putnam avenue

Master Frank Reinhart, who has been ill at his home on Belvidere avenue for the past ten days with the grip, is now able to be out.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Bogert celebrated the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage yesterday. Many useful and handsome gifts were received.

George Smith of Central avenue has been confined to his room with an injured foot. He is slowly improving, and is now able to be out in a carriage.

Misses Addie and Hattie Stine of New Brunswick returned home yesterday after a pleasant visit with their brother, Edward Stine of Grandview avenue.

Hubert Phillips has in course of construction a house after a design of Shoppel, on the property recently acquired by him of May A. Bloom of Brooklyn.

Rev. G. Hauser and wife returned to their home on Duer street yesterday afternoon, after a pleasant visit at the home of Mrs. Hauser's mother, Jersey City.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Bowden, formerly of this city and now of South River, will regret to learn of the loss of their daughter Jennie, who died Monday.

Among the recent additions to the club car "Evona" are Benjamin B. Western of Washington Park and Wm. B. Cock of Fifth street. Both are likely to prove a valuable acquisition. Mr. Western was introduced by ex-Mayor William L. Saunders.

Miss Ida Dunham of Arlington avenue has a very heavy cold.

Edward H. Ladd of 307 Franklin place is quite ill with the grip.

E. R. Pope, Jr., is confined to his home in North avenue with the grip.

George Coard of East Ninth street is confined to his home with the grip.

Miss May Redman of LaGrande avenue is visiting friends near Philadelphia.

Miss Clute of Albany is the guest of Miss Sallye Swayze of Prospect avenue.

Ernest Conover of Elmwood place has recovered entirely from his recent illness.

Captain Stewart of Park avenue has returned after a short trip to Chicago and Cleveland.

Mrs. Wm. C. Baker of West Seventh street is a sufferer from a severe attack of the grip.

Miss Giles entertained a number of her friends at her home on East Sixth street last evening.

Borough Clerk James K. Arnold is confined to his home by "crick" in the muscles of his back.

Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., is still lying very ill. A consultation of physicians was held yesterday.

Mrs. A. S. Fritts is confined to her home with a severe attack of the grip, which threatens to become pneumonia.

Martin I. Cooley of Rockview avenue has purchased the valuable team of bay horses formerly belonging to Mrs. Lawrence Myers.

George Ringo of Berlin is expected to arrive in New York the first of next week, on the steamship Lahn. He will visit his friend and schoolmate, Curt Gotthell of this city.

The Monday Afternoon Club met yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. S. Green of East Fifth street. Whist was enjoyed and refreshments were afterward served.

Mrs. George W. Endicott, wife of Dr. Endicott, was obliged to forego the pleasure of chaperoning several young women friends at the Columbia Concert and Assembly given at the Casino the other evening, because of the grip.

James Perrine, 16-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Perrine of Duer street, died last evening after a few days illness. Arrangements for the funeral services have not been completed yet, and the announcement will be made later.

The Tuesday Morning Whist Club met at the home of Mrs. Edgerton yesterday as usual, and had a delightful time. These gatherings are a source of much pleasure to the members, who meet each week as the guests of Mrs. Edgerton.

The Social Twelve met at the home of F. S. Green of East Fifth street last evening. Whist was enjoyed, after which refreshments were served. Among those present were: Mr and Mrs F S Green, Mr and Mrs Lou Ross, Mr and Mrs Wilcox, Mr and Mrs Baynon, Mr and Mrs B O Bowers, Miss Ethel Green and Mr Cox.

Miss Delphine L. Bowers of 400 Franklin place gave an afternoon tea to a number of her friends yesterday. Several vocal and instrumental solos were charmingly rendered, after which refreshments were served. Among those present were Miss Sallye Swayze, Miss Clute of Albany, Miss Lulu Patton, Miss Katherine Thorn, Miss Etta Bliss and Miss Maud Lowrie.

Mrs. J. Wesley Johnson of LaGrande avenue entertained a number of her friends last evening in honor of her guest, Miss VanPatton of Burlington, Vt. During the evening Miss Alice Coard skilfully rendered a selection on the piano and there were vocal solos by Miss Bowers, Miss Holmes, Mr. Hallock and Mr. Holmes. The tables was very tastefully decorated. Among those who enjoyed Mrs. Johnson's hospitality were: Miss Alice Coard, Miss Delphine Bowers, Miss Ethel Holmes, Miss Edith Day, Miss VanPatton, Harry Johnson, Herbert Johnson, Fletcher Hallock, Harry Williams, Alfred Holmes.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

His Sixth.

The young people of East Sixth street enjoyed yesterday afternoon happily at a party given to George Rittenhouse, Jr., by his mother Mrs. G. M. Rittenhouse, in honor of his sixth birthday anniversary. The young people spent the afternoon in playing games, and at 5 refreshments were served. Those present were Mrs. J. B. Mills and children, Harold and Herman, Mrs. T. R. VanZandt and daughter, Ethel, Miss Emma Garretson, Mrs. John Dalziel and grandson, Lawrence Brownfield and Miss Florence Smalley.

—Owing to the fact that the electric lights in the gymnasium and baths are not quite completed work with the classes will not commence in the Y. M. C. A. till the first of next week.

Colonel Charles E. Moore was selected from all the experienced men who applied to Street Cleaning Commissioner Waring of New York to be Deputy Commissioner, and has entered on his duties. Col. Moore's success will be received with genuine pleasure by his host of Plainfield friends, and in his office he will have opportunity to do the splendid work of which he is capable. He is an engineer of limitless ability, and as a contractor has been accustomed to handle large bodies of men. He has just the head for managing street cleaning gangs, where quick and sure judgment and large executive ability are demanded. The appointment is a good one, and Col. Moore will earn his $4 000 a year.

By a practical illustration right at our doors we are reminded of the copybook adage "Silence is golden", and the Scriptural injunction to let our communications be Yea Yea and Nay Nay. The case is that of The Silent Man, who is thus immortalized by The Saunterer in Town Topics:

"There died at Rahway last week a character almost unique and entirely admirable. His name was Theophilus Page. He was a graduate of Williams College, sold newspapers for a living, and lived with apparent satisfaction to himself and no harm to anybody else for ninety years. He earned for himself in the last fifty years of his life one of the noblest of human titles, The Silent Man. Though his business brought him daily among his townsmen he confined his conversation to Yes and No. His memory should be honored by all that appreciate the importance of silence. Theophilus Page was a silent reproach to the eternal, inconsequential, babbling and brabbling of this age. About every American stands on the street-corner or in front of a bar and yawps. Talk, talk, talk! morning, noon and night, until there is a ringing in the ears of earth and headache in the heavens. Let us consider the ways of Theophilus Page, and shut up and be wise. I daresay that he might have been a greater orator than Webster, a greater writer than Marrion Wilcox, or a greater inventor than Joseph Pulitzer. He had no time to talk about it. He only had ninety years, and he needed them all to think in and to enjoy himself in. So he lived and died with his mouth shut, to my mind one of the greatest men in history and greater than any other American that ever lived. I would especially commend his habits and career to the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst."

New Brunswickers Surprised Her.

A load of Miss Try Mattox's friends came over from New Brunswick last evening in McDede's 'bus, called Miss Mattox from the meeting of Howell Division, S. of T., and, taking their prisoner to her home, made merry with [illegible], dancing, games and recitations until a late hour. It was a complete surprise, not only to Miss Mattox, but also to the genial Bob and his wife. The party was made up as follows: Mrs May Hardy, the Misses Mary Bundean, Kate Burke, Dena Bitzen, Jennie Danbury, Lizzie and Jennie Grey, Nellie Stillwell, and Mary Applegate, the Messrs William George and Frank Danbury, Oscar Hurley, John Newton, William and Charles Schenck, John Burke, Robert Britton, and Andrew Crossley.

Free-Delivery Changes.

Letter-Carrier John A. Neighbor, who has been making the early morning trip on Somerset street, has been taken off that delivery, and his route on East Second street has been lengthened. The Somerset street early delivery has been assigned to Letter-Carrier William Demarest, whose Netherwood district has been shortened.

Sewer Work Takes a Rest.

The workmen who have been engaged for the past few days putting in the flush-tank on Woodland avenue completed their work yesterday. This ends sewer work till early Spring

THE WORKING GIRL.

Miss Sallie Palmer Gives Some Suggestions to Girls About Backache, Faintness, and Dizziness.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

Did you ever notice working girls on their way home from stores or factories?

MISS SALLIE PALMER.

Did you notice how many of them had pale cheeks, dull eyes, and heavy steps? and did you wonder why they were not ruddy and bright?

The story which is told by Miss Sallie Palmer, of Nicetown, Pa., gives the reason for this sad condition of many working girls.

Sometimes their back and sides will ache terribly. They are faint and dizzy with pain and weight in the lower part of their stomach. They watch the clock, and wish that the day would end, as they feel so ill and tired.

Standing all day, week in and week out, they have slowly drifted into woman's great enemy, displacement of the womb. That, or some other derangement of the organ, causes irregularity or suspension of the "monthly periods," bloating, flooding, or nervous prostration.

"Take warning in time," she says; "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the surest and safest remedy in the world for you."

CASTORIA
for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

E. P. THORN,
No. 125 Park Avenue,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,
For Family and Medicinal Use,
A SPECIALTY.
3-26-y

AT YOUR OWN PRICE.
Odds, Ends and Remnants.

Amos H. Van Horn, L't'd,
73 Market St., near Plane St.

We find, after stock taking, several styles of Bedroom Suits, Parlor Suits and different patterns of Carpets that we do not intend to keep any more, and we will close them out at nearly your own price.

Parlor suits	$10
Bedroom suits	$10
Brussels carpet, per yard	50cts
Extra super ingrain carpet, per yard	50cts
Cotton chain ingrain carpet, per yard	25cts
Good bed lounges	$7
Parlor stoves	at your own price.

Note the name Amos before entering the store.

PORTLAND RANGES—The leading range in the city, and we will wager $25 that there is more sold of that range than any other in the city. Why? Simply because it is the cheapest. Cheapest because it is the best; good baker, good draught and several improvements connected with it make it the most complete range manufactured. Easy terms.

STORING FURNITURE—At 88, 90 and 92 Bank st. You will find the largest and most complete storage building in the State. All locked rooms at reasonable rates. Furniture packed and moved with vans in city or county at moderate charges.

Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,
73 Market Street, nearest Plane street. Newark, N. J.

BUTTER AND EGGS.
Fresh country roll butter 18c pound.
Fresh eggs, warranted, 24c dozen.
Best creamery butter 23c pound.
Special Sale This Week
....AT....
FULPER'S, 207 W. FRONT STREET.

THE COLLEGE BOYS.

They Are Given Gay and Festive Time by Plainfield People.

College Glee Clubs seldom have cause to regret a visit to Plainfield. The town is full of admirers of student musicians and these turned out in force last night at the Casino to hear the Columbia boys' concert. The arrangements of the reception were admirable in every way and the method employed of placing the numbers of the programme between the dances instead of all before them called forth many approving remarks.

The room was decorated in light blue and white cheesecloth, with here and there a university flag or a branch of Christmas holly. Evergreens were used with a lavish hand and the effect was very pleasing. The usual supply of sofa cushions not only added to the comfort of the guests but formed an important addition to the decorations. The stage was provided with ottomans and rugs and many of the patronesses took that position for hearing the concert. A low platform on the stage right covered with rugs and provided with chairs served as a stage for the clubs, whose playing and singing were admirable; in fact it was the universal verdict that last night's musical performance was the best that had been heard in Plainfield for many a day. It would be hard to pick out either the banjo, mandolin or glee club for special commendation, they were all so good, but it is safe to say that the collegians, singing proved the most popular.

The order of dancing and concert numbers were as follows:

PROGRAMME.

Waltz.
Two Step.
Waltz.
Clubs { Banjo. Glee. Mandolin.
Two Step.
Waltz.
Two Step.
Clubs { Banjo. Glee. Mandolin.
Supper.
Waltz.
Clubs { Banjo. Glee. Mandolin.
Waltz.
Two Step.
Waltz.
Two Step.

Elliott played the dance music and was entirely satisfactory.

Supper was served about midnight by the club and was under the direct supervision of the club's head waiter, John Tombo. The tables looked very well indeed and many remarked the excellence of the service.

Dancing continued after supper until past two and even at the last dance the thinning out on the floor was barely perceptible. Many of the younger girls were present as a glee club reception was considered sufficiently informal to warrant the waiving of the question of whether a girl was out or not.

Great credit is due to Mr. Cokefair who had the entire arrangements on his hands and it was through his efforts that everything went so smoothly and well. The patronesses were:

Mrs. M. Ackerman,
" R. L. Burnett,
" A. C. Baldwin,
" C. C. Cokefair,
" Edgar Corlies,
" Martin I. Cooley,
" Rowland Cox,
" J. B. Dumont,
" James DeGraff,
" G. W. Endicott,
" M. E. Edgerton,
" George Evans,
" Alex. Gilbert,
" Walter Stewart,
Miss Emilie Schipper,
Mrs. M. W. Tyler,
" Evarts Tracy,
" E. VanBuren,
" O. G. Waring,
Mrs. Henry McGee,
" S. A. Ginna,
" D. F. Ginna,
" Dr. E. W. Hedges,
" Sam'l Huntington,
" F. D. Herring,
" Walter Haviland,
" Benj. Hegeman,
" L. N. Lovell,
" A. A. Low,
" C. A. Marsh,
" J. P. Mason,
" J. W. Reinhart,
" Wm. L. Saunders,
" L. G. Timpson,
" J. Evarts Tracy,
" G. W. VanBoskerck
" E. L. Walz,
" F. W. Yates.

Among those present were: Mr and Mrs J W Reinhart, Mr and Mrs Wm L Saunders, Mr and Mrs Marion S Ackerman, Mr and Mrs E S Hooley, Mr and Mrs J A Machado, Mrs E L Walz, Mrs J Evarts Tracy, the Misses Tracy, Mr and Mrs Alexander Gilbert, Albert Gibbs, Mr and Mrs W A Nye, Mr and Mrs J Frank Raymond, Mrs Gilford Mayer, Mrs C W McGee, Miss Lawson, E M VanBuren, F R Andrews, Mrs Andrews, Miss Andrews, Miss Middledith, H V Borden, T S Wheeler, Miss Reinhart, Miss Kathrine Reinhart, Miss Dumont, John M Whiton, Miss Mary Whiton, Miss Marie Dryden, Miss Ethel Harte, Miss Louise Bushnell, Miss Taylor, Miss Whitman, Mr Dryden, T S Wheeler, S Brown, Miss Clark, Miss Kathryn Yates, Miss Haviland, Miss A W Haviland, Mrs McGee, Mrs J B Dumont, Miss Holly, Miss Margaret Holly, Miss Mary W Beswick, Miss Mary E Dodd, Miss M Evans, J F Middledith, T B Anthony, Howard Beebe, Mr and Mrs Craig A Marsh, Miss Ada Marsh, Henry West, Arthur West, Frank C Cokefair, Mrs Fred H Lunn, Charles H Lunn, Dr Shannon.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

—16,000 lath are ready to be hauled into the Babcock Building, for the Masonic lodge rooms on the fifth and sixth stories.

Babies

and rapidly growing children derive more benefit from Scott's Emulsion, than all the rest of the food they eat. Its nourishing powers are felt almost immediately. Babies and children thrive on Scott's Emulsion when no other form of food is assimilated.

Scott's Emulsion

stimulates the appetite, enriches the blood, overcomes wasting and gives strength to all who take it. For Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Weak Lungs, Emaciation, Consumption, Blood Diseases and all Forms of Wasting. Send for pamphlet. Free.

Scott & Bowne, N.Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

HYMENEAL.

Hubbard—Potter.

Last Tuesday at the home of the bride's parents William G. Hubbard of West Fifth street was married to Miss Mabel Louise Potter, youngest daughter of Charles Potter of 427 West Seventh street, this city.

Promptly on the stroke of 7, the hour appointed for the wedding, the bride and groom entered the spacious parlors which had been handsomely decocated for the occasion with palms, ferns, potted plants and choice cut flowers, and at the mantel they were met by their paster, Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., who feelingly and eloquently pronounced the marriage ceremony. After invoking the Divine blessing on the newly-married pair, Dr. Lewis turned and introduced them as Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard who were ready to receive the congratulations of their friends.

The bride's wedding dress was of heavy white satin richly trimmed with point lace and chiffon, and her veil was held in place by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried a handsome bouquet of bride roses. Mr. Hubbard is the eldest son of Joseph A. Hubbard of this city.

Owing to the recent death of Mr. Potter's son-in-law, A. M. ttoes, the wedding was a quiet home affair, only the immediate families of the bride and groom being present.

The supper was furnished by Max Wiertz of this city.

Fairbairn—Stewart.

Wm. T. Kirk of Plainfield was best man at the marriage of Robert Ashley Fairbairn, formerly of this city, Saturday The bride was Miss Mary Frances Stewart, daughter of the late Robert Stewart, and the wedding took place in St. Andrew's Church, Fifth avenue and 127th street, New York. Rev. Dr. George R. Van de Water and Rev. R. B. Fairbairn, of St. Stephen's College, were the officiating clergymen.

The bride, who wore a gown of white meroir silk, was given away by her brother-in-law, Edwin Fitch Raynor. Miss Edith Stewart was maid of honor. The bridemaids were Miss A. Fairbairn Miss Elizabeth Johnson, Miss Aline B Chaffee and Miss Caroline B Hart.

The ushers were Messrs. C. K. Stewart, brother of the bride; J. Allan Worth, W. F. Daniels, Kingsly Martin, Dwight Platt and Fred Walz. There was no reception.

Ministers Meet.

The pretty residence of Rev. Edward Love, 229 East Ninth street, was the meeting-place Monday of the Ministers Association to the number of twelve. An interesting paper on municipal outdoor relief was read by Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, and discussion followed. A bountiful supper was served, proving conclusively that the reverend gentlemen enjoyed the discussions of viands fully as well as that of hard facts. Two-out-of-town guests of the evening were obliged to forego the pleasures of the evening because of indisposition.

For Foreign Lands.

Mrs. Lawrence Myers and her daughter Mrs. Mead, accompanied by Mrs. Mead's beautiful and interesting little ones, will sail for Algiers Saturday on the North German Lloyd liner Kaiser William. Italy is the objective point for their Winter sojourn, after which a tour will be made of France, Belgium, Holland and Switzerland as well as England. The many friends of these philanthropic women, who have done so much toward improving and christianizing not only the unfortunates of Plainfield but also in a much larger field, wish them a godspeed and safe return.

The Manual Training Reception.

The pupils of the Plainfield Manual Training School are engaged in preparations for the reception to be given in the school-rooms, Jan. 24. The invitations for the reception are artistic. On the corner of each invitation is a small free-hand sketch made by a former pupil of the school. On the back is a list of several of Plainfield's most prominent citizens who will make short addresses.

Stay for Stephenson.

Supreme Court Justice William J. Gaynor decided today that former Police Capt. John T. Stephenson, under sentence for having accepted a bribe of six baskets of peaches, is entitled to a stay pending an appeal.

—Ice at Lake Hopatcong is 12 inches thick. Big cargoes are being shipped to Brady Bros' ice-houses.

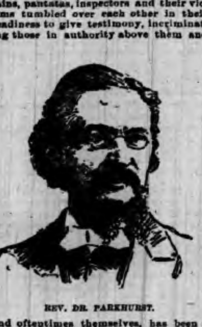
PARKHURST AWAKE.

HIS DISCLOSURES OF OFFICIAL CORRUPTION ONLY JUST BEGUN.

Expediency, He Declares, Has Nothing to do with His Crusade. He is after Byrnes Who Has Permitted the Fostering of Crime in New York for so Many Years.

Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst who, more than any other man, was primarily responsible for the recent uncovering of the apparently universal and appalling corruption of New York's police department by the Lexow Committee of the State Senate, takes issue with that body in that its work stopped just before the finish. The influence of Dr. Parkhurst's crusade against municipal corruption has been felt throughout the length and breadth of the land, and by the close of the present year there will hardly be a city whose various departments have not been overhauled in the interest of integrity and purity. Three years ago Dr. Parkhurst, who succeeded the late Dr. Howard Crosby as president of the Society for the Prevention of Crime in the metropolis, endeavored in a modest way and through official channels to close up some of the notorious resorts of the city. Repeated complaints upon heresay evidence were made to the authorities, but without result. Dr. Parkhurst then employed detectives, and personally obtained evidence of the violation of criminal and excise laws, but upon one pretext and another his charges were thrown out of court, and so utterly futile were his attempts at reform that he became thoroughly convinced that the police department and the courts were in league to defeat the ends of justice, and that blackmail was being levied upon every illicit avocation by the paid protectors of the peace.

In 1892 Dr. Parkhurst issued a manifesto as to the city's corruption, charging direct to Superintendent Byrnes, the head of the police department, the responsibility of the wholesale existence and protection of vice. He had found every conceivable obstacle in the path of the society's work, and he more than ever believed that Byrnes was either a fool or a knave. With a predeliction that he was not a fool Dr. Parkhurst continued his work, until it resulted in the appointment of the Lexow Committee. The work of that committee is pretty generally known. How patrolmen, captains, pantatas, inspectors and their victims tumbled over each other in their readiness to give testimony, incriminating those in authority above them and oftentimes themselves, has been a newspaper theme for several months. At five o'clock of the last day upon which the famous committee sat, Superintendent Byrnes was called to the witness chair. His testimony, most of which was given voluntarily and without interrogatories, was incipid in its tameness. The only features which relieved its monotony was his confession that he had prostituted his office by accepting from Jay Gould and others speculative tips upon Wall street upon which he had profited to the extent of $300,000, and his statement that his resignation was in the hands of reform Mayor Strong.



REV. DR. PARKHURST.

Remarking upon the work of the committee Dr. Parkhurst, among other things, says: In stating my position touching certain questions now lying before the public mind, I cannot express myself too appreciatively of the splendid work that has been done by the Senate committee and its talented counsel. There has been created through their instrumentality an epoch in the history of our city, and there has been secured at the polls a municipal revolution that would have been impossible except through their agency or agency of a similar kind. And it is but just that we go further than this and recognize the work of this committee and of its counsel as being the influence which is contributing very largely to similar municipal upheavals throughout the entire country. Mr. Lexow's committee and Mr. Goff and his associates do not stand in need of our commendation, but it is a pleasure as well as a duty to accord it, and it is accorded with earnest cordiality. We are justified in saying that, while the committee stood up to the rack magnificently through all the earlier portions of the investigation, they flinched at the crisis. The presumption is on the side of the Superintendent being as criminal as any other member on the force; so that the hesitancy to handle him as Williams was handled could not proceed from any prior conviction of his innocence. Wherever they have stuck in their fork they have found rot; and whether Byrnes be rotten or not he has been in rot for thirty-one years and has been the executive head of rot for the last two years. The presumption, therefore, was against him, so that the indisposition to handle him thoroughly must have been grounded in some other consideration than that of his presumable innocence.

There are two ways in which Mr. Byrnes has put the committee under obligations, and to that degree destroyed their independence. He put them under obligations by consenting to help defeat Tammany Hall, and it is to be remembered that this committee is first and foremost an anti-Tammany committee, and came down here for anti-Tammany purposes. We are not saying that it was stipulated that if we would secure an honest election it should be remembered in his behalf; but in the very nature of the case, favors have to be reciprocated. We are not going to disparage Mr. Byrnes's good offices at election; only it is to be remembered that he did nothing more than he ought to have done without being asked to do it, and nothing more than he had the same authority to do in previous elections, if he had only had the official courage to use his authority.

The second way in which the committee put themselves under obligations to him was by taking him into their confidence and allowing him to become confederate with them in breaking down the force. To the degree in which they obtained from Mr. Byrnes they put themselves practically under obligation to protect Byrnes.

Mr. Byrnes has repeatedly tried to play the same game with the Society for the Prevention of Crime, but we have refused to ally ourselves with a man that we believed to be more than any other one man responsible for the condition of the department. Byrnes hated us, and kept tab on us, and tried to make us contemptible in public esteem by showing that our agent was levying blackmail, which, as shown by the Lexow committee, was precisely what his agents were doing, and precisely what we are obliged to assume he knew his agents were doing.

A year ago he called together the reporters, and in terms of unrestrained bitterness published to the world a mess of blackguardism touching the motive of my work, the base impulses that inspired it, all of which was solid and contemptible falsehood. I am writing this without animosity, but he lied all the same, and the object of the lie was to break the power that I was exercising against the viciousness of his department.

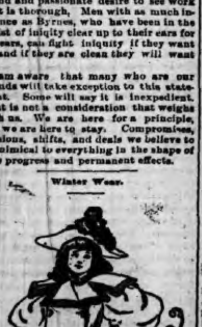
In December, 1892, Byrnes said: A Society for the Prevention of Crime! That is a fine title for an association of men who have, from their leader down, provoked about every crime they denounced. Not only have they blackmailers among them; they have men who have been guilty of the most abominable practices, of acts which, when they are made public, you will find the utmost difficulty in describing in print. I cannot understand how men who are presumably decent, respectable members of society, can tolerate the idea of putting forth a number of spies to practice on the fears of these most unfortunate women; the cruelty of it amazes me. Are not these poor things sufficiently cursed as it is? Is not their condition sufficiently pitiable without its being necessary to further abuse and rob them? However, let them wait a little while. Let them wait until the public knows what has been done. There is law, fortunately, and the victims are not friendless as long as that law exists. I have read over very carefully the charges made by Dr. Parkhurst and as far as I could perhaps expect they corroborate what I have said about him and his methods. I have to thank Dr. Parkhurst for making the issue he has raised at last sharp and clear. He is not trying to suppress gambling or to repress the social evil. He is in the field to attack the police.

Now, that is Byrnes. He is the man we have had steadily in our eyes for three years, and he has had us just as steadily in his eye. As the community knows, our work has meant nothing but the overthrow of misrule in this city. Byrnes has known that as well as the public, and yet he has fought us. Now, why not have the Senatorial committee, through their counsel, made themselves familiar with these matters? We have urged that Mr. Byrnes should be asked, whether, prior to the Senatorial investigation, he was knowing of the rottenness of the police force. He either was or was not. If he was, and still kept his mouth shut, he was unspeakably vile, and if he was not he was unspeakably imbecile. Now, why did not the committee insist that Mr. Goff, in his characteristic manner should broil Mr. Byrens on that bifurcate dilemma? I am nothing but a minister, but if I had been a lawyer of Mr. Goff's ability, I would have put Brynes on that toasting iron, and I would have guaranteed to broil out of him all his reputability inside of one day's session, provided, of course, the committee would have allowed me to do so.

Let me complete, in conclusion, that I have no interest in this matter save a profound and passionate desire to see work that is thorough. Men with as much influence as Byrnes, who have been in the midst of iniqity clear up to their ears for 30 years, can fight iniquity if they want to, and if they are clean they will want to.

I am aware that many who are our friends will take exception to this statement. Some will say it is inexpedient. That is not a consideration that weighs with us. We are here for a principle, and we are here to stay. Compromises, evasions, shifts, and deals we believe to be inimical to everything in the shape of true progress and permanent effects.

Winter Wear.



A Bad Place to Carry Money.

In these days of gloved hands and pockets covered by wraps it is surprising to see how commonly men and women adopt the habit of putting pieces of money in their mouths. This applies to bills as well as coin, is more frequently done by men than women, and is a practice more observed on the street cars than elsewhere.

It seems so filthy and slovenly a practice that no cleanly person would adopt it, and yet it is often practised by the best and apparently most intelligent class of men and women.

Apart from its vileness, the habit is a menace to health. Money gets into all kinds of infectious places and carries all kinds of germs. A bank teller of Vienna recently died from the effects of moistening his fingers with saliva when counting money.

Great is the difference betwixt a man's being frightened at, and humbled for his sins.—Fuller.

A Traveler's

outfit should be compact, but it should always include a supply of the best remedy known for sprains, strains, lame back, congestion arising from cold, any one of the innumerable pains and aches liable to come at any time.

Allcock's Porous Plaster

Avoid Imitations claimed to be "Just as good as Allcock's." Get the genuine.

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills

relieve headache, torpid liver and diseases caused by impure blood.

Initiation Fee Suspended.

At the adjourned meeting of the Camera Club last Monday the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year:

President—O. S. Teale.
Vice-president—Howard Stillman.
Secretary—Harry Coward.
Treasurer—W. A. Freeman.
Board of Directors—Harold Serrell, J. Hervey Doane, J. E. Stewart.

It was voted that the bylaws should be suspended for three months, commencing Feb. 1, where it provides for an initiation fee. This is done to increase the membership. A test of exhibition slides was given at the close of the meeting.

—The Potter Press Works has an order for five large printing presses and a large number of hands was put at work Tuesday.

—Joseph Moon, who owns the frame building occupied by Marshall's laundry, I. L. McVoy, D. S. Dunavan and Tailor Schmitt, intends lowering it to a level with the sidewalk, which will make a big improvement in the property.

ELY'S Cream Balm CATARRH

Is quickly absorbed. Cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation. Heals the Sores, Protects the Membrane from Additional Cold. Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell.

COLD IN HEAD

IT WILL CURE. A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50c. at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren st., New York.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan 14, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 35 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania

4.57 P. M. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

5.34 p.m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8 43 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible] p. m. Sundays, [illegible] p m.

For Baltimore only 1 57 p. m., week-days.

For Newark and New York—[illegible] p. m.

For New York only, 8 10 a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

([illegible] p.m. with through Buffet parlor car) Sundays [illegible] a. m.

Cape May Sea Isle City and Ocean City 1 57 p. m. weekdays.

For Rahway—[illegible] week-days Sundays, [illegible] p. m.

For New Brunswick—[illegible] p. m. Sundays, [illegible] p. m.

For Woodbridge—1 42 a. m. daily except Monday. [illegible] night, week-days. Sundays, [illegible] p. m.

For Perth Amboy—1 42 a m daily except Monday, [illegible] Sundays, [illegible] p m.

For East Millstone—7 10 a. m., [illegible] and [illegible] p. m., week-days.

For Trenton—[illegible] P. M. Sundays at [illegible] P. M.

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—7 09 A. M., 2.43 and 6.26 p. m., and 6.40 p. m. Sunday.

For Flemington—7 09 A. M.; 2 43 P. M.

For Freehold—7 59, 11 43 a. m., 4 59, 5 09 p.m., via Monmouth Junction, week-days.

For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—7 59 and 11 43 a. m., 4 59 and 5 09 p. m., week days.

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible] night week-days. Sundays, [illegible] a. m., and [illegible] p. m.; do not stop at Asbury Park on Sundays.

For Sea-Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—12 46, p m.

For Boston—[illegible] p. m., daily.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton Street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—1 00 daily except Monday [illegible] night.

S. M. PREVOST, General Manager.
J. R. WOOD, Gen. Pass. Agent.

Central Avenue Euchre Club.

Last Monday the members of the Central Avenue Euchre Club were charmingly entertained by Mrs. C. E. Abbott at her beautiful residence 995 Central avenue, the affair being the eighth of the present series of semi-monthly meetings of the club. Twenty-six men and women comprise the club proper, but last evening several outside friends were invited to fill the places left temporarily vacant by those of the members who were unfortunate enough to be "gripped". The drawing room and parlors were profusely decorated with beautiful growing plants and luxuriant palms.

During the evening a bountiful collation was provided by the beautiful hostess.

The prizes were four in number, one of which fell to the lot of Mrs. C. E Perkins who played the most successful game of any woman present and was awarded a beautiful photograph frame, while Mrs. Harry Stockton, who was a close second to Mrs. Perkins, received a tasty silver paper cutter.

Among the men J. Parker Mason secured the very appropriate first prize of a silk umbrella which will doubtless be doubly appreciated today by the fortunate recipient, and Harry Stockton is now the possessor of a pretty silver penknife which was awarded as second prize among the men. These house parties have become almost a fixture in Central avenue social life among those who comprise this most popular club, and Mrs. Abbott was heartily congratulated last evening upon the success attending the pleasant function.

North Plainfield Would Like This.

Rev. W. E. Honeyman of North Plainfield was elected a vice-president of the New Jersey State Anti-Liquor League in Trenton yesterday, and chairman of a committee to present to the Legislature a local-option law, a feature of which will be to permit the Borough Council to control the licensing of saloons in its own territory.

—The report published in another paper that the Emmanuel Baptist Church has postponed its entertainment of Jan. 31, is entirely untrue. The entertainment will be given as already announced in Central Hall, Jan. 31.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible] P. M.

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible] night.

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible] P. M.

Leave Newark [illegible] P. M.

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible] P. M.

Leave Somerville, [illegible] P. M.

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield [illegible] P. M.

Leave Easton [illegible] P. M.

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield [illegible] p.m.

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

5 45 A. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport and Tamaqua.

7 10 a. m. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge Branch.

8 14 A. M. for Flemington, D. L. & W. R. R. Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.

9 04 A. M. for Flemington, High Bridge branch D L & W R R, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Nanticoke, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.

12 45 p. m., way for Easton, connecting at Junction for stations on D. L. & W. R. R.

2 08 P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Sunbury and Williamsport, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. Buffet parlor car to Mauch Chunk.

5 06 p. m., way for Easton, connecting at High Bridge for stations on High Bridge branch.

5 14 P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Bethlehem, Bangor, Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Mauch Chunk, Shamokin and Tamaqua. Buffet parlor car to Scranton.

6 32 P. M. for Flemington.

6 58 P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading and Harrisburg.

8 21 P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.

5 45 A. M. Sunday for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton. 8 36 a.m. Sundays for Easton, 2 08 p. m. Sundays for Easton, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Reading and Harrisburg, 6.35 p. m. Sundays for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading, Harrisburg, &c. and at Junction for D. L. & W. R. R.

For Atlantic City, [illegible] a. m. 1 12 p. m.

Long Branch, Ocean Grove, &c.

Leave Plainfield [illegible] a. m. [illegible] p. m. Sundays—except Ocean Grove [illegible] a. m., [illegible] p. m.

For Perth Amboy, [illegible] p.m. Sunday—[illegible] a. m., [illegible] p. m.

For Freehold, [illegible] p.m.

ROYAL BLUE LINE.

Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia, [illegible] night. Sundays—[illegible] night.

For Trenton [illegible] night. Sunday—[illegible] night.

For Baltimore and Washington at [illegible] night. Sundays—[illegible] night.

For Chattanooga, New Orleans and all points south with through vestibule sleeper, via Shenandoah Valley Route at [illegible] p. m. Sundays [illegible] p m.

For Buffalo, Chicago and all points west, week days at [illegible] a. m., [illegible] p. m., Sundays [illegible] p. m.

RETURNING—LEAVE PHILADELPHIA.

Reading terminal, [illegible] night.

Sundays—[illegible] night.

From 24th and Chestnut—[illegible] p. m. Sunday—[illegible] p. m.

Leave Trenton, Warren and Tucker sts., [illegible] p. m.

Plainfield passengers by trains marked * change cars at Bound Brook.

Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket agent at the station.

J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Supt.
H. P. BALDWIN, Gen. Pass. Agt.

MISSIONARIES IN CHINA.

An American Clergyman Says They Are Treated Nicely.

Terre Haute, Ind., Jan. 12.—A letter received in this city from Rev. W. F. Walker, D. D., a former Indiana M. E. clergyman now at Tien-Tsin, China, dated Dec. 3, says there is no danger at that point for the missionaries who are there "The people are very quiet," he says, "and treat us nicely. Our chapel is open five days of every week. The Japanese claimed they would be in Pekin, Nov. 26, but it looks as if they ever do get there they will not reach us before spring.

"The Chinese are in a bad way because they have no disciplined troops and no disciplined generals. It seems not to be generally understood that in all battles up to this time there has been but little more than half as many Chinese soldiers engaged as Japanese; so of course they have been beaten. This is because the Chinese generals are all equal and cannot agree to do anything together. Each general has his own plans and while one may be advancing another is retreating and they are so envious and jealous that when one gets into an engagement the others will stand by and let him fight it out himself. In any event the war will prove to be a much needed lesson for China."

TAYLOR'S DEFALCATION.

Other South Dakota State Officers Implicated.

Pierre, S. D., Jan. 12.—The Taylor defalcation now threatens to involve some of the other state officials and there are rumors of revelations to be made which will show a condition little less shocking than the treasurer's defalcation.

It is understood that another official having the custody of very large sums of state money was concerned with Taylor in the beginning of the trouble and that he had misused the funds in an equally illegitimate manner. The officials are now investigating the matter and they expect within a day or two to make important disclosures. The legislature has appointed a committee to make a thorough investigation and it is likely that a condition of rottenness will be discovered which will shake the state as even the story of Taylor's downfall has not done.

Memphis, Tenn., Jan. 12.—Ex-Treasurer Taylor, of South Dakota, was under arrest here yesterday, but was released, as the officers here could hear nothing from the South Dakota officials.

PRIESTS FIGHT A DUEL.

One of Them Fatally Wounded—The Other in Prison.

Palla, Mex., Jan. 12.—News comes from Parras of a duel with knives between two Catholic priests. Parras has two parishes, one administered to by Father Brioneu and the other by Father Floris. Jealousies have for a long time existed between the two priests over the religious duties. A few days ago they met and fought with knives. Brioneu is dying, and Floris has been arrested and is in prison.

Piling Up the Deficit.

Washington, Jan. 12.—A treasury statement issued yesterday shows that the expenditures so far this month exceed the receipts by $6,213,743, which makes the deficiency for the fiscal year to date $33,778,204. Of the total receipts so far this month $7,297,244 was from customs, $3,017,947 from internal revenue, and $569,111 from miscellaneous sources. The total receipts since June 30 are $170,273,760, and the disbursements $204,051,968.

Swindler Solomon Held.

Willimantic, Conn., Jan. 12.—Emil Solomon, the swindling Odd Fellow, was brought to this city yesterday from Waterbury and pleaded guilty to swindling the local lodge out of $5 and also admitted other similar swindling operations. Justice Meloney held him for trial in the superior court under $300. Solomon was very penitent and claimed that his swindling acts were done to procure food for his wife and five children.

Gov. Waite in Chicago.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—A committee representing the populists received ex-Gov. Waite at the Union depot when he arrived from Denver and escorted him to the Great Northern hotel. Mr. Waite said he wanted to see the man who could poll the largest vote nominated for the presidency by the populists, and if he was their choice he would do all in his power to be elected. He will lecture here to-night.

Reading's Earnings.

Philadelphia, Jan. 12.—The annual statement of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad company for the fiscal year ending Nov. 30, 1894, shows gross receipts from traffic, $20,344,775.02; gross expenses $11,278,989.05; leaving earnings from traffic $9,065,785.97. To this is added $505,632.40 profit from other sources and thus showing gross earnings $9,571,418.43.

Big Gold Strike.

Crede, Col., Jan. 12.—A big gold strike was made yesterday in the New York and Chance mines at this place. Heretofore the mine has been a rich silver producer and has enriched the owners several thousand dollars and now has developed into a gold producer.

The First Free School.

Dedham, Mass., Jan. 12.—The citizens of Dedham celebrated in Memorial hall with great eclat last night the 250th anniversary of the establishment within its limits of a free public school, which school, it is claimed, was the first one established in the world.

Dined with the President.

Washington, Jan. 12.—Joseph Jefferson the veteran actor with Mr. Francis Wilson, who is now playing an engagement at the New National theatre, in this city, were the guests of President Cleveland at a luncheon at the executive mansion yesterday.

Gen. Alfred W. Ellet Dead.

Washington, Jan. 12.—A telegram announcing the death of Gen. Alfred W. Ellet at Eldorado, Kan., has been received by his niece, Mrs. W. J. Cabell. Gen. Ellet commanded the Mississippi marine brigade during the war under Sherman and Grant.

Local Weather Forecast.

Fair; colder; westerly winds.

PLAINFIELD'S BATTLE.

The Nation's War Department Takes a Hand.

LAMONT DIRECTS THE ANSWER.

No Credence Whatever Accorded to the Statements of "American"—Since "Facts Count", Here Are Some for His Delectation—A Reply That Was Necessarily Deleted Because of the Department Investigation.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I see your paper at odd times, and in the issue of Nov. 20, 1894 I find an article of over a column in length, headed "Reply to Wilbere" and signed "American". Among other things in this would-be patriot's letter the following statement appears:

"The official War Records show that during the war the proportion of desertions was as follows: American born, 5 per cent; British (Protestant) 7 per cent; Germans, 16 per cent; Irish Catholic, 72 per cent. Facts count."

I was surprised, first that any man who lays so much stress on the point that facts count would make such a statement, and surprised in the second place that a paper with the standing that the Plainfield Daily Press has would publish a statement which has on its very face all the earmarks of falsehood, on any condition other than over the writer's full name. A plain unvarnished lie put in the public press, should never, in my judgment, be hid behind an assumed name. If a man wishes to make an assertion without data or proof, he should do so in the open day over his own signature, and like a man bear all the consequences, and not sneak like a cur dog behind a nom de plume.

I herewith send you a letter from the War Department, which gives facts, and "facts count"; and I ask you to publish it with my letter in as prominent place and type as you did the lie which "American" wrote with the intent to arouse the bitter passion of prejudice among our people. In the article referred to there are other glaring falsehoods which I will not answer, as I think this letter from the War Department is sufficient to condemn his vaporings as a malicious attempt to stir up strife and discord in a peaceable community, and that it will convince any reasonable man that there is not a scintilla of truth in his whole letter, but that it was written to malign a large and respectable body of American citizens.

The figures given and purporting to show the percentage of desertions of the different nationalities of which the armies was composed are false in every particular. "Facts count"; the letter from Col. Ainsworth, by order of Daniel Lamont, Secretary of War, shows conclusively that no such record has ever been made. "Facts count", and as facts do count the facts given by the War Department show that the story of desertions as given by "American" is a tissue of falsehoods made from whole cloth, and my convictions are that "American" knew he was lying when he wrote that letter; but if he did not he is too ignorant to write for the Plainfield Daily Press, and I care not which horn of the dilemma he may choose.

HARVEY J. TETTEMER.

St. Louis, Jan. 7, 1895.

Address: Chief of the Record and Pension Office, War Department, Washington, D. C.

W
Subject: Statistics. 403 597.

RECORD AND PENSION OFFICE,
WAR DEPARTMENT

Washington City, December 27, 1894.

H. J. Tettemer, No. 724 and 726 Lucas avenue, St. Louis, Missouri.

SIR:—In reply to your letter of the 24th instant, received today, relative to a statement by certain newspapers that seventy-five per cent. of the deserters of the late war were Irish Catholics, I am directed by the Secretary of War to inform you as follows:

No compilation has ever been made by this Department upon which any statement concerning the matter can be based.

As a matter of fact, the number of soldiers of any given nativity or religious creed in service during the war of the rebellion is not known, and it is not possible, from any data yet prepared, for this or any other Department, or for any individual, official or otherwise, to make even an approximately correct statement of the number or percentage of deserters belonging to any particular creed or nationality.

When it is understood that the War Department is the sole custodian of the records of the armies in service during the war, and that it has made no statement relative to the religious creed of the soldiers in service during the war, or of the number of deserters of any nationality or religious denomination, it will be seen that such statements as have been published on this subject are entitled to no credence whatever.

Very respectfully,
F. C. AINSWORTH,
Colonel U. S. Army,
Chief, Record and Pension Office.

—The Junior Christian Endeavor society of Trinity Reformed Church will hold a sociable next Friday evening.

—W. J. Buttfield has acquired from the Emmons Bros. the Washington Park tract which The Press recently said was sold to the Emmonses, and the improvements will proceed as already stated.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

From The Press of Jan. 12.

The prize essays on the "Use and Abuse of Tobacco" have been handed in, and considerable interest is manifested as to who shall receive the prizes. Almost the entire Senior class entered the contest, while the Third class had the fewest competitors.

Both the beginners and advanced Physics classes have arrived at the study of electricity, in which they are joined by several of the Seniors who wish a more thorough knowledge of the subject. The Zoology class has taken up the study of the smaller animals. The Astronomy class has just begun the study of the individual planets. The Senior English Literature class is studying Spenser and has begun reading "The Faerie Queene"

The Senior class is at present deeply interested in the power plant being constructed at Niagara Falls; short sketches have been written on the subject, and now each pupil is expected to give a two-minute talk on it.

The vote for the school colors will be taken Monday morning; five new selections were handed in yesterday. The voting will be very close.

The Kappa Delta Phi held its regular meeting yesterday afternoon. Owing to the absence of two of the debaters, the debate was postponed, after an earnest discussion a society pin was adopted. The design chosen was a plinth of black enamel with Kappa Delta Phi engraved on it in gold. John V Beekman, Jr., was appointed to procure the pins. The colors of the society were changed to black and gold in order to avoid complications with the class of '93. Charles B. Morse was appointed a committee to make arrangements relating to the Vincent lectures. The programme committee reported the following programme for Jan. 18. Debate, "From which does the Mind gain the more: Knowledge, Reading, or Observation?". The speakers for the side of Reading will be Lewis Band, Henry Eggerding and Edgar I Serrell. Those for the side of Observation will be John V Beekman, George A. Horne and Chas B. Morse. At the close of the business session each member spoke for two minutes on any subject that they wished The speakers and subjects were: John V. Beekman, Jr., Bishop Patterson; A B Crane, The Minds of Great men; C B. Morse, An Ideal Commonwealth; Lewis Band, Further Ideas on an Ideal Commonwealth; J H. Craig, Instinct of Pigeons; G A. Horne, The Power Plant at Niagara Falls; H. B. Drake, The Spartan Institutions; Chas. Noble, The Mind of the Dog.

The regular meeting of the Lyceum was held as usual yesterday afternoon The programme consisted of a hash debate on the subject "Is this country more indebted to capital than to labor?" J. H Craig, Nathan Lane, Jr., and Chas. B Morse spoke for the affirmative, and H B Drake and J. V. Rittenhouse for the negative. A committee, composed of Lewis Band, Chas. Noble and Lambert Fish, decided the debate in favor of the negative. It was proved that capital and labor depended on one another, but that labor had the greatest influence. At the close of the meeting the committee on the St. Valentine's Day meeting met and made a number of the preliminary arrangements, further details of the meeting will be announced in a few days.

NINETY-FIVE.

The Provost Guard.

The Santa Rosa (Cal.) Democrat has the following to say of Washington Davis's drama, "The Provost Guard", which will be presented at Music Hall, Plainfield, next Thursday evening, January 17:

"The Provost Guard is a realistic military drama founded on incidents of the Civil War. The play does not deal with bombastic clap-trap, but is a drama of excellent situations, very bright comedy, clean and witty dialogue and vivid tableaux. The third act deals with the battle of the Cross Roads, Kentucky, and shows the purpose of the Provost Guard, which all well-read people, especially Grand Army men, fully understand and appreciate.

"The material for this play was very carefully gathered by Mr. Davis, and the result is a strong piece different in plot and action from any other military drama that has been produced. All in all it is fully equal to 'Shenandoah', or 'Held by the Enemy'.

"The cast embraces ten of the best professional people in America under the management of W. R. Palmer."

The Third Regiment Cadet Corps of Plainfield, under the command of Capt. George F. Edwards, will participate in the military scenes. The uniforms and everything tributary to the play are perfect. To the present date the play has been the most successful produced this season.

Jack'll Be There.

John H. Carney, Plainfield's popular Dutchman, has accepted a very pressing invitation to be present at the installation of Hopocon Tribe, I. O. R. M., of Port Oram, Thursday, Jan. 17. Mr Carney was present on a similar occasion in Port Oram four years ago and his Dutch specialties gave such great pleasure to his auditors that he has several times been urged to favor with a return visit, but has never found it convenient until the present time.

Music and a Supper.

The Ladies Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed Church will give a musical entertainment, followed by a supper, in the lecture room, Thursday and Friday evenings, Jan. 24 and 25, at 8.

FIGHTING INCOME TAX

Senator Hill Assails It in a Long Speech.

Supported in the Main by Mr. Sherman—Senator Quay's Motion to Postpone Further Consideration Defeated—Court of Claims Bills Discussed in the House.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The debate in the senate on the subject of the income tax occupied the better part of five hours. Most of that time was used by Mr. Hill (dem., N. Y.) in advocacy of the amendment offered by him, the preceding day, giving courts of the United States jurisdiction to hear and determine suits to test the constitutionality and validity of the tax. He assailed the tax as unequal, ununiform, and unjust, and expressed his conviction that the senate would agree with him that the provision as it now stood was unconstitutional, unwieldy and unworkable, and that it ought not to be inflicted on the tax payers, the executive officer, or congress.

Mr. Sherman (rep., O.) said that, in the main, he agreed with the senator in regard to the tax; but he held that a refusal by the senate to appropriate money to carry it out would tend to overthrow the principles on which the government is established, and would be particularly wrong in regard to a revenue which the senate had no power to originate.

Speeches were also made by Mr. Dubois (rep., Ida.), Mr. Quay (rep., Pa.) and Mr. Mitchell (rep., Ore.)

A motion by Mr. Quay to postpone the further consideration of the bill and amendment till the first Monday in February received one vote, (his own) in its favor, and 43 against it. A point of order was made against the Hill amendment, (that it was general legislation on a general appropriation bill) and was sustained by the presiding officer (Mr. Faulkner, (dem., W. Va.) An appeal from this ruling was taken by Mr. Hill, and at that stage of the proceedings, the whole matter went over until to-day. Two financial bills were introduced, one by Mr. Vest (dem., Mo.), to substitute for the treasury notes and gold and silver certificates, notes of equal amount payable "in gold and silver coin of the United States" and one by Mr. McPherson (dem., N. J.), authorizing the issue and sale of bonds. The senate at 5:20 adjourned until to-day.

House Proceedings.

Under the rules of the house the day was private bill day, and three hours were spent in an unavailing consideration, in committee of the whole, of a bill that enjoyed the attention of the body on the day last devoted to the private calendar in July, 1894. It was for the payment of $12,000 for stores and supplies from a loyal Tennesseean in the war, as adjudged by the court of claims. The bill elicited a discussion of the general policy of congress with respect of these bills and Mr. Boatner (dem., La.) said that if it was the intention to pay none of them, the sooner that fact was known the better it would be for the peace of mind of the representatives from the southern states.

Mr. Cockrell (dem., Tex.) said he had no request to make of the conquerers on account of claim advanced by men who estblished their loyalty to the government thirty years after the war ended.

Mr. Dockery (dem., Mo.) said hat for himself, he would repeal the Bowman and Tucker acts, abolish the committee on war claims and declare the war closed.

No action was had upon the bill. Upon recommendation of the committee of the whole the house laid on the table the bill to remit to the contractors for building the dynamite cruiser Vesuvius the penalties imposed for delay in her construction.

Under unanimous consent a number of important bills were passed.

Mr. Dingley's substitute for the bill reported by the committee on merchant marine and fisheries, relating to the appointment and duties of shipping commissioners was passed; also the committee's bill increasing from $100 to $1,000 a day the penalty for the violation of the law for the protection of the salmon fisheries for Alaska, and directing the appointment of inspectors to see that the law is enforced.

Moonshiner and Officer Killed.

Columbia, S. C., Jan. 12.—A special from Walhalla, S. C., says: Robert Moore, a revenue officer and Robert T. Thrift, a moonshiner, shot and killed each other. Thrift was arrested last night by Moore for running an illicit distillery and was being taken to Walhalla to be placed in jail. Thrift tried to escape by shooting Moore, who returned the fire. Each shot struck a vital part, and both men died in a few minutes.

Prominent Railroad Man Dead.

Detroit, Jan. 12.—E. J. Pierce, one of the most widely known and poular railroad men in the country, died at his residence here from a complication of diseases after an illness of two months. Mr. Pierce was 53 years old. For thirty years he has been connected with the Grand Trunk Railway company, and for the past twenty years he has acted as city ticket agent at this point.

A Delaware Murderer Respited.

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 12.—Michael Faino, who in October last, was sentenced to be hanged for the murder of Carlo Ruva, on April 20, 1893, has been respited by Governor Reynolds for 55 years. Faino was to have been executed on January 25.

Shoe Workers' Strike.

Haverhill, Mass., Jan. 12.—Two weeks have passed since the great shoe workers strike commenced, and, so far as any indication of surrender of the manufacturers to the demand of the strikers is concerned, the end is as far off as ever.

Reducing Treasury Gold.

Washington, Jan. 12.—The treasury lost in gold withdrawals Thursday and yesterday $3,625,000 reducing the treasury gold reserve to $77,349,400, at the close of business yesterday.

IN THE TRADE WORLD

Prospects for the Near Future Fairly Good.

Weather Conditions in the East Interfere with Business—Production of Iron and Steel in Excess of Demand—Favorable Showing in the Prices of Staples.

New York, Jan. 12.—Bradstreet's in a review of the state of trade says: The second week of the new year brings few reports of an increasing volume of orders for seasonable goods. Weather conditions in the east have been unfavorable, those west and south the reverse.

Chicago, St. Louis, Boston, New York and Philadelphia report relatively great improvement, with increased orders for dry goods, clothing, rubbers, shoes, hardware and woolen dress goods. At some centers it is too early to judge of the outlook for trade. Travelers in many instances have not all gone out. Western furniture manufacturers are stocking up, which has had an influence on the hardware trade, and western dealers in iron and steel expect increased orders by February 1. Production of iron and steel is going on in excess of demand, but manufacturers expect that necessary repairs, renewals and additions to plants by railroad companies, car manufacturers and other industrial enterprises will have a stimulating influence in the near future.

A feature among jobbers in Philadelphia and Boston has been the extent to which sales of dry goods and shoes have been pushed. Prints and ginghams have been opened and new orders are freely received. Foreign woolen dress goods are active, going to all parts of the country. Not a few orders are already received. This has had a quieting effect on demand for domestic dress woolens. Woolen mills, while fairly busy on first orders, are in the market for wool only to cover contracts.

On the Pacific coast trade at most larger cities is quiet. At San Francisco almost constant rains have intensified dullness, and the certainty of a large crop of wheat depresses quotations for that cereal. At Portland, Ore., merchants announce an improvement in business, due to a revival in demand from the interior.

Total bank clearings throughout the United States for six business days ended with January 10, amount to $1,039,000,000, an increase of 9.4 per cent. over the total for the previous week in January, 1894. When compared with the corresponding week in the panic year 1893, four months before the panic appeared, the past week's total shows a decrease of 24 per cent., and contrasted with the like total in 1892, a falling off of 26 per cent. This comparatively favorable showing is reinforced by the course of prices of staples, as quotations for hides have been working higher, while those for wheat, Indian corn, pork, lard, coffee, cotton, and plate glass have all been marked up. Prices for shoes, leather, coal, lumber, naval stores, rice, sugar, tobacco, and live cattle have been held firmly. Cruder forms of iron and steel are no lower, but are weak. Neither is wool lower, but it is flat at the lowest quotation known, while prices for oats and for live hogs have declined. There are 405 business failures reported throughout the United States this week, compared with 373 last week, 484 in the week a year ago, 401 two years ago and 379 three years ago.

DIRTY STREETS THE CAUSE.

Prevalence of Grip in New York Attributed To Their Condition.

New York, Jan. 12.—Health Commissioner Dr. Cyrus Edson, said that he considered the prevalence of grip to the filthy condition of the streets and tenements.

"If these conditions continue," he said, "and the temperature rises above sixty degrees as it frequently does in January, why the result will be disastrous. I don't mean to attribute the original presence of grip to dirty streets; the disease exists all over the country. But the filthy condition of things is largely responsible for the manner in which it is spreading."

Say Their Dismissals Were Unjust.

Washington, Jan. 12.—Three of the discharged employes of the New York city postoffice have complained to the civil service commission that their dismissals were unjust and was done without cause. They claim to have been efficient and faithful clerks but do not assign political reasons for their discharges. The civil service commission has forwarded their complaints to the first assistant postmaster general for consideration.

Gave the Bank People a Scare.

Kansas City, Kan., Jan. 12.—There was consternation in the Kansas State bank yesterday when August Ellisner, an avowed anarchist, pulled three pieces of bar iron from his pocket and threw them through the plate glass windows from the sidewalk in front of the bank. The bars were mistaken for dynamite. At the police station Ellisner said he sought that method to get arrested for shelter and food.

"Founder's Day" at Cornell.

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 12.—"Founder's Day" was celebrated at Cornell university yesterday. The principal event in the exercises attending the observance of the day was an address by Charles A. Dana of the New York Sun. The exercises were held in the armory before an audience of 2,000 people.

Defaulter Carter Serving His Time.

New York, Jan. 12.—Edward C. Carter, the defaulting cashier of the Bank of Commerce who was Thursday sentenced to six years and one month in the Kings county penitentiary, was taken from Ludlow street jail yesterday to begin his term in the penitentiary.

Wind and Snow Create Havoc.

Naples, Jan. 12.—A violent wind and snow storm swept over Foggia, on the great plain of Apulia, yesterday. Six houses collapsed. Eight persons were killed and many others were injured.

WANT AND PRIVATION

Hocking Valley Mine Workers Starving.

Once Prosperous Villages Now in Need of Aid—Suggestions That Permanent Relief Stations Be Provided—Gov. McKinley Will Be Appealed To for Help.

Columbus, O., Jan. 12.—The disclosures of the destitute condition of the miners in and about Nelsonville, made first by the United Press last Thursday morning, may have the effect of measures being taken to establish permanent relief stations.

Many plans have already been suggested looking to that end and precedents are pointed to for the purpose of providing the feasibility of the plans suggested.

Operators freely admit that they lose at least five cents on every ton of coal shipped out of the Hocking Valley, and for this they blame the excessive freight rates, the miners and the Pennsylvania operators.

Just how this deplorable condition of affairs is to be remedied cannot be foretold, but some definite action will probably be taken at the annual convention of the United Mine Workers of America which will convene here on Feb. 12.

The suggestion which seems to meet with most approval, however, and which is most generally discussed, and especially among the miners, is the co-operative scheme which has been adopted by the Shawnee miners. It is generally conceded that the co-operative system on the terms the Shawnee miners have adopted bodes evil for the miners in the Pittsburg district, but at present the Hocking Valley miners seem to be looking out only for themselves, and to do that successfully they have a big job on their hands. The circumstances which brought about the present condition of affairs—the disregard of the Pennsylvania operators of the differential of nine cents—are almost wholly ignored, and when the question is asked, why the miners do not accept a reduction and thus enable the Hocking Valley operators to operate their mines and compete with Pennsylvania in the lake trade, many of the operators answer by saying it is too late to think of that now as all the big contracts for the year have been made, and none of them came to the Hocking Valley.

Another statement which is unhesitatingly made is that even if the miners were willing to go into the mines for 40 cents a ton, no more could be used than is being mined at present at 60 cents. They claim that the competitive field is entirely closed to them.

There is no material difference between th condition of affairs existing in the Hocking Valley and those in the Sunday Creek Valley. In the latter all the mines are practically idle—only a few miners being at work—and a mass meeting has been called at Gloucester to-day for the purpose of formulating plans to relieve the needy. While the destitution in the Hocking Valley has absorbed the attention of the general public the conditions in the case of the Sunday Creek Valley have been ignored probably because they were not generally known. If possible the privations in this valley exceed in severity those in the Hocking Valley especially in the Buckingham district, where the greatest suffering seems to exist and where scenes of destitution are almost indescribable and also incredible. A committee will be appointed and sent to Columbus to ask the governor for aid, and Glouster will be made the distributing point.

At Corning, a large meeting of business men, miners and other laborers was held yesterday to make a united appeal to the governor for aid. At this meeting Mr. Coleman, president of the Miners' union at Nelsonville, said:

"The condition is deplorable, and hundreds of men, women and children are on the verge of starvation. The miners demand labor in preference to charity and they petitioned the operators for a division of even the half loaf, but were refused."

Proper steps were taken for securing relief.

The vicinity of Jacksonville, a year ago was a prosperous district, but now a majority of the people are starving.

Gov. McKinley late last night received a telegram from Attorney Coultrap of McArthur, Vinton county, who had been requested to ascertain the extent of suffering among miners in the Hocking Valley.

Mr. Coultrap stated that he had been unable to ascertain the full extent of the destitution, but he had learned enough to warrant the sending of another carload of shoes, clothing and provisions into the valley at once. This will be sent to-day.

A gentleman who arrived here from the destitute district says he made a pretty extensive tour of the district and that the published accounts have not been exaggerated. He says in many families there was not a shoe in the house, and hardly enough clothing to cover nakedness.

Will Not Remove Headquarters.

New York, Jan. 12.—Vice-President Baldwin, of the Southern railway, says that the reports that the headquarters of the company were to be removed from Knoxville to Atlanta were untrue. The company will, however, make some additions to its shops in Atlanta and will establish a big storehouse there for the distribution of supplies.

Champion De Oro Beaten.

New York, Jan. 12.—Alfredo De Oro, the champion of the world at continuous pool, was defeated badly last night in a match of 200 points up, with Grant Eby of Springfield, O. The score was 230 to 95. Eby winning in faultless style. De Oro was in bad form.

Treasurer of the I. N. F. of A.

New York, Jan. 12.—John D. Crimmins was elected treasurer of the Irish National Federation of America, to succeed the late Eugene Kelly, at a special meeting of the trustees and officers at the residence of Dr. Emmet last Monday.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

A HAPPY FELLOW.

From the meadow where I sit,
See a sky o' blue—
God was six days paintin' it
Jest fer me an' you.

Every time it strikes my eye
I keep sayin': "There's your sky!
Blue an' bendin'
An' unendin'!"
So I sing, an' never sigh.

Sunshine over hill an' glen—
Birds in every tree;
When God made the country, ten
Acres came to me!

Every time it blossoms fair,
I keep sayin': "That's your share!
Roses growin'—
Rivers flowin'!"
So I'm happy everywhere!

Spring or winter—rain or shine,
Don't care where I'm at,
So much of the country's mine—
Praise the Lord for that!

Sky an' meadow, high or low,
I keep sayin' as I go—
"There's your birthright!"
Got the earth right—
That is why I'm singing so.
—F. L. Stanton in Life.

DR. WILDER'S BRAINLESS FROG.

Put Through Its Tricks Before the Association of American Anatomists.

A brainless frog was one of the features of interest on the second and last day's session of the Association of American Anatomists. It was exhibited by Dr. Burt G. Wilder of Cornell University, and it was brought upon the scene after Dr. Wilder had read his paper on "Some Anomalies of the Brain."

It was a good-sized, lusty-looking batrachian, and it was in a bottle. Dr. Wilder handled the bottle gingerly while he explained that he had removed the frog's brain on Dec. 7, the frog being under the influence of ether. He then rolled the frog out on the table. All the men of science gathered around and examined the frog's left ear, where the brain had been removed.

The frog, meanwhile, had got into a squat, and gazed stupidly straight before him. He was motionless, and when Dr. Wilder passed his hand quickly before his bulbous eyes the frog didn't even blink.

"That shows," said Dr. Wilder with a little pride, "that froggie hasn't enough brains left to realize the impression given to the eye."

When the doctor touched the frog's back, however, he wriggled and made a movement as if he'd like to get away, only he hadn't enough energy to do so. Then Dr. Wilder brought out a wicker cylinder, and when the frog was placed on top of it he knew enough to keep from sliding off, or to keep it from slipping from under him.

The frog, having shown himself off in this trick, was put in a glass basin half full of water. Instantly he struck out with all fours, and swam as if his head were full of brains.

"That," said Dr. Wilder, "is just like a frog that has a mind."

Then a bit of meat was got, and forced down the frog's throat with the aid of a forceps. For a moment the meat rested there, the frog not knowing enough to swallow. But presently it must have choked him, for he gave a great gulp and bolted it.

"That," said Dr. Wilder triumphantly, "is reflex action."

The end of the frog's accomplishments having been reached, he was put back in his bottle. It is said that he may live for seven or eight months without a brain.

GOLD MINES IN CEMETERIES.

Half a Million in Gold Buried Annually with Americans.

A Frenchman who recently made a tour of the United States has been writing his impressions in Le Temps. In one of his articles he says that what struck him particularly in this country was the American habit of filling the teeth with gold.

He consulted statisticians, he says, and by figuring on information given by them has discovered that the gold annually pounded into cavities in the teeth of Americans amounts to the value of £500,000.

All of this precious metal, he says, is buried with the Yankees when they die, and he figures that at the end of three centuries the cemeteries of America will contain gold to the value of £150,000,000.

"I am afraid," the writer goes on to say, "that this will prove too tempting to the practical mind of the future American, and we shall see the day when companies will be organized to mine the cemeteries and recover the gold secreted in the jaws of dead ancestors."

A Grand Old Man.

Col. James Moore consulting engineer of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, yesterday entered upon his eighty-third year, he having been born Jan. 9, 1813. He was the pioneer of the Jersey Central system and with John Taylor Johnston carried out that, which looked to many at the time of its inception, a chimera. He is today hale and hearty, though the oldest civil engineer in point of practice in the United States, and the hope is that he may live to round out a full century.

He has earned the season of rest and recreation he is enjoying, and the good wishes of everyone with whom he was ever brought in contact go out to him as he passes another milestone on the journey of life.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. David King of North Plainfield is ill with the grip.

George P. Dupee's infant son is slowly recovering from the grip.

Frank Cleaves of Netherwood is slowly improving from a long illness.

Mrs. Oliver of East Fifth street is confined to her home with the grip.

W. C. Chamberlain has been granted a patent on a multiple printing press.

Miss Stella Shotwell of Park avenue is recovering from an attack of the grip.

Miss Harriet Loomis of New York is visiting Miss Morse of Franklin place.

Miss Lizzie Smalley of Craig place is improving from an attack of tonsilitis.

Nathan Lane of Sycamore avenue is confined to his home by an attack of the grip.

J Shepherd of Griffen's hardware store is slowly recovering from a severe attack of the grip.

J. P. Emmons has broken ground for a new house on Duer street, near Greenbrook road.

Miss May Mulford of East Fifth street has for several days been confined to the house by illness.

Mrs. S. P. T. Wilbur of East Third street is slowly recovering from an attack of the grip.

After a long illness, Mrs. William L Smalley is able to be about, and is steadily improving.

Samuel Titus of 10 Howard street, who has been ill with diphtheria, is much improved.

Mrs. Charles Matthews has gone on a two-weeks visit to her sister, Mrs. W. I. Greenough, Sunbury, Pa.

Thomas J. Hughes of East Second street is quite ill with the grip. Dr. Boone is attending him.

Miss Nora Rockwell of East Front street is confined to her home with a severe attack of the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. H. D. Brewster of New York are visiting at the home of W. J. Broome of Sycamore avenue.

Mrs. John Neal of Boston and Mrs. McDonald of Newark are the guests of Mrs. Albert Hedden of Park avenue.

Fred Fullerton of Montclair has returned to Plainfield and resumed his studies in the Plainfield Latin School.

Col. J. F. Wilson, who has been confined to the house by a severe cold, is much better, and hopes to be out again soon.

Under the care of Dr. Jenkins, George H., 11-year-old son of George P. Dupee of Rockview avenue, is convalescing from the grip.

Fred Hul, the East Front street tonsorial artist, who has been suffering from the grip for several days, has returned to his shop again.

Miss Pierce of Boston, after a delightful visit at the hospitable home of Mrs. J. R. Joy on Willow avenue, is visiting friends in New York.

George Belcher has recently purchased the property known as the "Norton house" on East Fifth street, near Park avenue, and will make improvements at once.

Frank Kesselring, formerly of Heidleberger, Frank & Co., clothers, has accepted a position with James McCreery & Co., Broadway and 11th street, New York.

F. F. Beekman of Netherwood avenue who was married two weeks ago, has moved into his new house just completed at Johnson avenue and East Second street.

S. Frank Runyon, for some years in the employ of the local U. S. Express office, has been confined to his home on Sycamore street several days with a slight attack of pneumonia.

Fred Leland has given up his position as an agent for the Prudential Insurance Company, and engaged in business with his father, G. H. Fairchild fills the vacancy with the company.

The home of C. K Moore of Fanwood has been ornamented by a fine rug made from the big red fox shot by that valiant and mighty hunter, the Judge's son James, up in York state.

Mrs. Arthur G. Kerr and family of College place are spending a week with friends on Long Island, and during their absence the genial A. G. is forced much against his will to keep bachelor's hall.

Dr. H. G. Stephenson, who will be 91 years of age in March, had a bad fall Sunday in an effort to brave the icy pavements and get to church, and since has been suffering from the grip. His condition is alarming.

Much sympathy is expressed for Thos. Clarke, the faithful organ blower of the Crescent Avenue Church, in the loss of his wife, who died this morning after a three-weeks illness. She was a devoted wife and a devout Christian, and in Christian resignation the husband bows to his bereavement. Decedent leaves a daughter, Mrs. Charles W. Fisher, and other children.

Miss Kathryn Krymer, who will sing in the Congregational Church Thursday evening, Jan. 17, is the second alto of the Verdi Ladies Quartette of Brooklyn, and sings in the Bloomingdale Reformed Church, one of the large churches of New York. She has a phenomenally deep contralto voice, of great range and power. Her singing of familiar ballads, once heard, is not easily forgotten.

—Friday evening the P. B. C. will try to defeat the Y. M. C. L. A. bowlers in the Journal League tournament on the Trade Temple alleys.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Wm. Chamberlain of New street is ill.

Dr. B. VanD. Hedges has a severe attack of the grip.

Walter L. Hatfield, Jr., is very sick at home with bronchitis.

O. F. Pierson has bought the house of Wm. Bohl on Astor place.

Mr. Salkfeld of Sandford avenue is confined to the house by illness.

Lewis G. Timpson is confined to his home with an attack of the grip.

Mrs. Vincent Baker of Sandford avenue is recovering from severe illness.

J. B. Pope of East Second street is confined to his house by a severe cold.

The engagement of Miss Margaret Keegan to James Harper is announced.

Mrs. Hodge of Finderne is the guest of her son, Peter Hodge of Somerset street.

G. Q. Dolliver of Manning avenue is still confined to the house with a severe cold.

Miss May Stedman of New York is visiting Miss Ida Dunham of Arlington avenue.

A son has been added to the household of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Storr of West Front street.

Harry Carey of Prospect place has returned from a visit with friends in New York State.

Mr. Winckler of New Brunswick is visiting his uncle, Augustus J. Winckler of 32 Park place.

Mrs. M. B. Lythoff of New York city is visiting Mrs. Losier at "The Gables", Netherwood.

Miss Katherine M. Haines of Norristown is visiting Mrs. William L. Brown of Belvidere avenue.

Mrs. Ellen Disborough of East Front street, who is visiting relatives in Stroudsburg, Pa., is quite ill.

Dr. Clark of East Second street has had a relapse of his recent illness, and is again confined to his home.

D. J. Sisk has returned from the Hospital to his work as engineer in the Scott Printing Machine Works.

Mrs. Stephen Haight, wife of New York's celebrated architect, is visiting Dr. and Mrs. Lighthill, 131 Crescent avenue.

Miss M. Lee Freeman, who has been visiting friends in New York city, returned to her home on South avenue yesterday.

Mrs. Nealy of Duer street, who has been seriously ill, is slowly improving, and her friends hope she will be out in a few days.

Reuben Bay, the mail despatcher between the station and the postoffice, moved yesterday from Mall alley to Arlington avenue.

Albert Smith who has charge of store supplies at the Commercial Palace, is confined to his home on West Second street with the grip.

Charles Christensen and family of Westfield have rented the house situated on the corner of North avenue and Hill street, Netherwood.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. McMillen, who have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. A. Lord of Belvidere avenue, have returned to their home in Jersey City.

Dr. T. S. Davis returned yesterday from Atlantic City, where he has been taking a deserved rest from his overwork in the cause of Plainfield's health.

Zachariah Wilson was able to be out yesterday, after a serious illness. He and his family have removed from 98 Somerset street to 24 Harmony street.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C Startup of Westervelt avenue returned last evening from Middletown, N. Y., where they attended the funeral of Mr. Startup's grandfather, William Startup.

Policeman W. J Mattox who has been off duty since Dec. 31 by reason of illness, passed a very uncomfortable night Wednesday, and some fears are entertained that his illness may develop into pneumonia.

Mrs. John VanMiddlesworth of Somerville is ill from an attack of paralysis. She with her husband are the oldest citizens of Somerville, having moved there about 1832. She is the mother of H VanMiddlesworth of Liberty street, Plainfield.

Mrs. Stephen A. Ginna gave a most delightful musical last evening. Her magnificent home never appeared to better advantage. The decorations were especially beautiful. That the fortunate guests were highly entertained goes without saying.

E. B. Cornwall formerly a resident of Plainfield and at that time one of the chief clerks in the office of the General Superintendent of the Atlantic Division of the U. S. Express Co., 49 Broadway, New York, is a guest of the Prospect House, Southern Pines, N. C., where he was obliged to retire for his health. Mr. Cornwall made many friends during his sojourn in this city, all of whom hope the change will speedily result in complete recovery for the sufferer.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Canfield have removed from their former residence on West Fifth street, and will hereafter receive their friends at 57 West High street, Somerville. They will be very much missed by their host of Plainfield friends among whom they have always been prominent as leaders in fairs, entertainments and dances, and they carry with them to their new home the kind wishes of Iona Council and Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque Tribe with which they have so long been identified.

DOYLE HAS HIS SAY.

LIKES PHILADELPHIA BECAUSE IT'S SOMEWHAT ENGLISH, YOU KNOW.

Goes Slumming in Detroit, and Thinks American Blue Coats too Autocratic. His Blood Boiled at the Revelation Before the Lexow Committee. Other Views.

Dr. A. Conan Doyle, the English novelist, has come and gone. Upon the eve of his departure Dr. Doyle said to a reporter: "I have travelled as far west as Chicago and as far south as Washington. The city which pleased me most was Philadelphia. I notice that the Philadelphians are given to athletic sports of all kinds, and I see the result in the physique and general build and character of the men I met there. I think Philadelphia savors more of an English city than any other city in America, and perhaps that accounts for my being more pleased with it than with other cities I have visited.

"In every city I have visited," Dr. Doyle continued, "the citizens all talk about their police, and I will frankly state that I find the policemen much rougher than any I have ever met with in European countries. They seem to be given a despotic power that the foreigner would not submit to for a moment. I met only the police of Detroit, and went on a 'slumming' expedition in that city, guided by the police.

"I did not attend any of the sessions of your Lexow Committee investigations," the speaker added, "but I have read all of the testimony in the newspapers, and the evidence of official corruption has made my blood boil. I can not understand why the people have not risen and crushed the police force out of existence. It seems to me almost incredible that such a condition of bribery and blackmail should exist in a civilized country without a popular uprising. In England such a condition of affairs could never reach the magnitude it has assumed here.

"I am greatly pleased with the transportation facilities in this country. I think that in the matter of railroads England will compare favorably with America, still we have no such service as that rendered by the Pennsylvania limited. Your Pullman cars were a disappointment to me. We use them abroad, but we understand how to heat them, and apparently your railroad managers do not. To ride in a Pullman car for 24 hours in this country is the hardest work I have done since I arrived. Your tramways in the cities are serviceable, but in your elevated railroads I found something to delight me. The easy, comfortable cars, high speed and general comfort of the elevated trains, is something I shall always remember.

"I have been met most cordially by the people of this country, and shall carry many pleasurable recollections of my visit. Your women are charming and your men are easy to get acquainted with. The men are not surrounded with that palisade of coldness that one meets with on the other side. In fact, it takes but a short time to become acquainted, and I already know more persons in this country after my nine weeks' stay than I would meet and know in a year on the other side of the ocean.

"As to the social evil, of which there is so much talk in the newspapers, I can safely say that vice in this country is not to be compared with vice in England. In England it is flagrant and open, and one meets with it everywhere, but in New York and in this country generally if you want to find vice you have to go and look for it.

"I find a certain philosophical resignation about the American which astonishes me," Dr. Doyle continued. "Your tramways deliberately tear up the streets of your cities, leave huge trenches for citizens to ride or drive into; the companies run their tramways to suit themselves and the public calmly looks on and bears the annoyance. In England, should the tramway corporations attempt to ride roughshod over the public, one man would cry out and the cry would be heard in three hours from London to Liverpool."

Dr. Doyle said that he was not pleased with the American bar, referring to the saloon. He said that in England all drinking was done at tables, but here one had to stand up to a bar and drink, pay and get out. There was no comfort in the American custom.

He spoke in praise of our buildings and dwelt upon their height and handsome architecture. The Brooklyn Bridge, he said, would dwell long in his memory as the finest bridge he had ever seen. The American hotels, he said, would compare favorably with the European hostleries, but the hotels in provincial towns were what interested him most. He said that, while the hotels in London and other cities might be as elegant as those in the large cities here, the hotels in the smaller towns could not be compared with those in America.

Spoiled by Overdoing.

Cholly (on his knees)—Maud, you have intoxicated me with your charms.

Maud—Pshaw! You're no match for me.

Cholly—Why not?

Maud—You get drunk too easily.—Town Topics.

Poor Miss Antique.

"That Miss Antique is positively dreadful. She hasn't a redeeming feature about her, unless it is her disposition."

"It certainly isn't in her face."—Detroit Free Press.

"We are not very rich," said the newly married lady, "but oh, we are so happy."

"I believed you would be," cooed the unmarried lady. "In fact, that hateful Maud Biggins said you had to be happy, because you would be so poor that you would not even have anything to quarrel about."—Indianapolis Journal.

De Bach—Of course there are some comforts which men with wives have that bachelors do not, but, after all, a man has to give up a great deal when he gets married, doesn't he?

Longwed—Y—yes; every cent, the most of us.—Buffalo Courier.

George—Do you take after your father or your mother?

Mary—I don't know as I take after either of them, but they'll both take after you if they see you here.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

As long as a fish sticks to the water it is all right. There should be food for reflection in this thought for some men.—Yonkers Statesman.

Ada—Is Jack Rogers a talkative man?

Helen—I've been trying for two years to make him speak.—Life.

BARROOMS IN NORWAY.

Observations of the Workings of What Is Known as the Gothenburg System.

Dr. Moxom explained the Gothenburg or Norwegian system in detail, giving as its vital principle that the State shall make the liquor business an absolute monopoly, and put it into the control of responsible men, whose motive is to reduce, instead of increase, the per capita consumption.

The effect is also to reduce the number of saloons to a marked degree. The profits accrue not to the company, but to the people, in the shape of public institutions, amusement halls, etc.

"I saw something of the workings of the system in Sweden and Norway," said Dr. Moxom.

"I visited more saloons last summer than I had seen before in my life. I examined the liquors carefully, found out what kinds were sold, and how many glasses a man can buy.

"In Bergen there are in the neighborhood of a dozen places where liquor is sold by the glass or bottle. Each is a plain room, perfectly clean, without even a picture on the wall. There is not even a chair in the room, except a stool behind the counter for the official in charge. He is a respectable man, probably a member of the church.

"On the walls are printed the rules of the company, which all must obey. If a man asks for aqua vita he lays down his coin—there is no credit—and pure, undrugged spirit is poured out for him. He is not allowed to remain in the room, and if he wants another glass he is told to come back in three hours. The glass is so small that he might take a glass every three hours in the day and not get drunk. A workingman cannot take a nip on his way to work, for the saloons do not open till eight, nor at noon, for the saloons close from 12 to 1:30 o'clock. The day before a holiday they close at noon, and they are closed before the workingmen are paid off.

"No man can make a cent from the business. The man behind the counter is employed for his personal character. He gets a fairly good salary, but not a cent from the business. If he deviates from the rules of the company he is bounced at once. He is promoted for making as small sales as possible. The policy of the whole system is to crowd down the consumption of alcohol. In 1876 the per capita consumption was 5.8 quarts; in 1892 it was reduced to 2.8 quarts. Norway and Sweden were the most drunken countries in Europe. Now Norway is three times as sober as the United States.

"It is the exact reverse of a license system, under which the licensed dealers stimulate trade as much as possible in order to get back the money they have paid for their licenses. I think it would be better to have free whiskey than such licenses as we have in American cities. The difference between that and this is as great as the difference between day and night. The Norwegian system eliminates politics entirely. It has been argued that it makes drunkenness respectable, but its effect has been to elevate the public spirit, and array it against drunkenness.

"The system has been recognized as working against the monster drink, and it has become less respectable to patronize a saloon."—Springfield Republican.

THE FAULT OF THE AVERAGE WOMAN

A List to Aid in the Self Examination of Conscience.

Women gossip. This is a fact, and it has no bearing upon the subject, to say that their gossiping is mild and harmless compared with men's. It is true that women's gossip springs from an intense, though somewhat misdirected interest in their fellow-beings. The fact remains that they gossip. Every woman who feels that this fault is hers should resolve to make an earnest effort to overcome it. She will not be particularly interesting as a companion when she refuses to hear and tell choice anecdotes about her friends, but she will have the infinite satisfaction of knowing she is pursuing the higher life.

Woman, as a class, is careless about time. She will come into an office and prattle an hour and a half about her servant, her baby, or her complexion lotion to busy women, whose time is money. She will make appointments and feel distinctly aggrieved because the persons with whom she makes them object to waiting forty minutes for her. She misses trains and cars, keeps hostesses in a state of wild unrest, causes cooks to give warning, and men to peril their souls by profanity, all because she finds it so difficult to acquire a proper regard for time.

She is thoroughly illogical. She will be incomparably gracious and charming to a man and will describe her conduct as polite. If another woman assumes the same attitude that woman is a dangerous coquette. If the man presumes upon her graciousness she is ice. If he is not misled by it she is very likely to consider him a person of no sensibility. If he claims that she has encouraged him to care for her she is annoyed and regards him with contempt, as a person unable to maintain his self control. If he does maintain it and does not openly succumb to her charms, she is annoyed and regards him with suspicion, as a person incapable of feeling.

She has a horrible fondness for shoping and a foolish dislike of harmless, necessary mice. She loves bargains and wastes much time and much brain tissue in order to save a little money on a yard of silk. She has an inconsequent habit of skipping the important news in the papers and confining her attention to personal gossip. She does not eat enough sensible food and she eats too much stuff which is not good for her. She likes excitement and hates dullness. And she has not yet come to see that excitement is wearing and dullness is the common unavoidable lot. When her desire for excitement leads her to champion causes, begin crusades and adopt missions, many other faults are added unto those she already possesses. But then she ceases to be the average woman.

No Apparent Reason.

Judge—Stand up, sir. Have you anything to say why the sentence of the law should not be passed on you?

"I'm not the prisoner, Yer Honor; I'm a detective."

Judge (fiercely)—Is that any reason?—Illustrated Bits.

Good Authority.

Mr. Pedagogs—Benny Blubumber, how do we know that the moon is 240,000 miles from the earth?

Benny (alarmed at the teacher's manner)—Y-y-you said so, yourself, sir.—Puck.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.

From the New York Sun of February 5, 1895.

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homœopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. New as the use of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled and careful apothecaries and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 SPRUCE ST., NEW YORK.

MEN WANTED To take orders. No delivering or collecting. Experience not necessary; steady employment; [illegible]; write at once and [illegible] choice of territory.
ALLEN NURSERY CO.,
Rochester, N.Y.

PROF. RIBOTEAU.

"It is a quaint, deserted-looking place," the girl said meditatively, as she tapped her foot on the pavement, which was green with growing moss, and gazed up at the ancient stone college.

At a little distance from the side street in which she stood came the roar of Paris; serenely indifferent to the tumult rose the lichen-encrusted college walls, frowningly facing the world with a pathetic patience engendered by long neglect. They were grimly gray; the girl who stood looking up at the vast college was a dream in gray from head to foot. Her hat was gray; she wore gray gaiters over her boots, and the slight wrap she carried, her gloves, dress, everything appeared to be of the same pearly hue. But she was young, fresh and fair, the grim gray college wan and old and desolate. In the girl's sunny eyes could be seen the sweetness of a young soul on the threshold of life; the walls of the college drooped with the burden of a message to which no one could listen.

The girl again gazed at the college as if she would like to enter its inhospitable, uncomfortable looking halls, but she had no pretext for doing so. While she hesitated, the Fates, which shape our lives, took the matter in hand and decreed she should cross its threshold, for a gloomier shadow fell across the bulging walls, the sun disappeared behind a cloud, a few raindrops splashed upon the uneven stones.

The girl looked at her dainty costume and sighed. "That is what comes of putting on one's prettiest frock," she said. "Miss McGruder was quite right. She declared when we came to Paris that we must wear all our old clothes, if we did not wish to be taken for Parisiennes. I cannot, somehow, bring myself to believe that Miss McGruder could ever be taken for a Parisienne; unless—unless by an American."

The rain plashed down in warmer, larger, thicker drops, as the girl gathered up her skirts preparatory to seeking shelter. At that moment two fast-looking women hurriedly brushed by her into the old college.

"I think I had better go, too," the girl said resignedly. "The rain will be over soon. Then I can return to Miss McGruder and be scolded for wandering about alone. Sometimes, for a free born Canadienne, I think I submit a little too much to Miss McGruder's scoldings. One must have in Paris what Thackeray calls a 'lap dog,' just to snap at intruders. Charlie made me promise to be careful how I went about by myself when I was foolish enough to consent to marry him, and so I had to bring her with me, dear, sweet old thing. However, when we get back to Caledonia Springs there will be Charlie, and then Miss McGruder can return to the manse at Greenville. Poor Miss McGruder! What a pity her big heart hasn't some one to love!"

Calista Crane peeped into the empty lodge.

"I can't enter the lodge. Perhaps it would be better to look for one of the class rooms, and shelter there. Some one is sure to be lecturing, and I may pass for a student."

Calista sat down near the fireplace as a loud, clear voice from the rostrum announced the beginning of the lecture.

She leaned forward, her elbow resting on the back of the chair immediately in front of her, her cheek supported by a gray-gloved hand. To the middle aged Professor of Arabic she was an apparition from a world which had long ceased to be real. He did not know that Calista's air of rapt attention was merely an unconscious pose, and that her thoughts were far away from him and his lecture.

Gradually Calista remembered that she had been dreaming for three quarters of an hour. Miss McGruder would become uneasy, and yet she could not possibly depart before the conclusion of the lecture; it would be too indecent. So she stayed on, listening with grave earnestness, her large eyes dilating with eager interest as the professor made clear the stupendous greatness of his task. Even when he had concluded the lecture she was endeavoring to realize the gaps which her restive imagination refused to adequately fill up.

The professor's musical voice sounded at her elbow. He had thrown aside his gown, and was clad in somewhat rusty black.

"Mademoiselle will permit that I introduce myself," he said in English, "so that I may give her thanks for the great pleasure which I have experienced in her studious attention to the subject of my lecture. I am Professor Riboteau, and this is the College of the Rue Casquette."

Calista bowed.

"Do you lecture every day, monsieur?"

"Yes, mademoiselle, every day; and on Arabic."

"But I don't understand," the girl said, delicately. "Surely you have students?"

"No, mademoiselle; in the College of the Rue Casquette there are no students."

"No students!"

"None, mademoiselle; the late Mme. Biribeau endowed several professional chairs, and the college is always open to the public, as mademoiselle sees. To-day the attendance has been exceptionally large. Usually there is—no one."

"Oh!" The girl gave a little gasp of sympathy, pity, incredulity. "And you lecture every day, monsieur? All the year round?"

"Every day, mademoiselle, all the year round, with the exception of fete days."

"How awful!" she said.

"Ah!" The professor's eyes gleamed. "Mademoiselle is an ardent student. Perhaps she will allow me the honor of directing her studies while she remains in Paris. It would be conferring on me a privilege inestimable, for the people of Paris are not interested in Arabic; they do not care to listen to me."

The professor said this as if it were the most commonplace thing in the world, and one which did not call for any special comment. Long years of neglect had made him callous. Beneath his indifferent manner, however, Calista fancied that she detected a keen gratitude to the one person whom the weary years had brought as an appreciative listener to his lecture.

She gathered from him that the other professors lectured in empty rooms for five minutes and then hurried away to more congenial occupations. But Professor Riboteau had lectured three quarters of an hour every day for five years, with the exception of Sundays and fete days.

When the Professor repeated his proposal, Calista hesitated. Her sudden enthusiasm for Arabic evaporated as quickly as it had arisen. Then the Professor's luminous eyes shone into hers with such appealing earnestness that the half-uttered refusal died away upon her lips. She gave him her address and said that Miss McGruder would be very happy to see him.

II.

The next day Prof. Riboteau called on Calista and Miss McGruder. The latter had conceived an exaggerated respect for Prof. Riboteau, based upon the report of his learning which had been given to her by Calista. But Miss McGruder, though well stricken in years (she was 45 if a day), soon felt a romantic admiration for the Professor, which was altogether lost on him. He brought Calista books, pencil-marked all over the yellow margins with different readings. Such was the man's enthusiasm for his calling that Calista stayed on a week longer than she had intended—another week—yet another week. The mornings were occupied in selecting her trousseau, her afternoons in learning Arabic.

And so, though her trousseau, the main object of the visit to Paris, was complete Calista lingered on. But there came a day when peremptory missives from Canada recalled her with urgent insistence to the land of the maple and the beaver.

In the delightful excitement of perpetual purchasing, Calista had almost forgotten the final end and aim of all this speeding from shop to shop, from milliner to milliner. But now a feverish expectancy took possession of the girl. She accelerated her preparations for departure and broke the news to Miss McGruder, who stared at her in astonishment.

"I thought you'd forgotten all about it," said that lady.

"No," said Calista, "I haven't forgotten, Auntie, but I seem to have been in a dream lately, and all I can see is Charlie standing on the Montreal wharf as the vessel slews into her moorings, imploring me to fly down to him. Let us go to-morrow."

"And the Professor?" asked Miss McGruder with much meaning. "The Professor? What is to become of him?"

A sudden pang of pain shot through the girl's heart. "Oh, Auntie, I never thought, I—I don't know."

She covered her face with her hands. Miss McGruder was not aware that every other morning Calista had attended Prof. Riboteau's lectures. She liked to sit in that almost cloistral darkness and listen to the Professor's voice. Somehow it had the power of soothing and taking her out of every day petty cares. There was a largeness about this man, as he went on spinning his ropes of sand, which attracted the girl very strongly. Little by little he had told her the story of his life. As she sat there day after day (Calista was generally the sole listener) in her favorite attitude, his voice began to tell her a great deal more than the Professor himself knew. Sitting in the old college room for the last time, Calista felt as if she had stepped in to consummate the final tragedy of this man's life. There were tears in her eyes as she rose to greet him after the conclusion of the lecture. "It is for the last time," she said almost carelessly. "I leave to-morrow."

The Professor bowed in silence, as if waiting for her to explain.

"I am going to be married soon," said Calista, listening to the sound of her own voice as if it proceeded from some one else. "I am going to be married soon. That to——"

She stopped. The look in the Professor's face frightened her. Suddenly it passed, as if a blind had been drawn over the windows of his soul.

"I congratulate mademoiselle," he said, simply. "And Miss McGruder? Is it that she is to be married also?"

"No," said Calista, feeling as if she had slain something, and marvelling at the Professor's self-control. "No; Miss McGruder has decided never to marry."

"I cannot thank you; oh, no, I cannot thank you. I am not of the world—a dreamer of dreams—a shadow—a shadow of the past. And you came to deliver me from bondage—you awoke my soul—you taught me to see the sun—you have given me life—life—life; and yet, Mademoiselle, you have taken more than you gave. Henceforth life will be a haunting sorrow; this room peopled with ghosts and I a ghost of ghosts. When you go phantoms will hem me in and bar me from the living world, for I shall never learn to mingle with my fellows. It is all over. All over! I go back to my tomb!"

He took Calista's hand, pressed it softly to his lips for the first and last time and mounted his rostrum. As Calista slowly went away through the little door the Professor's voice rang solemnly out from the gloom reciting the prayers of the Catholic Church for the dead. She understood him to mean that he no longer lived.

The next morning, after Calista had gone away, the Professor once more mounted his rostrum and looked forth into the gloomy room at Calista's vacant place. He seemed to see her gray eyes gazing up into his, her soft cheek resting upon her gloved hand. If she had gone away, how came she there? But, as he gazed, her face changed to Miss McGruder's Madonna-like lineaments, and he saw that she was quietly knitting in in Calista's place.

The Professor's lips refused their wonted task; he assayed to commence his invariable formal opening sentence, but, listening to his own voice, as in a dream, he heard it once more repeat the solemn prayers of the Catholic church for those who are passing away, and knew, yet did not realize, that years of solitude and neglect had done their work; that Prof. Riboteau, the profound Arabic scholiast, had ceased to exist; that in his stead remained a sorrow stricken shade, afraid of its own voice, in that room filled with spectres of bitter years, hopes unrealized day dreams dreamt for the last time.

Love had come to this poor enthusiast, as it comes to all men, and coming, placed a crown of supreme sorrow upon his brow, until he wandered like a little affrighted child.

Half willing, have reluctant to be led, into the kingdom and dreams and shadows, where even love is cold and wan and gray, and death the lord of all.

But when the offices for the dead were over, the shape that sat within Calista's chair came and led the Professor away. A black veil hid its face, its trembling hand was thin and cold.

And then—a blank!

Years after, as the dim dawn broke, and all the world became aglow with the light of the sun, Prof. Riboteau awoke from troubled dreams to look around his room. A tall, thin woman sat beside the bed, a half-knitted stocking in her hand.

The Professor gazed at her a moment as the mists of the years rolled back. "Is it long ago?" he asked trying to touch Miss McGruder's hand with his long bony fingers.

"Ten years," she answered softly, gazing down upon him.

"The dawn has come at last?"

"The dawn has come at last."

"You are a good woman," he said faintly—and died.

That afternoon as Miss McGruder sat beside her dead, there was a hurried step upon the stair, and a hurried knock at the door.

"Open, Auntie, let me in," cried Calista's voice, but worn and thin, and lacking the rich fulness of youth.

Miss McGruder went to the door and opened it to the tall, sallow woman in black, who stood upon the threshold.

"You are too late," she said to Calista. "Too late!"

Calista moved toward the bed, but Miss McGruder stood between it and her friend. "No," she said, and pointed toward the door. "I have been with him all these years. You would disturb him now. Go! I will come to you after——"

And when she was once more left alone with her dead, she drew a fine linen cloth over its face, and sat there the appointed hours until the Angel of the Lord should require at her hands the soul which had been committee unto her for a charge to keep in the days of its affliction. And the woman, watching there, knew that she had fulfilled the burden laid upon her unto the end, and ceased to weep, for the days of the dead man's sorrow were past and the light had come.—The Queen.

TAKING A NEW START IN LIFE.

Sufferers from Stagnation Advised to Try Parting Their Hair in the Middle.

"I have taken a new start in life," says Mr. Gratebar, "and I have found it much easier than might have been imagined. My oldest daughter, who is a very bright, a very sprightly, and I might add a very attractive young woman, had for a long time told me that I was old-fashioned and slow. She said that if I would wear pointed shoes and high collars and fashionable ties and part my hair in the middle I wouldn't be a bad-looking man.

"How I looked as a result of these changes it might not be modest for me to say; but as to another and very remarkable effect proceeding from them I may testify.

"With the old blunt shoes and comfortable low collars and string neckties, and with the old way of parting the hair, low down on one side, I seemed to put off an incrustation of old habits, and to step up out of a deep rut, up to a level where men were hustling about in great shape; and with my pointed shoes and high collars and hair parted in the middle I was one of them, once more infused with the idea of keeping up with the procession; of keeping step to the music of active life.

"And I don't hesitate to say that it was parting the hair in the middle that did it. I could have worn unmoved the pointed toes, the high collars, and the new fashioned ties; but not so the hair parted in the middle; that I felt I must live up to; it would never do for me to part my hair in the middle and then not make good my right to wear it so.

"To all middle aged sufferers from stagnation I would say: Try parting your hair in the middle."

A Young Man's Nice Tact.

Among the passengers on Lancaster avenue car No. 1,368 last evening, as it proceeded west from Thirty-second and Market streets, was a well dressed young man, who sat in the corner with his coat collar turned up, indulging in a half doze. A bag lay at his feet, indicating that he was returning from a journey. When the car reached the transfer station five young girls entered the car, accompanied by two young men.

They had scarcely been seated when one of the girls suddenly left her seat, threw herself alongside of the young man in the corner, and, placing one arm partly around his neck, exclaimed: "Why, Cousin Emerson, you've come at last. What a fibber you are. We looked——" She stopped, looked confused, then with a little shriek hurriedly rejoined her companions, and buried her crimson face in her handkerchief. She had made a mistake.

The young man after recovering from his astonishment, arose from his seat, bowed respectfully to the girls' escorts, tipped his hat politely to the ladies, and got off. As the car passed on he could be seen standing in the street awaiting the next car. He had alighted to relieve the young lady of her embarrassment.—Philadelphia Record.

Omaha's Educational System.

The religious world does not monopolize every rampant inconsistency. Politics and affairs contain quite as many and possibly more. Here is one which comes on the wings of the mail from Omaha. According to the daily press, the city of Omaha has not enough money to run its schools, and the reason it is in this predicament is chiefly and directly because the Omaha saloons are not sufficiently patronized. The curious circumstances by which the school and the groggery are thus linked together in disaster is due to a law passed some time ago by the Nebraska legislature providing that the revenue for maintaining public schools shall come directly from the saloon licenses and from the fines imposed on various dives and low resorts. For a time the Omaha saloon keepers did a good business, and so her public schools had money to provide for their operation on the highest plane. Then the saloon business fell off and the number of saloons decreased. It is as a result of this failure in the market for beer and whiskey that the Omaha school board confronts a deficit and is unable to see a way out of it.

Not His Fault.

Smallwort—Did you swear off Tuesday?

Lushforth—Meant to, at midnight. Took my final—hic—drink, and then found out that my watch was—hic—thirty seconds slow. So that put me over into '95 again. Too bad, ain't it?—Cincinnati Tribune.

More Information.

Tommy—Paw, what is an "intellectual soiree?"

Mr. Figg—It is generally one where the refreshments do not cost much more than a dime a head.—Indianapolis Journal.

There are more people who can forget themselves than govern themselves.—Ruskin.

Work for thy character until it be renowned; then it will work for thee.—Tunisian Proverb.

A STAG SURPRISE.

Under-Sheriff Miller Receives a Distinguished Visitation, and Is Given Means to Make His Light Shine.

At his residence in Scotch Plains, Under Sheriff L. W. Miller was completely surprised by being greeted on his return home about 8 Saturday evening.

Mrs. Miller, recollecting that day as being the bridegroom's birthday, quietly informed a few of his friends, in consequence of which Mr. Miller was detained by the Sheriff until the appointed hour.

Those present to greet and congratulate him were Sheriff Kyte, Freeholder F. W. Westcott, Mayor Abner P. Downer, Town Committeeman Wm. Terry, Assessor John Robison, Township Clerk Edward Hand and George Carter, who duly presented him with a magnificent parlor lamp, each in turn making an appropriate presentation speech. After the bounteous repast to which all were welcomed by Mrs. Miller, the gentlemen were left to their repast of reminiscences which were humorous and pathetic as the events of their long time acquaintanceship were launched forth. Each guest was the recipient of a beautifully decorated card as a memento of the happy occasion.

Mr. Miller, upon entering the house and being informed of the cause of the assemblage, quietly remarked, "Well! I remembered it, but I forgot it."

FIRE IN SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Destruction of the Home of Murray Smith.

Murray W. Smith's pretty residence in South Plainfield is this morning a mass of smouldering ruins, nothing being saved from the wreck. The fire started at 1 this morning and was undoubtedly of incendiary origin as Mrs. Smith and the family have been absent on a visit for two weeks and Mr. Smith spent the night at the house of a friend. The fire was well under way when discovered, and little could be done but to confine it to the building in which it originated. The loss will approximate $4 000.

A WRECK

of the physical constitution often comes from unnatural, pernicious habits, contracted through ignorance or from excesses. Such habits result in loss of manly power, nervous exhaustion, nervous debility, impaired memory, low spirits, irritable temper, and a thousand and one derangements of mind and body. Epilepsy, paralysis, softening of the brain and even dread insanity sometimes result from such reckless self-abuse.

To reach, reclaim and restore such unfortunates to health and happiness, is the aim of the publishers of a book written in plain but chaste language, on the nature, symptoms and curability, by home treatment, of such diseases. This book will be sent sealed, in plain envelope, on receipt of ten cents in stamps to pay postage.

Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main St., Buffalo, N. Y.

THE NEW YORK TIMES.

For the city reader or the country home, The New York Times is uncommonly interesting newspaper. Its sixteen pages are brimful of news. It is handsomely printed, accurate, clean, fresh, and vigorous. Every intelligent reader will prize its special departments, comprising literature and book news, social progress, religion, art, science, fashion, the woman's page, and amateur sports.

The unequaled Financial Page of The New York Times is a capital manual for investors, for bankers and the officers of Savings Banks, Trust and Insurance Companies, Railway Earnings, Stock and Bond Quotations, Interest and Dividend Notices, the Organization of New Companies, and All Financial News reports are promptly and accurately printed. Its Commercial Reports, including wool, cotton, breadstuffs, milk, butter, eggs, and farm produce, recently much enlarged, are of unequaled fullness and value.

The Times will do its full share of earnest work for sound financial legislation, to repel the assaults of private greed upon the lawmaking power, to establish Democratic principles of equality in taxation and economy in expenditure, and to retrieve the defeat brought upon the Democratic party by errors and betrayals.

The New York Weekly Times

The subscription price of The New York Weekly Times is One Dollar a year. The Weekly Times is a capital newspaper. It contains all the current news condensed from the dispatches and reports of the daily edition, besides literary matter, discussions upon agricultural topics by practical farmers, full and accurate market reports of prices for farm produce, live stock, etc., and a carefully-prepared wool market.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES.

	1 yr	6 mo	3 mo	1 m
Daily, with Sunday	$10.00	$5.00	$2.50	90
Daily, without Sunday	8.00	4.00	2.00	75
Sunday edition only	2.00	1.00	50
Any one day but Sunday	1.50	75	40
Weekly edition	1.00	50	30

Postage prepaid to all points in the United States, Canada and Mexico, except in New York City, where the postage is 1 cent per copy; in all other countries, 2 cents per copy per day, payable by the subscriber.

The Times will be sent to any address in Europe postage included, for $1.50 per month.

The address of subscribers will be changed as often as desired. In ordering a change of address both the old and the new address Must be given.

Cash in advance always. Remittances at the risk of the subscriber, unless made by registered Letter, Check, Money Order or Express order, payable to "The New York Times Publishing Co."

Address all communications thus:

THE NEW YORK TIMES,
Printing-House Square,
New York City, N. Y.

ELECTRIC TELEPHONE

Sold outright, no rent, no royalty. Adapted to City, Village or Country. Needed in every home, shop, store and office. Greatest convenience and best seller on earth. Agents make from $5 to $50 per day. One in a residence means a sale to all the neighbors. Fine instruments, no toys, works anywhere, any distance. Complete, ready for use when shipped. Can be put up by any one, never out of order, no repairing, lasts a life time. Warranted. A money maker. Write [illegible]

BAMBERGERS

"THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE,"

Newark, N. J.

OUR ANNUAL

January Clearing Sale

Is Now in Progress.

Its purpose is to reduce every department to at least half its present size, and to make the accomplishment of this task a certainty we have (with the exception of a few articles whose sale is regulated by agreement)

CUT THE PRICE
OF EVERYTHING

To the Lowest Levels
Ever Reached. . .

To the economical this sale offers the greatest opportunity ever given, and only a sight of the goods can convey to your mind how big the bargains are. In connection with our Clearing sale is the Annual Muslin Wear Sale.

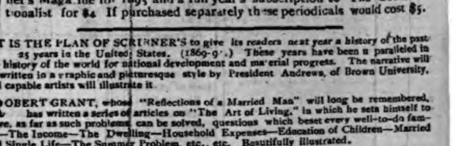
Women's Muslin Garments of every description, made especially for us, perfectly made and finished, cut full in size and of the best muslins and cambrics.

AT AND BELOW MAKER'S COST!

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,
147 and 149 Market Street,
Near Broad Street Newark, N. J.



BY special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer Scribner's Magazine for 1895 and a full year's subscription to The Constitutionalist for $4. If purchased separately these periodicals would cost $5.

IT IS THE PLAN OF SCRIBNER'S to give its readers next year a history of the past 25 years in the United States. (1869-95.) These years have been unparalleled in the history of the world for national development and material progress. The narrative will be written in a graphic and picturesque style by President Andrews, of Brown University, and capable artists will illustrate it.

ROBERT GRANT, whose "Reflections of a Married Man" will long be remembered, has written a series of articles on "The Art of Living," in which he sets himself to solve, as far as such problems can be solved, questions which beset every well-to-do family—The Income—The Dwelling—Household Expenses—Education of Children—Married and Single Life—The Summer Problem, etc., etc. Beautifully illustrated.

GEORGE MEREDITH, whom more than one good authority has pronounced the greatest living novelists, has written a strong serial, "The Amazing Marriage," to begin in January.

W. D. HOWELLS will contribute a novel entitled "The Story of a Play."

IN THE LAND OF DON QUIXOTE will be a series of three sketches illustrated by a number of Daniel Vierge's wonderful drawings.

SINGLE ARTICLES in great variety have been arranged for and the illustrations will be elaborate.

Scribner's for 1895 Will Be Better Than Ever.

If you desire only SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE remit $3 to the publishers.

CHAS. SCRIBNER'S SONS,
153-157 5th Avenue, New York.

—A dome has been placed on the Babcock Building over the Masonic rooms, 7 feet high and 14 feet wide.

EAST GREENWICH ACADEMY,

EAST GREENWICH, R. I.,

About 14 miles from Providence on Narragansett Bay.

FOUNDED 1802.

Both sexes. Steam heat and electric light. Endowed. Twelve courses, a good Gymnasium, a Cadet Corps, well appointed class rooms. $200 a year. Opens September 11. Write for illustrated catalogue.

Plainfield reference, W. D. W. Miller, 309 LaGrande ave.

F. D. BLAKESLEE, D. D.,
Principal.

7 25 y– w-s-c

MARRIAGES.

HUBBARD—POTTER—In this city Tuesday evening, Jan. 15, 1895, at the residence of the bride's father, Charles Potter, Esq., by Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., William Charles Hubbard and Mabel Louise Potter, both of this city.

DEATHS.

LANG—In Mt. Bethel Monday, Jan. 14, 1895, John Jacob Lang in his 61st year.
Funeral services from Mt. Bethel Church, Thursday afternoon, at 1:30. 2

WOODEN—In North Plainfield Monday, Jan. 14, 1895, Peter Wooden, aged 94 years, 7 months and 70 days.
Funeral services from his late residence, 75 Somerset street, Thursday, Jan. 17, at 2:30 p. m.

FENNO—In this city, Thursday, Jan. 10, 1895, Edith L., wife of R. F. Fenno.
Funeral services from her late residence, 417 East Fifth street, Saturday, Jan. 12, at 10 a. m.

CLARKE—In this city, Jan. 11, 1895, Rebecca, wife of Thomas Clarke.
Funeral services, 130 North avenue, Monday afternoon, Jan. 14, at 3 o'clock and 3 30 from Grace P. E. Church, Seventh street. 2

HURLEY—In North Plainfield Jan. 12, 1895, Michael J. Hurley, aged 23 years, 5 months, 1 day.
Funeral from his parents residence, North Plainfield, Tuesday morning, Jan 15, at 8:30 at house and 9:15 at St. Joseph's Church. Friends and relatives are respectfully invited to attend. Interment in St. Mary's Cemetery.

TOWNLEY—In this city Jan. 14, 1895, Lillian Rebecca, youngest daughter of Wm. and Mary E. Townley, aged 1 month and 27 days.
Funeral from her parents residence, 322 West 2d street, Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 15, at 2:30 p. m.

STRONG—At Fanwood Saturday, Jan. 12, 1895, Florence L., wife of W. C. Strong, in her 29th year.
Funeral services from her late residence, Fanwood, Tuesday, Jan. 15, at 2:30 p. m.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JANUARY 24, 1895. No 4

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

CHICKEN THIEVES.

Marshal Pangborn Makes a Skilful Capture—Both Prisoners Held.

The case of the State against William Deane and Edward Drake, on complaint of M. Stites, came up before Justice Crosby Tue-day morning at 10.

The complainant charges that five chickens were stolen from his coop Saturday evening, Jan 12. He placed the matter in the hands of Chief Marshal Pangborn, who with his usual skill succeeded in capturing the guilty persons.

Lawyer DeMeza appeared for Deane and Drake, while Marshal Pangborn looked after the interest of Stites.

Stites was put on the stand and stated that he owned nine chickens; that they were all in the coop Saturday afternoon at 4. On Sunday morning about 8 he went to the yard and found only four.

Edward Drake was called next and proved to be an unwilling witness, refusing to give any information, in spite of the fact that he voluntarily had made a statement disclosing his entire whereabouts at the time in question. His counsel refused to let him answer any question of importance.

Policeman Lines stated that Drake had previously made confession. Albert Brown, Drake's employer, was put on the stand, but knew little of the case.

Mrs. Barry said that she found four chickens in her coal box, and that Deane had brought them in the house for the purpose of cooking them, which she did, Deane having told her that he won them at a raffle.

Drake was again put on the stand and additional information was obtained.

Lawyer DeMeza then asked for a dismissal of the case as far as Drake was concerned, but the justice did not grant his request.

William Deane as principal in the crime was held in $150 bail for the Grand Jury, and Edward Drake, as an accomplice, in the sum of $100.

Marshal Pangborn deserves great credit for the way in which he has handled the case. Even after an attempt was made to get Stites out of the way, he defeated the efforts, and waited till midnight at the Barry home, when he had the house surrounded and the fugitive hunted out.

Plainfield Indians Abroad.

Messrs. J. H. Carney, H. C. Runyon, L. K. Clarke and William F. Trust, who went to Port Oram Thursday to attend the installation of the local tribe of Red Men, were royally entertained. That they did their share during the evening session goes without saying, the genial "Jack" being right in his element and bringing down the house, which was packed to the doors, with his witty and laughable sallies. The others of the Plainfield party were a close second, and fully maintained the reputation of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque, No. 193. To show their appreciation of the visitors the Port Oram Tribe gave them the freedom of the town and escorted by the mayor and aldermen the party were piloted through mines, furnaces and smelters and were shown all the historical points of interest in the city. The boys finally had to tear themselves away and were followed to the train by the fife and drum corps and the Port Oram military band, being allowed to purchase tickets for Plainfield only after making sworn affidavit that they would return inside of six months and give another entertainment.

This Perfect Board Perpetual.

The annual congregational meeting for the election of trustees and the transaction of other business was held in the Crescent Avenue Church last Tuesday.

During the evening the financial condition of the church was discussed, and found to be eminently satisfactory.

The old trustees were re-elected as follows: Charles Place, president; Harry James, Ephriam Miller, Isaac W. Rushmore, J. K. Myers; William Arnold, secretary and treasurer.

The congregation are so highly pleased with the board that they have no desire to make any change, and would not let any of them insist on resigning.

—F. L. C. Martin has discarded the Columbia bicycle agency, and henceforth represents the Clevelands and Crescents, which he claims are better machines.

$100 Reward $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Props. Toledo, O.

Sold by druggists, 75c.

CRESCENT AVENUE RECEPTION.

Plainfield Bestows Honors on Rev. Dr. Henry Blodgett and Wife.

The reception given to Rev. Dr. Henry Blodgett and Mrs. Blodgett in the Crescent Avenue Church Saturday evening was a most enjoyable occasion, calling together fully two hundred friends of the guests of honor who were most pleasantly entertained and edified during the early evening by Dr. Blodgett, who gave a most interesting resume of his forty-one years experience as a missionary among the Chinese. For over thirty years he was located at Pekin, and though at first working under the most adverse circumstances and in the face of seemingly insurmountable obstacles, he had the satisfaction of seeing his work prosper by the grace of God and become the means of elevating and Christianizing many who had been buried in the depths of superstition and idolarry. Several instances of personal conversion were spoken of in a most interesting manner, unconsciously showing, as the speaker related them, how deeply at heart the good Doctor had the salvation of all with whom he had made his home, and whose uplifting has been his life work. Robert E. Speer, for years a secretary of the Board of Foreign Missions in New York, followed Dr. Blodgett, speaking with warm words of praise of the many translations which the modest Doctor had neglected to touch upon, and mentioning the untold benefit which these scholarly volumes had been in carrying forward the good work.

The assembly then adjourned to the parlors where a bountiful banquet which had been prepared by the Ladies Aid Society was discussed. The pleasant social intercourse which is always a feature of the Crescent Avenue gatherings seasoned the repast.

Plainfield Riding Club's Proposed Fair.

At the special meeting of the Plainfield Riding Club Saturday evening the following men were appointed a committee to arrange for a fair to be held at the riding academy February 22.

Messrs. J. W. McQuaide, F. R. Van Boskerck, William J. Roome and W. E. Pentz were named.

A complete programme has not been formulated as yet but that the affair will be a most successful event is assured by a glance at the names of the popular leaders. Among the special features will be winding the May pole, tent pegging, high hurdling and the execution of many intricate feats both bareback and in the saddle.

Netherwood Hotel Furniture Not to Be Sold.

For the benefit of the insurance companies who have policies on hotel and contents, and the people who are laboring under the impression that everything in the hotel is to be sold, I wish to say that the notice of an auction at the hotel tomorrow has seemed to give a false impression unintentionally. All there is to be sold is a few articles of the "Hotel Netherwood Co." which is an entire separate organization from the hotel and its contents which belong to Chas. Hyde and is in no way affected by the sale.

J. F. MACDONALD,
Agt. for Chas. Hyde.

Organizing a Choir.

T. G. Smith, formerly of the Boston Conservatory of Music, who is the new organist and musical director of the Crescent Avenue Church, was met by a number of the vocalists of the parish in the church parlors, Saturday afternoon, who gathered for the purpose of forming a new chorus choir. Mr. Smith expresses much pleasure at the number of excellent voices which he had to select from and hopes at no far distant day to have a choir second to none in the city.

Death of Edward Wilson's Bride.

A most distressing bereavement is the death of May Hayden Taylor, daughter of the late Morgan S. Taylor, and wife of Edward Taylor Wilson, which occurred suddenly this morning. The happy young people were married but this Winter, and Death's untimely ending of their honeymoon arouses the deepest sympathy of all their friends.

Minnie Lester's Return.

The plays to be given by the Minnie Lester company on their return to Music Hall the week of March 25 will be: "Out in the Streets", "Waifs of New York", "Ragged Jack", "The Devil's Mine", "Miss Rora", and "Beacon Lights".

Music Hall Prices.

The new scale of prices in Music Hall is as follows: Front four orchestra rows, $1; balance of floor, 75 cents, except rear three rows, which are 50 cents; gallery, front three rows, 50 cents; rear three, 35; admission without seat, 25 cents.

Died of Hiccoughs.

Mrs. Fred J. Mitchell of Plainfield avenue has gone to Providence because of the death of her father, C. W. Morris, who for the past two weeks has been suffering with hiccoughs and, who died Saturday night as a result of the attack.

THE PASTOR'S POKER.

Housebreakers Put to Flight by the Plucky Rev. Hauser.

The lights had been put out in the front part of the house, and the clergyman and his wife were in the kitchen, when, at 10:15 Saturday night, Rev George Hauser of Duer street and Park place heard some on the front stoop working at one of the windows.

Taking a stout poker, Mr. Hauser noiselessly unlocked the front door and stepped out on the stoop. There was a man at the window, and one at the gate.

"What are you doing there?" said the pastor.

The window operator made a motion as if to grapple with the parson, but that athletic gentleman gave him several whacks over the head with the poker, till it was bent out of shape.

"Don't do that!" screamed the man, at the top of his voice, and broke away and ran to the street. Both he and his companion took to their heels, and the last seen of them they were running up Duer street.

"You got in the wrong place that time!" shouted the dominie.

Mr. Hauser took the lamp to investigate the damage to the window, and found a well-worn woolen cap which the robber had dropped.

The audacity of the attempted housebreaking is seen in the fact that the houses of the neighborhood were illuminated, and the time for sleeping had not come. The people of the section were startled by the outcry.

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

Miss Simon of Bound Brook has joined the ladies orchestra.

The ladies orchestra contemplate giving an entertainment in the near future.

Charles H. Ward has returned to work in the grocery business with W. H. Davis of New Market.

Arthur S. Giles has put a new lock on his shop door.

Linden Apgar of this place who has been employed in the butcher business in Plainfield is contemplating starting business in St.-nton, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Merrill and Mr. and Mrs. Asa Merrill attended the funeral services yesterday of their cousin Miss C. Dayton. Interment was at Samptown Cemetery.

Dunellenites should not forget the donation visit at the M.E. parsonage Thursday night.

W. B. Smith, who was convicted of stealing stamps from the Government, has been sentenced to three years and six months in the Albany prison.

The election to decide the question of whether Dunellen is to become an independent borough or not, is to take place Feb. 7.

The report that C. F. Maire is to remove from town on April 1, is erroneous.

Several New Market people, including Stanley Day, S. R. Dayton, and others, are improving their sidewalks by putting cinders upon them. The New Market people in general are anxious to place the streets in good condition. The borough movement has a tendency toward improvement.

Frank Humpston is the Plainfield representative of the Dunellen Call.

New Market Wants a Borough.

The citizens of New Market met in Friendship Hall Saturday night and passed resolutions to make application to have the old town of New Market formed into a borough. The proposed lines are to begin at Centre street, where the Dunellen borough ends, and extend to Blue's corner. The Dunellen people hoped to be able to extend to the Lehigh Valley Railroad, thus enlarging their area and giving those living in School District No. 2 the benefit of Dunellen schools. Counselor Willis presented the petition to make Dunellen an independent borough last week. The matter will be decided by election very soon.

The Parks Win at Whist.

Saturday afternoon an exciting contest in the whist tournament resulted in the defeat of the visiting Montclair players by the Park enthusiasts, the score being 14 to 11. This victory ties the Parks for first place in the tourney. Saturday's game completes the first half of the present series of games.

Those who support the Park Club standard are Messrs. G. T. Rogers, S. St. J. McCutchen, Samuel Townsend, J. H. Howard, J. B. Drayton and J. M. Leonard. Wednesday evening next the Fanwoods will try conclusions with the Parks at the pleasant home of the latter.

Not a Forfeit.

The Institute bowlers did not forfeit a game by their failure to appear at the C. Y. M. L. alleys Friday evening, as stated in another paper. The position of the clubs in the race is not affected as the game was to be an exhibition game, not a league contest.

"Nothing Venture, Nothing Have."

Rev. John Reid, Jr., of Great Falls, Mon., recommended Ely's Cream Balm to me. I can emphasize his statement. "It is a positive cure for catarrh if used as directed."—Rev. Francis W. Poole, pastor Central Presbyterian Church, Helena, Mon.

It is the medicine above all others for catarrh, and is worth its weight in gold. I can use Ely's Cream Balm with safety and it does all that is claimed for it.—B. W. Sperry, Hartford, Conn.

HYMENEAL.

From The Press of January 23.

Angerbauer—Bergner.

The marriage of Joseph Henry Angerbauer, Jr., of this city, and Miss Selina Bergner of 100 Lexington avenue, New York, took place in St. George's Episcopal Church, Sixteenth street and Stuyvesant place, this afternoon at 4. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Tilford. The bridemaids were Miss Anna Angerbauer, sister, and Miss Josie Fritz, cousin, of the groom. William Bergner, brother of the bride, and William V. Sutton of this city, were the groomsmen.

The bride wore a lovely gown of brown corded silk, and carried a bouquet of bride roses, while the bridemaids were gowned in white cashmere, and carried bouquets of roses.

After the ceremony, the party went to the home of the bride's parents, where a bountiful supper was served.

Owing to the recent death of the groom's sister, no reception was held. Only the immediate family of the groom were present from Plainfield. Mr. and Mrs. Angerbauer will reside in this city.

McCan—Ryan.

In St. Joseph's Church, yesterday afternoon at 4, took place the marriage of Miss Johanna Ryan of North Plainfield, and Lawrence F. McCan of New Brunswick. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Miller, before a large number of friends and relatives.

The bridemaid was Miss Mary Ryan, sister of the bride, and the best man was Patrick Cosgrove of New Brunswick.

The bride wore a gown of cream-colored cloth, trimmed with blue silk, and carried a choice bouquet of tea roses.

Immediately after the ceremony, the bridal party went to the home of the groom's brother, John McCan on West Front street, where a reception was given. A sumptuous wedding dinner was served, after which dancing was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. McCan left during the evening for a wedding trip to Baltimore and Washington, and on their return will reside in New Brunswick. The guests included Miss Maggie Cullney, Miss Mamie Kinney, Miss Maggie Brown, Miss Dury, Miss Kate Leahy, Miss Mary Leahy, Miss Emma Rourke, Mrs. Carson, Mrs. McClay, Miss Kate Duffy, John Duffy, R. Douglass, Mrs. John Leahy, Patrick Leary, Mr. and Mrs. Callihan, P. Connelly, Miss M. Meahoney, George Tobin, Miss Tobin, Mr. and Mrs. John McCan, Miss Cain, Miss Delia Lally.

Mr. and Mrs. McCan received a very large number of costly and useful presents. Music for dancing was furnished by O'Neil.

Wilmerding—Bache.

Miss Katharine Rutgers Bache of Morristown, daughter of the late Andrew Bache and formerly a resident of this city, was married last evening in Trinity Chapel to A. Clinton Wilmerding by Rev. Charles Treat. The bride is the niece of Major Sedlow of Newport, and a direct descendant of Benjamin Franklin. Her aunt, Miss Katharine R. Lincoln, of New Brighton, S. I., has been her guardian.

The bridegroom is the son of Thomas A. Wilmerding of Bergen Point. He is a keen sportsman and a fine shot in the field and at the traps. The bride was accompanied by her uncle, Col. F. W. Armstrong, and was given away by her brother, A. G. R. Bache. Wm. E. Wilmerding, brother of the bridegroom, was the best man, and D. Bradford Wilmerding, T. Kearney Wilmerding, Albert R. Foster, Henry Meigs Popham, C. Herbert Davis, and A. Hall Berry were the ushers. The maid of honor was Miss Mary De-Peyster Lincoln Bache, and Miss Henrietta B. Wilmerding and Miss Hortense F. Armstrong were bridemaids.

Verdi Quartette and Miss Jackson.

The Y. M. C. A. have arranged for the first entertainment in their new Y. M. C. A. Hall, Tuesday, Feb. 5. The Verdi Quartette of Brooklyn will sing, and Miss Addie Parker Jackson will read.

The Missing Found.

John Hennessy of North avenue, Netherwood, who mysteriously disappeared, is home again. He was seized with pneumonia and taken to Bellevue Hospital.

STARVING won't cure Dyspepsia. You need nourishment, and to get it you must make the stomach and bowels digest your food; that is what are for. One after each meal, and the most stubborn case of Dyspepsia (and that is everything) will disappear. White wrappers if constipated, yellow if not. [illegible] at druggists'. Send to us for a free sample.

Dr. Deane's
Dyspepsia Pills.

DR. J. A. DEANE CO.,
Kingston, New York.

THE POWDER BALL.

PLAINFIELD SOCIETY ADORNS THE COSTUMES OF THE PAST.

Park Club-House a Scene of Real Beauty and Stately Gallantry.

There was a sound of revelry by night,
And Plainfield's social set had gathered then
Her beauty and her chivalry, and bright
The lamps shone o'er fair women and brave men;
Two hundred hearts beat happily; and when
Music arose with its voluptuous swell,
Soft eyes looked love to eyes which spake again,
And all went merry as a marriage-bell.
—Adapted from "Childe Harold".

As the arriving guests stepped from the star-candled night through the open portals of the Park Club, it almost seemed as if they were greeted with a scene from the court of Louis XIV, brought back to life once more by the genial social atmosphere which always pervades this home of gaiety. Courtly gallants were everywhere attending the beautiful dames whose presence graced the tastily decorated assembly hall.

Stately dutchesses, fair women of the court, bonny, bright-eyed maids of honor, with here and there a gayly decked Dolly Varden or merry milk maid, seemed to float rather than dance to the witching music of Issler's orchestra of Newark, which was in perfect touch with that air of medieval romance that for the time being seemed to animate the gay picture, which looked as though it were ready at the stroke of midnight to step back again within the time-worn frame from which it had emerged to join in revelry. It were idle to say "the happy party enjoyed themselves", for one need only recall that the affair was held under the Park Club's arching roof, whose rafters echoed and re-echoed the merry pealing laughter on this, as on many another social occasion given by these hospitable hosts. Yet it can be safely said that none among the joyous party who exchanged bon-mots or sought some nook for a moment of quiet chat during the intervals of the dance last evening, could have more gaily or more happily whiled away the swiftly speeding hours, for that were well-nigh impossible.

The cosy gallery was well filled with a party of on lookers, which was augmented from time to time by some friend from the ball-room below, who left the lively scene only to be irresistibly attracted back again by its ever changing beauty. Occasionally would be noted the temporary absence of some well-known masculine face, but the searcher had only to glance down through the billiard room or toward the alley, where could be seen Counselor Reed and G. T. Rogers dallying with the ivories, or Messrs. Matthews, W. O. Worth, Dr. Thiers, and Julius Erickson rapidly piling up strikes and spares in quick succession. Promptly at eleven o'clock the beautifully gowned dames and damsels invaded the billiard hall, attracted by the bountiful collation which was in waiting, brilliant repartee and happy social intercourse adding zest to this most pleasant interruption. Long did the merry groups linger to enjoy the rest or watch the athletes as they sent the heavy spheres dancing down the polished alleys, sweeping everything before them with the regularity of clock-work. But once more it was "on with the dance, let joy be unconfined", and the beautiful kaleidoscopic picture was again presented to the gaze as the merry makers "tripped the light fantastic toe" to the sweet symphonies of music. The stars had almost run their courses in the blue-vaulted heaven when the picture dissolved, yet it will always be a pleasing memory to guest and host alike, that the Bal Poudre at the Park was in every way a most flattering success.

The patronesses last evening were: Mrs Charles A Reed, Mrs Samuel Townsend, Mrs George D Hallock, Mrs B A Hegeman, Jr., Mrs J H Howell, Mrs F G Grant, and Mrs William J Roome. Mrs Hegeman and Mrs Howell were unfortunately absent because of sickness.

A full representation of the club members was present and among the guests might be mentioned: Mr and Mrs Percy Stewart, Mr and Mrs H J Runyon, Mr and Mrs James R Roy, Mr and Mrs J K Myers, Mrs Scott Brown, Mrs C J Powers, Miss and Mr Moore, Miss Dryden, Miss J Louise Pangborn, Miss Florence V B Myers, Miss Katherine Manning, Miss Florence J Marsh, Miss Long, Miss Shannon, Miss Louise Kopper, Miss Annie Stewart, Miss Lord, Miss Katherine Underwood, Dr and Mrs Thiers, Mr and Mrs Van Deventer, Mr and Mrs Edwin Douglass, Mr and Mrs Herbert Brooks, Mr and Mrs Edward W Hooley, Mr and Mrs W L Saunders, Mr and Mrs Lemuel Serrell, Mr and Mrs G T Rogers, Mr and Mrs W O Worth, Miss Horne, Miss Pauline M Sandford, Miss and Mr Weltmann, Miss Daniels, the Misses Barlow, Miss Florence Abbott, Miss Edith Clapp, Miss Wilkins, Miss Edith Harold, Miss Risley and Miss Helen Dunham, New York, friends of Dr and Mrs Grant, Miss and Mr French, and the Messrs Wesley Abbott, Chapman, J M Leonard, Carl Brown, Middleditth, George Freeman, Irving West, Clifford McGee, Charles Faber, Walter Place, C E Frost, George Van Boskerck, J H Hallock, A B Laing, F E Richards, J H Worth, George F Brown, Percy Ingalls, H A Pattee, James Middleton, Meredith Dryden, Julius Erickson, John Moon, and Peter Matthews.

The fair women were all beautifully gowned in an endless variety of filmy costumes which almost beggar description, yet in this gorgeous array were noticeable the costumes of Mrs Chas A Reed, radiant as "The Duchess" in a beautiful gown of pink silk elaborately trimmed with pink ribbons; Mrs Wm J Roome as "Lady Teazle", accompanied by Mr Roome in full court costume and periwig; Mrs F G Grant as "Martha Washington"; Miss Barlow as "Dolly Varden"; Mrs Saunders, beautiful in an elaborate Dresden gown; Miss Louise Kopper of Madison, a guest of Mrs Reed, attired in organdie over pink silk; Mrs G D Hallock, in yellow satin with black lace; Miss Daniels in an empire gown of blue crepon; Miss Catherine Underwood in lavender satin beautifully trimmed with violets; Miss Nellie Underwood in blue chiffon; Miss Laura Underwood in yellow satin trimmed with green chiffon; Miss Wilkins in blue striped silk; Miss Catherine Manning in black point d' esprit with white bertha; Mrs Geo T Rogers in an empire gown draped with blue crepon; Mrs Herbert Brooks in dainty white point d' esprit; Miss Woltmann in yellow silk with black trimming; Mrs Thiers in beautiful white silk; Mrs Douglass in blue brocaded satin; Miss Minnie Brooks in white chiffon trimmed with smilax; Miss Mo. VanDeventer in an elaborate white silk; Miss Dunham in pink point d' esprit over satin; Miss Horne in dainty white; Miss Harold in white chiffon and lavender velvet; Miss Risley in white satin embroidered with pink roses; Miss Lord in yellow brocaded satin with thread lace bertha; Miss Abbott in lavender crepon; Mrs Thompson in white brocaded satin; Mrs Lemuel Serrell in lavender silk covered with lace; Mrs Sandford in white point d' esprit with white ribbons; and Miss Grace Barlow in pink satin and white lace.

TRINITY TEA.

Good Supper, Fine Music, Tasteful Decorations, and Satisfactory Wares.

Delightful music will be furnished in connection with a first-class supper in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed Church Thursday and Friday nights. The supper will be from 6 to 8, and the musicale will follow. The musical accompaniment to the good eating will be on violin and piano, by Messrs. Smith and Milton. The talent of the programme beginning at 8 will include local favorites, and the programme is in part as follows: Piano solos, Miss N. Winckler and Miss Lucille Prittie; vocal solos by E. E. Runyon, B. T. Barnes, William Holmes, Miss F. May Grant, Miss Etta Krymer, L. S. Bond and Robert Clark; and recitations by Miss Etta Raybert.

Lemonade will be served, and there will be on sale aprons both dainty and useful, and home-made candies made by the King's Daughters.

The decorations will be pink and green.

A Good Record.

(From The Jersey City Journal.)

It may not be of any interest to anybody outside of the "press gang", and it may not convince anybody that newspaper men are not all utterly depraved and irredeemably wicked, but we mention the fact that, while the police records of the city of New York show that there were 77,000 persons arrested there last year, there was not a single newspaper man or woman among the number. There were among the arrested parties more than a hundred lawyers, ninety-eight physicians and eleven clergymen, but not a single member of the "fourth estate". This must be assumed as indicating one of two facts: either that the members of the press are exceptionally law-abiding and well behaved, or that they are smart enough to keep themselves out of the grasp of the minions of the law—and either way, it is a good record for the newspaper fraternity.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

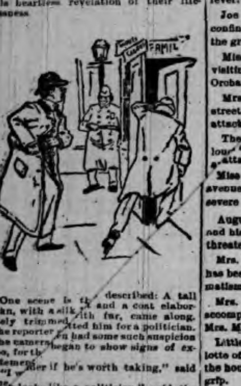
A DRINK UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

A Camera Club Gets Evidence of Sunday Liquor Selling.

The camera is the weapon of the latest band of Brooklyn reformers, and the barred and bolted side doors of some of the most notorious resorts of the city on Sundays furnish conclusive evidence of the deadly work it is doing.

It has always been thought that the enforcement of the Excise law in Brooklyn was a physical as well as a moral impossibility, but, nothing daunted, twenty good, law-loving young men went right to work to devise some means of shutting up the saloons. With the cameras under their coats, and with their hats drawn down over their eyes in a way which would have done credit to a city vigilance sunbeam, the youthful reformers set out, and the collection of pictures they get during the day are highly interesting. There were pictures of men entering and leaving saloons, while policemen, with the most innocent looking expressions on their faces, stood by without interfering. Then there were other pictures of children carrying cans and pitchers full of foaming beer through the street, and still other pictures showing drunken men being pitched out of side doors by white aproned bartenders, while policemen stood and looked on.

As soon as the pictures are handed in by the reform detectives they are taken in hand by Mr. Tully, who reproduces them all on a white sheet by means of a stereopticon. It was only after this public showing of the success of the camera scheme that the real weapon of the society became known, and if any confidence is to be placed in the rumors that went flying around the next day, the police were very much disturbed over this heartless revelation of their lifelessness.



One scene is th[illegible] described: A tall man, with a silk [illegible] and a coat elaborately trimmed with fur, came along. The reporter [illegible]tted him for a politician. The camera[illegible]n had some such suspicion too, for th[illegible] began to show signs of excitement.

"I wonder if he's worth taking," said one.

"He looks like a politician," said the other.

"Well," said the first, "if he goes in I'm going to take him," and he went across the street and stood in front of the saloon. The tall man walked right into the side door of one of the saloons, and just as he did so the young man with the camera pulled it out and pressed the button. It was all over in a few seconds, but a man on the curb saw the operation and let out a snort of disgust. The tall man turned around, saw the man with the camera, looked perplexed, and then, as the daring young reformer levelled his weapon at him again, he seemed suddenly to realize the true state of affairs, and darted into the saloon, closing the door behind him with a bang. The young man with the camera crossed over to his companion, coolly took out the plate, put in a fresh one, and remarked to his fellow worker:

"I wonder if he'd be angry if I went over and asked him his name."

One of the young men got a particularly interesting picture for exhibition at the next stereopticon display the society gives. This young fellow hied with his camera to a saloon on Atlantic Avenue. It was a corner saloon, and a policeman stood not a dozen feet from the side door. The officer was stout and good natured, and was immensely amused at the attempts of a drunken man to pilot himself through the door. He was in the midst of a prodigious fit of laughter when the society man snapped his camera on him.

WONDERFUL MARKSMANSHIP.

A Story of the Captain's Verified by the Victim Who Was Killed.

The Confederate captain told this yarn with the gravity of a truthful man:

"When I was commanding a cavalry outpost during the war I had occasion to make a personal examination of the land. I rode with my orderly to a knoll some half mile from my camp, and leisurely began to study my position with the aid of a field glass.

"Suddenly I jerked my head back involuntarily, and whizz, went a singing rifle ball so close to my ear that I could feel the wind of its flight. A puff of smoke was the only evidence of the sharpshooter. Not once, but five or six times, did this involuntary muscular action take my head backward from the line of the shot and save my life. I never could explain or understand that providential muscular action. Turning to my orderly I seized his carbine, aimed at that smoke a mile away, fired, and all was still again. No more shots came and we returned to camp. In the afternoon a party of us rode over the country, and coming to the spot where the shots had come from in the morning, heard groans.

"They proceeded from a wounded Yankee hidden behind a rail fence. He said he had fired several shots in the morning at a Confederate officer on yonder knoll, but had not been able to hit him, though he had a good range and was considered a wonderful sharpshooter, and the reb had fired but one shot at him and that with direful results. The ball buried itself in his leg, cutting one of the main arteries. The man was beyond human help. We gave him water and he soon lost all signs of life. We rode away and left all that was mortal of the poor fellow behind that fence."

This tale was too much. One by one the smokers arose and moved towards the door in silence deep and thinkative. The first man to reach the door turned, and in a rich New England twang, shouted, "I've been called a liar for telling that story, captain, but I'm the sharpshooter who was killed that day."

PARTICULAR MENTION.

T. S. Armstrong is ill with the grip.

Miss Alberta Irwin of Putnam avenue is ill with the grip.

Ira Huff of East Front street has gone to Jersey City to work.

Mrs. Jacob Benner of Orchard place is seriously ill at her home.

A. D. Shepard and family have gone to New York for the Winter.

Mrs. H. Dunn of Park avenue is convalescent from a recent illness.

Mr. Freeman of Watchung avenue is detained at home with the grip.

Frank Putnam is one of the latest to suffer from an attack of the grip.

Mrs. Merrill of East Fifth street is visiting Rayville friends for a few days.

William M. Stillman is expected home from Bermuda Saturday, January 26.

Miss Edith Beach of Watchung avenue is another of the victims of the grip.

Clarkson Wilson of Somerset street is confined to the house with rheumatism.

Walter E. Probasco of East Front street is slowly recovering from the grip.

Miss Mabel Wilson of Putnam & DeGraw's is confined to her home by illness.

Mrs. L. C. Van Nest of Duer street is confined to her home by an attack of the grip.

Mrs. McClymont's home on Steiner place is quarantined on account of scarlet fever.

Joe Trainer of LaGrande avenue is confined to the house with an attack of the grip.

Miss Jennie Frentz of Scotch Plains is visiting her sister, Mrs. Frank Putnam of Orchard place.

Mrs. L. B. Bromfield of East Sixth street is slowly recovering from a serious attack of influenza.

The youngest daughter of R. H. McCullough of Steiner place is suffering from an attack of grip.

Miss Marguirite VanZandt of Madison avenue is confined to her home with a severe attack of the grip.

Auguste Saltzman is ill with the grip; and his daughter, Mrs. A. S. Fritts, is threatened with pneumonia.

Mrs. Marsh of East Sixth street, who has been confined to her room with rheumatism, is slowly improving.

Mrs. Horace Martin of North Plainfield, accompanied by her two sons, are visiting Mrs. Martin's sister in Manasquan.

Little Henry Moore and his sister Charlotte of East Sixth street are confined to the house with a severe attack of the grip.

Benjamin Doane of LaGrande avenue is able to be out again after being confined to the house with a severe case of that old enemy, the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin I. Cooley and family of Rockview avenue take up their residence at Hotel St. Stevens, New York, Friday, for a few weeks.

Miss Ella Frentz has received word from her parents telling of their safe arrival in Charleston, S. C. From there they went to Avon Park, Desota County, Fla.

Mrs. J. U. Kipp of Central avenue is confined to the house by the grip. Miss Bertie Kipp is at home attending to her mother through her illness, from which she is recovering slowly.

The two youngest children of Mrs. Samuel Bingaman, Levi and Mary, of Richmond street, are up again. They have been victims of the grip. Mrs. Bingaman's mother also has been confined to her bed with a severe cold.

Pebbles to Prevent Explosions.

A young man of pleasing address has been selling to people in the towns along the Jersey Central small brown pebbles, such as can be picked up on the shores of Newark Bay by the bushel.

These stones, he said, were invested with a magic power. They would prevent lamps from exploding. One stone was sufficient for each lamp, no matter what the size of the lamp might be. He sold them at 25 cents each.

One woman who bought six, in consideration of her large purchase was given a reduction of 25 cents. She gave the peddler a five-dollar note and he went to get it changed. She has not seen him since.

Col. Moore Welcomed.

(New York Evening Post.)

Col. Waring's first acts as street cleaning commissioner vividly illustrate the difference between running the department for political purposes and for the benefit of the city. He reduced the general office expenses to the amount of $7,000, and he appointed as deputy commissioner a well-known civil engineer and contractor, Col. Chas. K. Moore, whose politics nobody knows anything about. Nobody can mistake the significance of such performances. They show that this important department of the city government is to be run on business principles.

A New County Road.

Judge VanSyckel in the Union County Court yesterday appointed County Collector Edward M. Wood of Elizabeth and ex-Freeholders James T. Pierson of Westfield and William T. West of Linden as Commissioners to assess the costs, damages, and expenses of laying out a new public road through Cranford.

—City Treasurer A. Titsworth has received from B. Holmes, County Superintendent, $12,652.94, being 90 per cent. of the State School tax, for the support of the public school, and has deposited in the bank to the credit of the Board of Education.

BRIAR PIPE GIVEN AWAY

WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF

DUKES MIXTURE

for 35 cents

Every pipe stamped DUKES MIXTURE or ATC

2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

MOTHERHOOD.

Proud motherhood! Grand state of wedded bliss
Whilst, ere the first sharp pang is known,
Cent[illegible] instinctively on thoughts of this—
That pure devotion in the first glad kiss
On baby lips shall bind
To the still unformed mind
A trust in futures yet unknown.

Fond motherhood! Bright light of fairest dawn,
Which through unbroken union gives
Hope of a happy, [illegible] good morn
To claim a father's love for the first born,
Until two hearts at last,
From out a baby path,
Shall know mature perfection lives.

—Clint Newcomb Elliot.

New York, January, 1895.

UNCLE PETER AT REST.

Many Aged People and Others Attend His Funeral.

The funeral services of Uncle Peter Wooden, held at the old house on Somerset street which is so familiar to every one in the city as Uncle Peter's homestead and which has stood so many years against the ravages of time, were as simple, as he, in honor of whose memory the weeping friends had gathered, could possibly have wished. And yet they were grand in their simplicity, a fitting benediction to him whose life has always been one of simple, earnest, humble faith in his Creator. Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, who for many years had been Uncle Peter's pastor, spoke from Prov. xvi:31: "The hoary head is a crown of glory, if it be found in the way of righteousness." "Nothing in holy writ," said the Rev. Dr. Lewis, "could more appropriately apply to the simple life and unwavering faith of him whose memory we gather here to honor". All who knew him had suffered a personal loss, for he was at once counselor and friend, his very life standing a silent monitor to point the way to heaven. He joined the church in 1843 and had been a regular attendant ever since, showing his Christianity in quiet deeds of mercy, and many are those who have occasion to remember his kindness of heart toward all who were in need. Dr. Lewis spoke of his happy home life, of his children, long since dead, of his companion and helpmate Aunt Margaret, who journeyed over life's rugged pathway by his side for fifty years and passed quietly to her reward in the very room where now lay the earthly semblance of Uncle Peter, looking as natural as though he had fallen asleep, as in very truth he had, in Jesus.

A notable feature of the solemn occasion was the very large number of old people, many of them lifelong friends of the decedent, who were present. Alfred Bonnell, whose ninety years sit lightly on his shoulders, stopped a moment to chat of Uncle Peter to their old friend, Mrs. Caroline B. Spencer, who is young at 87, and in this quiet company of mourners Mrs. Agnes Pangborn 73 and Abel Stewart 78, not to mention Ethan Lanphear 75 and Ralph Conover who is nearly 80 seemed quite young compared with P. M. French and Randolph Smalley who are nearly 85, and who stood in silence, not far from Mrs. Wakefield and Joseph A. Powlinson who are both in the immediate neighborhood of 75. Probably never before in the city, if indeed for many miles around, were gathered so many good old friends and fellow Christians to mourn the loss of one, whom to know was to honor and respect and love. Dr. Lewis spoke feelingly of Uncle Peter's many friends who gathered to take a last look at the peaceful face, not because of his extreme age but because of the desire to do honor to the sterling Christian character and noble simplicity of the life of him who had passed beyond.

The pall bearers were Messrs. Joseph and Frank Hubbard, J. D. Spicer and Dr. Clawson, church associates and friends of decedent. The interment was in Hillside.

—The number of laths at the Babcock Building for the new lodge rooms is 65,000.

—Goston Smalley of Greenbrook has broken ground for a new house near the bicycle track on Randolph road.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Rates of Advertising

Space	WEEKS 1	2	3	MONTHS 1	2	3	6	12
1 in.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
2 in.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
3 in.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
4 in.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
¼ col.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
½ col.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1 col.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 50 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything.

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager.
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.
9 13 tf

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
H. EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR.
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars. Cigarettes and Tobaccos always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc. Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in a strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union. I believe in every man running his own business till times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 119 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

L. R. WOOLSTON. J. P. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS' SUPPLIES. 141-143 NORTH AV

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTION WITH OVER 12,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J H Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depot
H [illegible]ley Barker Grove and Front sts
G W Y M [illegible] 4th and Park avenue
Frank Rowley Somerset and Craig place

Subscriber's Name	Address.
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 5th
Ames, C. J.	15 Crescent ave
Alert Hose Co., No 1	Madison ave
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H.	22 West 7th street
Adams, Dr D C	46 Grove
Brakeley, F W	Dunellen
Brokaw, Isaac N	Bound Brook
Babcock, Geo H	5th and Union sts
Barkelew & Dunn	18 North ave
Boone, W. C., M. D.	Cor. Front & Central Av
Bushnell, John	Central ave. and 9th st
Beerbower, J E	Park av and 2d s
Berg, Jos F, M D	10 E 6th s
Board of Education—6th st, 5th and Union st
Booth, E H	68 Madison av
	6th & Liberty, 6th & Monroe
Clark, E B	2 Waynwood place
Children's Home	Jackson ave.
Closson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
CONSTITUTIONALIST Office	3 North ave.
Cook, A D & Bro	Park ave and RR.
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs. F. A.	9 Third Place
Cruikshank, S. A.	126 Carlton avenue
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, R F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy, (J H Leggett, Mgr)	Park ave and Front st
DAILY PRESS	3 North ave.
Depew, Mrs. E. H.	16 Crescent ave.
Day, Frank	53 W. Fourth st.
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 5th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Demarest, P M	27 Park av
Dumont, John B	20 E 7th st
Decker, T—pay station	Westfield, N J
DeGraff, James	22 E 9th st
Doane, T O—Chief P F D	40 W 6th st
Dollner, S L	121 Madison av
Davis & Stevens, coal and wood	Office W Front
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave. and 4th st
Evening News, T. W. Morrison, Editor	7 Som't st.
Engine No 1	West 2d st.
Engine No 2	Front st.
Engine No 3	Somerset st.
Evans, Geo C	37 Washington ave
Fisk, Chas. J	28 West Seventh St
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French, P M & Sons	Somerset st.
Fritts, Dr J T	73 Park ave
Fleming, Howard	30 Park avenue
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
French, C Frank	67 Somerset st
Grant, Geo W, Chief of Police	39 W 6th st
Goddard, C M	17 Third Place.
Griffen, A M	13 E Front st.
Gaston, M. D., W F	5th and New sts
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 5th st
Howell & Hardy	North Avenue
Heyniger, L	81 & 83 Somerset street.
Hegeman, B. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	45 East Front st
Hyde, Chas	141 Front street.
Hadden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave.
Higgins, M. A	76 East 4th st—20 North ave
Hetfield, John N	204 South 2d st—21 Park av
Harder, Francis C	122 Madison av
Hermance, O	Netherwood
Hoagland's City Express	29 North av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	58 W. Front st.
Jones, Evan	13 Kensington st
Kirkner, J	3d and Division sts.
Kaufman, W T	65 W 7th st
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L N	Crescent ave
Lord, Wm A	Belvidere av
Loomis & Rice	[illegible] 49 Broadway
Laire, J P & Co	3 W Front st
Linke, Frank	43 W Front st
Lounsberry, F C	18 Plainfield ave
Myers, J K	17 [illegible] 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave.
Miller, J G	10 E. Front st.
Moore, Geo. A	20 North ave
Muhlenberg Hospital	South ave.
Murray, Dr. Wm. H	107 Broadway
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
Pond Machine Tool Co.	Boulevard below Grant av
Pierce Hardware Co	40 W Front st
Reed, Chas A	27 Myrtle ave
Milliken, E F	130 Central
Morrison, T W	15 Somerset st
MacDonald, J F	69 E Front st
Myers, Lawrence	3 Front st
Netherwood Hotel	Netherwood.
Newhall, Henry B	16 E 7th st
N J Postal Tel Co	4 Park ave
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave.
Reynolds, H. P.	Washington avenue
Roberts, D S	77 North avenue.
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and North ave.
Runyon, A M & Son	Park ave
Runyon, A M & Son	46 Madison ave
Rushmore, Dr Edward	Park ave. near Fifth st.
Roome, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves.
Runkle, H. G	8th s
Runyon, Chas W	Park ave
Rice, E. W. & Co	5th cor. Emily and Duer sts
Randolph, L W	Front st
Rogers, D W	W [illegible]
Rogers, S P jr	26 Westervelt ave
Seaver, H W	29 east 9th st
Serrell, Lemuel W	Front st. and Plainfield ave
Seguine, C. J	60 Front street.
Shaw, R J	Front st. opp. Park ave.
Streuli, A S	Prospect ave.
Smith, W P	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Shephard A D	Fanwood
Smith, Jas A	13 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Smith, Chas A	Spring st., Westfield, N J
Stelle, Irving G	Sixth st
Terrill & Cole	16 E Front st
Thompson, A. D	20-22 North av
Talmadge, Henry F (Res)	Netherwood
Thickstun, Jno A	Madison av
Titsworth, Jos M	25 W. 7th st.
Tomlinson, Dr T H	LaGrande and N B'dwy
Toms & Ensander	51 North av
Tracy, J Evarts	8th and Division st
Thorn, Alex	27 Somerset st
Tweedy, O. B.	12 Crescent avenue
Townsend, Samuel	20 Rockview av
Thompson, A D	Prospect ave
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Thorn, E	28 W Front st
United States Express Co	5 North ave
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle W. J	10 North ave
Wharton, Clifton	17 Central av
Woltman, C	West Seventh street
Wadsworth, W E	8th and Liberty sts
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Welchers, J F	W 6th st., near Grand ave
Waters, E, Ass't Chief	3d st near Washington
Westfield, pay station	Westfield, N J
Wotherspoon O G	146 E Front s

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	[illegible]	Hempstead N Y	[illegible]
Astoria, N Y	[illegible]	Hoboken N J	[illegible]
Babylon, N Y	[illegible]	Hunter's Point N Y	[illegible]
Bath, N Y	[illegible]	Irvington N J	[illegible]
Bayonne N J	[illegible]	Islip N Y	[illegible]
Bergen Point N J	[illegible]	Jamaica N Y	[illegible]
Bayside N Y	50c	Jersey City N J	[illegible]
Bay Shore N Y	[illegible]	Keyport N J	[illegible]
Fayville N Y	[illegible]	Kingston N J	[illegible]
Belleville N J	[illegible]	Laurel Hill N Y	[illegible]
Blauvelt N Y	[illegible]	Little Neck N Y	[illegible]
Bloomfield N J	[illegible]	Little Silver N J	[illegible]
Bloomingdale N J	[illegible]	Long Branch N J	[illegible]
Boonton N J	[illegible]	Madison N J	[illegible]
Brooklyn N Y	[illegible]	Matawan N J	[illegible]
Caldwell N J	[illegible]	Millburn N J	[illegible]
Carlstadt N J	[illegible]	Montclair N J	[illegible]
Centreville N J	[illegible]	Morristown N J	[illegible]
Chatham N J	[illegible]	Newark N J	[illegible]
Closter N J	[illegible]	New Brunswick N J	[illegible]
Colt's Neck N J	[illegible]	Newton N J	[illegible]
Coney Island N Y	[illegible]	New York N Y	[illegible]
Cresskill N J	[illegible]	Orange N J	[illegible]
Dover N J	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
East Norwich N Y	[illegible]	Passaic N J	[illegible]
Eatontown N J	[illegible]	Paterson N J	[illegible]
Elizabeth N J	[illegible]	Perth Amboy N J	[illegible]
Englewood N J	[illegible]	Rahway N J	[illegible]
Fairview N J	[illegible]	Red Bank N J	[illegible]
Fanwood N J	[illegible]	Seabright N J	[illegible]
Far Rockaway N Y	[illegible]	Short Hills N J	[illegible]
Flatbush N Y	[illegible]	South Amboy N J	[illegible]
Flushing N Y	[illegible]	South River N J	[illegible]
Fort Lee N J	[illegible]	Staten Island N Y	[illegible]
Franklin Park N J	[illegible]	Westfield N J	[illegible]
Freehold N J	[illegible]	Woodbridge N J	[illegible]
German Settlement N Y	[illegible]	Yonkers N Y	[illegible]
Glen Cove N Y	[illegible]	Trenton N J	[illegible]
Gravesend N Y	[illegible]	Tarrytown N Y	[illegible]
Hackensack N J	[illegible]

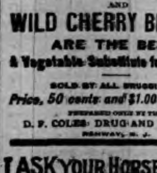
THE Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1895, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer

FOR MALARIA,
GENERAL DEBILITY,
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. Co.
RAHWAY, N. J.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE NEVERSLIP



THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.

Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,
Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted, without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.

On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dealers in hardware blacksmiths' supplies, etc. sole agents for Union county.

$6.00
........TO........
CALIFORNIA

is our Sleeping Car Rate on the Phillips-Rock Island Tourist Excursion, from Boston and kindred distant cities on the route of this car, to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The cars have upholstered spring seats, are Pullman build, and appointments perfect.

You have a special manager on the car all the way, and excursions run once a week, leaving Boston every Tuesday. Save money by taking this popular mode of travel.

Address for full particulars,

A. PHILLIPS & CO.
296 Washington st., Boston, Mass.

JNO. SEBASTIAN,
Gen. Passenger Agent, Chicago.
8 25 Feb 9

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed to 36½ W. Front street, ... solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

THE LABOR QUESTION.

Ex-Congressman Roswell G. Horr Gives an Entertaining and Convincing Lecture on the Great Problem of the Day.

Ex-Congressman Roswell G. Horr of Plainfield delivered a most interesting and entertaining lecture on the labor question in All Souls Church Friday evening before an appreciative audience. Mr. Horr has an inexhaustable fund of pertinent anecdote and amusing incident, and, though speaking in the facetious vein for which he is noted, unearthed frequent nuggets of wisdom and reason.

It is not in the nature of things that all should possess a like amount of this world's treasures, for just as natures vary so do the abilities of individuals to accumulate and save.

Some have more than others because some use all they can get and borrow more, while many use only a part of what they receive, be it ever so little.

The great trouble with many young men of today is that they believe it necessary, in order to be a good fellow, to drink and smoke on all occasions. "This is a fallacy"—emphatically remarked the lecturer—"and no one is a better judge than I, for I have done without either all my life."

"Not what one gets but what he saves will make him rich", yet the libraries of this country fairly groan with literature to prove that a person has no right to own a dollar's worth of real estate. The speaker cited Henry George's statement that the rich grow richer and the poor poorer in this country each succeeding year and that civilization is a humbug and government a failure; saying that the only possible objection he could see to this theory was that it was n't true. Several interesting reminiscences of the speaker's early life were given to show that the first proposition was wholly wrong, and that the people had more today because their needs were greater than formerly.

Talmage said not very long ago he hoped the day was not far distant when no more labor-saving machinery would be invented. The ex-Senator easily proved the fallacy of this desire from the fact that when, owing to the removal of any number of men because of the introduction of labor-saving machinery, new channels are found for their labors, and invention is stimulated.

Forty years ago grain was garnered with the hand scythe, and a man who could cut down half an acre in a day knew that he had been working, and he did n't stop in eight hours either.

Yet when the cradle scythe was introduced with which one man could do the work of six, the other five men could and did turn their hands to other channels.

"Any man" continued the lecturer, "who invents a machine which will lessen labor and improve the finished product is a benefactor to the human race and the time will never come when manual labor and drudgery will be wholly abolished."

The introduction of the friction match, which at first cost a penny apiece and can now be bought in boxes of 300 for what one cost then, if it had not proved a blessing to mankind would never have grown to the enormous industry it is today, when two factories in the State of Michigan each use 14,000,000 feet of white pine lumber in the manufacture of the convenient little torches every year.

The marketable price of products should regulate wages and never until it does will the question of labor and capital be finally settled. Brotherly love, the world-wide principle, "Do unto others as you would that they should do to you" is the natural and the only basis on which labor and capital can amicably come together.

The lecturer strongly emphasized the divine right of every man to be the architect of his own fortune, citing many apt illustrations applicable to the assertion, which did not fail to bring a smile of pleasure, oft times audible, to his attentive listeners. "In conclusion", said ex-Senator Horr, "I wish I could save my fellow-countrymen from three things: First, the greed of employers; next, from useless expenditure; and, most important of all, save them from following the advice of false teachers, who create discord and unrest by their harmful doctrine."

The lecture was earnest, instructive, interesting, scintillated with keen wit and dry humor, and was certainly worthy of a vastly larger audience than that which smiled and thought with Plainfield's orator last evening.

To Change the Meeting Place.

The Gospel Temperance meetings which have been held in Music Hall Sundays since October 21, will be continued in the rooms of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, corner of Watchung avenue and Fourth street, until further notice. The organization regret the necessity for the change, but owing to the cold and stormy Sundays the offerings did not meet the expense. A fund has been started, and when by the generosity of interested friends it has reached a sufficient amount to warrant the return to Music Hall, the meetings there may be resumed. Who will help in this good cause?

The Company Should Pay.

Inspector Herbert Chamberlain yesterday found that two of the North Plainfield fire-alarm boxes were burned out by the electric-light contact of a few nights ago. The damage is expensive to repair, and should be paid by the Gamewell Fire Alarm Telegraph Company, which in construction the system ought to have established thorough insulation.

TRACTION COMPANIES' INTERESTS.

An Association of New Jersey Corporations Formed.

A meeting composed of representatives of many traction companies of New Jersey was held at the offices of the Consolidated Traction Company, 1 Exchange place, Jersey City, Thursday afternoon, the object of which was the formation of an organization to be known as the Street Railway Association of New Jersey. The purpose of the companies was stated to be mutual advancement and social intercourse but it is reported that the power which will be wielded by the new association will be used for the purpose of obtaining favorable legislation.

The Plainfield company was not represented at the meeting, but it was stated that the officers had promised to join.

DUNELLEN AND NEW MARKET.

From The Press of January 19.

Fred Nelson and wife went to South Orange yesterday to visit relatives.

Seron Stites, while building fires in a factory in Bound Brook, struck his eye with a poker, causing a severe wound.

Robert Craig made a good substitute to William Morris on the oil route yesterday.

Alva Gray has had carpenters and plumbers at work refitting and repairing his residence on Washington avenue. He has designs ready for a new bath room and an improved kitchen range.

Frank D. Covey and his father J. D. Covey of Albany are in town.

William Craig went to High Bridge Thursday for the day, but did not get home until the next afternoon. He claims he got caught under the covered bridge.

William Carpenter's horse started from the station yesterday morning, and ran down in front of Hetfield's butcher store, where he stopped, and was taken back by Carpenter.

SCOTCH PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Miss Billings of Bartle avenue is confined to her home with a severe cold.

Mrs. Cora Miller of Front street has the grip.

Twilight Council, J. O. U. A. M., held its regular meeting in the rooms last evening. Routine business only was transacted.

Election of officers of Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company will take place at the meeting Monday evening.

Ernest Marsh is confined to his bed with a severe cold.

Col and Mrs C K Moore are preparing to leave Fanwood, and will take up their residence in New York city, where the Colonel was fortunate enough to land a political plum with $4,000 a year. The best wishes of a host of Scotch Plains and Fanwood friends go with them.

Fanwood Council, R A, will meet at their rooms next Tuesday evening, when the newly elected officers will hold their chairs for the first time.

R S Fisher, Frank Allen, and several others of the place, have been supenaed to appear at the Court House in Camden, Monday, Jan. 21, to testify in a $20,000 suit for damages brought by a person who was struck by a train near the station about a year ago.

The Choral Union met Thursday evening with Mr Fitzhugh as leader. Quite a number attended, and the prospects are more than encouraging. It is proposed to take up something in the shape of a cantata or oratorio to be given in the early Spring.

The Fanwood Township Committee met in Excelsior Hall last evening to receive the report of the Committee appointed to get signers for the branch of the trolley road. Chairman Terry called the meeting to order. The regular business was laid over, and the Committee's report was taken up. Mr Nichol, the chairman of the Committee, reported that they had been unable, through circumstances over which they had no control, to render a report of finished business. Mr. Gaddis, General Manager of the road, arose and said he did not think the Committee intended to do any injustice to the company, but by carrying the matter over for two weeks before granting the franchise for the main line they were standing in the way of an investor who was ready as soon as as the link from point to point was finished to advance their money to go on with the construction. He would guarantee in four-days time to place in the hands of the Town Committee an application for a branch road. When the engineer and himself drove over the proposed route it was decided if possible to build a branch road to the village. "Make"—he said—"the branch ordinance amending the main ordinance, and we will be compelled to build the branch." Town Counsel Codington was asked for his opinion. He said he would advise the matter over until the time asked for, and he urged the Committee to make the company put in the application for the branch before granting the one for the main line, as the company could not be compelled to build the branch any other way. Mr Nichol asked the Committee what they would do with their report. Mr Miller moved that the report be accepted and the Committee continued. Chairman Terry put the motion, Mr Miller and Terry voting for, and Mr Downer against it. The motion was carried, and the Committee's report was accepted. The trolley matter was laid over for two weeks, and the regular business was taken up. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. The Treasurer reported a balance on hand of $1,308.35. The report was accepted. A petition was read from residents on North street, Clinton avenue and Forest asking the Committee to change the names to that of Forest avenue, as the streets named were one continuous street. The petition was received and placed on file, and an ordinance was ordered prepared. Bills were paid, and the Committee adjourned to meet in two weeks to receive the report of the Trolley Committee.

Endeavorers Sing and Play.

The Junior Christian Endeavor Society of the Trinity Reformed Church enjoyed one of their delightful socials yesterday afternoon. The affair was in charge of Miss Mary Berg and Miss Lulu Snediker, and was a success in every particular.

The programme consisted of songs by May Williams, Laura Wyckoff, Florence White, Geo. Reynolds, C. Sutphen and Fred Donavan, a recitation by May Williams, and a piano solo by Isabella Edwards. All were fully appreciated.

Excellent refreshments were served, after which all participated in playing games.

The happy company departed for home well pleased with the afternoon's entertainment.

—In the Church of the Redeemer next Friday there will be Festival of the Conversion of St Paul, Celebration of the Holy Communion at 10 a. m., and evening service followed by the Rector's Bible class at 8.

FAMOUS DAYS OF THE DELEVAN.

The Old Albany Hotel Was the Haunt of State Legislators for Half a Century.

Politicians of the older time have had their memories quickened by the fire that destroyed the famous Delavan House at Albany. No doubt the stories that the walls of the noted rooms in the hotel could have told would have discounted all other reminiscences, but the walls were wisely silent in their day, and even now the people who are best fitted to talk are equally dumb on many interesting subjects. Indeed, it is doubtful if the political history that is yearly made in this city is ever faithfully written. There are times and occasions when the truth itself is dangerous.

To two of the rooms peculiar interest attached from such associations. These were parlors 57 and 454. In 57 that noted old warrior, Dean Richmond, for many years held forth to the confusion of his opponents in the political field. In it Stephen A. Douglas received his friends when swinging round the circle in the Presidential campaign of 1860. Andrew Jonnson also had his quarters there when he visited Albany with Grant, Seward and others in his search for a renomination to the Presidency. The memory of the big reception which was given the party is yet clear in the recollection of many who then enjoyed the scenes which accompanied the event. Governer Hoffman also had rooms on this corridor when he came to Albany for his inauguration in 1869, and subsequently Tilden, who was his campaign manager, also came to the Delevan when his own turn came in the whirligig of politics.

Most of all, this parlor was remembered as having been occupied by the lordly Conkling in that notorious contest known as the Platt-Conkling fight. It was there that Arthur received the news of the assassination of Garfield while in the very heat of the campaign that did not end in the vindication of either Mr. Platt or Mr. Conkling. Possibly this was the fiercest and most far reaching of all the struggles which made the old Delevan House noted far and near. It certainly involved the most men, and others besides Mr. Platt yet live to regret it. No other event has been more generally recalled by the fire, except, perhaps, the Senatorial contest between Morton and Miller, which resulted in the landing of the astute Hiscock, whose cards were played by "Jim" Belden. The combination of the Morton and Hiscock forces left Mr. Miller outside the breastworks and also left memories that are bitter even to this day.

Even livelier scenes are recalled by the mention of parlor 454. This was a part of the suite occupied by Tweed in his palmy days, when tradition says he had doors cut through and a private staircase put in to suit his own ideas of convenience and security from observation. Connolly and Genet and all those who became more or less famous through the methods used to overcome opposition and do business made this suite their headquarters. For some reason the idea prevailed that this room was lucky, and it was much sought after by aspirants for political honors, especially Speakership candidates. General Husted, in his day, would have reckoned himself homeless when a fight was on unless he was housed in its familiar walls.

THE WONDERFUL GRAND CANYON

More Impressive Than Niagara, More Beautiful Than the Alps.

There are many wonders within the limits of the Yellowstone Park, but of them all there is nothing so wonderful as the Grand Canon of the Yellowstone River. One can at no season of the year view this tremendous gorge without a sense of awe at the work of the Titanic elemental forces which have hollowed it out of the enduring granite of the hills. There is an impression of unspeakable solemnity conveyed by this giant spectacle, and no American looks upon it without a sense of absolute humility and insignificance. The thought, the meaning, the expression of the Grand Canon is something the human mind is unable at first to grasp. There is no coup d'œil possible there; there is no definite thought resultant upon any single glance at the Grand Canon, no matter how comprehensive, or how perspective that may be.

The Grand Canon refuses to be compassed at a glance. It demands faithful, patient, humble study. More impressive than Niagara, more mighty than the sea, more beautiful than the Alps, it offers to the visitor an enigma capable of solution only after long and reverent acquaintance. To attempt to see the Grand Canon in an hour on a day is rediculous. To attempt to see it as one of a crowd is a wrong to one's best self. To study it hour after hour, to drink in with unabated zest the same view time after time, day after day, to see the mountain lights and shades give a thousand difference expressions to the face of nature, and to learn some new feature even at the last visit to some point of view—these are the things which make the visitor and observer at first curious, then wondering, and then we may say worshipful. Not even the most blase world trotter was ever heard to express disappointment with the Grand Canon of the Yellowstone, and it is singular to notice the universally respectful and subdued comment upon it by even the most casual and flippant visitor.

There are very few persons who have seen the canon in winter time, and it may be well believed we made the most of our rare privilege. It was risky work approaching the great walls on the skis, but we managed to get to different points commanding full view of the main portion of the canon and of both the Great Falls and the Upper Falls of the Yellowstone. The Great Falls were encased in vast white columns of ice on each side, and from them arose a noble pillar of dense white vapor. Never again shall we see a more remarkable sight than that thus presented to us on that clear winter morning.—Phila. Press.

The Mysterious Disappearance Syndicate.

A Mysterious Disappearance Syndicate has been discovered to exist. Two Atchison men who disappeared were members of it. The syndicate provides a place for them to go to, making an exchange with men in some other part of the world who want to disappear. Shortly after the disappearance of the two Atchison men, it is claimed two strangers of retired habits, evidently not wishing to be known, came here, and have lived here ever since. It is claimed they were exchanged for the Atchison men.—Atchison Globe.

It is very natural for a young friend and a young lover to think the persons they love have nothing to do but please them.—Pope.

AN OLD MANSION.

WHERE WASHINGTON QUARTERED IN COLONIAL DAYS.

Commodore Vanderbilt Courted Sally Lake Within Its Historic Walls. In Turn the Home of Royalists and Patriots. Relics of Ancient Times.

We have no Tower of London, with its horrible and bloody memories, yet we have many places where cluster interesting bits of history, tragic in some instances, pathetic and romantic in others, and comical and humorous in the extreme in many others. The old Austin house on Staten Island is one of these places where history records not only the sublime but the ridiculous under one roof.

This charming old residence, the ancestral home of the Lake family of Staten Island, was built somewhere about the year 1710, and is situated on Pennsylvania avenue, Clifton, Staten Island, north of the Quarantine station and near the waterside, with a beautiful lawn where lilacs and wistaria bloom in their season and venerable shade trees, moved by the breezes of New York Bay, nod their welcome to the approaching visitor. The waters of the bay lap the foot of the lawn, making music in harmonic cadence to the sighing wind through the branches of the tall trees. Many other buildings of ante-Revolutionary days have passed into oblivion, but it seems as if one has been preserved expressly to keep in memory the historic associations which cluster about it.

During Revolutionary times the old mansion was in turn the abode of Loyalists and Patriots, and a scene of love occurred there which ended in a tragedy and which has given rise to the story that some of its chambers are haunted.

This same house was Lord Howe's headquarters when he came to New York in 1776 with his 10,000 red coated British troops and bloodthirsty Hessians, and later on under the same roof Benjamin Franklin and Lord Howe discussed the terms of peace.

A good story is told of how near General Washington, commander-in-chief of the Continental Army, came to being captured by some of Lord Howe's marauders at this house. It was while the campaign was on in New Jersey that General Washington ventured over on Staten Island, accompanied by a portion of his staff. Noon found them at the Lake homestead, where Washington was a welcome guest at all times, and while they were sitting at dinner a troop of British cowboys and Tories rode into the dooryard and began to hitch their horses. They had evidently been riding hard, and several of them showed evidences of fighting, as they were covered with blood. They were in bad humor, that was evident, and as they caught sight of the American officers' horses they at once surrounded the house and prepared to close in on its inmates, who they knew must be of considerable importance from the trappings on their horses.

Just as Washington and his aides were about to make a fight for their escape there came a shout from the road leading to the south, and the British marauders flew to their horses and scampered away. In a minute, two companies of continental dragoons swept into the yard with Richard Henry Lee, "Lighthorse Harry, the Gamecock of the Santee," and Col. Aaron Burr, the quartermaster of the Continental Army, at their head.

What makes the old house especially interesting at the present day is the history told by a pane of glass in one of the windows. On this window pane, which is carefully guarded, is scratched the words: "Sail Lake, C., 1812." To the uninitiated this does not stand for much, but it meant much for the man who left his mark there, and the man was Cornelius Vanderbilt, the elder, better known as "The Old Commodore."

Many years ago Mr. John H. Austen, while acting as a member of the crew on Commodore Vanderbilt's yacht during an amateur race, called his attention to the old house and told him how it had charmed him when a boy and that he had made a resolution to own it if he was ever able to buy and it was for sale, and that it had finally came into his possession.

"I know the place well," returned Commodore Vanderbilt. "I courted my first love in that house and she was one of the prettiest girls I ever saw. Her name was Sally Lake, and the Lakes were at that time wealthy and I was poor. I loved her, but her mother was a worldly wise woman and objected to my courting her daughter. When I asked the reason the old lady said:

"'Well, Cornell, if you want to know so bad I'll tell you. You're a poor shack, and you will never be able to support Sally as a woman of the Lake family should be supported, and I won't have her marry such a poor devil as you are.'"

The Commodore then told Mr. Austen that on a certain window pane in the upper story he would find the inscription: "Sail Lake, C., 1812." He said he had cut it there while the beautiful Sally stood beside him, he with one arm about her waist, while he used the diamond ring on her finger to cut the inscription. The letter C., he said, stood for his own name, and the figures for the year.

It is said that both Mrs. Lake, who objected to Sally's marrying "such a poor devil" as Cornelius Vanderbilt, and Sally lived to see the "poor shack" worth $80,000,000 and become the king of American financiers. If that be true, and it doubtless is, there must have been an amount of deep thinking on the part of the scheming mother and the fickle Sally.

Since Mr. Austen has owned the old house, and that is for over two score of years, he has gathered many articles of historic value within its walls. Between the huge oak beams which form the ceiling timbers are panels of English deal taken from a British ship captured during the Revolution. In his parlor is a link and bolt of the great chain which was stretched across the Hudson at Fort Clinton, West Point, to prevent the British from ascending the Hudson, the chain having been made by Peter Townsend, the grandfather of Mrs. Austen. A portrait of the patriotic blacksmith is also among the relics as well as many other articles of lesser value.

Ample Compensation.

"Will you kindly take off your hat?" said the gentleman behind the girl with the mammoth headgear. "I won't see my $1.50 worth of the show if you don't."

"No, sir," replied the girl, amiably, as she turned around and smiled serenely upon him. "You may be deprived of a show worth $1.50, but please to remember you are permitted to see a hat worth $25."
—Chicago Record.

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.
Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 188, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 16 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 801 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 11y19tf

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROVISIONS,
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.
OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.
Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Office cor. Front St. and Park Ave.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security.
Mar30tf

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 21 SOMERSET ST. 3-13-tf

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
80 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J.
mch90tf

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 308 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to. aply

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed. 11tyl

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.
TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS,
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.
Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.
Keys of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Offices corner of Park avenue and Second street.—jestf

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 122, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of CONSTITUTIONALIST. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES H. THIERS,
Dentist,
48 Somerset street. A new local anaesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.—jestf

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
[Successor to T. J. Carey,]
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—24 W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1 [illegible] Piano moving a specialty.

NOTICE. June 1, 1894.
Estate of Sarah Doane, deceased.
Pursuant to the order of George T. Parrot, Surrogate of the county of Union, this day made, on application of the undersigned, administrator of said deceased, notice is hereby given to the creditors of said deceased to exhibit to the subscriber under oath or affirmation their claims and demands against the estate of said deceased within nine months from this date, or they will be forever barred from prosecuting or recovering the same against the subscriber.
JOHN H. DOANE,
11 15 10 Administrator.

TWENTY
Yeas experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 2 doors above Peacestree
Mr. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to Shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Liver and [illegible] Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No. 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
[illegible] ping. Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning,
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL 8. 11-11-tf

Estey
Pianos
Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Installments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? [illegible]

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

Plainfield, New Jersey.

TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. P. M. Fine of West Front street is ill.

David S. Dunavan spent Sunday in New York.

Dr. C. H. Clark is much improved, and is able to sit up.

Thomas Young of Somerset street is ill with a heavy cold.

Miss Ada Wagner of Doane & Edsall's is a sufferer from the grip.

Miss Sadie Howell of Willow avenue is confined to her home by illness.

Jed Smalley is ill with pneumonia at the home of his father on Craig place.

Herbert Clark has recovered from his illness so as to be able to go to work.

Charles Hayes of West Seventh street spent Sunday with relatives in New York.

Mrs. C. W. Smith is confined to her home on Johnston avenue with the grip.

Miss Florence Dodge of New York is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. T. H. Keller.

Miss Ella Conkey of New York is visiting her aunt Mrs. N. W. French of West Fourth street.

Hiram Hornish, who is a Muhlenberg patient suffering from Bright's disease, is slowly improving.

Mrs. Herbert W. Harris of New York is visiting Mrs. C. P. Balli of Belvidere avenue, Netherwood.

Mrs. S. P. Smith of Central avenue left Friday for Hartwick, N. Y., where she will spend two weeks.

Mrs. A. B. Dunavan of Elmwood place has returned from Newark, where she has been visiting her mother.

Miss Lilly B. Livingston is seriously ill at the home of her grandmother, Mrs. M. O. Williams, Somerset street.

Miss Maggie Filmer of Gloversville, N. Y., is visiting a few days with her aunt Miss Filmer of Central avenue.

C. VanHerwarden and family of Flushing moved last Saturday into their new home on South avenue, Netherwood.

Raymond Hodge, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hodge of Somerset street, is suffering from a painful abscess over his right eye.

Miss Mabel Van Alstyne of Chatham, N. Y., is visiting at the home of her aunt, Mrs. W. L. Van Alstyne of Watchung avenue.

Walter C. Williams of Netherwood avenue has rented the Lissignolo property on East Front street, where he moved with his family Saturday.

W. P. Williams of New York city returned to his home Saturday after a short visit with his mother, Mrs. M. C. Williams of 147 Somerset street.

Letter-Carrier Robert Loughlin will now be able to cover his district in the specified time (eight hours), as he has just purchased a new Columbia bike.

Mrs. E. M. Hannigan and daughter Miss Eugenie, of 15 Prospect place, are at the Magnolia House, St. Augustine, Fla., where they will remain the balance of the Winter.

A four-page letter has been received from Judge John Ulrich indicating his greatly improved condition. His friends will be glad to learn of his steady recovery.

Gustave Sutterlin of Greenbrook road, who has been a sufferer the past two weeks with inflammatory rheumatism, is now able to go about with the aid of crutches.

Dr. Endicott of East Seventh street has been compelled to give up his office hours on account of the many cases of the grip requiring his attendance at the homes of his patients.

George F. Randolph, formerly of this city, but now of New York, brother of Pharmacist L. W. Randolph of West Front street, is very low with pneumonia. His family also are ill.

Miss Violet Truell of Central avenue gave a reception Saturday evening to P. Ludwig Conde and the Symphony Orchestra. Choice music was played, and refreshments were served.

Borough Councilman Valiant has given to Builder Lunger the contract for the erection of a house on Craig place, near Grove street, and excavating for the cellar was commenced today.

Mr. and Mrs. George W. Mead spent Sunday with Mrs. Mead's parents, I. L. Mather, 124 Plainfield avenue. Mrs. Mead's many friends in Trinity Church were glad to welcome her once more.

Miss Maibelle Force of West Fourth street returned from a very pleasant visit with her friend Miss M. Alice MacDonald of Jersey City Heights. While there she was one of a theatre party at the Lyceum Theatre, New York.

Tickets for the bal poudre are selling rapidly, and it is sure to be a great success. The patronesses are: Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. George D. Hallock, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mrs. J. H. Howell, Mrs. F. G. Grant, Mrs. W. J. Roome and Mrs. Charles A. Reed.

PARTICULAR MENTION

Herman Keller is very ill with pneumonia.

W. J. Stephenson has put in a 'phone, No. 121 B.

Miss Jessie K. Stevens of South avenue is confined to her home by the grip.

C. H. Lippencott of 28 Jackson avenue is confined to his home by illness.

Miss Amy Emmons of Prospect place is confined to her bed with influenza.

Mrs. C. B. Clifton of West Second street is rapidly recovering from the grip.

Miss Kate Garey of East Front street is convalescing after a severe attack of the grip.

Miss Ellen Demarest of Florida is the guest of Miss Frankie Demarest of Park avenue.

Miss Lucy Thornton of Fall River, Mass., is visiting J. C. Peck of Myrtle avenue.

Mrs. Harold Serrell of Plainfield avenue has joined the First Baptist church choir as a soprano.

Mrs. Julius Williams of Elmwood place has returned home from a visit among friends out of town.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Flack and James Flack have removed from Somerset street to 151 Central avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. David A. Bowman and daughter of East Sixth street have all been sick with the grip.

Frank Venino of Stelle avenue has obtained a place with the Steinway Piano Company in New York.

Mrs. John Doane of LaGrande avenue has returned home from her uncle's funeral in Moscow, Pa.

The wife of Councilman E. H. Bird has so far recovered from her recent illness as to be about the house.

Miss Ella Serrell of West Front street left this morning for a visit to her brother Wallace Serrell in Chicago.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Hazell of Westervelt avenue spent Sunday at the former home of Mrs. Hazell, Summit.

Miss Florence Abbott of Central avenue is home from Bridgeport, where she has been the guest of Mrs. Warner.

Miss Grace E. Overton of Rockview avenue is entertaining her cousin, Miss Sarah Overton of Coney Island.

Both Mrs. Bret Harte and daughter Miss Jessamy, of Putnam avenue, are confined to the house with the grip.

Theodore Smith of the borough is almost helpless from muscular rheumatism. Garret P. Smith is acting as nurse.

Miss Grace Miller, daughter of Major W. D. W. Miller of LaGrande avenue, is recovering from an attack of the grip.

Andrew Rutherford of Sherman avenue celebrated his birthday Saturday by giving a dinner party to a number of his friends.

Miss Alice Haines of First place is making an extended trip through the South with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Haines.

Miss Grace Smith of Park avenue has been confined to the house for several days with the grip. She hopes to be out in a few days.

W. E. Brock and family of Mountain avenue will spend the Winter in Troy. They will then return to their home in North Plainfield.

Miss Lucy Thornton of Fall River has returned home after spending several days at the home of James C. Peck of Myrtle avenue.

G. L. Douglass of Sycamore avenue has gone to Washington to confer about the changing of the lights on all vessels, sailing and steamers.

Miss Lottie V. Johnston of Prospect Heights, Brooklyn, is being entertained by her friend Miss J. Louise Jenkins of of West Second street.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lewis, who formerly resided on Carleton avenue, and who are now residents of New York, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Stockton.

E. C. Pease of the Park has been away some weeks, and is still away on a business trip in the lumber camps of Wisconsin, Michigan and the Canadas.

Kind friends of Mrs. Lawrence Myers and party were profusely generous in their remembrances with a wreath of flowers on their departure for Europe on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Gaston of Somerville were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Dunham of East Fifth street. Mr. Gaston is a brother of Mrs. Dunham.

Miss Maggie Hurlbut, daughter of Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut, formerly of East Fifth street and now of New York, is the guest of Miss Ethel Holmes of East Fifth street.

Robert McCormick, who has been the efficient coachman of Henry Squires of Watchung avenue, has returned to his old home in Ireland to spend the rest of the Winter.

Herbert Wolcott Bowen, Consul-General to Barcelona, Spain, arrived in New York by steamship Majestic today, and will visit his brother, Henry E. Bowen of Watchung avenue.

Philip Crosman, formerly in the employ of the cigar manufacturer Braham of North avenue, died Sunday evening at Raritan, where he was employed by Joseph Miller. Decedent was in his fifty-ninth year.

Albert Woltmann, Oscar Nightengale and Edgar Serrell went to Bound Brook Saturday to enjoy the skating on the Raritan canal. They found no ice on the canal but skated to New Brunswick and return on the Raritan river.

Pure. Safe.
Prompt. Sure.
Pleasing. Speedy.

Allcock's Porous Plaster

is all this and more, too. The best external remedy known for every form of ache or pain resulting from colds, coughs, sprains, strains, rheumatism or neuralgia.

Never be Satisfied with any but ALLCOCK'S. Be not deceived by misrepresentations.

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills

relieve indigestion, bowel, liver and kidney trouble. Absolutely pure.

Miss Charlotte Messersmith is ill with tonsilitis.

Charles H. Smith of Grove street is ill at his home.

Henry Brower of East Fifth street is suffering from an injured hand.

Miss Alberta Irwin of Putnam avenue is out again after a severe attack of the grip.

Miss Euphemia Johnston of East Fifth street is confined to her home with the grip.

Miss Edith Beach of Watchung avenue is out again after a severe attack of the grip.

A daughter was born Monday to Mr. and Mrs. Howard A. Thompson of West Second street.

Miss Lillian McIlrary of Brooklyn is visiting Miss Eda Beekman of West Eighth street.

Miss Maud Emmons of Washington avenue is confined to the house with an affection of the face.

Mrs. Bret Harte and daughter Miss Jessamy Harte are able to be about again after an attack of the grip.

Mrs. Mulford, formerly of this city and now of Philadelphia, is visiting D. B. Davis of East Fifth street.

Joseph Shepperd of Orchard place has received news of the death of his uncle, Alexander Shepperd, in Newton.

Henry B. Drake of Duer street, who has been one of the numerous victims of the grip, is able to be out again.

J. J. Coard of East Ninth street has returned from New York, where he has been detained on account of illness.

Miss Mary Hurlbut of New York, who has been visiting Miss Ethel Holmes of East Fifth street, has returned home.

Joseph Berg of East Fifth street has accepted a position as clerk with Van-Buren & Timpson, real estate agents.

Harry Newball of LaGrande avenue is home from the Boston School of Technology, where he is taking a four-years course.

Fred Smith of Putnam avenue is out again after a confinement of several weeks with a severe sprain of the ankle, received while skating on Hyde's pond. He limps slightly yet as a reminder of his accident.

A HACKETTSTOWN MIRACLE.

AN INTERESTING RECITAL.

From the Hackettstown, N. J., Republican.

Reports from time to time reached the Republican of the remarkable cure of Mrs Jacob Shields the wife of our leading coal merchant, who has been suffering from a complication of diseases that nearly resulted in her death. In order to verify these statements one of our reporters called on Mrs. Shields and found that the reports were in no way exaggerated, and that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy had saved her life.

The particulars of the case are these. "I was taken sick," said Mrs. Shields, "with typhoid fever, and was delirious for 3 weeks. When I recovered I suffered untold agony with my back and right limb. They felt as though they would burst. At the same time I suffered terribly with my kidneys. My mother was with me and a friend of hers called and told her of the sickness they had passed through at her home and that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy had been used by them, and she felt sure I would find great benefit from its use.

"A bottle was purchased and I hadn't taken but a few doses before it began to relieve me. That evening the doctor called and I told him that I had stopped his medicine, for he had told Mr. Shields the last time he called that he did not know what more to do for me. Some time before this, I was taken to the hospital, and then brought home, as was supposed, to die. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy was taken just in time. I do thank God from the bottom of my heart that He ever sent that lady here to tell me of Favorite Remedy, otherwise death would have been my doom. Since I recovered ever so many have told me that it was a miracle I ever go well. I certainly cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

Many persons are using it upon my recommendation, and it is doing them good. I will cheerfully answer any questions," said Mrs. Shields, "in regard to my illness feeling that others who may be suffering will be benefited by using Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

No tribute could be greater than these words of Mrs. Shields, who voluntarily tells the story of her remarkable recovery.

Favorite Remedy ranks with the medical profession as the most perfect of all blood and nerve medicines. It will cure all diseases of the skin, liver and kidneys and the weaknesses peculiar to females, and affords great protection from attacks that originate in change of life; it cures scrofula, salt rheum, rheumatism, dyspepsia, all kidney, bladder and urinary diseases, gravel diabetes and Brights disease.

—A number of Plainfielders have been doing double duty in their offices in New York since their clerks have been called out to do duty in Brooklyn.

CHARITY AT HOME.

Plainfield Women Discuss Methods of Municipal Alms-Giving.

The Plainfield Branch Alliance of Unitarian and Other Liberal Christian Women held one of their most interesting meetings Tuesday afternoon in All Souls Church.

The subject for discussion was charity, and its relations to Plainfield. Mrs. B. J. Shreve read the first paper, on the "Administration and cost of our present charity system". It was an historical account, starting with mention of the old-fashioned method of hiring the poor out by contract. Mrs. Shreve spoke of the benefits of the Relief Association and Citizens Organized Aid. She also paid a tribute to Mrs. Tiffany, who organized the Relief. The problem of caring for the poor was yet unsettled, she said; and then told of the system employed in Burlington, where a poor farm had been established since 1800, and was admirably carried on. The cost for each inmate was only $50 per year. Plainfield was in need of a better system.

Mrs. Horace Kimball presented a paper on the adoption of a better plan. She described graphically the bad results of our present systen. An interesting fact was noted that the matter of poverty was more or less hereditary, and cited as an instance that three generations were represented at present on the charity list. She thought that if an almshouse were established many would exercise their strength and intelligence, rather than become inmates.

Extracts were read from a letter by R. Treat Paine, on pauperism, showing that pauperism was fostered by indiscriminate giving.

Mr. H. B. Opdyke in a very interesting paper told of the tramp question, and stated that whenever a tramp was sent to E. H. Holmes's coal and wood yard with a ticket he would get enough work to obtain a good meal. She thought that attention should be given to able-bodied applicants, and that the unskilled should be trained.

Another letter was read from Mrs. Benjamin Williams, Secretary of the State Charities Aid Association, urging that provision should be made for the defective classes There are at present only two institutions for this class, one at Trenton and the other at Vineland, and the State Society was endeavoring to get an appropriation from the State for the building of an asylum for the blind.

An informal discussion followed on the papers, which was participated in by Mrs. D. P. Hall, Mrs. G. B. Opdyke, Mrs. E. W. Conklin, Mrs. E. C. Pearson, Miss Mary Tweedy, Miss Kate Martine and Miss E. O. Reynolds.

At the next meeting, Tuesday, Feb. 26, the subject of "Criminal Classes" will be taken up, and H. P. Reynolds will furnish a very interesting paper.

THE COST OF LIVING.

Plainfield Markets Defended Against the Outside World.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS:—In a recent issue of The Daily Press I noticed a communication signed by M in reference to the high prices charged for all kinds of provisions in Plainfield, special reference having been made to grocers and butchers. As one of the latter I beg you to devote sufficient space to this article to give our side of the case.

There is no necessity for any commuter taking his market basket to New York, provided he will do his marketing here on the same terms he does it there. In New York he leaves his basket and his order, pays for his goods and carries them home or has them sent by express. Here we are expected to send a wagon for the order, deliver it, charge it, and then wait until our customer gets good and ready to pay for them. Any business man knows that this means expense and that this expense is added to the cost of the goods.

When M says he buys as good a roast in New York at 14 cents as that for which he pays 18 and 20 cents here, it probably tastes as good to him because it is cheap—but he forgets to mention the fact that to his 14 cents he has to add express charges, which I am informed is about 1½ cents per pound. At 16 cents per pound and on the same terms he can buy a better roast here than he can in New York for the same money.

I will admit that poultry is dearer here than it ought to be, but that is because people here won't buy the same kind of poultry that they do in New York. Here unless a chicken or turkey is scalded people don't want them; in New York they will buy anything so long as it is cheap.

The remedy is in the people's own hands. If they will buy here as they do in New York we can dispense with our horses, wagons, drivers and bookkeepers, which will necessarily reduce the cost on all provisions.

BUTCHER

—Chief Marshal Pangborn has detected the owner of the cap which was dropped by the night marauders at the home of Rev. Mr. Hauser Sunday night.

—Rev. E. Kiouka will begin instruction of the Y. M. C. A. German class Friday, and J. V. A. Craighead of the English branches Saturday.

—A supper and musical entertainment will be given in the lecture room of Trinity Reformed Church Thursday and Friday evenings of this week. The supper will be served from 6 to 8, and the musical entertainment follows. Go there for supper instead of going home and then stay and hear good singing and instrumental music.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."
See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

E. P. THORN,

No. 125 Park Avenue,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,

For Family and Medicinal Use,

A SPECIALTY.

3-26-y

No Lamp like "THE MILLER"

Every one perfect whether it cost $1.00 or $100.00.

The Improvements (our patents) make "THE MILLER" A PERFECT LAMP.

Particulars cannot be given here, but we assure you it will pay to see "The Miller." Established 1844. We make a complete assortment of Lamps, Brass Tables with Onyx Tops, etc.

Many Designs Specially Beautiful for Gifts.

EDWARD MILLER & CO., 10 and 12 College Pl., bet. Park Place and Barclay St., New York.

☞ To warm a room buy a "Miller" Oil Heater.

☞ Cut out and save this card. ☜

READY for LIGHT
REMOVING CHIMNEY

For sale by W. L. Gavett & Co.

AT YOUR OWN PRICE.

Odds, Ends and Remnants.

Amos H. Van Horn, L't'd,

73 Market St., near Plane St.

We find, after stock taking, several styles of Bedroom Suits, Parlor Suits and different patterns of Carpets that we do not intend to keep any more, and we will close them out at nearly your own price.

Parlor suits	$10
Bedroom suits	$10
Brussels carpet, per yard	50cts
Extra super ingrain carpet, per yard	50cts
Cotton chain ingrain carpet, per yard	25cts
Good bed lounges	$7
Parlor stoves	at your own price.

Note the name Amos before entering the store.

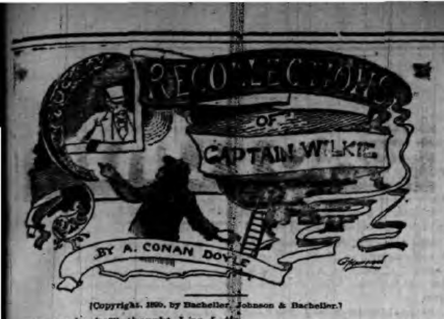
PORTLAND RANGES—The leading range in the city, and we will wager $25 that that there is more sold of that range than any other in the city. Why? Simply because it is the cheapest. Cheapest because it is the best; good baker, good draught and several improvements connected with it make it the most complete range manufactured. Easy terms.

STORING FURNITURE—At 88, 90 and 92 Bank st. You will find the largest and most complete storage building in the State. All locked rooms at reasonable rates. Furniture packed and moved with vans in city or county at moderate charges.

Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,

73 Market Street, nearest Plane street, Newark, N. J.



RECOLLECTIONS OF CAPTAIN WILKIE

BY A. CONAN DOYLE

[Copyright, 1890, by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

"Who can he be?" thought I, as I watched my companion in the second-class carriage of the London & Dover railway.

I had been so full of the fact that my long-expected holiday had come at last, and that for a few days at least the gayeties of Paris were about to supersede the dull routine of the hospital wards, that we were well out of London before I observed that I was not alone in the compartment. In these days we have all pretty well agreed that "three is company and two is none" upon the railway. At the time I write of, however, people were not so morbidly sensitive about their traveling companions. It was rather an agreeable surprise to me to find that there was some chance of whiling away the hours of a tedious journey. I therefore pulled my cap down over my eyes, took a good look from beneath it at my vis-a-vis, and repeated to myself: "Who can he be?"

I used rather to pride myself on being able to spot a man's trade or profession by a good look at his exterior. I had the advantage of studying under a master of the art, who used to electrify both his patients and his clinical classes by long shots, sometimes at the most unlikely of pursuits; and never very far from the mark. "Well, my man," I have heard him say: "I can see by your fingers that you play some musical instrument for your livelihood, but it is a rather curious one—something quite out of my line." The man afterwards informed us that he earned a few coppers by blowing "Rule Britannia" on a coffee pot, the spout of which was pierced to form a rough flute. Though a novice in the art, I was still able to astonish my ward companions on occasion, and I never lost an opportunity of practicing. It was not mere curiosity, then, which led me to lean back on the cushions and analyze the quiet, middle-aged man in front of me.

CAPTAIN WILKIE.

I used to do the thing systematically, and my train of reflections ran somewhat in this wise: "General appearance, vulgar, fairly opulent and extremely self-possessed—looks like a man who could outchaff a bargee, and yet be at his ease in middle-class society. Eyes well set together and nose rather prominent—would be a good long-range marksman. Cheeks flabby, but the softness of expression redeemed by a square-cut jaw and a well-set lower lip. On the whole, a powerful type. Now for the hands—rather disappointed there. Thought he was a self-made man by the look of him, but there is no callous in the palm and no thickness at the joints. Has never been engaged in any real physical work, I should think. No tanning on the backs of the hands; on the contrary, they are very white, with blue projecting veins and long, delicate fingers. Couldn't be an artist with that face, and yet he has the hands of a man engaged in delicate manipulations. No red acid spots upon his clothes, no ink stains, no nitrate of silver marks upon the hands (this helps to negative my half-formed opinion that he was a photographer). Clothes not worn in any particular part. Coat made of tweed, and fairly old; but the left elbow, as far as I can see it, has as much of the fluff left on as the right, which is seldom the case with men who do much writing. Might be a commercial traveler, but the little pocketbook in the waistcoat is wanting, nor has he any of those handy valises, suggestive of samples."

I give these brief headings of my ideas merely to demonstrate my method of arriving at a conclusion. As yet I had obtained nothing but negative results; but now, to use a chemical metaphor, I was in a position to pour off this solution of dissolved possibilities and examine the residue. I found myself reduced to a very limited number of occupations. He was neither a lawyer nor a clergyman, in spite of a soft felt hat, and a somewhat clerical cut about the necktie. I was wavering now between pawnbroker and horse-dealer; but there was too much character about his face for the former; and he lacked that extraordinary equine atmosphere which hangs about the latter even in his hours of relaxation; so I formed a provisional diagnosis of betting man of methodistical persuasions, the latter clause being inserted in deference to his hat and necktie.

Pray, do not think that I reasoned it out like this in my own mind. It is only now, sitting down with pen and paper, that I can see the successive steps. As it was, I had formed my conclusion within sixty seconds of the time when I drew my hat down over my eyes and uttered the mental ejaculation with which my narrative begins. I did not feel quite satisfied even then with my deduction. However, as a leading question would—to pursue my chemical analogy—act as my litmus paper, I determined to try one. There was a Times lying by my companion, and I thought the opportunity too good to be neglected.

"Do you mind my looking at your paper?" I asked.

"Certainly, sir, certainly," said he most urbanely, handing it across.

I glanced down its columns until my eye rested upon the list of the latest betting.

"Hullo!" I said, "they are laying odds upon the favorite for the Cambridgeshire. But perhaps," I added, looking up, "you are not interested in these matters?"

"Snares, sir!" said he violently; "wiles of the enemy! Mortals are but given a few years to live, how can they squander them so! They have not even an eye to their poor worldly interests," he added in a quieter tone, "or they would never back a single horse at such short odds with a field of thirty."

There was something in this speech of his which tickled me immensely. I suppose it was the odd way in which he blended religious intolerance with worldly wisdom. I laid the Times aside with the conviction that I should be able to spend the next two hours to better purpose than in its perusal.

"You speak as if you understood the matter, at any rate," I remarked.

"Yes, sir," he answered; "few men in England understood these things better in the old days before I changed my profession. But that is all over now."

"Changed your profession?" said I, interrogatively.

"Yes; I changed my name, too."

"Indeed?" said I.

"Yes; you see, a man wants a real fresh start when his eyes become opened, so he has a new deal all round, so to speak. Then he gets a fair chance."

There was a short pause here, as I seemed to be on delicate ground in touching on my companion's antecedents, and he did not volunteer any information. I broke the silence by offering him a cheroot.

"No, thanks," said he; "I have given up tobacco. It was the hardest wrench of all, was that. It does me good to smell the whiff of your weed. Tell me," he added, suddenly, looking hard at me with his shrewd gray eyes, "why did you take stock of me so carefully before you spoke?"

"It is a habit of mine," said I. "I am a medical man, and observation is everything in my profession. I had no idea you were looking."

"I can see without looking," he answered. "I thought you were a detective, at first; but I couldn't recall your face at the time I knew the force."

"Were you a detective, then?" said I.

"No," he answered, with a laugh; "I was the other thing—the detected, you know. Old scores are wiped out now, and the law cannot touch me, so I don't mind confessing to a gentleman, like yourself, what a scoundrel I have been in my time."

"We are none of us perfect," said I.

"No; but I was real out-and-outer. A 'fake,' you know, to start with, and afterwards a 'cracksman.' It is easy to talk of these things now, for I've changed my spirit. It's as if I was talking of some other man, you see."

"Exactly so," said I. Being a medical man I had none of that shrinking from crime and criminals which many men possess. I could make all allowances for congenital influence and the force of circumstances. No company, therefore, could have been more acceptable to me than that of the old malefactor; and as I sat puffing at my cigar, I was delighted to observe that my air of interest was gradually loosening his tongue.

"Yes; I'm converted now," he continued, "and of course I am a happier man for that. And yet," he added wistfully, "there are times when I long for the old trade again, and fancy myself strolling out on a cloudy night with my jimmy in my pocket. I left a name behind me in my profession, sir. I was one of the old school, you know. It was very seldom that we bungled a job. We used to begin at the foot of the ladder, the rope ladder, if I may say so, in my younger days, and then work our way up, step by step, so that we were what you might call good men all through."

"I see," said I.

"I was always reckoned a hard-working, conscientious man, and had talent, too—the very cleverest of them allowed that. I began as a blacksmith, and then did a little engineering and carpentering, and then I took to sleight-of-hand tricks, and then to picking pockets. I remember, when I was home on a visit, how my poor old father used to wonder why I was always hovering around him. He little knew that I used to clear everything out of his pockets a dozen times a day, and then replace them, just to keep my hand in. He believes to this day that I am in an office in the city. There are few of them could touch me in that particular line of business, though."

"I suppose it is a matter of practice?" I remarked.

"To a great extent. Still, a man never quite loses it, if he has once been an adept—excuse me; you have dropped some cigar ash on your coat," and he waved his hand politely in front of my breast, as if to brush it off. "There," he said, handing me my gold scarf pin, "you see I have not forgot my old cunning yet."

He had done it so quickly that I hardly saw the hand whisk over my bosom, nor did I feel his fingers touch me, and yet there was the pin glittering in his hand. "It is wonderful," I said as I fixed it again in its place.

"Oh, that's nothing! But I have been in some really smart jobs. I was in the gang that picked the new patent safe. You remember the case. It was guaranteed to resist anything; and we managed to open the first that was ever issued, within a week of its appearance. It was done with graduated wedges, sir, the first so small that you could hardly see it against the light, and the last strong enough to prize it open. It was a clever managed affair."

"I remember it," said I. "But surely some one was convicted for that?"

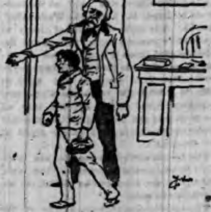
"Yes, one was nabbed. But he didn't split, nor even let on how it was done. We'd have cut his soul out if—" He suddenly damped down the very ugly fires which were peeping from his eyes. "Perhaps I am boring you, talking about these old wicked days of mine?"

"On the contrary," I said, "you interest me extremely."

"I like to get a listener I can trust. It's a sort of blow-off, you know, and I feel lighter after it. When I am among my brethren I dare hardly think of what has gone before. Now, I'll tell you about another job I was in. To this day, I cannot think about it without laughing."

I lit another cigar, and composed myself to listen.

"It was when I was a youngster," said he. "There was a big city man in those days who was known to have a very valuable gold watch. I followed him about for several days before I could get a chance; but when I did get one, you may be sure I did not throw it away. He found, to his disgust, when he got home that day, that there was nothing in his fob. I hurried off with my prize, and got it stowed away in safety, intending to have it melted down next day. Now, it happened that this watch possessed a special value in the owner's eyes because it was a sort of ancestral possession—presented by his father on coming of age, or something of that sort. I remember there was a long inscription on the back. He was determined not to lose it if he could help it, and accordingly he put an advertisement in an evening paper offering thirty pounds reward for his return, and promising that no questions should be asked. He gave the address of his house, 31 Caroline square, at the end of the advertisement. The thing sounded good enough, so I set off for Caroline square, leaving the watch in a parcel at a public house which I passed on the way. When I got there, the gentleman was at dinner; but he came out quick enough when he heard that a young man wanted to see him. I suppose he guessed who the young man would prove to be. He was a genial-looking old fellow, and he led me away with him into his study.



"I MANAGED TO PICK HIS POCKET FOR THE SECOND TIME."

"'Well, my lad,' said he, 'what is it?'

"'I've come about that watch of yours,' said I. 'I think I can lay my hands on it.'

"'Oh, it was you that took it!' said he.

"'No,' I answered; 'I know nothing whatever about how you lost it. I have been sent by another party to see you about it. Even if you have me arrested, you will not find out anything.'

"'Well,' he said, 'I don't want to be hard on you. Hand it over, and here is my cheque for the amount.'

"'Cheques won't do,' said I; 'I must have it in gold.'

"'It would an hour or so to collect in gold,' said he.

"'That will just suit,' I answered, for I have not got the watch with me. I'll go back and fetch it, while you raise the money.'

"I started off, and got the watch where I had left it. When I came back, the old gentleman was sitting behind his study table, with the little heap of gold in front of him.

"'Here is your money,' he said, and pushed it over.

"'Here is your watch,' said I.

"He was evidently delighted to get it back; and after examining it carefully, and assuring himself that it was none the worse, he put it into the watch pocket of his coat with a grunt of satisfaction.

"'Now, my lad,' he said, 'I know it was you that took the watch. Tell me how you did it, and I don't mind giving you an extra five-pound note.'

"'I wouldn't tell you in any case,' said I; 'but especially I wouldn't tell you when you have a witness hid behind that curtain.' You see, I had all my wits about me, and it didn't escape me that the curtain was drawn tighter than it had been before.

"'You are too sharp for us,' said he, good humoredly. 'Well, you have got your money, and that's an end of it. I'll take precious good care you don't get hold of my watch again in a hurry—good night—no; not that door,' he added as I marched towards a cupboard. 'This is the door,' and he stood up and opened it. I brushed past him, opened the hall door, and was round the corner of the square in no time. I don't know how long the old gentleman took to find it out, but in passing him at the door, I managed to pick his pocket for the second time, and next morning the family heirloom was in the melting pot after all. That wasn't bad, was it?"

The old war-horse had evidently forgotten all about his conversion now. There was a tone of triumph in the conclusion of his anecdote which showed that his pride in his smartness far surpassed his repentance of his misdeeds. He seemed pleased at the astonishment and amusement I expressed at his adroitness.

"Yes," he continued with a laugh, "it was a capital joke. But sometimes the fun lies all the other way. Even the sharpest of us come to grief at times. There was one rather curious incident which ocurred in my career. You may possibly have seen the anecdote, for it got into print at the time."

"Pray let me hear it," said I.

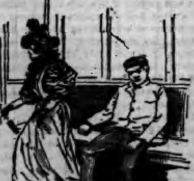
"Well, it is hard lines telling stories against one's self, but this was how it happened: I had made a rather good haul, and invested some of the swag in buying a very fine diamond ring. I thought it would be something to fall back upon when all the ready was gone and times were hard. I had just purchased it, and was going back to my lodgings in the omnibus, when, as luck would have it, a very stylishly-dressed young lady came in and took her seat beside me. I didn't pay much attention to her at first; but after a time something hard in her dress knocked up against my hand, which my experienced touch soon made out to be a purse. It struck me that I could not pass the time more profitably or agreeably than by making this purse my own. I had to do it very carefully; but I managed at last to wriggle my hand into her rather light pocket, and I thought the job was over. Just at this moment she rose abruptly to leave the 'bus, and I had hardly time to get my hand with the purse in it out of her pocket without detection. It was not until she had been gone some time that I found out that in drawing out my hand in that hurried manner the new and ill-fitting ring had slipped over my finger and remained in the young lady's pocket. I sprang out and ran in the direction in which she had gone with the intention of picking her pocket once again. She had disappeared, however; and from that day till this I have never set eyes on her. To make the matter worse, there was only four pence half-penny in coppers inside the purse. Sarve me right for trying to rob such a pretty girl; still, if I had that two hundred quid now I should not be reduced to—Good heavens, forgive me! What am I saying?"

He seemed inclined to relapse into silence after this; but I was determined to draw him out a little more, if I could possibly manage it. "There is less personal risk in the branch you have been talking of," I remarked, "than there is in burglary."

"Ah!" he said, warming to his subject once again, "it is the higher game which is best worth aiming at. Talk about sport, sir, talk about fishing or hunting! why it is tame in comparison! Think of the great country house with its men servants and its dogs and its firearms, and you with only your jimmy and your center bit, and your mother wit, which is best of all. It is the triumph of intellect over brute force, sir, as represented by bolts and bars."

"People generally look upon it as quite the reverse," I remarked.

"I was never one of those blundering life-preserver fellows," said my companion. "I did try my hand at garrotting once; but it was against my principles, and I gave it up. I have tried everything. I have been a bedridden widow with three young children; but I do object to physical force."



AT THIS MOMENT SHE ROSE ABRUPTLY.

"You have been what?" said I.

"A bedridden widow. Advertising, you know, and getting subscriptions. I have tried them all. You seem interested in these experiences," he continued; "so I will tell you another anecdote. It was the narrowest escape for penal servitude that ever I had in my life. A pal and I had gone down on a country beat—it doesn't signify where it was—and taken up our headquarters in a little provincial town. Somehow it got noised abroad that we were there, and householders were warned to be careful, as suspicious characters had been seen in the neighborhood. We should have changed our plans when we saw the game was up; but my chum was a plucky fellow, and wouldn't consent to back down. Poor little Jim! He was only thirty-four round the chest, and about three at the biceps, but there is not a measuring tape in England could have given the size of his heart. He said we were in for it and we must stick to it; so I agreed to start and we chose Morley hall, the country house of a certain Col. Morley, to begin with.

"Now this Col. Morley was about the last man in the world that we should have meddled with. He was a hard-headed fellow, who had knocked about and seen the world, and it seems that he took a special pride in the detection of criminals. However, we knew nothing of all this at that time; so we set forth hopefully to have a try at the house.

"The reason that made us pick him out among the rest was that he had a good-for-nothing groom, who was a tool in our hands. This fellow had drawn up a rough plan of the premises for us. The place was pretty well locked up and guarded, and the only weak point we could see was a certain trapdoor, the padlock of which was broken, and which opened from the roof into one of the lumber rooms. If we could only find any method of reaching the roof, we might force a way securely from above. We both thought the plan rather a good one, and it had a spice of originality about it which pleased us. It is not the mere jewels or plate, you know, that a good cracksman thinks about. The neatness of the job and his reputation for smartness are almost as important in his eyes.

"We had been very quiet for a day or two, just to let suspicion die away. Then we set out one dark night, Jim and I, and got over the avenue railings and up to the house without meeting a soul. It was blowing hard, I remember, and the clouds hurrying across the sky. We had a good look at the front of the house, and then Jim went round to the garden side. He came running back in a minute or two in a great state of delight. 'Why, Bill,' he said, gripping me by the arm, 'there never was such a bit of luck! They've been repairing the roof or something, and they've left the ladder standing.' We went round together, and there, sure enough, was the ladder towering above our heads, and one or two laborers' hods lying about, which showed that some work had been going on during the day. We had a good look round, to see that everything was quiet, and then we climbed up, Jim first and I after him. We got to the top, and were sitting on the slates, having a bit of a breather, before beginning business, when you can fancy our feelings to see the ladder that we came up by suddenly stand straight up in the air, and then slowly descend until it rested in the garden below! At first we hoped it might have slipped, though that was bad enough; but we soon had that idea put out of our head.

"'Hullo, up there!' cried a voice from below.

"We craned our heads over the edge, and there was a man, dressed, as far as we could make out, in evening dress, and standing in the middle of the grass plot. We kept quiet.

Continued on Page 8.

Scott's Emulsion

the cream of Cod liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, is for Coughs,

Colds,
Sore Throat,
Bronchitis,
Weak Lungs,
Consumption,
Loss of Flesh,
Emaciation,
Weak Babies,
Growing Children,
Poor Mothers' Milk,
Scrofula,
Anæmia;

in fact, for all conditions calling for a quick and effective nourishment. Send for Pamphlet. Free.

Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

In his appointment of Robert S. Green, ex-Governor and Vice-Chancellor, to be Judge of the Court of Errors and Appeals, to succeed the late Wm. Walter Phelps, Governor Werts has paid renewed tribute to the worth and ability of one of Union County's most distinguished men.

The Vincent Lectures.

Assembly Hall was comfortably filled last evening with an appreciative audience, who enjoyed the second of the series of lectures on eminent authors, by Leon H. Vincent. The subject of the lecture was Thomas Carlyle.

Members of the Kappa Delta Phi served as ushers and sold and collected the tickets.

The third lecture will take place next week Thursday evening, and the subject will be Thackeray.

Need a Piano—or Tuner?

H. C. Hadley, the new Plainfield manager of the Hallett & Davis Piano Co., is displaying a fine line of instruments at proper prices, in his warerooms in the Babcock Building. He makes a specialty of expert tuning, and gives the Musical Monthly Guest to all callers.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan 20, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 25 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

5.37 P. M. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

6.34 p.m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8 43 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]

Sundays, [illegible]

For Baltimore only [illegible] p. m., week-days.

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

For New York only, 6 10 a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

[illegible] with through Buffet parlor car) Sundays [illegible]

Cape May, Sea Isle City and Ocean City [illegible] p. m. weekdays.

For Rahway—[illegible]

For New Brunswick—[illegible]

For Woodbridge—[illegible]

For Perth Amboy—[illegible]

For East Millstone—[illegible]

For Trenton—[illegible]

For Lambertville, Philipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible]

For Flemington—[illegible]

For Freehold—[illegible] via Monmouth Junction, week-days.

For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—[illegible]

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible] do not stop at Asbury Park on Sundays.

For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—[illegible]

For Boston—[illegible] p. m., daily.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton Street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]

S. M. PREVOST, General Manager.
J. R. WOOD, Gen. Pass. Agent.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Newark [illegible]

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Somerville, [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Easton [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

[illegible] for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport and Tamaqua.

7 10 a. m. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge Branch.

[illegible] for Flemington, D. L. & W. R. R., Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.

[illegible] for Flemington, High Bridge branch, D. L. & W. R. R., Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Shamokin, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.

[illegible] p. m., way for Easton, connecting at Junction for stations on D. L. & W. R. R.

[illegible] for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Sunbury and Williamsport, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. Buffet parlor car to Mauch Chunk.

[illegible] p. m., way for Easton, connecting at High Bridge for stations on High Bridge branch.

[illegible] for Flemington, Easton, Bethlehem, Bangor, Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Mauch Chunk, Shamokin and Tamaqua. Buffet parlor car to Scranton.

[illegible] for Flemington.

[illegible] for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading and Harrisburg.

[illegible] for Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.

[illegible]

For Atlantic City, [illegible]

Long Branch, Ocean Grove, &c.

[illegible]

For Perth Amboy, [illegible]

For Freehold, [illegible]

ROYAL BLUE LINE.

Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia, [illegible]

For Trenton, [illegible]

For Baltimore and Washington at [illegible]

For Chattanooga, New Orleans and all points south with through vestibule sleeper, via Shenandoah Valley Route at [illegible]

For Buffalo, Chicago and all points west, [illegible]

RETURNING—LEAVE PHILADELPHIA,

[illegible]

Plainfield passengers by trains marked * change cars at Bound Brook.

Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket agent at the station.

J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Supt.
H. P. BALDWIN, Gen. Pass. Agt.

TRAINING ANIMALS.

J. A. BAILEY SAYS IT IS NOT SO DANGEROUS AS IS BELIEVED.

Tact, which Includes Patience, the Principal Requisite in Teaching Wild-Beasts Circus Tricks. The Instance of a Confiding German in the Lion's Den.

"Since the exhibition of trained animals has been added to the programme of the Barnum and Bailey show," said Mr. James A. Bailey recently, "I have been frequently asked as to the degree of danger attendant upon such performances. It is the general belief all over the world that a man who goes into a den of wild carnivorous beasts takes his life in his hands, and that each time he does so and escapes unharmed he has won by a lucky chance. Some persons believe that if the trainer who handles the animals in their acts was to turn his back upon them for a single instant they would leap upon and devour him. Others again believe that the lions and tigers only await an opportunity for concerted action to destroy their keepers, while there are still others who declare that it is only through the power of the human eye that the beasts are held in subjection. To all of these opinions and beliefs, and as a final answer to all questions on the subject, I wish to state here and now that there is no danger whatever to any person entering a cage of wild beasts. Such a statement, however, will scarce be believed without some further explanation and proof.

"It is a fact that many men have been maimed, and some killed, by lions and tigers in menageries and zoological gardens throughout the world, but in every case, I venture to say, the causes leading to such accidents and deaths were of their own making. Unmerited or too severe punishment is the most frequent cause. Nearly all animals, no matter how small and insignificant, will turn and fight when cornered and in fear of their lives. A cat will make a desperate and determined fight if so placed that it cannot get away from what it believes is a desperate enemy. Just so with the larger cat animals, and nearly all of the accidents that have occurred have been caused by the brutality of trainers, who, having lost temper, have pursued to extremes an animal that did not do what it was ordered, or which did not understand what was wanted of it. Trainers of the present day, however, have come to realize this, and accidents are of rare occurrence; and I maintain that any man or woman, an entire stranger to the animals, can go in with them, and in perfect safety.

"A case in point comes to my mind. A few years ago I employed an innocent sort of German to work in the menagerie, and one of the first tasks assigned him was cleaning the lions' den. Instead of taking an iron scraper and working the bars as customary, he took a broom, opened the iron door, went in the cage, and began to sweep the floor. When a lion got in his way he would punch it with the broom and tell it in German to go away; and it did so. The man repeated his experience every day, and was never harmed. I now make this positive statement—that in both the handling and training of these animals there is no more danger than attends the training of a domestic animal. The snarling and growling of the beasts is no more indicative of a desire to claw and devour than is expressed in the bark or snarl of a canine house pet, or the hiss of a sleek tabby when its tail is stepped upon. The big brutes may growl and crouch about their cages, look dangerous, and act ferociously, and all that, but I contend, and experience has taught me that my belief is correct, that it is only through a desire to escape from the man rather than to attack him.

"It takes time and patience, more than any one not in the business can imagine, to perfect the training of these animals, and every trainer has a method of his own.

"I would further explain that trained animals will not perform the tricks taught them unless the cue is given them. Even trained horses, which are supposed to have great intelligence, will only go through their performances when the ringmaster supplies the cue, whatever it may be. Sometimes it is a motion of the whip, at others a step backward or forward, when instantly the animal will respond.

"Now, all that is necessary for any one to put through their performance any kind of trained animal or number of them, is for him to know when to give the proper cue.

"I do not believe the animals know one trainer from another, unless one has been with them for a very long time, for when some of my trainers have been taken sick, been discharged, or for other causes left my service, the trained animal part of my show has not been interrupted, but has gone on just the same, a new man having been substituted; and it is safe to say that the animals never knew the difference between the men. I have changed the men as often as five times in a season, and one man has put the beasts through their tricks quite as well as another.

"Any person who will enter the arena fearlessly and confidently, can take the trainer's whip and make the animals perform as well as a person who has handled them for months, provided always he knows what tricks the beasts are required to do, and can supply the required cues.

"I am aware that this statement may appear to most people extraordinary, because it is at variance with their preconceived notions concerning the brutal nature of all wild beasts; but I am firm in my belief and have no hesitation in making it public."

Will Sue on a Campaign Promise.

Constable Thomas Tosh of Shenandoah, Pa., proposes to institute proceedings by quo warranto against Sheriff-elect Alexander Scott of Frackville.

Tosh says he was promised the appointment of deputy by Mr. Scott before the election in consideration of his services in working for his election, and that he has now thrown him over. W. D. Seltzer has been retained by Tosh as his attorney. It is claimed that Scott made his deal with Tosh in the Convention which nominated Scott. He claims that two delegates in the Convention were parties to the deal, and he worked hard for Mr. Scott during the campaign, and was instrumental in securing the remarkably large vote for him in Shenandoah.

Indiana's natural gas supply will be exhausted in less than four years, according to the annual report just made by the State Gas Inspector. He estimates that at least $25,000,000 worth of gas has been wasted in Indiana alone.

REHEARSING AMATEUR MINSTRELS.

Some of the Trials of Young Ladies Who Black-up For Charity's Sake.

Fifty bright young women, all members of the Young Ladies' Charitable Society, gathered in a hall in East Fifty-eighth street the other day to rehearse for a minstrel performance they are going to give.

After divesting themselves of macintoshes, coats, hats, and umbrellas, the performers ranged themselves in the old familiar semi-circle.

"Well, ladies, are you all ready?" cried the violinist, when the young women were comfortably seated.

"Yes," came from all sides, and then the young woman, who sat in the centre, and was supposed to be the interlocutor, spoke up:

"Oh, just let's sing this morning, and take the jokes and business some other time."

"Oh, no," cried a young woman who had been fondling a tambourine. "Let's have the jokes to-day and sing some other time."

"Stop your talking, ladies," put in the stout prompter, "Your gag there, miss."

"Sir!" exclaimed the interlocutor, drawing herself up. "My gag? I don't understand you."

"I meant joke," said the young man, apologetically. "You see, it's your turn to talk. Now, after the tambo on the end has made her joke, you turn and look toward the other side, and then those three bones on the end——"

The three young women on the end happened to be uncommonly thin, and about two seconds after the stout young man had made his remark, they were on their feet and demanded to know what he meant. With much embarrassment he explained that he had given them the title from the instrument they were to play.

"Oh!" came from all sides, "that was it," and for ten minutes the rehearsal had to be stopped to give the girls an opportunity to talk it over.

"Let's practise the Seely joke, now," said the interlocutor to the stout young man. "It's a new one we girls got up, and, of course, if you don't like it, why, we'll cut it."

"Oh, let it go," said the young man, impatiently. Then one of the end men spoke up:

"Now why, oh dear, I mean, what was the matter with Seely, the bookkeeper of the Shoe and Leather Bank?"

"What was the matter with Seely, the bookkeeper of the Shoe and Leather Bank? Now, what was the matter with Seely, the bookkeeper of the Shoe and Leathdr Bank?" rejoined the interlocutor, while all the other girls sat with mouths wide open. It was the first time the joke had been tried.

"Well," chuckled the end man, "he ought to have had more sole and stuck to his last. He didn't and now he's on his uppers, and—Oh, what's the matter with you all, any way?"

"Next!" interrupted the young man, with the violin, and the humorist subsided, highly indignant.

"I've got a new one, and it's awful good," exclaimed one of the young women on the other side. The stout young man groaned, and faintly murmured: "Go on."

"Why am I like—oh, I ought to explain here: you know my face is supposed to be blackened."

"Yes, yes, go on," said the violinist.

"Well, why am I like an Irishman?"

"Why are you like an Irishman?" repeated the interlocutor. "Well, really, I don't know. Now why are you like an Irishman?"

"Because I am in cork," said the young woman.

A dead silence followed, and was broken by a crash from behind. The girls jumped up in alarm and looked around in time to see the pianist getting up from the floor.

"Please don't do anything like that again," he sighed.

The girls didn't know whether to laugh or not, but decided not to. The girl whose joke brought about all the trouble wanted to say something, but the young man warded off the attack cleverly.

"Nuff damage done," he said. "I understand some one's got a new song. Let's hear it."

"Oh, it's I," said a girl, springing up from her chair and spilling her tamborine in her haste. "It's just a lovely one, too. A friend of mine who writes for the newspapers wrote it, and——"

"Sing it," put in the young man with the violin.

The young woman began singing to the tune of "Take a day off Mary Ann." The chorus went:

Oh, darling Laura,
How I adore her,
How I—

"I think I will cut that out," said the violinist, and the young woman retreated to her seat, where she remarked to the girl next to her that it was a shame not to give the song a chance.—New York Sun.

JUNE BUTTER IN WINTER.

Artificial Ripening of Cream by an Inoculation Process.

Prof. H. W. Conn, in some experiments in his bacteriological laboratory at Wesleyan University, has made a discovery of importance to everyone interested in the making of butter. It is well known that as butter making has been conducted it has been impossible to make the best butter in the winter time. In spite of every effort, dairymen have been unable to produce from November to May butter equal in flavor to that made in the summer. The latter has a peculiar flavor, particularly noticeable in June. For this reason the best butter is often known as "June" butter. Prof. Conn's discovery will enable dairymen to produce a peculiarly fine quality of "June" butter throughout the year.

The first step in butter making is known as ripening the cream. It is a process much similar to the fermentation of beer, and is similarly produced by the growth and multiplication of millions of bacteria which were originally present in the cream. The quality of the butter depends almost wholly upon the kind of bacteria in the cream, and the reason why it has been impossible to make the best butter in winter is due to the fact that the species of bacteria which give the peculiar flavor to June butter are not present, naturally, during the cold weather. But they may be cultivated artificially, and that is just what Dr. Conn has done.

Mutually Appreciated.

"I like your cheek," said the indignant maiden to the youth who kissed her.

"And I like yours," said he, as he kissed her again.—Truth.

LIVE BIRDS AT FANWOOD.

And Lively Shooting at Them by Expert Handlers of the Gun.

A large number of sportsmen assembled at the Benner shooting grounds Friday to witness a match between John Benner and Alfred Heritage of Jersey City, and were much disappointed at the non appearance of Mr. Heritage, who telegraphed that he was detained by sickness. In lieu of the match a number of sweepstakes was shot, John Rothacker of Philadelphia being among those who were present in the events, which resulted as follows:

First event—five live birds, $3 entrance. T. H. Keller and J. Benner each killed five and divided first; C. Smith and J. Darby taking second with four; J. Rothacker scored three and Geo. Piercy two.

Event second—same conditions, T. H. Keller, C. Smith, D. Terry and Scott divided first with straight scores of five; J. Darby, Benner, Rothacker and Piercy taking second with four.

Third event—miss and out, $4 entrance was divided by T. H. Keller, P. Jay, C. Smith and Scott each scoring five; Benner scored four; Darby, D. Terry and Bowlby two each; Rothacker one; Piercy dropping out on the first round.

Fourth event—eight birds, $5 entrance. J. Rothacker, D. Terry and Scott scored all their birds, dividing first money; C. Smith and T. H. Keller second with seven; Piercy, J. Darby and P. Jay third, with six; Benner five.

The last event was another miss and out affair in which Keller, Piercy and Scott divided the purse, each scoring four birds, D. Terry missing on fourth, Benner on third and Smith and Rothacker on second.

THE POET OF THE HEART.

Epworthians and Their Friends Spend an Evening with Longfellow.

An attractive and novel entertainment, prepared by Mrs. Herbert Randolph and Miss Grace Carroll, was enjoyed in Grace M. E. Church last evening.

It was called "An Evening with Longfellow", and a more interesting subject could hardly be chosen.

Miss Conroy opened the programme with a piano solo, which was well played and appreciated.

Mrs. Randolph then called by numbers the quotations prepared from Longfellow's works, which proved to be very interesting.

A delightful reading of Longfellow's life was given by Miss Alice Loomis. Miss Edna French pleasingly recited "Hiawatha's Wooing". This was followed with a vocal solo, "The Rainy Day", by Miss Grace Carroll, whose excellent voice added to the impressiveness of the song.

Mrs. A. A. Taft read "The Skeleton in Armor" in effective manner, and the famous story of Paul Revere's ride was brought vividly to the minds of all as recited so realistically by Miss Lizzie Hoagland.

The programme was concluded with a sketch by Miss Emma Stevens, entitled "Hyperion."

The young women of the church under the direction of Mrs. Randolph and Miss Carroll then served to all, delicious mince pie, with coffee as an excellent accompaniment. Thus closed a happy and profitable evening with Longfellow and the Epworthians.

WHAT'S A GYM WITHOUT A BATH!

Classes Not to Begin Till the Swimming Tank is Ready—Something About Examinations.

Words of commendation come from every quarter to The Press concerning the examinations of Physical Instructor MacPhie of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium. He is a very busy man in the prosecution of the examination of candidates, and the men and youths of the town are finding out a great deal of important interest to themselves as a result of placing their bodies under his scrutiny. Mr. MacPhie makes a thorough study of the physical condition of all candidates for admission into his classes, and gives each a card telling the weight, height, measurements, lung capacity, and condition of the physical structure. He thus is enabled to know just how to proceed intelligently in the matter of body-building, and as each case develops the student has the satisfaction of seeing by his personal record just how he is progressing. The personal qualities of Mr. MacPhie are such that the examinations are conducted in the most gentlemanly and courteous manner.

It had been expected to begin the classes last Monday, but it was decided to wait till the swimming tank is in readiness, as the plunge is such a finishing touch to the exercises. The heater for the big tank is here, and George Tobin is rushing the plumbing through as fast as consistent with good work. The dates of classes will be announced as soon as possible. There will be a 5 o'clock class for business and professional men, and an evening class for the general members.

North Plainfield School Notes.

A new and instructive exercise was held in the Eighth grade Friday afternoon. It was a history match, and two sides of twelve each were chosen and captained by Miss Lizzie Hoagland and Orville Waring. The ringing of the bell for the close of school put an end to the exercise before it was completed.

The members of the Sixth grade expressed their esteem for their former classmate, James Perrine, by a floral pillow.

PLAINFIELD THOUGHT SHE WON.

But 'Twas an Error in Addition, and Elizabeth Was True Victor.

A most interesting and closely contested game was rolled on the Trade Temple alleys Jan 18 between the Plainfield Bowling Club and the Young Men's Catholic Literary Association of Elizabeth, who have successfully defended the Elizabeth Journal trophy the last two years. It was witnessed by fully two hundred bowling enthusiasts, who yelled themselves hoarse at every possible occasion, and the occasions were of almost constant recurrence.

It was probably the most interesting game ever bowled on the alleys, every pin possible being needed by the contestants from start to finish. The P. B. C. went to the post as "odds on" favorites, and at the drop of the flag were off like a shot, leading in the stretch by 19 pins; but the Elizabeth boys trotted up to the bunch and led by a nose in the second, set the pace down the back stretch, and were never headed, leading at the wire by a neck.

Clogher's 202 was the feature of the game, and he was closely followed by Petrie of the home team, who pushed them over 194 times before the race was done.

The Elizabeth contingent was fully fifty strong, and as rooters they are distinguished successes according to the indisputable evidence of some of Netherwood's citizens, who solemnly assert they could hear them yell at frequent intervals during the game.

The P. B. C's and their rooters awakened the echoes as often as they could get their breath, and the collective vocal endeavors of the assembly to win the game for their favorites resulted in pandemonium itself when an error in addition made the official scorer announce "1605—1607 P. B. C." at the close of the contest.

Coats, hats, canes, voices, and arms, filled the air; and it was some time before the racket subsided sufficiently to allow the corrected score to be heard above the tumult.

Before departing the Y. M. C. L. A. were presented with the horseshoe which, many believed, was the P. B. C's mascot, but which turned out to be their mascot.

The score:

Y. M. C. L. A.		P. B. C.
Nolte	136	VanEmburgh	128
McCabe	179	Buckle	174
Fields	178	Barnes	161
Engel	150	Maltby	171
McCloud	169	Petrie	194
Clogher	202	Pope	159
L. Sauer	147	Doane	149
Collins	155	VanAlstyne	148
W. Sauer	168	Vail	165
G. Sauer	155	Watters	155
	1615		1607

BY FRAMES.

Y.M.C.L.A.	185	317	462	632	800	972	1145	1300	1461	1615
P. B. C.	174	335	476	629	782	935	1089	1241	1451	1607

Scorers—J. J. Gilroy, H. H. Coward.
Referees—P. J. Carroll, H. A. Meeker.
Captains—Joseph Nolte, H. C. VanEmburgh.

THE COTILLION CLUB.

Next of the Season's Meetings to Be Held at the Dumont Home.

The second of the season's meetings of the Cotillion Club was held at the residence of John B. Dumont, Wednesday, Jan. 23. The club consists of forty of Plainfield's young people, who have decided to give three or four dances during the season at the homes of different members. The first meeting was held at John M. Whiton's residence Christmas Eve, and proved such a success that all the members are looking with pleasant expectancy to meet Wednesday night at Mr. Dumont's.

The favors and refreshments are supplied by the young women of the club, and the music, rendered by Elliot, is secured by the men.

The entertainment reminds one of the social gatherings in Plainfield before the Casino arrived, when it was necessary to appropriate the private parlors of residences for dances.

Among the members are: Miss Marion Dumont, Miss Katheryn Yates, Miss Margaret Yates, Miss Reinhart, Miss Lucy Talmadge, Miss Daisy Shepard, Miss Elizabeth Stewart, Miss Nella Whiton, Miss Holly, Miss Margaret Holly, Miss Maude VanBoskerck, Miss Lizzie VanBoskerck, Miss Grace Cooley, Miss Elizabeth Ginna, Miss Florence Huntington, Messrs. Fred Walz, Augustus Shepard, Burnet Shepard, Frank Kokefair, Talmadge, Perceval Stewart, Rowland Cox, Clifford McGee, Howard Beebe, Thos VanBoskerck, Edward Bloodgood, Irving West, Howard Huntington and Orville Waring, Mr and Mrs Evarts Tracy, Mr and Mrs Daniel F Ginna, Mr and Mrs Frederick W Yates, Dr B VanD Hedges and Alfred Streuli.

A Local Evangelist.

William Richards of West Second street, who has been conducting religious meetings in the vicinity of Plainfield, is having excellent success. One service which he had charge of at Garwood was largely attended and very interesting, and a later one held at Locust Grove resulted well. Mr. Richards is an interesting speaker, and a good Bible student.

Canine Rush.

As Garret W. Wood was passing in front of The Daily Press office last evening about 5:30, a large Newfoundland dog attacked an Irish setter. The dogs made a rush, and as Mr. Wood happened to be in their path they upset him, throwing him on his side. Sergeant Kiely came to the rescue, and separated the dogs, while Mr. Wood continued on his way without serious injury.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

From The Press of January 19.

Miss Alexander of East Fifth street is a victim of the grip.

Joseph Line of Duer street is confined to his bed with the grip.

The Lady Cyclers are preparing for a dance at Rutgers College Jan. 28.

Miss Stella Dennis of North Plainfield is suffering from an attack of the grip.

Miss Abbie Mellick of LaGrande avenue is suffering with an affection of the ear.

Mrs. C. G. Crawford of East Fifth street has just recovered from an attack of the grip.

Rev. S. P. Simpson and Rev. Jocelyn Johnston will exchange pulpits Sunday morning.

Miss Lucie P. Davis of East Fifth street will spend next week with friends in Brooklyn.

Francis K. Anderson of East Fifth street has just recovered from an attack of the grip.

Miss Mabel Force of West Fourth street is visiting Miss M. Alice MacDonald of Jersey City Heights.

Mrs. C. P. Ralli of Belvidere avenue has been confined to the house since Christmas with the asthma.

Theodore Smith, an employe of Findley's Second street wineroom, is ill with muscular rheumatism.

Rev. Frank Wright is still unable, because of illness, to come to Plainfield for his evangelistic work.

Charles W. Runyon, manager of the telephone exchange, is to remove to 124 East Fourth street March 1.

Miss Edna Howell of East Sixth street is spending Saturday and Sunday with relatives in New Brunswick.

Charles Harkins, one of New Brunswick's master plumbers, visited many Plainfield friends yesterday.

J. E. Townsend, proprietor of the Somerset street granite and marble works, is ill at his home with the grip.

Mrs. R. W. Rice, who has been visiting friends in the borough several days, returned to Philadelphia yesterday.

Mr. Prout of the firm of W. W. Cook & Co., the sewer contractors of Plainfield, is spending Saturday and Sunday in Jersey City.

Miss Rogers of La Grande avenue, principal in one of the high schools in New York city, is confined to the house with the grip.

Mrs. F. T. Ketcham of East Fifth street has been confined to the house for a week with the grip. Miss Julie Ketcham has just recovered from a severe attack.

William A. Wheeler of LaGrande avenue is recovering from a severe attack of the grip, which has confined him to his house two weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Higgins of Liberty street went today to Centreville, Hunterdon County, to visit Mrs. Higgins's parents for a few days.

Clifford M. Crane of West Eighth street has accepted a position with the Fidelity and Casualty Insurance Company of Broadway, New York.

John R. Morrison of 101 Duer street, one of Plainfield's oldest types, for many years past employed in New York, is at his home ill with the grip.

A. D. Thompson expects to go to Carrabelle, Florida, Tuesday, Jan. 29, on a business trip to the great lumber district. Mrs. Thompson will probably accompany him.

Mrs G. P. Mellick of LaGrande avenue is slowly improving from a serious operation performed in New York. Her many friends greatly rejoice over her improvement.

George P. Bull of East Ninth street is home again on a short visit from the hospital. Mr. Bull has had a very serious operation performed, but is recovering rapidly.

Mr. Coard of East Ninth street is ill with the grip at the home of Dr. Roberts, Lexington avenue, New York. He was visiting his daughter Mabel, who boards there, when he was taken ill.

The members of the Monday Afternoon Club will enjoy readings from "Faust" by George Riddle, with organ accompaniment by Frank Taft, in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church, Monday afternoon, Feb. 4, at 3.

E. S. Warren, who was formerly employed at the electric-light plant in this city, and who went to Nevada to engage in silver mining with his brother, is well established in business, and likes it so much that he says he will never stay East again.

Miss Virginia Costelloe of Kensington avenue was given a very pleasant surprise party last evening. It was arranged by Miss Beulah Waters and Miss Clara L. Crane. The evening was very enjoyably spent in playing games, after which refreshments were served.

John N. Winne of 471 West Twenty-second street, New York, is making a short visit at the home of J. A. Freeman of Watchung avenue. Mr. Winne is one of the largest lumber dealers of New York and Albany, having control of some of the most extensive lumber yards in both cities.

—The supper to be given by the Ladies Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed Church Jan. 24 and 25, in the lecture room, will be served from 6 to 8, and the musical entertainment is to follow the supper. The tickets for the supper are 25 cents, for the musical entertainment 15 cents additional.

George Godown, assistant postmaster, is ill.

W. T. Jeffery of Grandview avenue is very ill at his home.

There is a slight improvement today in Dr. Clark's condition.

Mrs. John Doane has been called to Moscow, Pa., by the death of her uncle.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes yesterday visited W. R. Clarkson, who is ill in New York.

Charles Debele, the Evona milkman, is out again after an illness of pneumonia.

Henry B. Drake of Duer street is another of the numerous victims of the grip.

W. E. Brock and family of Mountain avenue will go Monday to Troy, their future home.

Mrs. Cox of Bound Brook is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Edward Stine of Grandview avenue.

Arthur E. Crane of Carleton avenue left Baltimore, Wednesday morning, for the West Indies.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Miller of Carleton avenue left today for a short visit in Indiana and Ohio.

Mrs. George W. Baum of 143 East Second street has recovered from an illness of nearly two weeks.

The funeral of the late John Kean, Sr., takes place in Trinity Church, Elizabeth, Monday at 11:30 a. m.

Mrs. Thomas A. Neeley of Vine street, who has been seriously ill for a fortnight past, is slowly convalescing.

Miss Lucia Wood of Madison avenue entertained a company of friends with a social game of hearts last night.

S. R. Hope has for two weeks been afflicted with the grip, but has pluckily kept at his post in the Bryant school.

Adam Fritts has sold his farm on Greenbrook road, opposite Washington Rock, to Robert McNabb of 179 Rahway road.

Miss T. A. Alexander of East Fifth street has been confined to her bed for three weeks with the grip, but is gaining nicely.

C. Frank Sullivan, formerly a resident of this city and now living in New York, will spend the rest of the Winter in California.

Mrs. Frank Miller, whose husband was formerly a Plainfield teacher and now in the Chicago University, is visiting Mrs. James of First place.

The friends of J. K. Arnold will be glad to hear that he is improving rapidly and is able to be out, although he has not returned to business as yet.

An old Grand Army man named Bella came to town a few days ago and was taken ill with grip. He is being cared for by comrade Joseph Bogert of East Second street.

A complete and enjoyable surprise was given to Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Leland at their home on Prospect avenue last evening by forty of their friends. Dancing was the feature of the evening. Refreshments were served.

The funeral services of Rev. J. Judson Pierson, whose death was recorded in yesterday's Press, will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2 at his late residence in Bridgeton, Cumberland County, where the body will be laid at rest.

Robert Whitecar of East Fifth street is again in town. Mr. Whitecar has been filling an engagement with one of the Winter circuses in Chicago. He is at the head of his profession, and his many Plainfield friends welcome him back again.

Ephriam R. Drake of Clinton avenue was pleasantly surprised last night by a party of relatives and neighbors who celebrated his seventh-sixth birthday anniversary. His wife and daughter Mary were admirable hostesses, and served a fine supper. Mr. Drake's only regret was that he had no hard cider in the house. The guests were Lewis Randolph, Alfred Randolph, Mr and Mrs Albert Randolph, Mr and Mrs Frank Randolph; Mr and Mrs Whitfield Brower and Mr and Mrs George Brower of Newark; Mr and Mrs Benjamin Hand, S B Merrill, Henry Bittle, and Nathan Blackford.

Handles Plainfield Realty.

The busy man of the Spring is the real-estate broker, and none is more busy than E. C. Mulford of 169 North avenue, who is entrusted with so many properties that the wonder is how he manages them all. That ceases to be a wonder when one realizes his executive ability and his thorough knowledge of the real estate of Plainfield. He is busy all the year, and yet has time enough to satisfy all who have premises to dispose of or who are in search of new quarters. His lists contain all the desirable places.

The Fatal Shinny Stick.

Elwood Sebring of La Grande avenue, a member of the Senior class in the High School, met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon, while skating on Hyde's millpond. He was playing hockey with a number of his friends, when he collided with a colored boy, and fractured his wrist. Volney Green assisted him to his home, and he is now under the skillful charge of Dr. Davis.

A Chisel in His Hand.

Daniel Donovan, while working in his brother's shop on East Front street yesterday afternoon, ran a chisel into his left hand, inflicting a deep and severe wound. He had it treated at once. It will be some time, however, before he can use the hand.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

BLUE AND WHITE TEA.

Delightful Event at the Home of Mrs. Grant.

A most delightful tea was given by Mrs. Frank Sargent Grant of 59 Jackson avenue last evening to a large number of her friends both in Plainfield and New York. Progressive euchre was indulged in, Mrs. Charles A. Reed securing first prize for the women, and Julius Erickson the first prize for the men.

The general effect of the dainty dining room was blue and white. Tea was poured by Mrs. Charles Smith and Mrs. J. E. Childs of New York. Those assisting Mrs. Grant in receiving were the Misses Marsh, Miss Grant, Miss Dunham, and Miss Bisley of New York.

The guests included Mrs Sarah Coon, Miss Conklin, the Misses Martine, Mrs W W Myers, Miss Goraline, Mrs M A Marsh, Mr and Mrs Eugene Gross, Mr and Mrs J K Myers, Dr. and Mrs D J Yerkes, the Misses Ida and Grace Yerkes, Miss Alice Randolph, Rev and Mrs Robert Lowry, Mr and Mrs Charles A Reed, Mr and Mrs Samuel Townsend, Mrs Charles F Williams, Mr and Mrs Martin I Cooley, Miss Cooley, Mr and Mrs Walter McGee, Mr and Mrs H A McGee, Mrs C E Horne, Mr and Mrs H E Needham, Mr and Mrs A B Darby, Mr and Mrs Alexander Gilbert, Mr and Mrs George Tyler Rogers, Mr and Mrs Josephus H Howell, J B Yerkes, Mr and Mrs W J Roome, Mrs W T Kaufman, Mrs G P Suydam, Mr and Mrs C H Smith, Miss Gussie Runyon, David Lenox. Those from New York were Mr and Mrs Willis Paine, Mrs Isaac V Brokaw, Miss Brokaw, Mrs H Charles Ulman, the Misses Ulman, Dr and Mrs T R Pooley, Mr and Mrs I N Van Sickel, Mr and Mrs Frank B Currier, Mr and Mrs Arthur Scott Herendon, Mr and Mrs Sheppard Homans, Misses Homans, Miss Stevens, Mr and Mrs G W Whittemore, Miss Whittemore, Mrs W P Keating, Mr and Mrs C Bowyer Vaux, Mr and Mrs Leopold A Camacho, Dr. and Mrs A H Goelet, Mrs M L Stevens, F A Brockway, and Mr and Mrs James Clark of St. Louis.

An Affectionate Testimonial.

[Contributed.]

The many warm friends of Rev. Dr. W. W. Page, whose brief ministry at the Church of the Heavenly Rest was so brilliant in its promise and so treacherously robbed of its fruitfulness, have sought more than once since the Doctor's resignation to express their esteem for him and their earnest gratitude for his devoted services during the months of his residence here, and for his beautiful example of Christian spirituality.

This sincere regard was delicately and touchingly expressed by a number of Dr. Page's former parishoners—all of whom are now connected with the Church of the Redeemer—when on Thursday afternoon they met at the home of Mrs. L. Davis on Clinton avenue to pack a box of dainties for Dr. Page's only son, Kent Page, who is lying very ill at Highland Falls, N. Y. The young man spent several weeks in town last Summer, and by his frank, pleasant manner made all his father's friends his own, while the mutual devotion of father and son won universal admiration.

The box of good things contained fruits, jellies, bouillons and every delicacy that could tempt an invalid's appetite, or "minister to the inner man" as one of the number phrased it, together with some beautiful cut flowers and several notes of affectionate and friendly sympathy.

How much more there was of the unselfish pleasure of giving and of ministering to those in trouble, cannot be expressed.

Cranford's First Home-Print.

The Daily Press extends its greetings to its valued neighbor, the Cranford Chronicle. Editor Potter has put in his own plant, and is prepared to show the people of the progressive town what a lively chap he can be with home facilities for printing not only the news in his paper but also whatever the citizens want in the nature of job work. Mr. Potter showed his good taste in selecting a North Plainfield girl for his helpmeet; since he became a Benedick he has prospered and progressed even greater than before. There's nothing like having a good counselor as well as a good head.

The Weight Distributed.

A feature of the new style of rubber shoes now being tried on the fire department horses is that the foot steps squarely on the ground, and the weight is thus spread over the full flat surface instead of being borne on the toenails (so to speak) as is the case with the ordinary nailed iron shoes.

A NEW FREEHOLDERS BILL.

Important Changes Proposed—Salaries Instead of Fees—Minority Representation.

Trenton, Jan. 16.—An important bill which gives promise of securing favorable action in the Legislature has been introduced by Senator Charles B. Herbert of Middlesex County. It is very sweeping in its provisions, and strikes at the root of the present system of county government through boards of chosen freeholders. Although this is Mr. Herbert's first term in the Senate, his appointment as chairman of the committee on railroads and canals, as well as his membership on other important committees, is evidence of his influence. Mr. Herbert is a law partner of ex-Judge William T. Hoffman. He was a member of the Assembly from Middlesex County in 1888 and 1889.

The bill referred to provides that at the next election to choose members of the General Assembly held in this State after the approval of this act, and every three years thereafter, there shall be chosen in the several counties in this State suitable persons to constitute the boards of chosen freeholders as follows: In counties of the first-class, seven persons; in counties of the second-class, five persons; in counties of the third-class, three persons; and in counties of the fourth-class, three persons, who shall be citizens of this State, and who shall have been for three years residents of the counties in whibh they shall be chosen. They shall hold their offices for three years and until their successors are elected.

The second section provides that each of the said chosen freeholders shall receive compensation as follows: In counties of the first class $2,000 each per annum; in counties of the second class $1,200 each per annum; in counties of the third class $1,000 each per annum; in counties of the fourth class $500 each per annum; and they shall receive no other compensation, fee, or emoluments whatever. Each board may elect a director, and may also elect a clerk who shall hold office at the pleasure of the board, and who shall receive such compensation as they shall determine. Each member shall take an oath to perform the duties of his office, and shall give a bond for the faithful performance of his duties.

The third section provides that at the county conventions each of the political parties authorized by law to make nominations in convention may nominate, and each elector may vote for, candidates for chosen freeholders as follows: In counties of the first class four persons; in counties of the second class three persons; in counties of the third class two persons; in counties of the fourth class two persons, provided that nominations in number as above specified in the several classes of counties may be made by petition as now provided by law; and in order that a fair minority representation may be secured on each board, the several boards of freeholders shall be constituted of the required number who have received the highest number of votes respectively. The terms of the boards to be first elected under this act shall commence on the first day of December next succeeding their election.

The bill will be reported for debate next week. It is said to be backed by the Sewell influence.

DEAD FOR A YEAR.

The Court Refuses to Change Its Mind in the Bock License Case.

The motion of Alvah Clark for a rule to show cause why a rehearing should not be granted in the Bock license case, came up before the Court in Somerville Friday morning. Judge Bartine said "This Court does not reverse its decisions. The Bock application is refused, and stays refused. It is dead for a year."

The announcement caused much rejoicing among the North Plainfielders present who had been advocating the refusal of the application, and the anti-license citizens desire through The Press to thank Judge Bartine; for his honest and straightforward conduct and for his disposal of the case; also his associates for confirming his decision.

Death of Rev. J. J. Pierson.

The sad news of the death of Rev. J. Judson Pierson was received by his sister, Mrs. F. W. Bailey, 86 Duer street, about 1 p. m. today. Mr. Pierson was pastor of the Baptist Church at Bridgeton, and died at his home in that city at 10 January 18, after an illness of about four months, surrounded by his devoted wife and family of six children. The cause of death was Bright's disease, aggravated by sciatic rheumatism, causing intense suffering. Mr. Pierson was President of the State Society of Christian Endeavor, one of God's most active servants, and will be sadly missed.

Death of George H. Kidder.

George H. Kidder, Past Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias of New Jersey, died at his home, 80 Academy street, Jersey City, from a complication of diseases. He was 60 years old, and leaves a widow and four adult children.

Mrs. Wm. Humes and daughter of New York city are visiting Mrs. H. O. Ostermoor of Belvidere avenue. Mrs. Humes is Mrs. Ostermoor's sister.

Thomas Clarke, who formerly pumped the organ in the Crescent Avenue Church, is about to leave Plainfield and live with his son, Thomas Clarke, Jr., in New York city.

HYPNOTIC POWER.

MARVELOUS CASE OF A BORN DEAF MUTE NOW CURED.

Awakening Sleeping Nerves by Mesmeric Influences. The Theories of Scientists Concerning Subjects. Remarkable Cases in This Country and Abroad.

When a man whose position is a very responsible one, who has made a name for himself as an authority on the treatment of deaf mutes and who is well known to be as practical and experienced as he is clever, announces that he believes in a power which many people still class with witchcraft and fortune telling, the public must needs pay some attention to him.

Dr. Currier, the principal of a New York Institution, for the instruction of the deaf and dumb, claims hypnotism will cure deafness even of congenital origin.

His theory is that organs and nerves which have never been called into service and are as dumb as death itself, should by mental influence be galvanized into life and action. He has in the asylum patients born deaf and of course dumb, which is always the case, who can now distinguish sounds, and tell the difference between the sound of the voice, the flute and piano. Professor Currier says that more than 16 per cent. of cases of children born deaf is due to prenatal paralysis of the nerves, whic are only "slumbering," because the brain has not the will power to call them into service. And all these numb nerves need is to be awakened and strengthened. Speaking of one patient on whom Professor Currier has been experimenting for ten years, and who now can articulate and hear as well as any person, the believer in hypnotic influence says:

"Give this sleeping sense strength, and by the very act of giving it strength it becomes an assistant to the will, and that function becomes able to command it. We have shown that there are latent sensibilities of the paralyzed auditory nerves which are susceptible to development through exercise. What we want then is knowledge as to how these latent sensibilities can be developed the most rapidly and the most successfully. Now let us see what hypnotism will do. I am not a master of hypnotism and make no claim to produce these results myself. I speak therefore, as one who accepts the known results of recognized hypnotic experiments and seeks only to learn how similar experiments may be utilized successfully in the work of assisting in the development of the latent sensibilities of this slumbering nerve. Now, mark you! You and every one else will acknowledge that infinitely greater results follow where the method of exercising any stunted muscles or nerve of the system is natural rather than artificial.

"Now, will hypnotism do this? All those who are familiar with the subject and who can speak with authority tell us that the hypnotic operator has, while the subject is in the hypnotic sleep, absolute control of the mind of the subject.

"We are forced to operate now in exercising the paralyzed nerve of the deaf mute while the brain is busy with all the other senses. The nerves of vision are busy ticking off their messages as to what the eye sees, and the brain is replying what to do about it and what to look at next; the sense of touch is engaged in the same way; the smell, the taste, are sending their little paragraphs of news, and that wondrously busy brain up there near the cranium must record all the messages it receives and go on sending its replies. Only the operator, as soon as he places the patient in the hypnotic sleep, proceeds at once to give orders to the nerves of taste and touch and sight and smell to go on a vacation. 'Take a rest, I shall want you again,' he says. 'When I do I will call you.' The entire energy of the brain, let off from its occupation with the other senses, is put to work to bring this nerve of audience a command that shall wake it from its lethargy. The concentrated brain power acting under the command of the operator wakes up these nerves, tries them and gradually learns to use them.

"Twelve years ago when I advanced my theory of developing the latent sensibilities of the congenitally paralyzed auditory nerve people said, Ridiculous! French savants called it a jest. Finally the Germans took it seriously, listened, experimented, and to-day are producing the same results of which Mr. Jones is a specimen, and to-day deaf mutes all over Europe are reaping the benefit of it.

"If hypnotic influence can be utilized I am sure we will accomplish more than has ever yet been done in this line. From the University of Minnesota comes the news that a lad who for fourteen years has not articulated a single sound has had—and that only after a few months' operating in the hands of the hypnotist, the power of speech developed within him.

"In this case the boy could always hear distinctly. This was one of those very rare cases where the boy was afflicted with what is known as aphasia—that is, there was a prenatal paralysis of the nerves which act as messengers between the brain and the organs of speech.

Against the Nude in Art.

Iowa is considerably torn up over the question whether a figure which is to surmount a public monument shall be nude or draped. Opinions on the subject are various, and discussion waxes warm. The matter is talked of from the standpoints of art, propriety, morals and the weather.

The last named element is dragged into the argument by a newspaper which evidently wants to dodge the points made by objectors to the nude in art. The paper, which is published in Keokuk, urges that while a naked statue may be all right in a warm, southern clime, it is quite inappropriate to a high, chilly latitude like that of northern Iowa. Hence the statue should be draped, because its exposure to inclement weather would be out of harmony with all ideas of comfort, and might give the shivers to sympathetic observers.

Why She Chose Him.

Fred—Yes, I like him well enough, Minnie, but how did you ever happen to marry a man a head shorter than you are?

Minnie—I had to choose, Fred, between a little man with a big salary and a big man with a little salary.—Iowa Falls Citizen.

Irishman (watching gun club)—Be jabers! 'nd phawt's the use 'n wastin' goin powder 'n shot on thim clay b'irds? Shure the fall ud break 'em.—Yale Record.

A WOMAN OF FORTY SUMMERS.

Full of outline and fair of face,
Swinging her fan with languid grace,
White arms gleaming through folds of lace,
A woman of forty summers.

No thread of white in the auburn hair,
No line of age in the forehead fair,
A life unmarred by touch of care,
In spite of her forty summers.

A husband-lover and children sweet,
Pleasures to charm and friends to greet,
Roses scattered before her feet,
Through each of her forty summers.

Summers all, nor winters bold
Have snatched her sunshine and made her cold;
Have killed her roses and left her old;
Nothing she knows but summers.

Nothing she knows of laden cloud,
Of freezing air and tempests loud,
Of snows that weave for Hope a shroud;
Her life has been only summers.

So calm she sits in the balmy air,
No sorrows to fret, no cross to bear,
A summer idyl, a vision fair,
This woman of forty summers.

Yet cold and blast but make us strong,
After the snow the robin's song:
To the fullest life by right belong
The winters as well as summers.

And they whom fame shall carve in stone
The woman whom men would fain enthrone,
The women whom God has stamped His own,
Live winters as well as summers.

—Jenness Miller Monthly.

REED AS A CANDIDATE.

The Platform He Promulgated When He Considered His Candidacy a Joke.

Ex-Speaker Reed seems to be more seriously a candidate for the Presidency than ever before. In 1888 he regarded such a possibility as a joke. That year a New England paper declared that the most available men for the Republican nomination were Congressmen Reed of Maine, Hiscock of New York, and Long of Massachusetts.

"As soon as we saw this," said Mr. Reed at that time, "Long and I assembled ourselves together, held a caucus, and agreed that the announcement, so far as we are concerned, was both timely and judicious, but we decided by a unanimous vote that Hiscock was not available, for reasons that must suggest themselves to every thoughtful and patriotic man. This action having narrowed the contest down to Long and myself, I suggested, with the kindest and most disinterested motives, that for the sake of harmony he ought to withdraw. He demurred to the proposition, and did not appear to take much interest in it until I offered to make it an object to him. I volunteered to pay him $5 in lawful money if he would agreed to retire and make a speech nominating me in the Presidential Convention. He replied that he was not a five-dollar man, whereupon I raised him to eight.

"I'm running for the Presidency," continued Mr. Reed at that time (this was in the winter of 1887-8), "upon a broad and comprehensive platform, and if I don't get the nomination it won't be because I'm not willing to give satisfaction to people of all colors, races, religions, and political views. I believe in giving every man equal rights and a fair show. I believe that it is the duty of Congress to pass a judicious silver bill, and am in favor of such a revision of the tariff as shall give the capital and labor employed in the manufacturing industries of the country every protection they ask, and at the same time place the luxuries as well as the necessaries of life within the reach of all. I believe that every man, woman and child should receive a pension who is entitled to it; that every just claim upon the Government should be promptly and duly paid, with interest to date; that sectional strife should be smothered in fraternal love, and that the dead issues of the war should be decently buried at Government expense. I am in favor of applying the principles of civil service reform to all the offices of the Government, so as to give entire satisfaction to those who are in as well as those who are out, and that all legislation intended to promote the prosperity of the country should be promptly enacted by Congress. On the labor question I am as sound as an oak saw log, and urge upon Congress the passage of a bill that will settle forever and set at rest all controversies between the employer and the employed. I believe that the surplus in the Treasury should remain unimpaired so far as is consistent with the financial welfare of the country, and that Congress should take such action in reference to the finances as will bring the greatest good to the greatest number. I hold it to be the duty of the President to protect the prerogatives of his office, and to hand them down unstained to his successor done up in tissue paper or in a silk handkerchief, and I will further say that if I have omitted to declare my position regarding any interest representing a considerable number of votes, it shall be my earnest endeavor to amend and enlarge my platform accordingly.

"The motto on my escutcheon is, 'I strive to please,' and my aim is to merit the approbation and secure the support of all Republicans, Democrats and Mugwumps. I desire to be considered a non-partisan candidate and would prefer that my nomination should be unanimous."

New Tactics.

At the session of the school for non-commissioned officers of one of the companies stationed at Fort Wayne, the following questions was asked of Sergeant——:

"What is strategy? Give me an instance of it."

After studying for a moment or two the sergeant gave the reply:

"When in battle and you are out of ammunition and don't want the enemy to know it, it is good strategy to keep right on firing."

The captain gave the school a vacation till the first Monday in January.—Detroit Free Press.

A Judicial Opinion.

A Texas Judge recently acquitted a man who was arraigned for swindling a lawyer. He urged the man had probably attempted to get even with the barrister but, in his judicial opinion, he must have failed.—Adams Freeman.

Irrevocably Gone.

"I set four pies on the window sill to cool," said Mrs. Hunker to her husband, "and they have all been stolen."

"Then we must number them among the lost tarts," was the philosophical reply.—Detroit Free Press.

Query.

Tell us, ye winged wind
That round our pathway screams,
Is there a spot on earth
Where mince pies don't make dreams?
—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

THE PRESIDENT GIVES OUT AN INTERVIEW ON HAWAII

Echoes of the Sugar Scandal of Last Session. The Government Saloon Again Attacked. Sugar Bounty Unconstitutional. Cleveland and Hill.

The crusade of Senator Allen, begun the other day against the privileges granted to one Page, who keeps a restaurant in the national Capitol, will no doubt be appreciated along the shores of the Platte, however it may be on the left bank of the Potomac. The Nebraska Senator says that Mr. Page, occupies, free of charge, seven or eight of the best rooms in the splendid building, four being devoted to the dispensing of food to hungry Senators; that the Government through the Senate's contingent fund, pays for every stove and range in the kitchen and every article of kitchen furniture. It pays for every pound of fuel used in Page's cooking, for all his lights, and even for all the ice, the latter alone to the tune of about $300 a month. Last year, as Mr. Allen is informed, the ice bill was over $3,000, and the Government also paid for washing Mr. Page's rooms and cleaning his carpets. In looking over the bills for 1892, Mr. Allen found a purchase on one day of 170 yards of Axminster carpet and 106 yards of other carpet for the restaurant, at $2.50 per yard put down, making $690 for that item alone. A few years ago the kitchen was remodelled and fixed up, and the bill was $11,000, paid by the Government. In addition to the annual interest on that sum represented in the permanent fixtures, the Government pays, it appears, "fully $700 a month," for what is consumed in the form of ice, fuel, lights, and so on, or about $8,000 a year.

The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia, through Justice Shepard, has delivered an opinion affirming the decision of Judge McComas in the District Circuit Court refusing to grant the application of the Miles Planting and Manufacturing Company of Louisiana for a mandamus to compel the Secretary of the Treasury and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to make an examination of the sugar produced by the company, preliminary to the payment of the sugar bounty for 1894, which Secretary Carlisle refused to pay on the ground that the new Tariff law repealed the bounty provision of the McKinley act. The most interesting feature of the Court's opinion is its practical declaration that the granting of bounties is unconstitutional.

It is announced here that John J. Ingalls will cancel his dates to lecture in Iowa and other States and arrive at Topeka on the 14th to witness the inauguration of Gov.-elect Morrill. This has created a stir among the Senatorial candidates, who vie with each other in declaring that Ingalls cannot possibly win the Senatorship. The contest is exceedingly animated, but J. R. Burton is in the lead, and his friends say he will certainly win. The first ballot will probably stand: Burton, 28; Ady, 17; Thacher, 17; Leland, 16; Hood, 19; Smith, 5; Ingalls, 4, and Hatfield, 1. The estimate is made from the inside figures secured by the managers of the various candidates.

There is no doubt whatever that President Cleveland did send Senator Hill a friendly autograph letter, asking him to dine at the White House that memorable Thursday night, and everybody in Washington is wondering what it all means.

President Cleveland's statement touching the unpublished features of his Hawaiian policy caused the greatest surprise in Washington. The President's methods of communicating with Congress are both various and unusual. Sometimes he adopts the plan of the Constitution, which has been followed by his predecessors, and sometimes he transmits his views by means of personal letters to members of the House or to the Governor of Georgia. In this particular case he has struck out a new path for himself. He has replied by a newspaper interview to words spoken in debate by a Senator. In his statement the President said: "Soon after the overturning of the late government of the Queen I investigated that transaction, and was satisfied that there had been such an unjustifiable interference in aid of that movement, on the part of the representatives of the government of the United States in its diplomatic and naval service, as to call for correction, not only to rectify what seemed to be a wrong done to others, but also, through that rectification, to ward off what appeared to be a danger to American honor and probity. Fully appreciating the constitutional limitations of my executive power, and by no means unmindful of the hindrances that might arise, I undertook the task. Having failed in my plans, I committed the entire subject to the Congress of the United States, which had abundant power and authority in the premises."

The Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia has rendered an opinion sustaining the decision of Judge Cole in the case of Messrs. Chapman and Macartney, the stock brokers who refused to testify before the Senate sugar investigating committee regarding individual speculations by Senators through their firms. Judge Cole's decision overruled a demurrer filed by the brokers to the Government indictment. The other recalcitrant witnesses are Henry O. Havemeyer, John E. Searles, President and Secretary, respectively, of the American Sugar Refining Company; E. J. Edwards and J. S. Shriver, newspaper correspondents, and Edward A. Seymour, stock broker. The offence charged in the indictments is punishable by a fine of not more than $1,000 nor less than $100, and imprisonment in jail for not more than twelve and not less than one month.

ROGER LEWIS.

The Baptist Minister's Home.

Did you ever hear of the word pastorium?

The word is the coinage of Dr. M. B. Wharton, the Baptist minister, formerly of Montgomery, Ala. He found a lamentable absence of words to indicate the residence of a Baptist preacher—the Methodists with their parsonage, Episcopalians with their rectory, but a Baptist minister had no name for his house.

Mr. Wharton settled it. Pastorium was the word.

It has now gone into the language.—Atlanta Journal.

A Needed Reform.

Methinks that for mankind 'twould be a splendid thing, indeed,
Now that divorces cheap do rule the day,
If the solemn marriage service should quick be changed to read:
To love, to honor, and to stay.
—Buffalo Courier.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.
From the New York Sun of February 5, 1894.

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homœopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. New as the use of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled and careful apothecaries and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 SPRUCE ST., NEW YORK.

MEN WANTED To take orders. No delivering or collecting. Experience not necessary; steady employment; [illegible] terms; write at once and [illegible] choice of territory.
ALLEN NURSERY CO.,
Rochester, N.Y.

"'Hallo!' he shouted again. 'How do you feel yourself? Pretty comfortable, eh? Ha! ha! You London rogues thought we were green in the country. what's your opinion now?'

"We both lay still, though feeling pretty considerably small, as you may imagine.

"'It's all right; I see you,' he continued. 'Why, I have been waiting behind that lilac bush every night for the last week, expecting to see you. I knew you couldn't resist going up that ladder, when you found the windows were too much for you—Joe! Joe!'

"'Yes, sir,' said a voice, and another man came from among the bushes.

"'Just you keep your eye on the roof, will you, while I ride down to the station and fetch up a couple of constables?—Au revoir, gentlemen! You don't mind waiting, I suppose?' And Col. Morley—for it was the owner of the house himself—strode off; and in a few minutes we heard the rattle of his horse's hoofs going down the avenue.

"Well, sir, we felt precious silly, as you may imagine. It wasn't so much having been nabbed that bothered us, as the feeling of being caught in such a simple trap. We looked at each other in blank disgust, and then, to save our lives, we couldn't help bursting into laughter at our own fix. However, it was no laughing matter; so we set to work going round the roof, and seeing if there was a likely water pipe or anything that might give us a chance of escape. We had to give it up as a bad job; so we sat down again, and made up our minds to the worst. Suddenly an idea flashed into my head, and I groped my way over the roof until I felt wood under my feet. I bent down and found that the colonel had actually forgotten to secure the padlock! You will often notice, as you go through life, that it is the shrewdest and most cunning man who falls into the most absurd mistakes; and this was an example of it. You may guess that we did not lose much time, for we expected to hear the constables every moment. We dropped through into the lumber-room, slipped downstairs, tore open the library shutters, and were out and away before the astonished groom could make out what had happened. There wasn't time enough to take any little souvenir with us, worse luck. I should have liked to have seen the colonel's face when he came back with the constables and found that the birds were flown."

"Did you ever come across the colonel again?" I asked.

"Yes; we skinned him of every bit of plate he had, down to the salt spoons, a few years later. It was partly out of revenge, you see, that we did it. It was a very well-managed and daring thing, one of the best I ever saw, and all done in open daylight, too."

"How in the world did you do it?" I asked.

"Well, there were three of us in it—Jim was one; and we set about it in this way: We wanted to begin by getting the colonel out of the way, so I wrote him a note purporting to come from Squire Brotherwick, who lived about ten miles away, and was not always on the best of terms with the master of Morley hall. I dressed myself up as a groom and delivered the note myself. It was to the effect that the squire thought he was able to lay his hands on the scoundrels who had escaped from the colonel a couple of years before, and that if the colonel would ride over they would have little difficulty in securing them. I was sure that this would have the desired effect; so, after handing it in, and remarking that I was the squire's groom, I walked off again, as if on the way back to my master's.

"After getting out of sight of the house, I crouched down behind a hedge; and, as I expected, in less than a quarter of an hour the colonel came swinging past me on his chestnut mare. Now, there is another accomplishment I possess which I have not mentioned to you yet, and that is, that I can copy any handwriting that I see. It is a very easy trick to pick up if you only give your mind to it. I happened to have come across one of Col. Morley's letters some days before, and I can write so that even now I defy an expert to detect a difference between the hands. This was a great assistance to me now, for I tore a leaf out of my pocketbook and wrote something to this effect:

"'As Squire Brotherwick has seen some suspicious characters about, and the house may be attempted again, I have sent down to the bank, and ordered them to send up their bank-cart to convey the whole of the plate to a place of safety. It will save us a good deal of anxiety to know that it is in absolute security. Have it packed up and ready, and give the bearer a glass of beer.'

"Having composed this precious epistle, I addressed it to the butler, and carried it back to the Hall, saying that their master had overtaken me on the way and asked me to deliver it. I was taken in and made much of downstairs; while a great packing-case was dragged into the hall, and the plate stowed away, among cotton-wool and stuffing. It was nearly ready, when I heard the sound of wheels upon the gravel, and sauntered round just in time to see a business-like closed car drive up to the door. One of my pals was sitting very demurely on the box; while Jim, with an official-looking hat, sprang out and bustled into the hall.

"'Now, then,' I heard him say, 'look sharp! What's for the bank? Come on!'

"'Wait a minute, sir,' said the butler.

"'Can't wait. There's a panic all over the country, and they are clamoring for us everywhere. Must drive on to Lord Blackbury's place, unless you are ready.'

"'Don't go, sir!' pleaded the butler. 'There's only this one rope to tie.—There; it is ready now. You'll look after it, won't you?'

"'That we will. You'll never have any more trouble with it now,' said Jim, helping to push the great case into the car.

"'I think I had better go with you and see it stowed away in the bank,' said the butler.

"'All right,' said Jim, nothing abashed. 'You can't come in the car, though, for Lord Blackbury's box will take up all the spare room. Let's see—it's twelve o'clock now. Well, you'll be waiting at the bank door at half-past one, and you will just catch us.'

"'All right—half-past one,' said the butler.

"'Good-day,' cried my chum; and away went the car, while I made a bit of a short cut and caught it around a turn of the road. We drove right off into the next county, got a down-train to London, and before midnight the colonel's silver was fused into a solid lump."

I could not help laughing at the versatility of the old scoundrel. "It was a daring game to play," I said.

"It is always the daring game which succeeds best," he answered.

At this point the train began to show symptoms of slowing down, and my companion put on his overcoat and gave other signs of being near the end of his journey. "You are going on to Dover?" he said.

"Yes."

"For the continent?"

"Yes."

"How long do you intend to travel?"

"Only for a week or so."

"Well, I must leave you here. You will remember my name, won't you? John Wilkie. I am pleased to have met you. Is my umbrella behind you?" he added, stretching across. "No; I beg your pardon. Here it is in the corner;" and with an affable smile, the ex-cracksman stepped out, bowed, and disappeared among the crowd upon the platform.

I lit another cigar, laughed as I thought of my late companion, and lifted up the Times, which he had left behind him. The bell had rung, the wheels were already revolving, when, to my astonishment, a pallid face looked in at me through the window. It was so contorted and agitated that I hardly recognized the features which I had been gazing upon during the last couple of hours. "Here, take it," he said—"take it. It's hardly worth my while to rob you of seven pounds four shillings; but I couldn't resist one more trying my hand;" and he flung something into the carriage and disappeared.

It was my old leather purse, with my return ticket, and the whole of my traveling expenses. His newly awakened conscience had driven him to instant restitution. [THE END.]

WOMAN'S TRIALS.

SOME LIGHT ON THE SUBJECT.

So Many Suffer Without Knowing Why. Much Can Be Avoided.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

So many feel the very life crushed out of them, wake up cheerful and happy, determined to do so much before the day ends, and yet:

Before the morning is very old, the fearful backache or bearing-down feeling attacks them, the brave spirit sinks back in affright; no matter how hard they struggle, the "clutch" is upon them, and they sink into a chair, crying, "Oh! why should I suffer so? What can I do?" The answer is ready, your cry has been heard, and a woman is able to restore you to health and happiness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will stop your torture and restore your courage. All your pains come from a deranged uterus or womb.

It is the greatest of all rewards to receive such letters as the following from Miss Louise Müller, who lives at 44 Michigan Ave., in Evanston, Ill. She says:

MISS L. MULLER.

"As I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and have thereby become entirely well, I am recommending all my lady friends to use it. I am sure it will help them in all cases of womb trouble, leucorrhoea, irregular or painful "monthly periods." I am sure it is our best friend.

I am so thankful to Mrs. Pinkham for the good she has done me, that I wish every sick woman in America would write to her at Lynn, Mass., and get her advice."

Looking For Mrs. Joe.

Joseph Case, who does the night trick at the baggage room of the North Avenue station, is away on a week's leave of absence. His friends are of the opinion that "Joe" will be accompanied on his return trip by Mrs. Joe, but no cards have as yet been received at this office.

Flag for Their Home.

A patriotic friend of the Y. M. C. A., of New York, has kindly presented to the Association a handsome American flag, which will soon float to the breeze from the new building.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: 'I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1 ;four price 45c and 90c

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, held on Thursday, Jan. 3, 1895, at 2:30 p m.

The meeting was called to order by the Director, who directed the Clerk to read the following communication from the Common Council of the City of Rahway, viz:

Rahway, N J, Dec 12, 1894

To the Honorable, the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—Whereas due notice has been received by the Common Council of the city of Rahway that William Howard, a member of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County, from the said city of Rahway, had resigned from said Board, and that his resignation had been accepted; it is hereby certified that at a meeting of the said Common Council of the city of Rahway, held on Dec 11, 1894, John Farrell was appointed in the manner as provided by law to fill the vacancy in said Board of Chosen Freeholders, caused by the resignation of William Howard. Signed,

Very respectfully yours,
S RUSLING RYNO, City Clerk.

By order of the Common Council.

Mr. Farrell was then sworn in by the Clerk.

The roll was called, showed the following members present, viz:

Director Hubbard and Freeholders Badgeley, Clark, Ehrlich, Halliday, Farrell, Hulskamper, Krause, Littell, Miller, Ogden, Roll, Swain, Tier, Westcott and Woodruff—16.

Absent—Freeholder Morrell—1.

COMMUNICATIONS, PETITIONS, ETC.

From the Elizabeth General Hospital as follows, viz:

Dec 14, 1894.

J FRANK HUBBARD, ESQ,
Director of Board of Freeholders,
Plainfield, N J.

Dear Sir—The Board of Manager of the Elizabeth General Hospital have requested me to express to your Honorable Body their appreciative thanks, for the appropriation of $2,000, made in behalf of the institution and for the prompt payment of the amount

Signed, Very truly yours,
WM T DAY, Sec.

No objection being made, the Director ordered that the communication be received and spread on the minutes.

From the Muhlenberg Hospital, Plainfield, N J, as follows, viz:

Plainfield, N J, Jan 1, 1895.

J FRANK HUBBARD, Esq.
Director of Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders:

Dear Sir—At a regular meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, held on the 31st day of December, 1894, the following preamble was adopted:

Whereas, The treasurer has made known to the board that the Board of Freeholders of Union county has *appropriated for the use of the hos*pital the sum of one thousand dollars which has been transmitted to, received and acknowledged by him; therefore

Resolved, That the considerate action of the Board of Freeholders in making such appropriation for the hospital, at a time of special need, is highly appreciated by this board, and that the grateful acknowledgments of this board be returned to the Board of Freeholders; therefore

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be transmitted to the Board of Freeholders by the secretary.

Signed, Very respectfully,
WM R COCK, Sec.

No objection being made, the Director ordered the communication be received and spread on the minutes.

Freeholder Ogden presented the following, viz:

Elizabeth, N J, Jan 3, 1895.

To the Honorable, the Board of Freeholders of Union County:

Gentlemen—I have been requested by the Hon Wm D Jenkins, chairman of the committee on streets and highways, and also public grounds and buildings, of the city of Elizabeth, that your Honorable Body grant permission to the city to remove so much of the railing on the south wall of the Broad street bridge, and to place the same on the northeast of said bridge, to run from the railing now located on said wall, and to connect with the building now occupied by Hook and Ladder Co, No 1, the work to be done at the expense of the city of Elizabeth.

(Signed)
Respectfully submitted,
N K THOMPSON,
Street Commissioner.

Freeholder Miller moved that the communication be received, and that the permission as asked for be granted. After an explanation by Freeholder Miller as to why the request had been made, and the motion was on roll call adopted unanimously.

NEW BUSINESS AND RESOLUTIONS.

By Freeholder Krause:

Resolved, That the bill of W T Kirk, $200, for iron work for Elizabeth avenue bridge, be paid when approved by the committee.

Freeholder Roll moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was adopted unanimously.

By Freeholder Krause:

Resolved, That the sum of $500 be paid to Adam Gerlach on account of contract for building bridge, Elizabeth avenue, near Johnson's Tannery, amount of contract being $514.

Freeholder Roll moved the adoption of the resolution, and on roll call it was adopted unanimously.

The Director annouced the assignment of Freeholder Farrell to positions on the various committees of the Board with which Freeholder Howard had formerly acted.

The following bills were read and ordered paid as allowed:

In a Little Corner.

The House Committee of the Scotch Plains Public Library, a report of which was given in the Plainfield papers last week, will give an afternoon tea at the Library rooms Friday afternoon, Jan. 27. Mrs Thomas of Bound Brook will read a paper, entitled "In a Little Corner with a Little Book". All interested in the Library are cordially invited.

SCOTCH PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

Wilbur Miller is circulating a petition to present to the railroad company allowing him to sell papers at the station mornings. The Union News Company now control the privilege.

Mrs. George Marsh of Front street spent Sunday with her mother, Mrs. Jimerson of Westfield.

Mrs. A. Dobbins of Kearney spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John Flannery.

Hollingsworth's mills started work again Monday. The men will be given 8 hours a day until further notice.

Frank Flannery of Plainfield spent Sunday with his sister, Miss Nellie Flannery.

Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Miller of Glenside avenue entertained a few of their friends at an informal reception Saturday evening.

L. A Goodenough of Jersey City spent Sunday with friends in town.

Miss Lydia Townsend of Mountain avenue met with a serious fall Saturday evening. While going into the cellar, down a pair of winding stairs, she slipped and fell. Miss Townsend remained unconscious some time. Dr. Westcott attended her.

District Deputy Noble went to Bayonne Monday evening to install the officers-elect of Bayonne Council, R. A.

Mrs. Nathaniel Chapin of Union avenue is confined to the house with the grip.

Mr. and Mrs. Emery entertained friends from Bayonne Saturday.

George Marsh is suffering from a severe cold.

The Choral Union meet Thursday evening in the chapel.

John Flannery is confined to the house with the grip.

Excelsior H and L Company held its annual election for officers for the ensuing year Monday evening. The following were elected: President—Norman Dunn; Foreman—E L Hand; Assistant Foremen—C Frentz and W B Buckley; Secretary—George L. Dunn; Treasurer—W H Lake.

Dr and Mrs Westcott are spending a few days in Philadelphia. During the doctor's absence his practice will be taken care of by Dr. Harrison of Westfield.

The Baptist Sunday-school held their election of officers for the ensuing year Sunday afternoon. Those elected were: Superintendent—George L Colgate; Assistant Superintendent—William Baud; Secretary—Miss Minnie Hostinger; Treasurer—William VanValkenburgh; Librarian—W B Buckley.

Mr Keer and family of Front street are moving to Grant avenue, Plainfield, where Mr Keer has accepted a position with the Pond Machine Tool Company.

CHECK FORGING CHARGED.

Daniel O'Connor of Plainfield Locked up in Elizabeth.

A warrant was issued by Justice Newcorn Jan. 23 for the arrest of Daniel O'Connor, charging him with forging a check for $27 on Mrs. Dency Horton.

The complainant is Frank Linke, who cashed the check.

This morning O'Connor was given a hearing, and he confessed to the forgery. He was committed to the county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Abner Bartlett.

The mother of Abner Bartlett, Jr., passed away Jan. 23 after several months of suffering. She only lived seven months after her husband's death, and was constantly attended by two nurses and Dr. Jule of New York and Dr. Stryker, a son-in-law, of Philadelphia. She was 72 years of age, born in Louisville, Ky., of the well-known Easton family.

Everybody's Experience.

A Plainfield man in Newark yesterday met Mr. Hart of the house of Hillier & Co., the favorite cleansers and dyers, and the conversation turned on advertising, of which Mr. Hart is a devoted disciple. He said he had found that good advertising was a trade-maker, and to it Hillier & Co. owed much of their success. In Plainfield he had always used The Daily Press, and he was pleased with the honorable treatment and great results of that paper. He would always use The Press, he said, and no other paper in the town.

"The Lost Paradise."

In "The Lost Paradise", to be presented in Music Hall tomorrow night, a pretty, interesting love theme prevails, and sufficient comedy is infused to alleviate the sombre effect of the troubles of the working class. As a man of intensity and strong, heroic manhood, William Morris, the chief actor, shines most brilliantly. The completeness of his character in the part of the superior of the men in position and their equal as a man is most notable.

Comrades and Sons to Attend.

An invitation has been accepted by Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, and John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., to attend the meeting of the Women's Relief Corps, No. 10, Friday evening, when the president-elect, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, will be installed.

Sociable Endeavorers.

The Christian Endeavorer Society of the First Baptist Church, with their friends, will enjoy a sociable next Tuesday evening.

Costly Circuits.

It transpires that all but two of the borough fire-alarm boxes, and all of the coils, were burned out by the electric-light wire contact.

To Renovate the Hall.

A gang of sweepers and scrubbers will begin work Friday, giving Music Hall a thorough cleansing.

BAMBERGER'S,
"THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE,"
Newark, N. J.
IT IS A MOST Profitable Buying Time,
for we have Reduced Prices Greatly previous to inventory, on
ALL WINTER GOODS.
Mail orders quickly and carefully filled.
L. BAMBERGER & CO.,
147 and 149 Market Street,
Near Broad Street. Newark, N. J.

AN IMPORTANT CLUB OFFER
SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

BY special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer Scribner's Magazine for 1895 and a full year's subscription to The Constitutionalist for $4 If purchased separately these periodicals would cost $5.

IT IS THE PLAN OF SCRIBNER'S to give its readers next year a history of the past 25 years in the United States, (1869-95.) These years have been unparalleled in the history of the world for national development and material progress. The narrative will be written in a graphic and picturesque style by President Andrews, of Brown University, and capable artists will illustrate it.

ROBERT GRANT, whose "Reflections of a Married Man" will long be remembered, has written a series of articles on "The Art of Living," in which he sets himself to solve, as far as such problems can be solved, questions which beset every well-to-do family—The Income—The Dwelling—Household Expenses—Education of Children—Married and Single Life—The Summer Problem, etc., etc. Beautifully illustrated.

GEORGE MEREDITH, whom more than one good authority has pronounced the greatest living novelists, has written a strong serial, "The Amazing Marriage," to begin in January.

W. D. HOWELLS will contribute a novel entitled "The Story of a Play."

IN THE LAND OF DON QUIXOTE will be a series of three sketches illustrated by a number of Daniel Vierge's wonderful drawings.

SINGLE ARTICLES in great variety have been arranged for and the illustrations will be elaborate.

Scribner's for 1895 Will Be Better Than Ever.

If you desire only SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE remit $3 to the publishers.

CHAS. SCRIBNER'S SONS,
153-157 5th Avenue, New York.

OFFICIAL OPINION ON WELL WATER.

(From Report of State Board of Health, Mass., 1878.)

When any part of a territory from which a well derives its supply is populated and the waste waters of this population are discharged into the ground, these waters percolate downwards until they reach the level of the water in the ground, and then, mingling with the natural ground water, filter slowly toward the well. In such a case the dissolved mineral matters (for instance, common salt, and the salts of lime and magnesia which make water hard) are not removed by the filtration; but the organic matter may be decomposed and wholly transformed into harmless mineral matters by filtering through the ground for a sufficient distance.

There is scarcely a doubt that the waste water discharged into the ground from the more distant points will continue to be thoroughly purified before reaching the well, and the effect of an increase in population at these points would be to increase the hardness of the water rather than to render it injurious to health. There is a greater probability that the water may at some time be polluted by the wastes which enter the grounds at nearer points, say within a distance of from 600 to 800 feet from the well.

400 Colors on the Truck.

The old hook and ladder truck has been taken to Flannery's blacksmith shop on East Third street, where it is being painted by David Kelley. When completed there will be about four hundred distinct tints.

It is understood that the truck is to be put in first-class condition and placed in the West End for service.

—The women of the First Presbyterian Church are boxing goods to be sent to western sufferers.

DIRECTIONS for using
CREAM BALM.
Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostrils. After a moment draw a strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

ELY'S CREAM BALM opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. Price 50c at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren Street, New York.

CATARRH

ELY'S
CREAM BALM
CATARRH
COLD
HEAD
HAYFEVER
ELY BROS

COLD IN HEAD

The Finderne,
under its new management, to be conducted as a
STRICTLY HIGH-GRADE RESORT
Inclosed piazzas, steam heat for Winter.
Open All the Year.
A. E. WHITE, Manager, Finderne, N.-J.
1 9 tf

EAST GREENWICH ACADEMY,
EAST GREENWICH, R. I.,
About 14 miles from Providence on Narragansett Bay.
FOUNDED 1802.
Both sexes. Steam heat and electric light Endowed. Twelve courses, a good Gymnasium, a Cadet Corps, well appointed class rooms. $200 a year. Opens September 11. Write for illustrated catalogue.
Plainfield reference, W. D. W. Miller, 309 LaGrande ave.
F. D. BLAKESLEE, D. D., Principal.
7 25 y- [illegible]

DEATHS.

BARTLETT—Medora S. Easton, at 11 o'clock this morning.

COX—Entered into rest Monday night, Jan. 21, 1895, Ann Johns Rowland, widow of John G. Cox
Funeral services at her late residence, 36 Franklin place, Thursday, Jan. 24, at 2:30.
Interment private. 3

PERRINE—In North Plainfield, Jan. 16, 1895, James V. Perrine, son of Lewis and Lydia A. Perrine, aged 15 years, 4 months and 5 days.
Funeral services Saturday, Jan. 19, at 12 o'clock from parents' residence, 134 Duer st, and 12:30 from Grace M. E. Church. Interment at Mount Horeb.

WILSON—Suddenly, in this city Monday, Jan. 21, 1895, May Hayden Taylor, daughter of the late Morgan [illegible] Taylor and wife of Edward Taylor Wilson
Funeral services at the residence of her mother, 10 Rockview Terrace, Wednesday, Jan. 23, at 3 p. m. 3

MARRIAGES.

HUBBARD—POTTER—In this city Tuesday evening, Jan. 15, 1895, at the residence of the bride's father, Charles Potter, Esq., by Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., William Charles Hubbard and Mabel Louise Potter, both of this city.

ELECTRIC TELEPHONE
[illegible]

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JANUARY 31, 1895. No 5

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

PLANTED—AN ACORN.

The Plainfield Manual Training and Grammar School, conducted by John Dalziel, in the second story of the Friends Meeting-House on East Front street, on Thursday afternoon and evening, from three until ten p. m., held its first reception. A goodly stream of friends and visitors made glad the hearts of Mr. Dalziel, of his daughter, (who teaches the clay modelling class, and who proposed and carried through to success the new enterprise of the reception) as also the hearts of his boy-pupils, each of whom stood at his table or cabinet explaining what he had been doing. There was forestry, carpentry, drawing, clay-modelling, mineralogy, microscopy, and grammar department work to be seen, showing that the abilities and talents, the bent, of each scholar had been discerned, studied, and encouraged in expressing itself.

Added to all that was interesting to see and hear there was sprinkled in and out through the reception hours, bits of personal talk and conversation with and interesting explanations from Mr. Dalziel that formed quite as attractive a part of the programme, as any of the exhibits.

As it drew toward 9 all were seated and speechmaking was in order. After a neat little opening one from Mr. Dalziel, that was just "quite the thing", he introduced Rev. Dr. Richards, who rose and naively confessed the appropriateness of his speaking in favor of manual training, since like the occupants of the jury box who were chosen to try an important case, he knew nothing about such a school, practically. He often wished, however, that he had had so much manual training, that he could now drive a nail straight without danger to his thumb, or use an axe without fear of the consequences to his foot. And what he saw of practical knowledge gained by the boys of the Manual Training School had very favorably impressed him. The Greeks, our masters in literature and art, whose influence dominated the student today and would doubtless do so through all time, thought the body of so much importance that he who was the teacher in the development of physical health, beauty, and power, stood as high in their estimation as he who taught his pupils the art of harmony, or he who led them in the foremost regions of thought. But with the Greek the soul was no factor in the problem of life, therefore came their decadence and fall. We had but one brain; and all that heart, mind, or soul knew or willed or desired, must be expressed by that one brain, through the agency of the physical body. How necessary then was it that the body should be so developed as to give the highest and most trained expression in the service of that brain.

Rev. Dr. Lewis followed with some very pleasant allusions to his own course in manual training in boyhood, first with an axe at the trunk of a tree and the reducing of that tree to a wood pile, in which course of teaching the father who knew it all, was apt to consider the rod somewhat in the light of assistant; and then in later years when he fed a threshing machine. The variation of a quarter of an inch meant possibly the loss of an arm. The ear had to be trained to a concentrated purpose of listening amid the hum of machinery, and hand and eye to the following of that indication, or life might pay the forfeit. Now in later life, writing amid the din of hotels, or the confusing calls of office or social and ministerial life, he found the benefit of that trained ear, eye and hand. The listening, the feeding, the threshing, the chopping, he was reaping now the harvest sown by them all then. "Train up a child in the way he should go", was often the quotation of his late friend Mr. Babcock, who claimed that no one should be forced into the life of an engineer, or any trade or profession, unless he showed a decided taste and bent for it, which Dr. Lewis strongly endorsed. In his opinion the Plainfield Manual Training School gave to Plainfield parents the needed opportunity to decide and to help their boys decide intelligently as to their future.

Aaron M. Powell dwelt earnestly upon the training this school gave to the spiritual part of one's being, leading the boys and girls to look upward from the work which God had made, to Him the maker of all. He drew attention to the microscope as revealing the beautiful minutiæ of God's works, as the telescope showed the greatness of them, while both proclaimed law, the law of God as ordering all things. He told of a morning walk with a friend, who caught a little yellow butterfly in his fingers, held it for a few moments, and then let it go apparently as well equipped for flight as before he caught it. Then his friend placed at once under a small, but powerful microscope he carried with him, some of the dust off his finger; this revealed under the enlargement of the instrument, a beautiful feather radiant with many and glorious hues. What we see here tonight, he said, marks a new era in educational methods, and I am glad that a man has been found who is willing to be the apostle and pioneer of such work in Plainfield.

Mr. Boss, principal of the North Plainfield Public School, followed Mr. Powell, but declared that he only rose to speak because he had a debt to pay. He endorsed all that the previous speakers had said, but he had a debt to pay that they had not. A friend of Mr. Dalziel's had given two scholarships in the Manual Training School—one each to a scholar in a public school in Plainfield and in North Plainfield. He was bound to confess he had looked upon this somewhat in the light of an experiment, but the boy who held the North Plainfield scholarship the first year had done his full class work in that school, though taking out two hours each afternoon for Mr. Dalziel, and had done it better than the year before. Another boy held the scholarship this year, and it appeared as if the same thing was taking place in his case also. He believed that this was the "missing link" that had hitherto been left out of a boy's public school education. He hoped that some plan of union could be in time effected, by which manual training and public schools could work together, one supplementing the other, and united in the one end and aim.

With a few closing words from Mr Dalziel of thanks all around, and of evident cheer in his hitherto up-hill road, of graceful allusion to his daughter as the wise woman who had coaxed him thus to invite the public to view his and his boys' work, the evening exhibition closed.

H. M. Maxson visited the school during the afternoon and expressed admiration of the work exhibited. Speaking of a pupil belonging to one of his schools who attended the Plainfield Manual Training School last year, he said it had been a great advantage to him, that his class work was improved and the benefit is lasting.

There was a visitors' book in which all inscribed their names; there was refreshment for the outer as well as the inner man; there was a modest bow from Miss Dalziel who could not be induced to say a word from the platform; there was courtesy and interest on the part of all the attendants in explaining to everyone; there were good nights and good wishes, and it was over.

The little seed sown a year and a half ago is bravely coming into leaf; whether it will grow into a great oak whose renown shall spread far and wide—whether like the many rooted Banyan tree its branches shall drop down and have a root-boy from every city and town in this State—all this depends on the people of Plainfield.

But the Manual Training School is no dream alone, it is a vivified fact. It is in our midst and it has come to stay. We must not lose it, for the sake of our dear boys and girls. We need it for them. The greater the number receiving instruction in the school, the lower can be put the scale of prices, and thus the wider grow its field of usefulness.

Visitors are welcomed at any hour of the afternoon by the principal, John Dalziel; and among those who registered on the Reception Day were:

Mrs L J Briggs, Mrs David W Pond, David W Pond, H M Maxson, Mrs Samuel Southern, Mrs T R Barton, Miss J Leslie, Mrs H B Lounsbury, Miss C Wardell, A D Thompson, Julia S Scribner, Edith L Gilbert, Mrs F C Harder, Mrs Wm A Pinto, Mrs Elliot T Barrows, C C Woltmann, F C Kirchoff, F Leslie Kyte, H L Rockwell, A B Clemens, Mrs Emil Woltmann, Miss Rosa M Woltmann, E Woltmann, A Woltmann, Alice M Whitney, Mrs D I Smalley, Mrs D C Ivins, F W Cardwell, M A B Wood, Minnie B Wood, Marguerite Kyte, Ethel Kyte, Lyman B Allen, Rev Dr W R Richards, Mrs LaBoyteaux, Chas H Ross, Geo R Greenleaf, Sue B Peck, Frank S Browne, Mrs F S Browne, Miss L H Everett, Mrs M E Kimball, Andrew Gavett, Cornelia A Gavett, A E Holmes, Capt Morrison, Anna C DeKlyn, Miss E P DeKlyn, Miss H N DeKlyn, A W Duxbery, Mrs Ruth C Leonard, Harvey Doane, Aaron M Powell, Anna Rice Powell, Rev Dr A H Lewis, Mrs A H. Lewis, Elizabeth W Stackhouse, A H McNaughton, E C McNaughton, F S Browne, Arthur W Thompson, C B Norman, Anna W Ticknor, W C Goss, A J Robinson, Mary E Robinson, Mrs G F Opdyke.

The room became crowded and many went away without signing names.

The Plainfield Manual Training School has no connection with the Boys Club nor other institution.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

THE THIRD ASSEMBLY.

MANY GUESTS PRESENT FROM OUT OF TOWN.

Grip's Prevalence Causes Notable Absences—Many Dinners Before the Dance.

The third Assembly, which was held last night in the Casino, was quite as successful an affair as its predecessors have been. The patronage of these dances has been more generous this year than ever before, and the management has been so admirable in every respect that nothing but favorable comment has been heard from the many subscribers. The dance last night was marked by the unusual number of people present from out of town for this time of the season. The New Year Assembly has formerly been the only one of the dances at which any large number of visitors has been seen, and it speaks well for their continued popularity when subscribers care to fill their houses with guests at each recurring dance.

People were generally late in arriving last night, as there were many dinners both large and small before the Assembly, but the floor was well filled by 10:30, and dancing was kept up until after the prescribed stopping time. Where people do not get fairly into the spirit of dancing until after 10 it seems rather early to stop the music at 1, or even half-past, but the tendency everywhere seems to be toward early dances both in beginning and ending, as witnessed by the pretty idea of the "Cinderella Dances" in New York, where the music stops promptly at midnight and everyone turns his attention to the supper, which is deferred until the last, before going home to seven or eight good sleep hours.

The decorations of the Casino were very pleasing last night as usual, and evinced the energy and good taste of the patronesses. Rugs, sofa cushions, comfortable chairs, scarfs, candelabra, and palms, were arranged with happy effect. Some of the blue and white bunting from the Columbia dance had been left in place, while festoons of the running cypress, imported from Virginia by one of the patronesses, covered the canopy of the fireplace and hung in bunches from the electric lights around the room.

It is only necessary to say that Elliott's orchestra played to assure one that the music was of the best. Mr. Elliott himself was obliged to be absent, but his substitute was very satisfactory. The floor of the Casino needs no bush, and proved as good as ever, with the exception of the corners which were a little rough. The supper was most excellent in every way and the tables looked remarkably well, being very prettily arranged and dressed with candelabra. The entire supper arrangements were under the direct supervision of John Tombs, the club's head waiter, who deserves great credit for its success. The menu, which was rather more elaborate than usual, was as follows:

Consomme — Rolls
Lobster Salad
Chicken Croquettes — Watercress Sandwiches
Fancy Ices — Little Cakes
Coffee — Lemonade

The next and last of the assemblies will be on Monday February 25, all the dances being placed before Lent instead of having one in Easter week as has been usual heretofore on account of the unusual length of the season.

All the patronesses were present last night with the exception of Mrs. Marion Ackerman, but a number of the subscribers were kept away by the grip, which has left scarcely a house uninvaded.

"Home, sweet home," was repeated three times by the good-natured musicians before the enthusiastic dancers were willing to betake themselves to the coat rooms.

Among the subscribers and their guests were:

Major and Mrs Robert L Burnett, Mr and Mrs William L Saunders, Mr and Mrs J W Reinhart, Mr and Mrs Benjamin Hegeman, Jr, Mr and Mrs Louis C Timpson, Mr and Mrs J Parker Mason, James S Anthony, Miss Lawrence, Miss Reinhart, Mr and Mrs Josiah Brown, John M Whiton, Miss Whiton, Mrs Charles F Abbott, Miss Abbott, Mr and Mrs James H Hallock, Mr and Mrs Henry F Talmadge, Miss Talmadge, Miss Morris, Mr Gray, Harry Talmadge, Miss Bessie Stokes of New York, H C Munger, Henry A Patton, Walter F Murray, Mr and Mrs J C Vail, Miss Carrie L Vail, Arthur F Freeman, Mr and Mrs Albert H Atterbury, W T Kirk, Mr and Mrs James P McQuaide, A L C Marsh, E O Beebe, A V Henderson, Harry J Barden, Mr Caldwell, Fred Waite, Miss Waite, Miss McIntire, Howard Beebe, Dr B V Hedges, Mr and Mrs L W Serrell, George T VanBuskirk, J Gilmore Drayton, Thomas R VanBoskerck, Frank C [illegible], the Misses Yates, Mrs Randolph, Miss Randolph, A L Stroull, Edward VanBuren, Laurence VanBuren, Mr and Mrs F H Wilde, Mr and Mrs Ernest Ackerman, Irving West, O T Waring, Howard Huntington, Edward Field, the Misses Kelly, Miss May Waring, L E Waring, Mr and Mrs W J Roome, Mr and Mrs J T Scott, Mr and Mrs Joseph Sandford, Jr, Mrs Joseph Sandford, Dr F C Ard, Clifford Mellick, Gifford Cooley, Julian [illegible], Mr and Mrs Wilder, Miss Wilder, J H Hallock, J F Hallock, Mrs VanBoskerck, William Sharpe, Charles Spencer and Sydney Smith of Bergen Point, Commissioner Miller and Mr. [illegible] Sykes.

FUN, MUSIC AND HORSEFLESH.

Wonderful Combination Expected in Thatcher and Johnson's Minstrels.

George Thatcher and Carroll Johnson make a great team. Their new minstrel company opens in Wilmington tomorrow night, and comes to Plainfield, Monday night, Feb. 4.

One of the many features of the performance will be the novel opening first-part, a display of a costly and superb effort in scenic magnificence, beauty and elegance of costuming, the sumptuousness of which has never before been attempted in minstrelsy. The scene was especially devised for the company at a cost of $1,000, and represents a beautiful electrical palace with a grand stairway at the centre, surmounted with statues supporting many electrical chandeliers, thus making one of the grandest pictures of splendor, seldom seen on the stage.

The magnificent orchestra, composed of carefully selected musicians, is elevated upon the stairway directly behind the singing corps. The glittering ensemble of the company, comprising fifty gorgeously costumed people, will, in points of elegance, novelty and excellence, surpass anything now before the public.

Thatcher and Johnson have made this one of their strongest features, and at every performance will appear in their inimitable monologues and specialties.

The performance will conclude with the great pony circus, in which ten of the most beautiful specimens of horseflesh in the world will participate in the grand march. "Banner," the great wrestling pony, will wrestle three bouts, catch-as-catch-can, with his comical colored wrestler and trainer. "Madison Square," positively the smallest horse in existence, weighing only 45 pounds, and but 27 inches in height, will perform difficult acts.

On the afternoon of the performance, the entire company, handsomely and uniformly costumed in black coats and white silk hats of the latest and most approved style, preceded by their own band and the pony circus, will parade through the principal thoroughfares of the city, making a pleasing and attractive spectacle. The sale of seats for this engagement is now on at Music Hall.

Chinatown in Plainfield.

"A Trip to Chinatown", which comes to Music Hall tonight, was written "only to amuse", and has no pretensions to plot. Several new songs have been added, all of which are tuneful and catchy.

Frank Lane, who plays the part of Welland Strong, heads the list of comedians, and promises to be as funny as his character would indicate. James Smith, the Ben Gay of the company, is just as sedate as a staid old man could be when out with the boys. Lottie Mortimer as Flirt is more captivating than ever. Georgie Bryton as Willie Grow is thoroughly up to the times for a youngster, and Sara Maddern as the gushing widow, Mrs. Guyer, is deserving of special mention.

The scenery, costumes, properties, have all been renovated since its production at the home theatre, and are carried with the company.

Prizes at Cards.

A progressive card party was enjoyed at the home of Sydney B. Tilsworth Monday. Whist was the game enjoyed, and after three hours of play the lucky ones were rewarded with prizes. Volney F. Green secured as first prize a silk four-in-hand scarf, having scored seven games out of a possible eleven. Arthur W. Vail received second prize, an aluminium match safe, having scored six games. Refreshments were served at 11, after which the guests returned home. Those who attended were: Arthur W. Vail, E. Frank Vail, Rolland Tomlinson, Carl Pfender, Arthur J. Spicer, John Seighor and Volney F. Green.

Bride and Groom from Quakertown.

A pleasant surprise was given Howard Vail and bride of Quakertown, at the home of Miss Belle Vail, East Second street, last evening. Merry games, charades, and refreshments made the hours pass most enjoyably to all present, and to the bride and groom the occasion will doubtless be remembered as one of the most notable of their honeymoon trip.

The Vail family was well represented. Among the other guests were E. Pound and wife, H. G. Adams and family, and visitors from adjacent towns.

Slippery Walks.

Miss Maggie Flynn going for Dr. Boone to attend Miss Lizzie Finnegan, who had fallen on the ice, fell and had to be assisted home. Miss Finnegan was unconscious two hours, and both girls were badly shaken up. Police Sergeant Kiely's father was severely bruised by a fall at the same spot where Miss Flynn fell, on Liberty street near the parochial school.

AT REST

Miss E. A. Smyth.

Solemn requiem mass was celebrated over the body of Miss E. A. Smyth, sister of Rev. Father Smyth of this city, in St. Peter's Church, Jersey City. Tuesday morning at 10, the celebrant being Rev. Father O'Connor, Vice-General of the diocese of Newark, assisted by the Deacon, Rev. Father James Smith of Cranford, and the sub-Deacon Rev. Father Stafford, Vice-President of Seton Hall, South Orange. At the same hour in St. Mary's Church in this city, solemn requiem mass was celebrated, Rev. Father Miller officiating, in the absence of Father Murphy because of illness.

After the arrival of the body in Plainfield, the burial services were performed, Rev. Father Murphy being the celebrant, assisted by Rev. Father James Smith of Cranford as Deacon and Rev. Father Miller as sub-Deacon. Rev. Father Glennon of Asbury Park officiated as master of ceremonies.

The church was filled with friends of the departed, to witness the solemn ceremonies, among those present being Ex-Commissioner Coleman of New York, Daniel Cooney, the well-known New York city iron manufacturer, and Patrick Farrelly, president of the Union News Company. Many Sisters of Charity were present, as well as friends and relatives from New York, Jersey City, and Asbury Park.

Previous to the solemn ceremonies, "Calvary" was beautifully rendered by Miss May Flannagan, soloist of St. Mary's choir, and after the absolution "Dies Irae" was sweetly sung by the choir. Rev. Father Smith of Cranford officiated at the grave.

Annual Meeting and Election.

The annual meeting of the Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue Chapel was held on Tuesday in the chapel and opened with prayer by D. D. Hicks.

The reports of the various committees were read and filed. The treasurer's report showed that on Dec. 17 all bills had been paid and there was 65 cents in the treasury.

The election of officers then took place. Walter McGee, Miss Lottie Beekman and Miss Brouard composed the nominating committee, and the following was the result of the election:

President—J. J. Freed.

First Vice-President—Edwin Cook, chairman of Devotional Committee.

Second Vice-President—Miss Leora Wensel, chairman of Mercy and Help Committee.

Third Vice-President—Miss C. Aldrich, chairman of Entertainment Committee.

Secretary—Miss Lottie Beekman.

Treasurer—Frank Bateson.

The committees will be appointed at the cabinet meeting of the League to be held at an early date.

The members then enjoyed a short programme consisting of violin solos by Mr Brinkerhoff, piano solos by Messrs. Higham, and recitations by Margaret Phillips. The committee in charge of Miss Lizzie Phillips then served refreshments, after which the meeting adjourned.

15 MILES OF SEWERS.

Much Work to Be Done This Year in This Great Public Service.

Fifteen miles of sewers, and the disposal beds, are to be built this year in Plainfield. The resolution asking for bids will be adopted at the February meeting, and contracts will be executed as speedily as possible. It is the plan of the committee to have work on the new contracts begin May 1, though the completion of the present contract will be begun April 1. The disposal beds will be established in a locality inoffensive to Dunellen or other communities.

Compute Weight and Value.

J. F. MacDonald, the uptown grocer, always up to date, has purchased a pair of self-computing scales for weighing everything he sells. These scales tell the exact weight of the article, and at the same time compute the price of the purchase. This is the only pair in Plainfield, and will attract much attention, standing on the counter and operating in full view of the customer.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

OBITUARY.

Edward Dorr McCarthy.

Edward Dorr McCarthy, who quietly passed away Tuesday in the fifty-fifth year of his age, just as the sun burst through the lowering clouds, after an illness of but ten days from pneumonia, was for years one of New York's leading jurists, a man of extensive travel, and probably one of the best Greek scholars of the United States, having accumulated a library of rare and valuable Greek works and old prints almost priceless in value.

Mr. McCarthy was born in Minaville, Montgomery County, New York. his father being the son of Capt. McCarthy who served with the Continentals from the battle of Bunker Hill to the close of the War of Independence, and his mother the sister of Ex-Governor Dorr of Rhode Island. Counsellor McCarthy was a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School in the class of '62, among his classmates being Prof. John Fiske of Harvard, D. M. Dennett, who for many years previous to his death was editor of the New York Nation, and who wrote for Horace Greeley the celebrated "Southern Letters" at the close of the war.

Mr. McCarthy in private conversation was a quiet man who gave little suggestion of his wonderful powers as an orator or his shrewdness and brilliancy as a jurist.

Some years ago he was connected with President Cleveland, who has been a lifelong personal friend of decedent, in several important railroad suits in nearly all of which he was victorious. He was many times counsel for the Cunard Line, but perhaps one of the most noted of recent cases, and one in which he had an excellent opportunity to display his wonderful powers, was the celebrated Sturges-Farwell Texas tangle, involving over $1,000,000, which was tried in the courts of Chicago and London and resulted in complete victory for his clients.

He was a man of worldwide travel, having crossed to the continent no less than eighteen times, and being almost as familiar with Paris, London, Berlin, Rome, the Holy Land, the Soudan, the Orient and the countries of the Nile, with all their treasures of art and science, as he was with New York city.

On his last journey, made about one year ago through Italy, the Holy Land, and the African countries of the Mediterranean and the Nile, Mrs. McCarthy accompanied him. One of his strongest possessions next to his study of Greek, was his great love for animals, and he has been observed to stand for hours watching the movements of a pet 'possum or a favorite mouse.

He was a most successful as well as a brilliant jurist, and had amassed a fortune. He was married five years ago to Miss Edith Wright, granddaughter of the celebrated late Peter Wright of Philadelphia, and his wife survives him. He had no children.

Counselor McCarthy was a man of medium stature, well built, with regularly cut features, gray hair and mustache, and an air of reserve which instantly impressed one with its quiet dignity. For years previous to his death he was senior partner of the law firm of McCarthy & Berrier of 50 Wall street, New York, which was dissolved about a year ago, Mr McCarthy continuing.

In accordance with the express wishes of decedent, no crape was put on the door, and no religious services will be held, the funeral Friday morning being strictly private.

The body will be cremated in Germantown, Pa.

Salmagundi Prize Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip MacIntyre of Central avenue entertained a few of their friends at their home last evening with a salmagundi party. It was a charming affair, and the host, hostess, and guests, all had a thoroughly enjoyable time.

There were six tables, and four players at each. The games played were euchre, tiddledywinks, devil among the tailors, dominoes, hearts, and bean bag. The prize winners were: First feminine, decorated china plate, Miss Grace Kilmer; second, [illegible] cup, Miss May Sebring. First masculine, silver and gold pen tray and inkstand, Runyon Fields; second, smoking set, Fletcher Hallock. Consolation prizes—Heart pin tray, Miss Beth Thompson; match tray, F. L. C. Martin. Refreshments were daintily served.

The guests were: Miss Grace Kilmer, Bound Brook; Miss Mabel Barr, Wisconsin; the Misses May Sebring, Linda Malloy, [illegible] Pierce, Kattie Manning, Margaret [illegible], Lillie Garretson, Emily Sandford, May Sandford, Beth Thompson, Mr. and Mrs. F. [illegible], F. L. C. Martin, Charles Hall, Runyon Fields of Bound Brook, Walter Manning, George MacIntyre, Frank Hoagland, Fletcher Hallock, Clifford Pierson, Harry McIntosh, Walter Pierce, Fred Sandford.

—Contractor Hummer has staked out the cellar for Mr. Blair's prospective house which he contemplates building on Somerset street. Ground will be broken as soon as the weather permits.

—The civil service examination for letter-carriers and postal clerks, which is to be held in this city Saturday, promises more applicants than any previous examinations. Already fifteen have filed their application papers with George Hallock, secretary of the civil service board.

CIGARETTES AND THE TEETH.

A Dentist Says the Nerves in Them Are Killed by Nicotine Poisoning.

"There is one bad result of constant cigarette smoking that very few people know anything about," said a Brooklyn dentist. "The result itself has been apparent to me and to all dentists for a long time, but the cause has been a mystery until very recently. For years the nerves of teeth in every other way perfect have been found dead. A careful examination of a dead nerve found in an unexposed tooth recently revealed the fact that it had been poisoned by nicotine, and thereby the mystery referred to was solved. Nicotine poisoning from cigarette smoking is killing the nerves in the teeth of smokers. It is a most serious state of affairs, although most people will not understand. They think a dead tooth is as good as a live one. They will find their mistake some day.

"A young woman whom I have known for some time came here the other day and wanted a tooth attended to. I worked on the tooth some time, and some of the instruments I used should have made her scream a little bit. But she never made a sound, and I naturally concluded that the nerve of the tooth was dead. It surprised me because the tooth was a good one and the nerve unexposed. Well, I extracted the nerve, and the minute I saw it I knew what was the trouble.

"'Do you want a live nerve left in your head?' I asked.

"'Why, of course,' she replied.

"'Then stop smoking cigarettes,' I said.

"'Why, doctor, what do you mean?' she began. Then she put on a great show of indignation.

"'My dear young lady,' I said, 'what's the use of talking so? I'm a dental surgeon and know a thing when I see it. You have been smoking cigarettes for a long time, and my advice was given in a perfectly friendly spirit.' Well, she collapsed then, acknowledged the truth of what I had said, and that ended it. I don't think that cigarette smokers figure this result of nicotine poisoning in with the many other injurious effects of the weed, but to my mind it is the most dangerous of all."—New York Sun.

THE MONEY ISN'T THERE.

A Pickpocket Who Was Foolish Enough to Steal a Lady's Pocketbook.

"I just swiped a leather, Jim," said a pickpocket to another of his profession as he came across him sitting on a bench in Union square.

"Was it one o' them purty ones what the women carries round de street in der hands?"

"Yes, I swiped it up on Fift' avener when she wus lookin inter er windy."

"If yer'd been in de bisnis as long as I hev, yer wouldn't er took it."

"Why?"

"'Tain't wuth it."

"A feller might strike er big haul, though, that way some time."

"Not on yer life he wouldn't. I've swiped a load on 'em, an I never got one yit that I could git a beer out on. Dey don't carry money in dem leathers. Dey's only er bluff. Try dat one yer've got and see if it's euny good."

Glancing about him warily to make sure that no one was watching him, the pickpocket opened the purse. He found three samples of silkoline, a patent glove buttoner, a card advertising a lotion for removing blackheads from the face, a sheet of flesh colored court plaster, some samples of scrim and Madras, a list of prices of carpets, a circular showing an illustration of a patent hose supporter, a card of small safety pins, two slabs of chewing gum warranted to cure dyspepsia and a card bearing her address and instructions to take her there if she met with an accident.

"That's all dere is in it," said the man who had "swiped" the pocketbook as he turned it upside down and shook it, with a look of disgust on his face.

"Didn't I tell yer," remarked the other. "I've 'swiped' dem t'ings till I'm tired. Dey're all de same. De women don't carry nothin but trash in 'em. De money ain't dere, never!"—New York Herald.

Do Not Sleep on the Left Side.

There is little doubt that an immense number of persons habitually sleep on the left side, and those who do so can never, it is said, be strictly healthy. It is the most prolific cause of nightmare, and also of the unpleasant taste in the mouth on arising in the morning. All food enters and leaves the stomach on the right side, and hence sleeping on the left side soon after eating involves a sort of pumping operation which is anything but conducive to sound repose. The action of the heart is also seriously interfered with and the lungs unduly compressed. Hence it is best to cultivate the habit of always sleeping on the right side, although Sandow and other strong men are said to invariably sleep on their backs.—Philadelphia Times.

Animals Respect One Another's Rights.

Truth forces the observer of nature to admit that birds and other creatures apportion the earth among themselves just about as man does. A bear has his boundaries beyond which his fellow bear does not trespass with impunity—the wild rabbit you see on your lawn in the moonlight is the same innocent little creature you have been seeing every night all the summer time—and even the robin that gathers the early worm for his breakfast from your garden will show fight when another comes marauding on his preserve. Nor does this last a year only, for there is good evidence that the same bird will come back to the claim it staked off the year previous.—Meehan's Monthly.

A Devotee of Browning.

"Some of Browning's works?" repeated the gentlemanly book store clerk. "Certainly, ma'am. Which volumes did you want?"

"Oh," said Mrs. Nurich languidly, "wrap me up a quarter of a dozen."—Chicago Record.

BANKS--BOWERS.

A Beautiful Pink and White Wedding.

GRACE CHURCH CROWDED WITH WITNESSES.

Town Society Does Honor to the Fair Daughter Married—Charming Reception at the Albion—A Fortune in Diamonds, Silver and Other Gifts.

Grace Church was filled to overflowing with the New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Plainfield friends of Maude Agnes Bowers, daughter of Mrs. E. A. Bowers, and Theodore Howard Banks of New York city. The ceremony was performed by Rev. S. P. Simpson, rector of St Stephen's Church of Netherwood, after the beautiful and impressive Episcopal marriage service. The fair bride was radiant in a beautiful gown of plain white moire antique silk; over the waist was worn a bertha of rare point d'appliqué lace, and at her side the tall, athletic figure of the happy groom added much to the effective picture. Miss Ethel B Bowers, sister of the bride, tastily gowned in pink, was the maid of honor. Edwin B. Tucker of New York was best man.

The bridesmaids, costumed in pink silk and wearing dainty hats trimmed with roses were Emily B. Banks of New York, sister of the groom, and Gertrude Marchand of Pittsburg, Pa. The ushers were H. Lanier Denny, Joseph Hall, and Ellis Hallet of New York, and Peter B. Matthews of Plainfield.

Twelve hundred invitations were out and very few regrets were received.

The floral decorations at the church were most beautifully and artistically arranged, and consisted of stately palms, filmy ferns and dainty cut flowers, the effect being white and green.

A quiet reception followed in the spacious parlors of The Albion, which had been transformed by Miss Lincoln's artistic skill into a veritable garden of pink and green most delicately blended in a symphony of color. The reception was small and devoid of all ostentation, the family of the bride being still in mourning. A New York caterer provided a delectable banquet, and Rogers's orchestra of Plainfield discoursed sweet music. A fortune in diamonds, silver service and cut glass, of such variety and beauty as to beggar description, comprised the wedding presents, which were in charge of a man specially detailed by Tiffany of New York for their safe keeping.

The honeymoon will be spent under the sunny Summer skies of Florida, at the Hotel Cordova in St. Augustine. The bride and groom were driven to Bound Brook, where they caught the Southern flyer.

On their return to the North they will be at home to friends in New York city.

A partial list of the guests is as follows: Mrs E A Bowers, Mrs Edward M Banks, Mrs Harvey Fisk, Mrs MacEvoy, Miss Ginna, Mr and Mrs Edward Strong, Mr and Mrs Thomas Hall, Mr and Mrs A D Shepard, Capt and Mrs F E Hobbs, Mr and Mrs D B Keeler, Mr and Mrs W H Macy, Mr and Mrs Wm T Shedd, Mr and Mrs C J Fisk, Mr and Mrs B A Hegeman, Mr and Mrs Harvey E Fisk, Mr and Mrs Henry B Hebert, Mr and Mrs Pliny Fisk, Mr and Mrs Evarts Tracy, Mr and Mrs Waring, Mr and Mrs John B Dumont, Mr and Mrs G H Squires, Mr and Mrs L E Howard.

INVENTED THE STEAM MAN.

Death of a Plainfield Man Who Had an Inventive Genius.

Joseph A. Eno died at his home in Newark yesterday from a malignant liver trouble. He was born in Plainfield in [illegible]. He was an inventor, and had secured patents on twenty-five or thirty articles, including a steam generator and a railroad joint. One of his first inventions was a steel-made man, designed to take the place of horses, but trouble was experienced in getting the invention to walk in the streets. A widow, son, and daughter survive him.

Mr. Eno was a resident of Plainfield about thirty-five years ago, and for some time conducted a newspaper stand which he sold to W. H. Williams, and which was then situated at the corner of Front and Somerset streets, and afterward removed to Park avenue. Mr. Williams has continued the business the past thirty years. Many of the older residents of Plainfield will remember Mr. Eno.

From Prominent People.

A great many persons to our knowledge have voluntarily pronounced Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy successful in curing them of disease. Here are a number of statements that again demonstrate the value of this medicine.

Commander James S. Dean, of Gen. Grant Post, G. A. R., Rondout, N. Y., was afflicted an aggravated stomach trouble, which resulted in chronic dyspepsia. He suffered misery until he used Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. "After using it a week," says Commander Dean, "I felt better, and in a short while was entirely cured, that terrible distress and food breaking up sour in my throat had all gone."

Rev. I. W. Hill, Pastor Methodist Church, Accord, N. Y., "I can speak highly of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy as a blood medicine. Ten years ago I had a cancer removed my lip. I then began the use of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and to this day no sign of the ugly thing has reappeared."

The Sisters of Charity, St Mary's Female Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y. say: "The satisfaction we realize from the use of Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy surpass all expectation."

The worst cases of eczema, salt rheum and scrofula yield to its curative power. Nervousness, sleeplessness, liver and kidney complaints and all urinary troubles are cured by its use.

BRIAR PIPE GIVEN AWAY

Bull Durham?

WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF

DUKES MIXTURE for 35 cents

Every pipe stamped DUKES MIXTURE or ATC

2 oz. Packages 5¢

WITTY FATHER SETON.

He Entertains and Edifies a Plainfield Catholic Audience.

The first of a series of literary exercises under the auspices of the Catholic Young Men's Lyceum was held in their hall corner of Liberty and Sixth streets, last evening.

The programme was opened with an excellent solo "Thy Sentinel Am I", by William O'Connor. Miss St. Leger was the accompanist. Hearty applause followed, after which Rev. Father Murphy introduced Rt. Rev. Robert Seton, D. D., explaining that Rev. Father Smyth was unable to be present.

Father Seton's subject was "John Milton and his Works". Among other things he said:

"It is very gratifying to see a literary society among the churches, and I don't like to read in our papers where so much time is given to billiards, progressive euchre, bowling, etc. We should spend more time in studying good English, which is the future of all coming ages. And it's enough to understand English thoroughly.

"I have the happy faculty of being in two places at once, according to a Philadelphia paper which two weeks ago said I was in Plainfield lecturing, while I was at home ill with the grip. I also wish to thank the reporter of The Catholic Times (who was present) who gave me the opportunity of reading my obituary.

"After William Shakespeare, John Milton was the greatest English poet, and in fact his name can be mentioned in the same breath.

"Milton's father was a Catholic, but married out of the church, and therefore lost the faith of the ancient church.

"Young Milton loved study. He went to a university, and became proficient. Shakespeare admired him very much.

"Education should be the ambition and goal of everyone, for knowledge is power, and gives one the executive ability to place matter under the feet.

"Milton desired it. In his time there was no postal service, nor civil service either, to destroy the happiness of postal clerks, and there were not the advantages of the present day.

"Milton's greatest work was 'Paradise Lost', a wonderful book. He should be near to the hearts of all Americans, for he was a consistent Republican, though not a partisan. He believed in the People, as we do, that is the 'Government of the people, by the people and for the people'."

Father Seton then told many interesting incidents, both about Milton's life and about his own.

The evening's entertainment closed with a solo by Charles Ward; and a solo by Miss Sara Carney, "I loved you better than you knew", which were very much appreciated.

Monseigneur Seton, though one of the youngest in the church, in seigniority he is over them all in the United States. He lectures at the University of Washington, Feb. 14, and later in the University of the Notre Dame, Indiana.

The attendance last evening was very large.

Tricky Traveling Watch Tinker.

People having watches and jewelry which need repairing will find it more to their advantage to take them to some established tradesman than to entrust them to strangers who offer to repair goods at low prices. A number of South Plainfield residents are anxiously awaiting the return of their tickers and trinkets, entrusted to an itinerant watchmaker. The individual is to be identified by his plug hat, and it is said this is the only man who was ever known to wear a plug in the limits of South Plainfield. The next adventurer must guard against such a headgear, as wearers of plug hats will be looked upon with suspicion, while Mr. Mundy the blacksmith, wroth at the loss of his gold spectacles, will only be appeased by smashing somebody's high hat.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

EUGENE FIELD INTERVIEWED.

[illegible] at a Reporter.

Eugene Field, the humorous poet, famous for his beautiful children's verses, I was told, had just come in from Chicago and would be at the Authors' club that night. I reached the Authors' club about 10 o'clock and learned that Field had gone.

"Where?"

"To Washington."

"What train?"

"Eleven o'clock."

I was in Jersey City and in that train at 10:50.

"Whip out your notebook and write for all you're worth," said Mr. Field, throwing himself and his bag in the seat. "You've only nine minutes. Time enough, though, for two uneventful biographies like mine."

"Never mind that. You're fond of the quaint and curious, Mr. Field. What 'r' your fads, pets and so on?"

"Well, listen for your life now. I'm fond of dogs, birds and all small pets. My favorite flower is the carnation. My favorites in fiction are Hawthorne's 'Scarlet Letter,' 'Don Quixote' and 'Pilgrim's Progress.' I believe in ghosts, in witches and in fairies. I should like to own a big astronomical telescope and a 24 tune music box. I adore dolls. I dislike 'politics,' so called. I should like to have the privilege of voting extended to women. I am unalterably opposed to capital punishment. I favor a system of pensions for noble services in literature, art, science, etc. I approve of compulsory education. I believe in churches and schools. I hate wars, armies, soldiers, guns and fireworks. I do not care particularly for sculpture or for painting. I try not to become interested in them, for the reason that if I were to cultivate a taste for them I should presently become hopelessly bankrupt. I dislike all exercises, and I play games very indifferently. I love to read in bed. I am extravagantly fond of perfumes. My favorite color is red. I am a poor diner, and I drink no wines or spirits of any kind, nor do I smoke tobacco. I dislike crowds, and I abominate functions. I am 6 feet in height and have shocking taste in dress, but I like to have well dressed people about me. I do not love all children. I have tried to analyze my feelings toward children, and I think I discover that I love them in so far as I can make pets of them. I believe that, if I live, I shall do my best literary work when I am a grandfather."

"And how did you become a humorist, Mr. Field?" I asked, while the porter besought me with tears in his eyes to leave the train before it started.

"Oh, they're not made. They're born."

"All aboard!" And Eugene Field was gone.—Demorest's Magazine.

Missouri 40,000 Years Hence.

According to the engineers of the hydrographic bureau, the level of the gulf of Mexico is one foot higher than it was in 1859, and, of course, the encroachment on the surrounding coasts has been greater or less, pending on their character. In some places, where the marginal lands are composed of high, rocky bluffs, this change of level has gone on from year to year without attracting attention. On the other hand, many low lying points (some that were once inhabited by the primitive inhabitants or by the pioneer white settlers), are entirely submerged. The cause of this change of level has not as yet been ascertained, but it is reasonably certain that it is the result of either a settling of the dry land or of a general and uniform rising or upheaval in the gulf bed. No man who has given the matter a moment's thought will argue that there is more water in the gulf now than there was 35 years ago. On the contrary, there isn't the least doubt but that there is much less. However this may be, if this aqueous encroachment is steadily maintained, Keokuk will be a deep water harbor and St. Louis and the whole of Missouri will be entirely submerged in less than 60,000 years from Jan. 1, 1895.—St. Louis Republic.

On Reading.

To sit down in a chair without an object is to jump into a thicket of temptations. A vacant hour is always the devil's hour. When time hangs heavy, the wings of the spirit flap heavily and slow. Then it is that a book is a strong tower, nay, a very church, with angels lurking among the leaves as if they were so many niches. Reading helps to make conversation harmless, by making it less petty and censorious, by furnishing us with other topics than our neighbors' faults and foibles. It is very hard for a person who does not like reading to talk much in company without sinning. Furthermore, a taste for reading often hinders our taking the wrong side in practical questions which are mooted in the world, but bear upon the church. It does this either by the information it has enabled us to obtain on the subject itself, or by making our instincts accurate and sensitive through our familiarity with right principles.—Faber.

Both Wicked.

"My husband," said the large, fleshy lady, "has a habit of marking paragraphs in the paper that say mean things about women."

"So you will not fail to see them, eh? Still that is not as mean a trick as mine plays. He cuts them all out. Then I have to get another paper only to find that I have been fooled again."—Indianapolis Journal.

Latest In Biscuit.

Mistress—You broke my Sevres plate. You are discharged. How did you break it?

Servant—I carelessly dropped one of the biscuits you made yesterday on it.—Woonsocket (R. I.) Reporter.

Grains of wheat have been found in the sun dried bricks of Egypt and Nineveh, dating from at least B. C. 2500.

Espiritu Santo, the name of a Texas bay, means Holy Spirit.

Rates of Advertising

SPACE	WEEKS 1	2	3	MONTHS 1	2	3	6	12
1 in.	$1.00	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
2 in.	[illegible]	[illegible]	3.00	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
3 in.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
4 in.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	9.00	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
5 in.	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	8.00	[illegible]	15.00	[illegible]	[illegible]
¼ col.	[illegible]	8.00	8.00	10.00	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
½ col.	7.00	[illegible]	[illegible]	15.00	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]
1 col.	12.00	[illegible]	[illegible]	[illegible]	35.00	50.00	[illegible]	100.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 50 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of
Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything,

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
:30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
B EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR,
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and [illegible] from the [illegible].
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in a strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanlike manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and [illegible]. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all places.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 119 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

A. S. WOOLSTON, J. P. BUCKLE,
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS' SUPPLIES. [illegible] NORTH AV

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES
FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.
PLAINFIELD. NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	[illegible]	Hempstead N Y	[illegible]
Astoria, N Y	[illegible]	Hoboken N J	[illegible]
Babylon, N Y	[illegible]	Hunter's Point N Y	[illegible]
[illegible] N Y	[illegible]	Irvington N J	[illegible]
Bayonne N J	[illegible]	Islip N Y	[illegible]
Bergen Point N J	[illegible]	Jamaica, N Y	[illegible]
Bayside N Y	[illegible]	Jersey City N J	[illegible]
Bay Shore N Y	[illegible]	Keyport N J	[illegible]
[illegible]ville N Y	[illegible]	Kingston N J	[illegible]
Belleville N J	[illegible]	Laurel Hill N Y	[illegible]
Blissville N Y	[illegible]	Leonia N J	[illegible]
Bloomfield N J	[illegible]	Little Neck N Y	[illegible]
Bloomingdale N J	[illegible]	Little Silver N J	[illegible]
Boonton N J	[illegible]	Long Branch N J	[illegible]
Brooklyn N Y	[illegible]	Madison N J	[illegible]
Caldwell N J	[illegible]	Matawan N J	[illegible]
Carlstadt N J	[illegible]	Millburn N J	[illegible]
Centreville N J	[illegible]	Montclair N J	[illegible]
Chatham N J	[illegible]	Morristown N J	[illegible]
Closter N J	[illegible]	Newark N J	[illegible]
Colt's Neck N J	[illegible]	New Brunswick N J	[illegible]
Coney Island N Y	[illegible]	Newton N J	[illegible]
Cranford N J	[illegible]	New York N Y	[illegible]
Dover N J	[illegible]	Orange N J	[illegible]
East Norwich N Y	[illegible]	Pamrapo N J	[illegible]
Eatontown N J	[illegible]	Passaic N J	[illegible]
Elizabeth N J	[illegible]	Paterson N J	[illegible]
Englewood N J	[illegible]	Perth Amboy N J	[illegible]
Fairview N J	[illegible]	Rahway N J	[illegible]
Fanwood N J	[illegible]	Red Bank N J	[illegible]
Far Rockaway N Y	[illegible]	Seabright N J	[illegible]
Flatbush N Y	[illegible]	Short Hills N J	[illegible]
Flushing N Y	[illegible]	South Amboy N J	[illegible]
Fort Lee N J	[illegible]	[illegible] River N J	[illegible]
Franklin Park N J	[illegible]	Staten Island N Y	[illegible]
Freehold N J	[illegible]	Westfield N J	[illegible]
German Settlem't N Y	[illegible]	Woodbridge N J	[illegible]
Glen Cove N Y	[illegible]	Yonkers N Y	[illegible]
Gravesend N Y	[illegible]	Trenton N J	[illegible]
Hackensack N J	[illegible]	Tarrytown N Y	[illegible]

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1894, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer

FOR MALARIA.
GENERAL DEBILITY
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. P. COLES DRUG AND MFG. CO.
RAHWAY, N. J.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE NEVERSLIP

THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE.

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.

Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,
Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.

On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dealers in hardware blacksmiths' supplies, etc. sole agents for Union county.

$6.00
........TO........
CALIFORNIA

is our Sleeping Car Rate on the Phillips-Rock Island Tourist Excursion, from Boston and kindred distant cities on the route of this car, to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The cars have upholstered spring seats, are Pullman build, and appointments perfect.

You have a special manager on the car all the way, and excursions run once a week, leaving Boston every Tuesday. Save money by taking this popular mode of travel.

Address for full particulars,

A. PHILLIPS & CO.
296 Washington st., Boston, Mass.

JNO. SEBASTIAN,
Gen. Passenger Agent, Chicago.
8 23 Feb

TWO FATHERS PRESENTED.

Grand Jury Censures the Carelessness of Parents in Permitting Children to Play with Firearms.

The grand inquest for the State of New Jersey, and for the body of the County of Union, upon their respective oath and affirmation,

Present, that during our investigation touching the death of Harold Greenleaf, we ascertained that the rifle from which the fatal shot was fired was owned by a fourteen-year-old boy named William Morgan; that his father, Lucius D. Morgan, was fully cognizant of the fact that his son had and was using the gun; that other small boys were in the habit of playing with the Morgan boy when this gun was in his possession.

We present Lucius D. Morgan as derelict in his duty as a parent in permitting this child to own and use so dangerous a weapon; indirectly he is as much to blame for the death of the boy as was the Roeap lad who fired the shot, for had he forbidden its use by his own son, the Roeap boy could not have had it on that fatal day.

The grand inquest for the State of New Jersey and for the body of the county of Union, upon their respective oath and affirmation,

Present, That we discovered, during our investigation touching the death of Harold Greenleaf, that Charles E. McDonald of Plainfield had purchased for and was allowing his son, Samuel McDonald, (a child of but eight years of age), to use a rifle in and about his neighborhood; we further found that the said McDonald entertained and freely expressed the opinion that this child was fit to be allowed to use this weapon.

We, therefore, present said Charles E. McDonald for carelessness in the premises, and, likewise, for violating the laws of this State in that he sold to one William Morgan, (another child), the very rifle with which the Greenleaf boy was killed.

We cannot too strongly condemn his action in thus placing in the hands of two children these deadly weapons.

Thigh Fractured at 75.

An exceedingly unfortunate accident happened to Isaac Smalley of 333 East Front street yesterday morning about 11:30. He was busily engaged in the rear of his yard, gathering up the limb of a tree which he had cut down the day previous, and, stepping on a piece of ice, he fell heavily to the ground. He was carried into the house, a piece of carpet being used as a stretcher, and Drs. Hedges and Tomlinson were called. On examination they found that his right leg about three inches below the upper joint was broken completely. They set the bone, and Mr. Smalley passed a fairly comfortable. It is hoped that he will soon be able to get around again, though he is 75 years old, and the bone is not likely to knit very rapidly.

"Whippin' the Cat."

An old resident in speaking of ye olden times with a Daily Press reporter last evening, said he distinctly remembered when his father sheared the wool from the sheep and brought the same to Boonton, Morris County, where it was woven into cloth. The cloth was then taken home and the peripatetic tailor, who usually called once a year, would make the cloth into clothes, remaining meanwhile with the farmer's family. The clothes did not fit as snugly as Harry Werner makes them, but they did fit a trifle better than a shirt does a bean pole. That was called "Whippin' the cat". Shoemakers did their business likewise.

All Necessities of Life and Death, in One Borough Block.

There is a business block in North Plainfield where you can buy a farm and all the necessary appliances thereto, and in said block you may also purchase flour, feed, and in fact everything to sustain life, while you await the prospective crop. If it proves a failure, and illness overtakes you, you can also secure the services of a doctor; and should death claim you as a victim there is near at hand, a friendly grave digger, and an undertaker.

Snorts of the Discontented.

(From The Bound Brook Chronicle.)

The brilliant editor of the Plainfield Press is highly complimentary to about one hundred newspaper men in New Jersey. Several journalists having secured positions at Trenton, the Press takes occasion to say that "all the bright Republican editors have now been rewarded by an appreciative Legislature". Thanks, awfully!

[From The Plainfield Courier-News.]

A writer in the Atlantic Monthly gravely asserts that "ten minutes is time enough to devote to the reading of any newspaper". This is a recklessly prodigal estimate so far as it may refer to our North avenue contemporary. Ten seconds is a liberal allowance there.

At So Much Per Top.

[From The Elizabeth Journal.]

The city of Plainfield seems to be Frost bitten, and Frank Bergen is doing his best to thaw it out with liberal doses of ice water, the old time hydropathic remedy.

—D. D. Smalley has hung out a sign in Somerset street telling the public that he is in the real estate and insurance business.

HE AND SHE.

He lived at No. 13 Woodman street, Chelsea. She lived at No. 12. For ten years they had been opposite neighbors, each occupying the drawing room apartments. She had taken up her abode there six weeks after he was installed, and in a dull, uninterested way he had watched for the unloading of the cab, the taking in of the luggage, the bustling to and fro of the slim woman, whose face he got a very imperfect glance at. She looked about 30, not that he cared whether she was more or less. His heart just then was heavy and sore; he had lost the one relative he had left, the only being in the world he cared for—his old mother—and in place of home and her he was simply now "the drawing room lodger."

* * * * * * *

And thus ten years stole by, each reflecting the other so exactly, that excepting the Christmas visit and the summer holiday, there were no landmarks to point the course of time to Nos. 13 and 12, and then fate, fortune, or whatever name we give to the good providence who disposes of those trivial circumstances that lead to great events in our lives arranged that on a certain afternoon in May there were few letters to write that the typist clerk could leave her Bedford street office at a much earlier hour, and, full of anticipation that she would be able to put the finishing touches to a gown she was renovating, she tripped into the Strand, hailed the first omnibus she saw, clambered to the top, and took the only vacant seat. In her anxiety to secure this she did not notice more than that it was a man next to her, but that man was he, and he, having watched her from the time she hailed the 'bus, was now in a flutter for she only just settled when they were at Charing Cross, where he always got down, which he hardly could do now, as, without an explanation which he could not give, it would seem so very peculiar—somewhat offensive, indeed. By the time his hesitation was over they were on their way again, and the conductor was collecting the money. She paid her fare. He silently held out the extra two pence, which the man taking with a nod of surprise, she turned her head, and instantly there mounted to her cheeks a rosy color. He, being of the old school, looked on a blush as one of the most becoming features of a woman.

It was the signal of the weakness of her sex to be answered on the part of the man by the desire to protest, and without hesitation, he said:

"I think you and I are going the same way."

"Yes," and her color deepened, "we live opposite each other on the same street."

"Quite two of the oldest inhabitants, I should say."

"It is ten years since I came," and she gave a sigh.

"Yes, but I was there before you. I remember your coming."

"Do you? Oh, I am accustomed to it now, but at first to have nothing but houses before me seemed dreadful. I used to stand at the window, and—well I won't say what, only I did not see the opposite houses very clearly."

"Perhaps I can enter into your feeling better than you think," he said, kindly, "for to me, then, my surroundings were hateful."

"I had always lived in the country, and I supposed I thought things would go on the same as ever, but in four years I lost every one belonging to me; home and means were swept away, and I had to begin life alone."

"Terrible, hard upon a woman," he said, sympathetically.

"Well, and yet I think sometimes it is harder on a man. Of course, I don't mean one who finds pleasure in clubs and company. I know you stay at home, because every evening I see your lamp alight."

"And your lamp keeps mine company."

"Yes, I've never been away but once—to spend Christmas with a school friend, who has since gone to India. That was an excitement for that I looked up and saw you and very nearly nodded, and then I was so frightened that I jumped into the cab and told the man to drive as fast as he could."

"And I thought you were late, and it quite fidgeted me, and I gave you a mental scolding, just like I often do on Sundays when you will go out without an umbrella."

"Well, but last Sunday you went out without yours, and, more than that, you left the window open on your bird, and I said to Tottie—my cat—'Now, that is very thoughtless, for if the sun goes in, Dickey will catch cold.'"

"And I fear he did catch cold, for he has sat with all his feathers roughed up, looking very reproachfully at me. You know he is six years old."

"My cat is ten; I can never bear to think of her age, for when she dies—well, people will think her mistress a very foolish woman."

"Not those who live alone."

His tone of sympathy brought a pleasant expression into her eyes.

"You find your bird company, don't you?" she said, looking at him. "That summer when you went away I was quite anxious, fearing the landlady might not look after him properly. You know we missed you dreadfully, Tottie and I."

"I can quite believe it. I felt very dull when you were absent."

They both laughed heartily.

"You gone," she said, "and I had nothing to go by, because you are my timepiece in the morning. Mr. Punctual I call you to Tottie; we established that name almost directly after we settled there."

And he had called her Miss Pry! Ah, well, he would give her that name no longer! Should he ask what was her real name? He thought he—. Suddenly the horses stopped.

"Why, here we are!" he said, looking at her amazed.

It was the corner leading to the street in which they lived.

"The way has seemed very short," she said, preparing to get down. "Usually I think our omnibuses go so slowly."

"Do they? I always walk from Charing Cross. I was just going to get down to-day when you got up and sat down next me."

"Yes. I felt my face quite red when I saw it was you. I wondered would you speak, and I was so glad when you did."

"I hope, now, whenever we meet you will allow me to speak to you."

"I shall be very glad," she said, cordially; "it seems so much nicer to have exchanged a few words with one another."

"Well, we were not like strangers to each other, were we?"

"Certainly not; I have felt as if you [illegible]"

And they shook hands and both a little agitated at this unlooked for adventure, turned towards their respective dwellings.

* * * * *

On the very evening of the day week on which they had met, drawing aside his blind to look at the opposite window—why, there was no light there. How very odd! Thinking he might get from Miss Bates whether she had noticed any departure, he said, as she was setting the teapot down: "Lovely weather for this time of year."

Miss Bates was in a lugubrious frame of mind. "Plenty o' sickness about, I hear. They say," she added, with a sniff and a sigh, "the children's dying like sheep with measles, and in some parts whole houses is down with influenza. I'm sure I trust we shall be spared, but I doubt it, for there's one of 'em ill opposite—I saw the doctor to-day going in there."

The sudden change in his face assured her that she had thoroughly drenched his vivacity, and following the axiom that having made an impression you should go, Miss Bates left the room. He buttered his toast and poured out his tea, and some minutes later, finding plate and cup empty, he reasonably surmised that he had eaten and drunk, but he had done so mechanically, while his thoughts were occupied by the words of his landlady. Poor little woman! Now he knew why the window was dark, and the blind remained down. She was ill. Sickness, that despair of the bread winner, had laid its dread hand on her. Poor thing, poor thing!

He walked about the room, he looked out of the window; in short, for over an hour he fidgeted over a score of things, and then that inward tormentor refusing him any peace, he suddenly put on his hat, crossed the road and knocked at the door, determined to ask what was the matter with the lady on the drawing-room floor. He had arranged his words, and, the door open, was about to utter them, when, why—no—yes—it was she, she herself, who had answered the door and was standing before him. "I am so glad," he said, taking her hand and giving it a hearty shake. "I thought you were ill."

"And you came over to see? Oh, how good and kind! That anybody should care cheers me more than I can say."

"There was no light in your window last night, and this morning the blind was down, and while I was wondering what had become of you my landlady told me she had seen the doctor here."

"Yes, but, happily, not me. But you must come in and hear the story. It is poor Keziah, the servant here. She tripped on the stairs and fell down, and has broken some tendon in her leg. And Mrs. Jenkins is away, and the lodgers were out, so that when I came home I found her lying, groaning, helpless, on the mat."

"But why did you not come over for me?"

"I wish I had now. I did think of doing so, but fortunately I was able to help her. I managed to get her to bed, but I had to sit up all night with her, and this morning I got the milk boy to go for the doctor, and take a telegram telling them I could not go to Bedford street. It was impossible for me to leave her alone, but now her sister has come, and Mrs. Jenkins will soon be here, so I am free again. Won't you come upstairs to my room?"

She did not wait for reply, but led the way, saying as she ushered him in:

"What a pity it is not light; then you could see my view of your window."

"Oh, but what a cosy room!"

He had halted just inside the door and was looking round.

"Does it look so? I tried as much as I could to make it look like my old home. A few friends brought in some of the furniture for me, and when I was really settled it was sent up. Lodging house rooms are so dreary."

His answer was a half stifled sigh. In that moment he had compared the black horsehair covered chairs and sofa of Miss Bates's drawing room—the rigid back of each one protected by a wool antimacassar—with the homely snugness which reigned there.

"As you see," she said, pointing to the table, "I was just making myself a cup of tea. Now, won't you sit down and join me? That would be showing yourself neighborly."

"I think I have had my tea."

"Think only?"

"Well, I know my landlady brought it to me, because it was then she spoke of having seen the doctor here, and I at once jumped to the conclusion that you were ill, because for a week past I have never caught sight of you at the window."

"And I have never seen you."

"No; we don't see unless we look."

"But I have looked."

"Not from where you usually stand, or I must have seen you. I began to feel a little huffy. I thought, she never fancies I mean to presume on that chat we had together."

"Why, of course not. How could I? I was only afraid I might have let my tongue run too quickly."

"Come, come," he said, smiling. "It has taken us ten years to break the ice. It must not take us ten more before we thaw."

While he spoke his eyes were following her—watching her measure out the tea, pour the water from the kettle. He did not offer to help her; the sight of a woman doing these trifling acts brought to him a pleasurable sense of home.

"You are looking very tired," he said, as she sat down waiting for the tea to draw.

"That is partly because I was up all night, and then during the day I have felt rather anxious about being away from the office."

"Oh, don't worry about that. They'll get on all right without you."

"Yes, I know they will. But I don't want them to find that out. There are so many women wanting employment, and some know French and German, which I don't, and others have a home with their parents, and could take a smaller salary. Oh, it does not do to stop away. When I found that poor thing lying on the mat I thought, supposing this was my case, what would become of me? It isn't death I fear—sooner or later that comes to all—but old age, sickness, sends a shiver through me."

"Then have you a thing put by?"

"A few pounds only. How could I? I get thirty shillings a week. That is not quite £80 a year."

"And you manage to live here on that?"

"I pay my way. Why? Does that sound to you very little?"

"Very little."

"I suppose they do pay men better, and it's well they do, for you want more than we do, and you are not able to [illegible] well."

"I am in a fire insurance society," he said. "The salaries there vary from one hundred to three. When I had £300 it did not matter to me. My mother was living then, and in addition to a pension she had a little put away, which at her death came to me."

"I am glad you need not be troubled with my anxiety."

"No, and yet I have as great a dread of sickness and of old age. Each year I live the sense of my loneliness oppresses me more."

"I know. Why, I can't tell you the pleasure it gives me to have somebody drinking tea with me, to be able to speak of things we feel—things that give one sorrow or joy. The men at the office are all good fellows and very kind to me, but I should never dream of talking to them as I have to you. They would not understand. I might as well speak in Chinese."

He did not answer in words, but he gave her a nod of sympathy, and stooped down to stroke the cat.

"Now, Tottie, get up and be friendly to Mr. —"

She stopped.

"That reminds," he said, "we have not exchanged names, yet. My name is Robert Morley."

"And mine, Elizabeth Davidson."

"Elizabeth!" he repeated softly. "My mother was called Elizabeth."

"And my father Robert—Robert is a very dear name to me. He had such a generous, dear nature. When I think of his trust, I am not despondent long. My disposition is to be buoyant. I am very like a cork—if I go under water one minute, the next up I bob again."

"You always struck me as being very cheerful."

"What! Did I seem cheerful from over the way? Dear me! How little I dreamed that any one was taking the tiniest bit of interest to me. I am so glad I know now—so glad that we have spoken to each other, and that were friendly!"

He had risen from his chair and seemed suddenly about to go. She, somewhat embarrassed that he had not responded, added: "At least that is my feeling towards you."

"Is it?" he said, stiffly. "I forgot it was so late. I really must go. Good-by."

And before she had recovered from her surprise he was gone.

A wave of hot color went over her. What did it mean? What did he think? Surely at her age no one could misunderstand her. The tears sprang to her eyes and fell in a quick shower, * * * The door being opened made her look up. It was he back again.

"When I got into the street I found I had left my hat behind," he was saying; and she making an effort at regaining her self-possession, answered: "Oh, what a pity. Did you? Where?"

This brought him into the room, and nearer to her. "Why are you crying?" he exclaimed.

"I! No, no"—and she forced herself to smile.

"But you are. Your face is wet; your eyes are full of tears. What is the matter? Have I offended you?"

"No, but I thought perhaps I had offended you—you seemed to go so suddenly; please take no notice. Women's tears come very readily. It must be feeling so tired that makes me so silly."

He stood for a moment irresolute, turned towards the door, came back, and standing in front of her said: "Silly! If you think yourself silly what will you say of me? You were surprised to see me go. It was because I feared you would think I had taken leave of my senses if I stayed."

"Why?"

"Why? Because all at once the truth flashed upon me. Suddenly I knew why I had felt so angry, because I had not seen you at your window; why I was so anxious when I thought you were ill; what made me come over and find out the truth about you; the reason that seeing you here made me rejoice and feel happy. It is that I love you. Oh, it has not come now; for years it has been growing upon me, only I did not know. How should I? No other woman but you has ever had the slightest interest for me. For ten years I had blamed you, pitied you. What more could I do? And now it has come to this, will you marry me? I must know."

"But I feel sure you are making a mistake. I have been talking to you, and you feel sorry for me. No, no; forget what you have said. In the morning everything will look different to you. Pity is not love."

"But it is akin to it. If I give you love can you not give me pity?"

"I pity you! Why, you have brought all the sunlight I have known for years to me. When you spoke to me on the top of that omnibus I could have hugged you."

"Hug me now," he said—for the temerity of quiet men is remarkable—and he took her hands and placed them on his shoulders, and looking at her continued, "We are two very lonely beings; a kindly Providence, as it seems to me, has brought us together. Can you trust yourself to me? I would strive to make you happy."

She tried to speak, tried to force back her tears, but the happy flow would come.

"It is because I am so happy," she said, "for I must tell you that often and often, years ago, when I felt so solitary, I have drawn aside my blind and looked over at your window, and, picturing you sitting there alone, I have said: "Why couldn't it be that we took a fancy to each other; he looks so nice and kind, but if he married it would be to a young girl, not to me.""

"But you are young."

"I—I am thirty-eight."

"And I am forty-five. We have no time to spare, you see. I shall put up the banns immediately. You must give notice that you are going to leave at your office, and I will tell them at mine that I want my holiday."

"It must be a dream," and she put up her hands and pushed back her hair. "It cannot be reality. Of late I have felt quite frightened thinking how sad it would be if you went away."

"A similar dread has haunted me, especially to-day, when I saw the blind down. But now we shall leave together, and we will go down to Putney. The old house I lived in from a boy is there, and it is vacant, too, and we will make it our home, and, as before, the dear name of its mistress will be Elizabeth Morley."
—Longmans' Magazine.

Let Hell be blotted out to-day, and there is material enough in any saloon keeper and a barrel of whiskey to start another one.—Yale Record.

The Bostonians never speak of money as "rocks." They refer to it as "pre[illegible]"—[illegible]

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.
Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box [illegible], or left at Willett's shoe store, No. [illegible] Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence [illegible] E. Front street, corner Elm street. [illegible]

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROV
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.
OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.
Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Office cor. Front St. and Park Ave.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security. [illegible]

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
[illegible] OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 21 Somerset St. [illegible]

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
20 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J. [illegible]

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. [illegible] East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to. [illegible]

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed. [illegible]

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.
TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.
Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.
[illegible]es of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery, Notary Public. Offices corner of Park avenue and Second street.—[illegible]

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box [illegible], Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES H. THIERS,
Dentist,
[illegible] Somerset street. A new local anaesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.—[illegible]

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
[Successor to T. J. Carey.]
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—[illegible] W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box [illegible]. [illegible]oving a specialty.

NOTICE. June 1, [illegible]
Estate of Sarah Doane, deceased.
Pursuant to the order of George T. Parrot, Surrogate of the county of Union, this day made, on application of the undersigned administrator of said deceased, notice is hereby given to the creditors of said deceased to exhibit to the subscriber under oath or affirmation their claims and demands against the estate of said deceased within nine months from this date, or they will be forever barred from prosecuting or recovering the same against the subscriber.
JOHN H. DOANE,
Administrator.
11 25 30

TWENTY
Yeas experiencein thebusiness.
SECOND STREET, 2 doors above Peacestree
Mr. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Quarters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Liver and Boarding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No. 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
[illegible] Piping, Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning,
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street,
TELEPHONE CALL, 6. 11 11-M

Estey
Pianos
Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Installments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? [illegible] MUNN & CO., [illegible]

PARTICULAR MENTION.

From The Press of January 30.

John Kirkner is so much improved that his recovery is now assured.

Miss Hannah Thorn of Second place is slowly recovering from an attack of pneumonia.

Freeholder John H. Tier returned last evening from a visit among friends in Nyack.

Nellie, youngest daughter of William M. Montfort of Somerset street, is ill with the grip.

Joseph E. Morse of Franklin place is detained at home with a severe attack of the grip.

Wickam Beekman of West Eighth street is confined to the house with a severe attack of the grip.

Mrs. E. H. Chadburn is seriously ill, with a complication of diseases, at her home in Netherwood.

Mrs. Charles Lefler, who has been suffering with a severe cold, is slowly improving at her home on LaGrande avenue

Miss Lily B. Livingston of 147 Somerset street, who has been very ill with bronchitis, is gradually recovering her health

The friends of William Greenough will be glad to know that he is able to be out again after a severe attack of pneumonia.

Miss McIlravy of Brooklyn, who has been visiting Miss Eda Beekman of West Eighth street, has returned to her home.

Mrs. Fred August has returned home after spending two weeks with her mother, Mrs. Duffley, 74 East Fourth street.

S. J. Casey and family of West Seventh street are about to leave their Plainfield home for one in New York city, for the rest of the Winter.

The many friends of Mrs. George P. Mellick of LaGrande avenue are rejoicing over her recovery. She will return to her home next Saturday.

E. A. Gross has returned from Cincinnati, where he was on a business trip. His train was detained four hours on account of a snowstorm.

C. Henry Tower of Brooklyn is the guest of Miss Katheryn E. Fisher, at the home of her mother, Mrs. E. C. Fisher, 206 West Fourth street.

The many friends of John W. Kirkner will be glad to know he has passed the crisis safely, and is slowly improving, although not yet out of danger.

J. F. Townsend, son of J. E. Townsend of Craig place, returned Saturday night from an extended trip with an opera company. He is connected with the orchestra.

Jacob Sperling, a valued employe of the Scott Printing Machine Works, has returned home for a short time, after several months absence erecting printing presses.

F. L. Cobb and family of Orchard place have rented the new house on Somerset street, just completed and owned by Peter Emmons, into which they will move Feb. 1.

Mrs. E. C. Fisher, who was taken ill in Asbury Park last Summer, is slowly regaining her health, under the care of her two faithful daughters, Miss Fisher and Miss Katheryn Fisher.

Joseph Shultise and family, who recently removed from North Plainfield to New Brunswick, have moved back again, and Mr. Shultise has again connected himself with Edward Love's wall-paper manufactory.

George E. Terry, son of Noah Terry, who has been suffering at his home on Cushing road, Netherwood, for the past three weeks, with muscular rheumatism, is now able to be about with the aid of crutches.

Mrs. Wilbur of East Third street, who has just returned from Astoria, will be compelled to leave Plainfield again on account of her health. Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur will leave Saturday for the Catskills, where Mrs. Wilbur will remain, Mr. Wilbur returning Monday.

Ed. Ericsen, son of Jeppe Ericsen, station agent at Netherwood, who sailed on the steamship Iroquois of the Clyde Line, Friday, for Jacksonville, Fla., is expected to arrive at his destination today. Mr. Ericsen was accompanied by his friend James Field of Fanwood.

Councilman and Mrs. George H Frost will sail by steamship Paris next Wednesday, to spend February and March at the Winter resorts Eastbourne and Hastings, on the south coast of England, after which some time will be spent in London.

E. W. Rice, who is confined in a retreat in Philadelphia, is daily growing worse. His brother Clarence returned last evening from a visit to him, and says that while there was an improvement in his condition for the better a short time ago, he has since had a decline and that he now is in a critical condition.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin O. Bowers of Franklin place entertained the whist club of which they are members, last evening The hours passed very pleasantly with whist, after which refreshments were served. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Bayson, Mr. and Mrs. Wilcox, Mr. and Mrs. Green, Mr. and Mrs. L. Rose, and Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Johnson.

The Monday Afternoon Club met Monday afternoon in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church. The society will give an entertainment in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church February 4. The programme will be readings from "Faust" by George Riddle accompanied by Frank Taft on the organ. Complimentary tickets have been issued to all the members.

Miss Ada Nash is suffering with the whooping-cough.

John J. Kenney's infant son is ill with a severe cold and malaria.

Frank Vail of Franklin place is confined to the house with grip.

The engagement of Miss Kate Mullin to George Hughes is announced.

Miss Grace Irwin of Putnam avenue has gone to Brooklyn to visit friends.

Walter Serrell of Plainfield avenue is rapidly recovering from the grip.

Mrs. Johnston of East Fifth street is confined to her home with the grip.

Earl Truell of Nebraska is visiting his uncle, George Truell of Central avenue

J. B. Platt of Waynewood place has been a sufferer from the grip for several days.

Miss Euphemia Johnston of East Fifth street has entirely recovered from the grip.

Miss Reba Tinsman of Trenton is the guest of the Misses Livezy of Park avenue.

Mrs. Curtis of West Eighth street has just recovered from a severe attack of the grip.

Arthur E. Crane of Carleton avenue has just returned from a trip among the West Indies.

Letter-carrier J. W. A. Bauersachs is still too ill to attend to his duties at the postoffice.

J. E. Townsend, of the Somerset street marble works, is out after four weeks from the grip.

Wm. DeLong of Sandford avenue, who has been detained at his home by grip, is slowly recovering.

George Snediker of Grove street has added his bass voice to the choir of the First Baptist Church.

Miss Cora Laire of East Fifth street, who has been seriously ill, is gradually regaining her strength.

Miss Charlotte Messersmith of Washington street is able to be out again after a severe attack of the grip.

J. Winthrop Travell, principal of the High School, is out again after suffering with an attack of the grip.

Albert Runyon of Mountain avenue, bookkeeper at Boice, Runyon & Co.'s coal office, is ill with the grip.

Seymour G. Smith of Central avenue has returned to his home after spending several days in Hartwick, N Y.

Miss Irine Shepherd, who has been visiting her friend, Miss Arline Crane, has returned to her home in Brooklyn.

Irving Clark of East Ninth street is able to attend school again after being confined to his home with the grip.

Ralph Campbell of Netherwood avenue is home from New York University for a few days, having completed his examinations.

The death of Mrs. Maria Brookes occurred yesterday at the home of her grandson, G. N. Hartley, 73 Rockview avenue.

Wm. Rockwell, Jr., who has been traveling extensively, is stopping at the home of his father, Wm. Rockwell, East Front street.

Miss Sadie D. Grant has returned to her home in Buffalo after a six-weeks visit with her parents, Capt. and Mrs. Geo. W. Grant.

Clifford Brady, while bowling at the Crescent alleys, received a very painful wound by crushing his finger between two of the balls.

David Curtis of West Front street is another victim of the grip, but he pluckily sticks to his post as clerk in J. B. Guttridge's store in Netherwood.

James Caufield and family of Grove street have moved into the new house recently built by him, corner Johnston avenue and East George street.

An attack of the grip which was supposed to be all that ailed the little son of Adam Fritz of Somerset street, has now developed into diphtheria.

Mrs. Judson of Paris, Ill., accompanied by her daughter Miss Jean, are guests at the home of ex-Mayor John H. VanWinkle of Duer street.

Miss Bertha LaRue, of the Third Class of the High School, is not able to attend to her studies, being confined to her home on West Fourth street by illness.

Miss Fanny J. Crosby, the well-known hymn writer, will speak and sing at the Y. M. C. A. meeting to be held in the new Assembly Hall next Sunday afternoon at 4:15.

Anthony Armstrong, who so seriously cut his foot with an axe a fortnight ago, is rapidly recovering the use of his foot under the careful treatment of Dr. Hallock, at his home on South avenue.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Salkeld of Norwood avenue Sunday. The neighborhood as well as the family is immensely proud of the boy and feels that the increase in the population was the means of the restoration of free delivery to the avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wyckoff of North avenue, Netherwood, gave a sociable last evening. Dancing was enjoyed, to Frasse's music, and the following guests participated: Mr. and Mrs. Reigal, Mr. and Mrs. King, Mr. and Mrs. J. Heckard, Misses Storey, Glynn, Libbie Reigal, Tena Undal, Carrie Undal, May Shultz, D. Hucker, Vic McCord, E. Brown. Messrs. E. Randall of Jersey City, J. Barber, Clifton J. King and O. Gunther.

Hands Off.

Why try to press back a side ache with your hand, as so many do, when an will not only relieve the pain but prevent its return. The best remedy known for weak back, strains, sprains, lameness and all local pains.

Allcock's Porous Plaster

Bear in Mind—Not one of the host of counterfeits and imitations is as good as the genuine.

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills.

A safe and sure remedy for diseases arising from impurity of the blood.

UNCLE PETER NOT SO RICH.

His Estate Valued at Not Over $30,000—Terms of His Will and Codicil.

Much surprise will be felt by the friends of the late Uncle Peter Wooden to learn that his estate will invoice only from $25,000 to $30,000.

The bequests of his will which was executed September 3, 1888, were as follows:

To wife Margaret the home situate on Somerset street, with all its belongings and surroundings, of whatsoever kind, together with the sum of $2 000 in cash.

To Seventh Day Baptist Church of Plainfield and the Seventh Day Baptist Church of Piscataway, located in the village of New Market, each $2,000, to be invested in such manner as deemed best, the income only to be used for church purposes.

To the children of testator's niece Sally Allen, $100 each, the child or children of any deceased child of before mentioned Sally Allen to receive parents share.

To Mary Lize and George Wooden, children of Nathan Wooden of Newark, each $500.

To niece Mary Ann Boice, wife of John Boice of Newark $800.

To niece Susan Bonney $600

"To Emma Drake widow of George Wooden, deceased, the sum of $25, having given her during lifetime sums which I consider sufficient."

"For nephew Albert Wooden, no provision having already given him in lifetime sufficient sums."

To Alfred University of Alfred Centre, N. Y. $500.

Rest, residue and remainder, should any there be, to be divided equally between the children of niece Sally Allen aforesaid, provided said residue does not exceed $2,000, in which case the excess is given to Alfred University above mentioned.

All real and personal estate of whatever kind or wheresoever situate, to go to executors in trust, with power to dispose of same upon such terms and in such manner as to them seems meet and in accord with the above provisions.

The executors were George H. Babcock and William M. Stillman and the will was witnessed by Joseph A. Hubbard and J. D. Spicer.

A codicil was added April 1, 1890, changing bequest to wife Margaret deceased, that it shall sink into and become part of aforesaid residue.

The codicil was witnessed by William A. Coddington and J. Oakley Nodyne.

Gab of Bear and Haunch of Moose.

W. K. McClure and Randolph M. Stelle are still telling of the glories of the last Megantic Club dinner which they attended in Boston. Mac is always greeted with particular warmth at these gatherings because he never misses one of them, in spite of the distance he has to travel. The banquet this year was held in Hotel Vendome, and the menu was a true sportsman's bill. Besides the dishes it contained a photograph of the elegant assortment of game displayed in front of the club-house after the latest hunt. The songs and speeches filled the next day's issues of the Boston newspapers, and you may be sure that the Plainfielders gave good account of themselves. The Megantic is a great institution, and McClure is its Depew.

Push It Along.

This morning at 9:21 a loaded feed wagon drawn by a balky team belonging to the City Mills blocked the track for a few minutes right near the corner of Front and Somerset streets. Several passengers in the waiting car came out to offer suggestions and some of the crowd put a shoulder to the wheel but finally a fellow driver came up and, setting his pole against the tailboard of the loaded wagon, gave the word to his team and pushed the balky outfit way into East Front street on a run. Several who had offered assistance had to step lively to avoid being stepped on by the horses.

Wreck on the Central.

Eastbound fast freight No. 422, drawn by engine 415 in charge of Engineer Rodenbaugh and Conductor Transue, which is scheduled to pass here at 2:20 a. m., broke in two half a mile west of Bloomsbury, and when the sections came together five cars were derailed and thrown down the bank by the force of the collision. Fortunately no one was hurt and though traffic was delayed for several hours the wreck crew had the track clear at 6 a. m.

A Lawyer's House Burned.

Lawyer Vandeveer's house on Main street, Somerville, was partially burned by fire, Monday evening, and but for the prompt arrival of the fire department the house would have been burnt to the ground. The fire was discovered in the kitchen by passers-by. Mr. Vandeveer is well known in Plainfield, and his friends sympathize in his misfortune.

ON A CHARGE OF FRAUD.

Francis Schoonmaker Arrested in Chicago After Obtaining $2,000 from a Jeweler.

Chicago, Jan. 29—Francis Schoonmaker of Plainfield, N. J., a prominent politician, was arrested today on a charge of obtaining $2,500 from Christopher Strobel of Waterbury, Ct., on false pretenses. Schoonmaker had stumped Western States for the Republican party previous to coming to Chicago. He claims that he is a stockholder in The United Press and one or two other Eastern news associations. He obtained $2,500 from Strobel, who is a jeweler, it is alleged, on the allegation that he had a $3,300 claim against the estate of Job Male, a deceased Plainfield, N. J., millionaire.

Schoonmaker had told the people in the Chicago Beach Hotel of his alleged connection with The United Press, and said he handled the greater part of the cable news received by that organization. Schoonmaker claimed acquaintance with many prominent Eastern newspaper publishers and politicians. He was very well dressed and soon gained the favor of the guests. For the last week he had not been seen in the hotel.

[Schoonmaker's home is at 1163 Putnam avenue. He has been connected with The United Press in New York, and with other newspaper enterprises, having started as a reporter on the New York Times. He has stumped for the Republican party, and is a man of much ability as a writer and speaker. Financial difficulties have beset him, largely because of a serious illness which kept him under the constant treatment of specialists. He did hold a claim against the Male estate, on account of the cloisonne collection in the Library. It is not believed here that he has made any intentional fraudulent attempt.]

SCOTCH PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

The Junior League of the Methodist Church gave a most interesting entertainment, composed of recitations, vocal and instrumental music, tableaux, etc., in the hall, Monday evening. The children all did their parts very well, for which much credit is due to Miss Emma Gibbs, who arranged the entertainment for the little ones.

Rev. J. S. Braker spent Tuesday in Camden attending the funeral of his brother, who died Saturday, Jan. 26, of erysipelas.

John Flannery is confined to his room again with the grip.

Miss Emma Clark of Front street is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Peter Smith of New Market.

Dr. Parks occupied the pulpit of the M. E. Church Sunday, owing to the illness of the pastor, Rev. Mr. Marriot.

Mrs. George A. Clark is convalescent from her recent illness.

The Choral Union will take up the sacred cantata of "Esther" Thursday evening. A full attendance is desired.

Miss Minnie Honnger entertained her cousin, Miss Balsam of New York Sunday.

Mrs. Billings of Bartle avenue is steadily improving under the excellent care of Dr. D. C. Adams of Plainfield, from a severe attack of the grip.

John Marsh has been gathering his ice crop from the lake on his property.

$100 Reward $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonial.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Props. Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, 75c.

Birthday Party of a Gay Old Boy.

Elias Allen, town committeeman of Washingtonville, celebrated the 71st anniversary of his birthday yesterday in a most enjoyable manner. Last night one of the jolliest kind of crowds called on him and Mrs. Allen, and gave him a complete surprise.

When the people arrived Mr. Allen met them at the door, exclaiming "School must be out!"

The evening was pleasantly passed in dancing, singing, and telling stories of the good old days. Music was furnished by Harry Spencer, guitar, and Herbert Schutt banjo.

During the evening Mr. Allen was presented with a handsome sealskin cap, and Mrs. Allen with a fine knitted hood. Col. E. Newton Spencer made the presentations on behalf of the company.

Those present were: Mr and Mrs W C Smith, Miss Sadie Smith, Harry Baglin, Mr and Mrs Wm Shotwell, Mrs Summers, Miss Maggie Summers, Mr and Mrs W A Schutt, Miss Nellie Schutt, Louis and Herbert Schutt, Mr and Mrs Allan Schutt, Mr and Mrs R M Fountain, Mr and Mrs H Newton Spencer, Mr and Mrs Stephen Beeching, Mr and Mrs Chas Bloom, Harry Spencer, Mr and Mrs J. L. Gifford, Miss Carrie Spencer; Mr and Mrs Geo Demler, Jr, Mr and Mrs Stephen Beeching, Sr, Mrs Mary Spencer.

After all had partaken of the generous supply of good things provided, the merry party left for home, much pleased with the affair.

Quick Run of a Grocery Trotter.

Yesterday noon one of Neuman's delivery horses, exhilarated no doubt by the clear cold air and the sudden sunburst, started to run from Ninth street to the store. Nearing the corner of Sixth street and Watchung avenue the wagon struck a pole and one of the hind wheels rolled off.

A few bars of soap and some sugar were spilled during this rapid transit, but no one was hurt and the damage was nominal, the wagon receiving but slight injuries aside from the loss of the wheel.

—A match is to be bowled next week Thursday between M. Sutphen's and the Hope Chapel teams, on the Hope alleys.

Chronic Diarrhœa

is cured by the use of our Pills, specially prepared and sold in yellow wrappers. Make sure of this. If they don't, write us fully, and we'll send a special pill that will, at the same price. This is some trouble, but

Dr. Deane's
Dyspepsia Pills

are prepared to cure. Yellow wrappers when bowels are loose, white when constipated. [illegible] Send to us for a free sample.

DR. J. A. DEANE CO.,
Kingston, New York.

What is

CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

Dr. G. C. Osgood,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

Dr. J. F. Kincheloe,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

United Hospital and Dispensary,
Boston, Mass.
Allen C. Smith, Pres.,

The Centaur Company, 77 Murray Street, New York City.

E. P. THORN,

No. 125 Park Avenue,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,

For Family and Medicinal Use,

A SPECIALTY.

3-26-y

AT YOUR OWN PRICE.

Odds, Ends and Remnants.

Amos H. Van Horn, L't'd,

73 Market St., near Plane St.

We find, after stock taking, several styles of Bedroom Suits, Parlor Suits and different patterns of Carpets that we do not intend to keep any more, and we will close them out at nearly your own price.

Parlor suits........$10
Bedroom suits........$10
Brussels carpet, per yard........50cts
Extra super ingrain carpet, per yard........50cts
Cotton chain ingrain carpet, per yard........25cts
Good bed lounges........$7
Parlor stoves........at your own price.

Note the name Amos before entering the store.

PORTLAND RANGES—The leading range in the city, and we will wager $25 that that there is more sold of that range than any other in the city. Why? Simply because it is the cheapest. Cheapest because it is the best; good baker, good draught and several improvements connected with it make it the most complete range manufactured. Easy terms.

STORING FURNITURE—At 88, 90 and 92 Bank st. You will find the largest and most complete storage building in the State. All locked rooms at reasonable rates. Furniture packed and moved with vans in city or county at moderate charges.

Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,
73 Market Street, nearest Plane street, Newark, N. J.

Quick Action

Yes, and a good hit.

Randolph's Beef Iron and Wine

Acts Quickly,
Has Made a Great Hit,
A true tonic.
Pint bottles 50c For sale only by

L. W. RANDOPH,

Prescription Druggist,

143 West Front st., Plainfield, N. J.

[Copyright by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

CHAPTER I.

THE RETURN OF THE TRANSGRESSOR.

The telegraph operator came out of his office with a sealed envelope in his hand. He had just received a message; and that didn't happen every day, in Williston. The event was of sufficient importance to be noted by the men who were standing on Capt. Henry Thompson's steps. Capt. Thompson was the village undertaker, and his shop was directly opposite the telegraph office. There was languid expression of baseless speculation regarding the telegram, and it developed into active interest when the operator began to walk across the street staight toward the little group.

He gave the telegram to Samuel Ames, one of the old residents of the town, a man much respected for his excellent qualities, and pitied for his misfortunes which had been many. Mr. Ames took the message with a hand that trembled a little. He looked carefully at the envelope, and then anxiously at the man who had given it to him. The telegrapher averted his eyes. This pantomime, which would have been incomprehensible to a stranger, meant much to those who saw it. News in Williston is mostly bad news. The town is so far out of the way that good news, traveling much slower than the other kind, rarely reaches it in time. A telegram is a thing to be afraid of. Williston women, who had sons in the city, had been known to faint at the sight of such an envelope as that which Samuel Ames held. Therefore the old telegraphers had formed the habit of writing "good news" in big letters over the address when the contents was not very distressing. Those words were what Mr. Ames' eyes had sought and had not found.

"Perhaps it is all for the best," said the telegrapher. "It's about Ned."

Mr. Ames tore the envelope open, and laboriously read its contents. Then he looked straight ahead of him for thirty seconds; and perhaps he saw the weather-beaten building on the other side of the street, but more likely it was a little boy's face that grew, and changed, and vanished.

"Ned's coming home," he said, handing the telegram to Capt. Thompson. "You'll do what's necessary, Henry. I must go and break the news to mother."

Capt. Thompson bowed gravely. Not a word more was spoken, but two of the men quietly took their places beside Mr. Ames, and walked with him up the street toward his house.

When the three were beyond hearing, the telegrapher said:

"Ned Ames is coming home at last, and he couldn't do better than come as he does."

There was no dissenting voice. It was the opinion of all present that Ned Ames was better dead than alive.

It must be admitted that the young man had done much to justify this condemnation. His boyhood had been diligently employed in getting out of one scape into another. At twenty he was a drunkard; a year later he narrowly escaped the penitentiary. Then he fled from the town, and for five years, up to the time when this story opens, his whereabouts had been unknown in Williston. Rumor had located him in a dozen prisons, and had accused him of every crime in the calendar. No one hoped to hear any good of him except his mother, a woman beautiful in spirit whose children should have been incapable of evil.

"Just what did the telegram say, Henry?" asked one of those who had witnessed the scene which has been described.

"He died in Boston, of diphtheria," responded the undertaker. "His brother Frank was with him at the last."

"How'd Frank find him?"

"The telegram doesn't say. The body will be here on the boat to-morrow. Frank is coming with it."

Frank Ames was Ned's elder brother. He lived in Boston, and was so prosperous that it was even reported that he had sent money home. Certainly he spent it lavishly when he visited Williston in the summer. His parents were proud of him, but they loved Ned's degraded memory better than the living presence of the other. Thus you may know true love; that it is thrown away.

Ned's funeral was very impressive. There were a hundred reasons why it must be so. First, there was the mystery which had surrounded the young man. Would any record of his five years' wandering come to light beside his coffin? Then there was great curiosity to hear what the minister, Rev. Eliot Warren, would say. To speak at the funeral of such a man as Ned Ames is always difficult. If good alone could be spoken of the dead there would not be much to say in this case. But beyond these mere generalities was a special difficulty far deeper, far more painful. Ned Ames' name had been connected with a sorrow which had broken Eliot Warren's heart and had made his hair as white as snow in the early autumn of his life.

That was the other Williston mystery. What had become of Ned Ames? What had become of Charlotte Warren? One of those questions had been answered, at least, in part. Nobody expected an answer to the other. There was never a disappearance more complete than Charlotte Warren's. A pretty girl who "didn't mean any harm," who "would have been quiet enough if her mother had lived to look after her;" those were the comments which Charlotte's conduct had excited during her last few years at home. And so kindly was the feeling behind the words, that when the secret came out, when the girl's absence from home could no longer be explained by any supposition that did not blast her name, there was no one who had the heart to claim a prophecy fulfilled.

Gossip had wearied itself with that mystery. The girl was not dead. She had written to her father, and had begged him to forget her. He had exhausted his resources in the endeavor to find her, and had failed. Upon whom should the blame fall? At first there was mention of young Dr. Robert Maxwell. He had seemed to be smitten with the girl, and had left town rather suddenly about the time of her disappearance. But he had returned, and had cleared himself of suspicion. His temporary absence had been easily explained. Though Charlotte had left behind her what might be called a confession, it was so vague as to leave even the sin itself in doubt. There were some of the townspeople who stoutly maintained that the girl had run away to go upon the stage. But when all the evidence had been discussed a thousand times, Williston rendered a verdict that Ned Ames knew something about it. Charlotte had smiled upon him in spite of his disgrace; and her disappearance succeeded his flight by less than two months.

In view of these facts, an address by Rev. Eliot Warren beside the coffin of Ned Ames should be worth hearing. Would his plea for the forgiveness of the sinner ring hollow and false? Would he dare to openly condemn, when he knew that everyone within sound of his voice would be thinking of his daughter?

The Ames house was crowded, though it was so large as to hold nearly half the population of the town. The choirs of the orthodox and Unitarian churches, united for this most exceptional occasion, were stationed in the hall. Mr. Warren had not come. A whisper ran about that he had been unable, at the last moment, to make up his mind to it. This most interesting rumor was set at rest presently by the news that he was coming through the yard. With him were his younger daughter, Anna, and Dr. Maxwell. The recent announcement of the engagement of these two had been received in such a way as to prove that the old suspicions really had been laid at rest.

Samuel Ames stopped Dr. Maxwell in the hall, while the pastor, with his daughter, entered the parlor.

"Mother hopes you've thought better about that," said the old man, speaking of his wife by the usual endearing term. "I hope you'll let her see him, if you think he—he wouldn't be too much changed."

His tone was indescribably pathetic, conveying another sorrow than his own. His eyes had that peculiar appearance of excessive dryness noticeable in New England people when they mourn, as if the race had seen so much trouble that generations long since gone, where there is no such thing, had used up all its stock of tears.

"I can't permit it," said the young doctor, firmly. "You must think of the great danger it would involve. Although the coffin is metal-lined, I advised you against a public funeral. I'm sorry to grieve Mrs. Ames, but you know I told her all about this yesterday morning when your son's body was brought here."

"Couldn't it be done at the cemetery where there'll be only us?" pleaded the old man. "We don't care about the risk at our age."

"Don't permit Mrs. Ames to go to the cemetery," rejoined Dr. Maxwell, earnestly. "It's as much as her life is worth on such a day as this. There's a terrible wind, and the light snow is blowing in clouds. She must not—"

"But she will," responded Ames. "I can't prevent her. She will stand by her son's grave to-day. It is useless to protest. Hush! The service is about to begin."

The voice of the pastor was heard, and all other sounds ceased.

"We commend to Thee, O Lord, the body of Thy servant, that, being dead unto the world, he may live unto Thee; and whatsoever sin he may have committed through the frailty of his mortal nature, do Thou in Thy merciful loving kindness blot out forever."

His voice trembled with the fervency of his supplication. It was a prayer for the forgiveness of sin; and it was followed by an address which proved to every one who heard it that the spirit of perfect forgiveness had descended from on high to dwell in the heart of the speaker.

If there had been no more to mark the day, surely the words of that good man would have made it memorable in Williston. There was music—which had been the only influence that had ever seemed to turn Ned Ames' soul toward higher purposes — and the best promises of Scripture; a last prayer, and then the coffin was borne out to the hearse. Mrs. Ames followed it, leaning upon her husband's arm and her son's. Frank Ames—a tall, dark and rather handsome man, with a deeply furrowed brow—seemed to be much moved. Indeed, he showed more grief than either of his parents.

Few followed the hearse to the cemetery. It was a bitter day. Dr. Maxwell openly advised that only those men should go whose presence was absolutely necessary. As he was not one of these, he emphasized his own advice by refraining from the ordeal. He insisted upon taking Anna Warren to her home, and he exhausted much persuasion upon her father, who was obdurate and would brave the weather.

The grave had been dug through the soil which the cold had turned to stone. Into this "narrow house" the coffin was lowered, though Mrs. Ames had fallen upon her knees at the snow to beg for a last look in her son's face. Samuel Ames would have yielded, violating a direct promise which he had given to Dr. Maxwell, but Frank, though terribly excited by this painful scene, preserved his coolness sufficiently to control the course of events, until a new and surprising influence changed all.

A stranger had been observed among the little party in the cemetery. He was a man of middle age, plainly dressed, and he seemed to know no one except a boy named Horace Riddle, with whom he stood apart. The boy came of one of the poorest families in the town and was known as a ne'er-do-well, which facts made his companion of less interest. No one gave him more than a passing glance.

But just as the coffin touched the bottom of the grave this man stepped forward.

"I sincerely ask your pardon," he said, "for interfering in a matter with which I have no right to concern myself; but if it is at all practicable, I would advise doing as this good lady requests."

There was that in his tone which excited a dreadful curiosity. It was so evident that he held something in reserve.

"Why?" cried a half dozen men at once.

"Because," said the stranger, "this boy informs me that he saw Edward Ames alive in this town yesterday."

The boy instantly spoke up and confirmed this extraordinary statement.

It is needless to describe the consternation which these words caused. Men lost control of themselves. The coffin was rudely dragged out of the grave. Rev. Mr. Warren and Frank Ames pleaded in vain for reasonable investigation. Everybody else counseled the immediate opening of the coffin. And the strangest part of the whole situation was that Horace Riddle's word was not worth a penny in the town. If he had told his story without the backing of this mysterious stranger, nobody would have listened.

Seeing that nothing could be done to quell this excitement, and that Mrs. Ames' agitation was rapidly approaching the point where human nature would endure no more, the pastor gave his sanction to the opening of the coffin, he himself assisting.

The outer wooden lid was easily removed. There was a loud cry from those who were bending over the coffin. The metal sheath was revealed, and a glance showed that it had been cut and wrenched.

"We shall find no body here!" cried one of the men.

At the same moment three others lifted the metal lid which was scarcely fastened at all.

"Yes! There's a body here. He's here, poor fellow!" exclaimed he who had spoken before.

The body was covered with an ordinary white sheet. It was gently withdrawn, revealing the face of one who, through the frailty of her mortal nature, had transgressed, but had come home at last—the face of Charlotte Warren.

CHAPTER II.

DR. MAXWELL GOES TO INVESTIGATE.

Dr. Robert Maxwell stood before the big fireplace in Rev. Mr. Warren's parlor. He had just returned with Anna from the funeral of Ned Ames. The girl had gone to give instructions about supper, with special reference to the tastes of her future lord and master who was to share that meal with herself and her father. When she reentered the parlor, Maxwell was grieved to observe that there were tears in her eyes. Indeed she had not ceased to weep since she had set foot in the Ames house.

"You should not let the memory of your sister's error prey upon you in this way," said Maxwell. "You must calm yourself before your father comes, for he will have all that he can bear without the sight of your grief."

"I will not let him see it," replied the girl; "but all the old sorrow has come back to-day. If we could only find her!"

"That is impossible now."

"You believe that she is dead?"

"Yes; and I could almost say I hope so."

"That is heartless! And you used to be such good friends. Why, you were much more fond of her than of me!"

"I looked upon you as a little girl in those days. You are right in saying I was fond of Charlotte. I always admired her, and I would believe no evil of her until doubt was impossible. You must not think me heartless because of what I said. Life must be worthless for her. Suppose we did find her; suppose, even, that she came back—"

"I would welcome her, and be a sister to her just as in the old days!" cried the girl, and the words came from her heart.

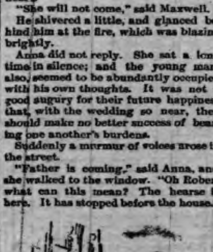
"She will not come," said Maxwell.

He shivered a little, and glanced behind him at the fire, which was blazing brightly.

Anna did not reply. She sat a long time in silence; and the young man, also, seemed to be abundantly occupied with his own thoughts. It was not a good augury for their future happiness that, with the wedding so near, they should make no better success of bearing one another's burdens.

Suddenly a murmur of voices arose in the street.

"Father is coming," said Anna, and she walked to the window. "Oh Robert! what can this mean? The hearse is here. It has stopped before the house."



"OH, ROBERT! WHAT CAN THIS MEAN?"

Maxwell reached her side with a bound. His face paled at the sight. There were a hundred people in the street, surrounding the black-draped vehicle.

Mr. Warren was already at the door.

"Anna, my child!" he cried, "have you heard?"

She could not speak. What news the father had to tell, the reader already knows. He broke the direct shock of it as best he might, and the girl heard the astounding story without losing her self-command. At the first sight of her father's agonized face, she had resolved with all the firmness of her strong nature that she would not yield to any horror, for he would need her help.

The coffin was borne into the house. Anna saw her dead sister for a single moment. Then she led her father away, until with her love, and the strength that came in answer to their mutual prayers, he was himself again.

An hour later, the pastor and his daughter, with Maxwell and Frank Ames, sat in Mr. Warren's study and spoke of the awful mystery with reasonable calmness.

"I have sent for Mr. Harris," said Maxwell, naming a deputy sheriff who was the only officer of the law residing in Williston.

"There is no doubt, then," murmured the clergyman, "that my poor child died a violent death."

"None whatever," responded Maxwell. "Let me assure you, for what little consolation is possible, that her death was painless. There is an incised wound in the head, upon the left side of the head, about an inch behind the ear. She was struck down with a weapon, the nature of which I cannot determine further than to say that it was pointed and really sharp. It penetrated the skull and undoubtedly caused instant unconsciousness, and speedy death. That I know from other indications than the wound itself. I have known greater injuries not to kill, but the effect of shock in such cases varies greatly with different individuals."

Mr. Warren pressed his hand upon his forehead.

"I trust," he said, "that the feelings of my heart at this moment are not simply revengeful, but I would not be a human creature if I did not desire to see justice done upon the murderer of my child."

"We all desire that," said Ames. "Everything possible must be done, and done at once."

"Frank," said Maxwell, "were you with your brother when he died?"

"I was not. The truth must be told now, of course. I intended to deceive my parents in this matter, because I thought that they would suffer less if they believed that Ned had some one who knew and loved him by his side at the last. The fact is that I received a note by post from him which said: 'Come to see me at once if you care to see me at all. I am dying, and I want to say something to you for father and mother. If you don't come, or if you come too late, beg them to forgive me.'

"The note was wrongly addressed, and was delayed. The instant I received it I went to the house where he lay sick. He had already been put into his coffin, and it was sealed."

There was an anxious silence after these words.

"I know what you all think," said Ames. "But I can't believe it of Ned."

"Is any other conclusion possible?" demanded Mr. Warren, becoming greatly excited. "I have always suspected him of being the cause of Charlotte's flight. He wearied of her; murdered her, and took this means to hide her body from all eyes. It was a deep and villainous plot."

"There are grave difficulties," said Maxwell. "How was the death certificate obtained?"

"By bribery!" cried the clergyman. "Money will buy anything in cities. A doctor was bribed. It would not have been necessary for him to be privy to the murder. The plot might have been presented to him in various ways—as a fraud upon an insurance company perhaps."

"It is barely possible," Maxwell admitted. "What sort of a house was it in which your brother was supposed to have died?"

"A South Boston tenement house of an unsavory reputation—in short a resort for criminals. However, I found one honest woman in it, and she seems to have been the only one who did anything to help my brother when he was sick. What she said satisfied me. It was she who got the doctor for him; it was she who brought him food. She did not actually see him die, but she was in his room on the evening of the night when he passed away. What was done with his body?—the sealing of it in a metal-lined coffin—was by his request, and he left the money to pay for it. I have the address of the physician who attended him, and who secured the necessary permits."

"Will you give me that address?" said Maxwell.

"What do you mean to do?"

"Some one must go to Boston and investigate that story. For my own part—and I'm sorry to say it—I believe your brother to be the criminal. The plot looks simple. He pretended to die; Charlotte, who was doubtless in Boston, was lured to the house and killed."

"What's that?" cried Anna. "There at the window."

All sprang to their feet at this interruption. Ames was the first to reach the window.

"There is no one here," he said.

"I am sure I saw a man's face," said Anna in a frightened whisper. "It looked like—"

"Edward Ames," said the clergyman, as the girl hesitated.

"Yes; but I must have been mistaken. He was upon my mind, and I imagined that I saw him. Yet I am sure that some one was there. Oh, I am so frightened! This has been such a dreadful day!"

She sobbed hysterically. The three men stood with blanched faces.

"I see nothing impossible in it," said Mr. Warren. "Edward Ames was seen in Williston by Horace Riddle."

"Let me go out under the window," said Maxwell. "There may be tracks in the snow."

He turned toward the door; and then his impatience overcame him. He rushed to the window, flung it open and leaped out.

"A man has been here!" he cried. "These footprints in the light snow have been made recently. I can see nothing of him."

He climbed back into the room.

"Anna, dearest," he said, "your strength will bear no more of this. You must get to bed, and Mrs. Norton will sit by you till you go to sleep."

Mrs. Norton was the housekeeper. She was summoned, and, in spite of Anna's protest, she was made to resign herself to rest and the good old woman's care. But before they parted Maxwell bade her good-by, as for a considerable absence; indeed, he could not have spoken more tenderly if they were never to meet again.

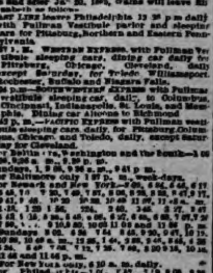
"It is best for me to go to Boston and investigate the case there," said he. "As a physician, I shall be able to judge of the reality of Ned Ames' death, and, knowing both him and Charlotte, I can be of assistance to the Boston police, who will, of course, investigate the case. I shall drive to Holman junction to-night, in the hope of catching the express. I can do it if I start at once."

Anna strove to detain him, until she saw that her father was anxious that he should go. Then she bade him a tender farewell, and the young man went out into the winter night.

Ames remained but a few minutes after Maxwell's departure. The clergyman remained alone in his study. He had thought upon this mystery till his brain would think no more. He wheeled his great study-chair before the open fire and sat there, vainly dreaming that all these sorrows had never come upon him; that the child whose cold form lay in the room above his head was sleeping in her sister's arms that night, as pure as she.

There was a knock at the door. Thinking it was Mrs. Norton, the clergyman said: "Come in," and instantly beheld instead of the white-haired housekeeper the sturdy form of the stranger, at whose word the grave had given up its secret.

"Sit still, Mr. Warren," said he. "Don't be disturbed by my coming now by anything I may say. Who am I? Well, my name is John Mulligan, and I'm a detective from Boston. You'd like to know what I'm doing here, no doubt. I'll tell you: I'm after Eddie Ames. Now I believe him to be in this town."



"HE DON'T NEED TO GO TO BOSTON."

"You know him to be here; that boy told you."

"As for that boy, his story don't help

Continued on Page 8.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan. 20, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 30 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

6.37 P. M. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

8.34 p.m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8 43 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]

For Baltimore only [illegible] week-days.

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

For New York only, 6 10 a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

2 20 p.m. with through Buffet parlor car; Sundays 6 50 a. m.

Cape May, Sea Isle City and Ocean City [illegible] p. m. weekdays.

For Rahway—[illegible]

For New Brunswick—[illegible]

For Woodbridge—[illegible]

For Perth Amboy—[illegible]

For East Millstone—[illegible]

For Trenton—[illegible]

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible]

For Flemington—[illegible]

For Freehold—[illegible] via Monmouth Junction, week-days.

For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—[illegible]

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible] do not stop at Asbury Park on Sundays.

For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—[illegible]

For Boston—[illegible] daily.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton Street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]

S. M. PREVOST, General Manager.

J. R. WOOD, Gen. Pass. Agent.

FOR 20 YEARS

the formula for making Scott's Emulsion has been endorsed by physicians of the whole world. No secret about it. This is one of its strongest endorsements. But the strongest endorsement possible is in the vital strength it gives.

Scott's Emulsion

nourishes. It does more for weak Babies and Growing Children than any other kind of nourishment. It strengthens Weak Mothers and restores health to all suffering from Emaciation and General Debility.

For Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Bronchitis, Weak Lungs, Consumption, Blood Diseases and Loss of Flesh.

Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

ELY'S

Cream Balm

Is quickly absorbed.

Cleanses the Nasal Passages, Allays Pain and Inflammation.

Heals the Sores,

Protects the Membrane from Additional Cold.

Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell

CATARRH

COLD IN HEAD

IT WILL CURE. A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50c. at Druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren st., New York.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street—[illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Newark [illegible]

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Somerville [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Easton [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

5 45 A. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Pottsville, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport and Tamaqua.

7 10 A. M. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge branch.

[illegible] A. M. for Flemington, D. L. & W. R. R., Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.

[illegible] A. M. for Flemington, High Bridge branch, D L & W R R, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Nanticoke, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.

[illegible] way for Easton, connecting at Junction for stations on D. L. & W. R. R.

[illegible] P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Bowling, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Sunbury and Williamsport, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. Buffet parlor car to Mauch Chunk.

[illegible] way for Easton, connecting at High Bridge for stations on High Bridge branch.

[illegible] P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Bethlehem, Bangor, Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Mauch Chunk, Shamokin and Tamaqua. Buffet parlor car to Scranton.

[illegible] P. M. for Flemington.

[illegible] P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading and Harrisburg.

[illegible] P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.

[illegible] A. M. Sunday for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton. [illegible] Sundays for Easton, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Reading and Harrisburg. [illegible] Sundays for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading, Harrisburg, &c. and at Junction for D. L. & W. R. R.

For Atlantic City, [illegible]

Long Branch, Ocean Grove, &c. Leave Plainfield [illegible]

For Perth Amboy, [illegible]

For Freehold, [illegible]

ROYAL BLUE LINE.

Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia, [illegible]

For Trenton [illegible]

For Baltimore and Washington at [illegible]

For Chattanooga, New Orleans and all points south with through vestibule sleeper, via Shenandoah Valley Route at 5 24 p m. Sundays [illegible]

For Buffalo, Chicago and all points west, week-days at [illegible]

Leave Philadelphia, Reading terminal, [illegible]

From 24th and Chestnut—[illegible]

Leave Trenton, Warren and Tucker sts., [illegible]

Plainfield passengers by trains marked change cars at Bound Brook.

Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket agent at the station.

J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Sup't.

H. P. BALDWIN, Gen. Pass. Agt.

A. WOLFF,

Manufacturer of

CIGARS,

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed [illegible] Front street, to [illegible] [illegible] door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

MONEY MAKING.

The Quickest Way to Pile Up Wealth In This Business Era.

The reason of the modern difference in favor of business as an instrument of money making is not far to seek. It is the enormous growth in the scale of everything in which business can be done. The enterprise of a merchant, of a contractor, of a mine dealer, even of a shopkeeper, may now cover the whole world and may be carried on, moreover, mainly upon credit. It may be doubted whether, except in those transactions which are called "financial," and which really mean the taking of heavy bribes for pecuniary support, any one transaction ever yields quite as much as the same transactions would have yielded 60 years ago; whether, for example, any cargo ever produces ton for ton an equal margin of profit, or whether any customer in a shop pays quite so heavy a percentage on the goods he buys.

It is the magnitude and multiplication of cargoes which yield fortunes, the thousands instead of hundreds of customers whom clever dealers may induce to spend money. The new system of rapid turnover is, of course, precisely the same thing—the dealer selling four times what he did and using only the same capital. This advantage of scale is almost entirely wanting to the professional man, for the obvious reason that he is hampered by limitations of time.

There are only 600 minutes in a hard worked day, and the seeker after income, be he as able as he may or as decided or as rapid, must give some of those minutes to each client or patient or contractor with a difficulty to meet. If he does not, he loses custom, and with custom income rapidly slips away. There are no doubt favorite lawyers, doctors and even engineers whose advice is sought at great expense, when equally good advice is procurable much cheaper, but still the favorites must give their advice and lose their days in doing it, or they will speedily be deserted.

Nothing can alter this first law, while the exaggeration of professional fees is kept down in the case of solicitors by positive statute, in that of doctors by an etiquette difficult to define or explain—there seems to be no reason why a great physician should not charge according to skill—and in that of barristers and engineers, by a competition, which, though never acknowledged, is none the less real and effective. We can not see what is to alter this condition of affairs, and do not believe that, however civilization may develop itself, professional skill will ever again be the quickest road to large accumulations.—London Spectator.

MME. ALBANI.

An Incident In Which Patti Answered a Remark About Her.

To a writer in The Woman at Home Mme. Albani has been giving some details of her life. "My voice is a certain amount of care to me," she said. "You think that it always sounds fresh and clear?" Well, I watch over it and never allow it to become tired if I can help it. On the days I am engaged to sing at the opera I do not talk above a whisper for many hours beforehand, besides which I believe in careful diet. Tea I forbid myself. Bordeaux I find excellent. And sometimes, between the acts of an opera, I take, through a straw, a cup of bouillon made in the French way, which I find very restorative."

Mme. Albani could sing any tune sung to her long before she could speak. "My sister," she added, "will tell you that she distinctly remembers my first soprano note—a real note, long sustained. We were playing together in our cot in the early morning before the household were astir, and, baby though she, too, was, she has not forgotten the effect made upon her. At 8 years old I actually entered the musical profession. Ah, do not laugh! It is true. I made a little 'tournee' of some months' duration and was much petted and spoiled wherever I went. Then a few years later I was sent to be educated at a convent and engaged to take the soprano solo at a mass."

There is a good—and a true—story of how one day Adelina Patti, when walking down Regent street one morning with her first husband, the Marquis de Caux, stopped at the windows of the stereoscopic company. There were shown, side by side, photographs of herself and the debutante, Mlle. Emma Albani. Patti stood close to the window and was unnoticed by a young man lounging in the background. "Look," he exclaimed in a loud and jubilant voice, "at that photograph of Albani. She's the new prima donna, and everybody is raving over her. Patti will be nowhere very soon. That's one thing certain!" And Patti, turning round suddenly upon the speaker, made him a swift little courtesy. "Thank you, sir," she exclaimed, her eyes sparkling with mischief. The man was rooted to the spot with amazement. Patti stopped just an instant to enjoy the effect she had created and then tripped off laughing through the crowd on her way homeward.

Appetizers.

Pickled olives are a tonic for the nerves, as is celery. While the latter is an excellent digester and should be supplied in crisp, tender pieces to those whose digestion is faulty, yet everywhere it is an excellent appetizer. Among other healthful appetizers water cresses are in the very front rank. All greens are antiscorbutic, but water cresses are especially valuable for this season.—New York Dispatch.

A genius has arrived at the conclusion that a gold coin passes from one to another 2,000,000,000 times before the stamp or impression upon it becomes obliterated by friction.

The battle of Barnet was one of the most decisive ever fought. It was in 1471 and closed the age of baron rule in England.

Pascagoula, the name of a Mississippi river, means the "Bread Nation."

LOVE AND PROPOSALS.

How Men and Women Act In This Interesting Juncture.

There is a clever statistician who could teach a thing or two to the novelist. This statistician has attempted to classify the action and methods of proposals, and as a result has presented tabulated figures extremely interesting to psychologists. Out of 100 cases 86 gentlemen take lady in arms, 67 gentlemen kiss lady on lips, four gentlemen kiss lady on cheek, three gentlemen show very good taste by kissing lady on eyes, and two gentlemen kiss lady on hand. It is to be presumed these two out of 100 are the timid, diffident kind, though it is possible that they might be of the quietly sentimental nature. One gentleman kisses lady on nose. It must be added that the statistician is careful to insert the saving clause of "by mistake."

There is even a record of a man kissing a lady on edge of shawl, but, thank goodness, there is only one in 100, and the chances are that this man is peculiar.

Seventy-two hold lady's hand, 17 hold it very tightly, 14 have lumps in their throats, and nine exclaim aloud, "Thank God!" Only seven out of 100 declare themselves to be deliriously happy, and five are too full for utterance. Three out of 100 stand on one foot when they make proposal, and two go down on one knee, while nine make a formal prelude—something like the slow music at the play, we suppose, when the villain appeals to heaven to witness the consuming flame of his affection for the heart he plots to ruin, etc.

The behavior of the lady under the circumstances is equally entertaining and instructive. Out of 100 cases 81 sink into the arms of gentlemen, 68 rest their heads on gentleman's breast, and only one sinks into the arms of a chair. Eleven clasp their arms around the gentleman's neck, six weep tears of joy silently, and 44 weep tears aloud—whatever that means. Seventy-two have eyes full of love, and nine out of 100 rush from the room to tell somebody. Only four are greatly surprised, and 87 of 100 knew that something was coming. Five giggle hysterically, and one even sneezes. Only one of 100 struggles not to be kissed, while six kiss gentleman first. If we believe the statistician, one out of 100 women will say, "Yes, but don't be a fool."—Philadelphia Times.

ABLE TO TRANSFER LUNACY.

Uncanny Result of an Experiment In Hypnotism Made by a Paris Doctor.

A series of very wonderful experiments which have just been concluded by Dr. Luys of Paris, whose observations and discoveries in connection with magnetism and electricity in relation to hypnotism made a profound impression upon the scientific world some time ago, has led to a remarkable result. The latest discovery establishes the fact that cerebral activity can be transferred to a crown of magnetized iron, in which the activity can be retained and subsequently passed on to a second person. Incredible as this may seem, Dr. Luys has proved its possibility by the experiments just referred to.

He placed the crown, which in reality is only a circular band of magnetized iron, on the head of a female patient suffering from melancholia, with a mania for self destruction, and with such success was the experiment attended that within a fortnight the patient could be allowed to go free without danger, the crown having absorbed all her marked tendencies.

About two weeks afterward he put the same crown, which meanwhile had been carefully kept free from contact with anything else, on the head of a male patient suffering from hysteria, complicated by frequent recurrent periods of lethargy. The patient was then hypnotized and immediately conducted himself after the manner of the woman who had previously worn the crown. Indeed he practically assumed her personality and uttered exactly the same complaints as she had done. Similar phenomena have, it is reported, been observed in the case of every patient experimented upon. Another experiment showed that the crown retained the impression acquired until it was made red-hot.—London Telegraph.

Seedless Fruits and Vegetables.

Writers often express wonder that any fruit or vegetable should be found without seeds, the acme of surprise seeming to be with respect to the seedless orange. The fact of the case is that such examples are met with in almost every variety of fruits and in several kinds of vegetables. An instance which can be cited in the apple is Meunecher's Nocore, so named because of both "core" and seed pits being entirely absent.

The Rutter pear is a so called seedless variety of that species of fruit, but I believe that abortive seeds are occasionally found in isolated specimens. The "zante," or seedless currant of the grocery stores, is not a currant at all, but a small species of seedless grape.—St. Louis Republic.

A Clever Dog.

Mr. Stacy Marks' anecdote of the money finding dog, which he attributes to Landseer, is a very prince among all stories of the kind. The dog's master, in the presence of a skeptical friend, hid a £5 note in the bole of a tree when the dog was paying him no attention. "Go, fetch!" he said, some time afterward, while returning by another road, without further explanation.

The dog trotted off, and it was a few hours before he joined the two at home. As there were no signs of a note, the skeptical friend grew satirical. But the host opened the dog's mouth, and 5 sovereigns were concealed under his tongue. He had found the note, been to the banker's and exchanged it for gold.—Spectator.

Clean Sweep.

"I don't see why they say the De Spug girls get their beauty from their mother."

"They probably took all there was."—Detroit Tribune.

PARADISE.

Oh, not afar in distant skies
The shining hills of heaven rise.
In loving hearts lies paradise,
  And loving words are keys that ope
  The portals to that land of hope.

Oh, pleading hearts that droop and sigh,
To watch the bitter days go by,
Heaven itself is close and nigh.
  Ever about us angels go,
  Threading these toilsome ways below.
  We do not see them—do not know.

But hearts that throb with loving thought,
And lips that whisper, heaven taught,
The loving words the Master brought—
  These are the angels we would know,
  And these the shining feet that go
  Making a paradise below.

Oh, not afar in distant skies,
But close at hand, the blessing lies—
In loving hearts lies paradise.
  Look up, sad soul! the world is fair,
  And heaven and love are everywhere!

—Dorothy Deane in Minneapolis Housekeeper.

KENILWORTH IVY.

If You Want the Real Thing, Never Go to Kenilworth Castle For It.

"'Could I get some slips of Kenilworth ivy anywhere about the ruins?' I heard a woman ask of the lodgekeeper at Kenilworth castle one day," said a traveler.

"'You are an American, aren't you, madam?' asked the keeper, with a smile.

"'Why, yes, but what of that?' responded the lady, with some slight embarrassment.

"'All American ladies come and ask me for Kenilworth ivy after they have searched in every nook and corner of the ruins for it,' explained the keeper. 'They have told me how common it is in America and how much it is prized, and generally explained that they have promised to take some of the real thing back from Kenilworth ruins for friends at home. They tell me they expected to find the ruins of Kenilworth castle overgrown with the beautiful "Kenilworth ivy," and that it is generally supposed in America that such is the case, and that the ivy first came from here or is named after these ruins because of its abundance here.'

"The woman nodded assent to all this, and the keeper continued:

"'But what you know as "Kenilworth ivy" doesn't grow in or about Kenilworth ruins, as you've no doubt discovered.' And he smiled again, and the woman also smiled in an embarrassed way, for she had been hunting every inch of the ruins over, looking for the plant. 'From the description of the plant which Americans give me I think it is what we call ground or wood ivy that you treasure so much. It has a small, bright green leaf and bears a tiny white flower. It grows on the ground in the thickets and under the hedges in cool places, but I never saw it growing on a wall as the common ivy does. I don't think there is much of it anywhere hereabouts, but it grows in abundance in some places farther south. The American ladies always seem very much disappointed when I tell them "Kenilworth ivy" doesn't grow here in Kenilworth, and I'm very sorry I can't give you some, ma'am.'

"And the woman turned away, with a little sigh, as she thought of the hanging basket at home which was to have been filled with 'real Kenilworth ivy' and of the many friends to whom she had promised slips of the 'real thing' when it had grown. The ruins of Kenilworth castle are covered with thick masses of ivy, but it isn't 'Kenilworth ivy,' but just the common kind."—New York Sun.

The Aim of Christ's Work.

"Peace on earth" was the aim of Christ's work in this world, writes Edward Bellamy in The Ladies' Home Journal. The whole gist of his doctrine and the burden of his teaching consisted in counsels to men how to put an end to strife with their fellow men and live together with them in mutual helpfulness. All this teaching, which was the whole content of his gospel, was grouped about and crystallized in the golden rule, whereon our modern world is founded as on an everlasting foundation. To believe in Christ and not to believe in the golden rule as the only plan for social organization seems to us a moral and rational impossibility—an unthinkable proposition. Just this, however, our ancestors undertook to do, and it is fair to admit that they were very frank about it. They made no pretenses.

An Apt Reply.

Napoleon's apt replies often excited good humor in a crowd. A large and brawny fishwoman once was haranguing the mob and telling them not to disperse. She finished by exclaiming: "Never mind those coxcombs with epaulets on their shoulders. They care not if we poor people all starve if they can but feed well and grow fat."

Napoleon, who was as thin as a shadow, turned to her and said, "Look at me, my good woman, and tell me which of us two is the fatter."

The fish fag was completely disconcerted, and the mob dispersed.—Exchange.

An Original.

Little Marjorie—There are lots of little Marjories nowadays, but none other at all like this one. She is original in her prayers, as in everything else. The other night she finished off her petition thus:

"And, O Lord, make all the wicked people good and wash all the niggers white!"—New York Tribune.

The unrolling of an Egyptian mummy supposed to be that of a princess, disclosed a curious cheat. The priests who did the embalming probably spoiled or mislaid the body intrusted to them and for it substituted that of an ordinary negro man.

A gentleman of the court of Pepin had a wonderful pair of breeches that cost $700. They were embroidered with gold, and all the figures were traced with chains of small pearls.

Darwin found grains of maize in the earth on the seashore of Peru 85 feet below the level of the sea.

FELICITOUS INSTALLATION.

Grand Army Men, Women, and Sons Have a Happy Night.

Winfield Scott Post, No 73, G. A. R., and John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., were guests of the Women's Relief Corps, No. 20 last evening, when the president-elect, Mrs M. C. Dobbins, was installed. Past President Mrs. Mary Morse performed the interesting ceremony in a very creditable manner, after which Mrs. Andrew Cox as chairman of the entertainment committee presided and furnished an evening of pleasure to all.

The first selection was entitled "A Millionaire", and was admirably sung by Mrs. George Pope, Mrs. A. B. Dawe, Ed Odam and George Pope, Jr. Mr. Hyman was accompanist.

A recitation by Try Mattox was heartily received and she responded with a very amusing selection. An enjoyable vocal solo by Ed Odam preceded one of W. C. Smith's select solos, which brought down the house.

W. R. Mattox was called on for a recitation, and he responded in his usual happy style, and Mrs. Morse, after earnest solicitation, recited "Romeo and Juliet" much to everyone's enjoyment.

Then came speeches from Commander Coriell, Past Commanders W. C. Smith and M. C. Dobbins, and V. W. Nash, H. C. McVoy, Edward Morse, Willard Sutton and President Mrs. Dobbins, all of which were given in a happy manner and brought forth much enthusiasm. Past Department Chaplain Mrs. Lacy of Rahway was present and stirred the hearts of all as she recited deeds of patriotism with which the veterans were acquainted.

Miss Found of Aaron Wilkes Corps of Trenton was also a guest. After all had contributed their share towards the evening's entertainment, the company was invited to the room below, where excellent refreshments were served and a jolly good time was indulged in.

SCOTCH PLAINS AND FANWOOD

From The Press of Jan. 12.

The women of the Scotch Plains Public Library held an afternoon tea in the rooms of the library yesterday afternoon from 2 to 5, for the purpose of enriching the library fund. Mrs. Charles Thomas of Bound Brook read an interesting and instructive paper, entitled "In a little corner with a little book". Mrs. F. W. Westcott presided at the tea table, assisted by Miss McCrady, Miss Florence Kyte, Miss Lillian Fancher and Miss Mary Westcott. An experience social was planned to be held April 1, all present pledging themselves to earn a dollar for the library fund before that date and to relate their experience in earning it at the social. It was also proposed to hold afternoon teas in the rooms twice a month. The women of the library will be glad to welcome any one attending. Among those present were Mrs. Charles Sykes, Mrs. DeForest Thomas, Mrs. F W. Westcott, Mrs. T. J. Nichols, Mrs. Thomas Puff, Jr., Mrs. H. Robison, Mrs. L. W. Miller, Mrs. I. G. Walser, Miss J. B. Kyte, Miss Wright, Miss Florence Kyte, Miss Florence Kyte, Misses McCready, Miss Lillian Nichols, Misses Johnston and others.

Twilight Council, J. O. U. A. M., held no meeting last evening owing to the absence of several officers.

The union service in the M. E. Church tomorrow evening has been postponed owing to the illness of Rev. Mr. Marriat.

John Flannery is around again after a severe attack of the grip.

Miss Susie L. Parse of Front street spent Friday with friends in Newark.

Mrs. Conant, who has been spending several weeks with her granddaughter, Mrs. J. S. Braker, has returned to her home in Lewisburgh, Pa.

Mrs. Billings who is confined to her bed with a severe attack of the grip is reported as much improved.

Charles Fields and Ed Erickson started for Avon Park, Florida, Friday morning.

Fanwood Council, R. A., intend holding an entertainment in the near future. Hugh J. Emmett, who delighted so many at the public installation, has been engaged to take part.

The Board of Directors of the Choral Union met Thursday evening to decide on what the Union should render at their next entertainment. The matter was laid over for one week when the professor will present to the directors several selections to choose from.

Joseph Eiler is confined to the house with the grip.

Knight of Pythias met at their rooms in Castle Hall, Thursday evening.

Excelsior Hook and Ladder Company will celebrate their twenty-sixth anniversary, Feb. 21, with an entertainment.

Choral Union met in the chapel Thursday evening.

Surveyors have been surveying the property of Robert Murphy on Park avenue. There being a claim made that the house projects over the line.

The Junior League of the M. E. Church will give an entertainment in the hall, Monday evening, Jan. 27.

Miss June Ryan, a domestic, employed by Mrs. William Stanbury, of Mountain avenue, while walking from the house to the barn Tuesday morning slipped and fell on the ice dislocating her shoulder.

Master Francis Fulton, of Johnstown, N. Y., is spending a week with Ernest Keth of Fanwood.

David White has given up his position with Mr. Emery and returned to Plainfield.

Trolley Road Building.

The trolley road company has begun work in a preliminary way between Bound Brook and Somerville. Poles are being placed in position, and some filling in is being done preparatory to building bridges. The right of way has now been obtained from Raritan to Dunellen and from Bound Brook to Trenton, with the single exception of the borough of Princeton.

The citizens of Somerville have voted to extend the corporation limits, thereby taking in all the territory east to the boundary lines of Finderne. The desire on the part of Somerville to embrace more territory within the corporation limits is good evidence of the rapid growth of the town.

—Jacob Goldstein, who appeared before Judge Coddington yesterday afternoon charged by Captain Grant with violating a city ordinance in placing signs on trees, telegraph and telephone poles and in other public places, was ordered to remove all the signs immediately. Sentence was suspended.

AN IMPORTANT CLUB OFFER

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE

BY special arrangement with the publishers we are enabled to offer Scribner's Magazine for 1895 and a full year's subscription to The Constitutionalist for $4. If purchased separately these periodicals would cost $5.

IT IS THE PLAN OF SCRIBNER'S to give its readers next year a history of the past 25 years in the United States. (1869-9 .) These years have been unparalleled in the history of the world for national development and material progress. The narrative will be written in a graphic and picturesque style by President Andrews, of Brown University, and capable artists will illustrate it.

ROBERT GRANT, whose "Reflections of a Married Man" will long be remembered, has written a series of articles on "The Art of Living," in which he sets himself to solve, as far as such problems can be solved, questions which beset every well-to-do family—The Income—The Dwelling—Household Expenses—Education of Children—Married and Single Life—The Summer Problem, etc., etc. Beautifully illustrated.

GEORGE MEREDITH, whom more than one good authority has pronounced the greatest living novelists, has written a strong serial, "The Amazing Marriage," to begin in January.

W. D. HOWELLS will contribute a novel entitled "The Story of a Play."

IN THE LAND OF DON QUIXOTE will be a series of three sketches illustrated by number of Daniel Vierge's wonderful drawings.

SINGLE ARTICLES in great variety have been arranged for and the illustrations will be elaborate.

Scribner's for 1895 Will Be Better Than Ever.

If you desire only SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE remit $3 to the publishers.

CHAS. SCRIBNER'S SONS,
153-157 5th Avenue, New York.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. S. R. Hope of Richmond street is dangerously ill.

S. W. Kerr and family of Scotch Plains have moved to 21 Somerset place.

Miss Ross of Short Hills is the guest of Mrs. F. M. French of Somerset street.

Henry Lyman Spencer is studying law in George DeMeza's office, and will be heard from in the near future.

Mrs. Charles Matthews has returned from a visit to her sister, Mrs. W. I. Greenough, and is now ill at her home.

Lawyer C. B. VanWinkle, whose shingle used to hang out in this city, is still confined in St. Michael's Hospital, Newark, where he has been for some weeks. He is slowly recovering.

Theodore Smith, who has been confined to to his home for over a week with rheumatism, is obliged to have watchers during the night, insomnia having added itself to his afflictions.

Herman Keller is not rapidly recovering from his recent severe attack of pneumonia, yet the crisis has passed, and the prospect for ultimate complete restoration to health is good.

Mr. and Mrs. John N. Whitenack of Duer street entertained a number of their friends at their home last Friday. A few pleasant hours were spent playing whist. P. A. Emmons succeeded in carrying off the first prize. Those present were: Mr and Mrs R T Tolles, Mr and Mrs P A Emmons, Mr and Mrs William Messerschmidt, Mr and Mrs L B Woolston, Mr and Mrs James Buckle, Mr and Mrs F M Slater. Mr and Mrs John P Emmons. The next meeting of the whist party will be held Feb. 8, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Messerschmidt on Jackson avenue, when a name for the club will be decided on.

In Honor of Their Poet.

The anniversary of Burns, the poet, was made a very enjoyable affair Friday night, celebrated at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John Lindsay of West Front street. A most bountiful supper was spread for the guests, prominent on the table being the Haggis, Scotland's national dish, and suitable for the occasion. After the inner-man had been amply seen to, the evening was spent in song and recitations, the host opening with "There was a lad was born in Kyle"; others contributed to the evening's enjoyment, which made another of those annual entertainments pass with so much pleasure, as to live green in the memory of their guests, who came from New York, New Market and this city to the number of eighteen, and broke up in "the wee sma' hours" with "Auld Lang Syne", and a merry toast to the generous host and hostess, Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay.

Master Laing's Surprise Party.

Last Friday shortly after 9 a friend called on E. M. Laing, the Park avenue furnisher and men's outfitter, and offered him a large case of valuables if he would step to the door and assist in carrying them into the store. Somewhat surprised, Mr. Laing stepped to the door, expecting of course some practical joke, but found that there was a case of valuables too large for one man to handle, so, lending a hand, he assisted in lifting it into the store. Not waiting to hear the profuse thanks of the merchant at being so kindly remembered, Policeman Conway continued on his beat. The case belonged to Jeweler Collier, whose store had been closed for the night.

—The Aid Society of Reform Hall report urgent need of clothing for men and boys. Any persons who have such to give can leave it at Mrs. King's, 226 West Second street, or at the hall.

—Anything in dress goods, linen, blankets, or notions, may be bought at bargain prices, at the great inventory sale of Heath & Drake, the celebrated Newark house. The sale continues till next Saturday night.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mr. E. A. Gross of West Seventh street is in Cincinnati on business.

W. E. MacClymont will give an organ recital in Westfield February 7.

Miss Ida Demler of Washingtonville is convalescing from a long illness.

Abel Clawson of Hunterdon county is visiting his sons on Brook avenue.

Charles Brinkenhoff, who was shot in the wrist Wednesday, is better today.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Murray left Thursday evening for Florida, to be gone several weeks.

Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman of West Seventh street is visiting relatives in Philadelphia.

Miss Nellie Ware of Second place has gone to the St. Margaret School, Waterbury, Conn.

Mrs. Bogart and her son of New York are guests of Mrs. Disborough on East Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Goldstein of 126 Park avenue are rejoicing over the advent of a bouncing boy.

Mrs. Samuel Q. Lawson of West Seventh street will spend the rest of the Winter in New York city.

Miss Florence Dodge expects to go to Chicago soon to take a two years course in a missionary school.

Cards are out announcing a reception to be given by the Misses Bilsh of West Seventh street, Feb. 2.

Mrs. Arthur G. Kerr and family of College place recently returned from a visit with friends on Long Island.

Harry Baglin of Newark is the guest for a few days of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Smith of Grandview avenue.

Charles Howard of Plainfield has been elected W. J. G. S. of the Grand Lodge of Masons of the State of New Jersey.

Percy Wheeler has accepted a situation with Conrow Bros., wholesale paper dealers, Beekman street, New York.

J. C. Ackerman of the Freight Department at the North Avenue station has rented the house 523 West Sixth street, and will make that his home Feb. 1.

J. W. Lupton, a prominent marble dealer of Perth Amboy, has returned home after a short visit with his brother-in-law, J. T. Vail of Franklin place.

Cards are out for the wedding of Miss Saidie E., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Addis of Orange street, to Clarence Nathan Mundy Tuesday, Feb. 12, at 5 p. m. in Grace P. E. Church.

Herbert Moore of Grove street a member of the Class of '95 in the North Plainfield Public School, leaves Monday for Mount Hermon, Mass., where he will attend the boarding-school in that town.

Little Donald Bramfield of East Sixth street, while playing about the house fell and struck his head against a chair, causing a severe scalp wound. Dr. Davis was summoned and the wound was dressed.

Charles O. Lister is completely refurnishing and refitting his North avenue bicycle store, and will devote the entire first floor to wheels and have his shooting gallery and repair shop in the basement.

Harry Brewster of New York held a card party Thursday evening at his home, to which W. J. Boome, J. W. Sandford, Miss Pauline May Sandford, and Miss Emily Sandford, received invitations. Handsome prizes were awarded, and a banquet followed.

Colonel Eadie, chief secretary of the Salvation Army of America, will visit the Plainfield army accompanied by the National staff brass band, February 7. Interesting addresses will be read by prominent persons and there will be inspiring music by the band.

—Many Plainfielders have received invitations to attend the dance soon to be given by [illegible] society set in the [illegible] of that thriving town.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

PLAINFIELD INVENTORS.

Complete List of Local Patents Granted in 1894.

Charles N. Butler, attorney in patent cases, 1001 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa., furnishes The Daily Press with the following list of inventors of Plainfield to whom United States patents were granted during the year 1894, with the titles of the inventors:

George H Babcock, tile roofing; Louis E Howard, electric arc lamp; Anthony C Vail, device for shaping folds of linen collars; William E Brook, toggle press; Walter Scott, bed and cylinder printing machine; Timothy S Thorn, toy; Halsey H Baker, street signal; John Brooks, bed and cylinder printing machine; Joseph D Case, key board attachments for musical instruments; Milan W Hall, pump; Henry Weller, corn harvester; Frank E Kinsman, railway signal; John V Beekman, hoisting apparatus; Edwin A Couch, dish cleaner; Sinclair Stuart, construction of ships; Frederick Schreiner, stove for drying matrices; Charles A Sturtevant, fire escape; Frederick K Wilcox and C E Vail, combined stove and heater; Frank E Kinsman, railway signal device; Frank E Kinsman, apparatus for controlling the movement of railway trains; William L Decker, velocipede; Willard M Miner, assignor to American Manufacturing and Engineering Company, car lighter; Walter Scott, mechanism for transmitting motion; Charles E Buell, galvanic battery; Addison Conkling, inkstand bracket; Sinclair Stuart, construction of ships; John Brooks, cylinder printing machine; Charles Potter, web-supporting device for printing presses; Charles Potter, cylinder printing machine; Milan W Hall, pump; John Brooks, bed and cylinder printing machine; John Brooks, cylinder printing machine; Joseph D Case, key board attachment for musical instruments; Walter Scott, bed and cylinder printing machine; Timothy S Thorn, toy; Halsey H Baker, street sign.

Y. M. C. A. OPENING.

Addresses and Reception to Be Given Feb. 12.

The formal opening of the new Y. M. C. A. Building will take place Tuesday evening, Feb. 12. The committee in charge consists of Alex. Gilbert, Mason W. Tyler, John W. Murray, S. A. Ginna and James McGee. Addresses will be delivered by Mayor Gilbert, first president, and the present president, W. D Murray; also by Richard C. Morse, General Secretary of the International Committee of the Y M C A. The ceremonies connected with the opening will be held in Association Hall at 8 p. m., after which the reception will be throughout the building.

Chief Doane an Authority.

(From The Fireman's Herald.)

Chief Thaddeus Doane, of Plainfield, N. J., recently inspected several churches in Newark and Jersey City, that have been finished off inside with paper mache sheathing. This sheathing is compounded of very inflammable material and contains a large quantity of rosin. The chief gives it as his opinion that this is very dangerous material and should never be used in buildings. Chief Doane has been a builder for thirty-five years and for thirty years has been connected with the fire service and is well qualified to express an opinion. The highly inflammable material is being extensively used and it does not seem possible that underwriters are aware of its dangerous properties. It is a crime to permit the use of such material especially in public buildings where people congregate. Some of these days there will be a terrible calamity and the public will be looking for someone to hold responsible. This is a fair sample of the criminal carelessness of building inspectors.

Music, Cards, Dancing and a Peanut Hunt.

Miss Susie Boss of Central avenue entertained a number of friends last Thursday in honor of her guest Miss Wilson of Brooklyn. The hours passed pleasantly with card playing and dancing. A peanut hunt was a feature, and there was choice music, vocal and instrumental. The company included Miss LaRue, Miss Nichols, Miss L Boss, Miss Lillie D Garretson, Miss Wilson, Miss Sue Boss, Miss Simonds, Messrs Williams, George Macintyre, Randolph, Weldon, Suthpen, William Stimpson and Ralph Campbell. In the peanut hunt Mr. Stimpson secured first prize, and Mr. Campbell consolation prize. The refreshments were excellent.

—Among those negotiating for Hotel Netherwood is Dr. J. H. Cooley, who would transform the hotel into a sanitarium.

TRINITY TEA.

Delightful Entertainment Conducted by the Christian Work Society.

The commodious parlors of Trinity Reformed Church were transformed Jan. 24 into a perfect symphony of beautiful pink and green, through which moved pretty maidens and fair matrons whose animated faces betokened the pleasure which seemed to pervade the very atmosphere. The social was given by the Ladies Christian Work Society of the church, and its marked success reflects great credit on the efficient members of the various committees.

An elaborate supper was served from 6 to 9, and was fully appreciated by the large numbers who took advantage of this excellent opportunity to become still better acquainted with their friends across the banquet board. During the supper hours, the air was sweet with music wrought by Messrs. Milton and Smith, on violin and homemade harp.

A most pleasing musical programme was rendered after the supper by well-known local artists, each number being heartily received and audibly appreciated by the entire assembly. The artists who favored were as follows:

Elmer E Runyon, vocal solo, "O Fair and Holy City"; Miss N. Winckler, piano solo, Chopin; B. T. Barnes, vocal solo, accompanied by Mrs. Barnes; Miss Lucille Fritts, piano solo; Miss F. May Grant, vocal solo, "Love's Captive"; Robert Clark, vocal solo, "Watching"; Will Holmes, vocal solo, "The Lost Ship"; Recitations, Miss Etta Reybert. Miss Lillian A. Force was the accompanist.

The programme throughout was of such uniform excellence that special mention would be impossible. Following the rendition of the musical numbers the pleasant party turned their attention to the tastily decorated candy booth, the pretty lemonade well, or the various dainty tables at which cake and cream were served by rosy cheeked maidens at the bidding of the gracious matrons who presided.

At the candy booth were the Misses Louise Soediker, Minnie Williams and Emma Gillem, and passing lemonade in dainty crystal glasses at the well were Mrs. R. B. Rogers, Mrs. Will F. Williams, Misses Josephine Kiesam and Lizzie Dunn.

At the attractively trimmed apron booth stood Mrs. L. C. Sheppard, Mrs. C. W. Dunham, Mrs. O. P. Vosseller, Mrs. P. A. VanFleet.

The Committee of Arrangements consisted of Mrs E T Van Winkle, Mrs P M Demarest, Mrs Frank A Church, Mrs G Q Dolliver, and Mrs S Williams.

The matrons who presided at the various tables were Mrs J F MacDonald, Mrs J C Van Dyke, Mrs J T MacMurray, Mrs Robert A Meeker, Mrs David Soediker, Mrs Edward Cooley, Mrs P A Emmons, and Mrs Robert Clark, and their competent assistants were the Misses Minnie Arnold, Grace Smith, Laura Emmons, Josephine Fritz, Florence White, May Williams, Mary Van Fleet, Kate Baxter, Cora Gardner and Jennie Quick.

The reception committee consisted of Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, Mrs. George Van Emburgh and Mrs. Harry Marshall. At the door stood Edward Van Winkle and Harry Marshall.

The liberal patronage of so large a number of friends as gathered to enjoy last evening's pleasure augurs well for to-night when an entire change will occur in the musical programme and there will be dainty maids to serve delectable morsels to the hungry or appease those whose throats become parched by too frequent exclamations of delight at the artistic beauty and profusion of the decorations indicating as they do the many hours spent by Mrs. E. A. Meeker and Mrs. J. C Van Dyke in the work of transformation.

LARGE JUDGMENTS FILED.

A. D. Shepard of Scotch Plains Loaned $22,000.

Judgments aggregating $100,522,65 were entered today in the county clerk's office by default against the Fifth Avenue Transportation Company, Limited, in favor of the following creditors:

Mrs. Margaret L. V. Shepard, $32,662.77 for rent due; Mrs. Margaret L. V. Shepard, executrix of Elliott F. Shepard, $40,041.18, for rent of buildings 55 to 65 East 58th street, and for money advanced; Augustus D. Shepard, $27,816.68 for money lent.

Proud Father of a Noble Bride.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: In your item yesterday, concerning the marriage of Wilmerding-Bache, you refer to the bride's father as the late Andrew Bache.

As Mr. Bache was in the land of the living to my own knowledge no later than Sunday last, it will be a pleasure to his friends (which are legion) to know that Andy still lives, and from his lineage the bride is the descendant of Benjamin Franklin.

PERCY C. OHL.

Heroic Response to Duty's Call.

Sergeant John I. Holly was confined to his bed with a very severe cold and the grip, when he received word of Troop A being called on for duty in Brooklyn. Mr. Holly deserves credit for his loyalism, for he left under strong protests of his family and physician, and in enfeebled condition. It is to be hoped the exposure will not seriously affect him.

—Wm. Kirk has received the contract for building a bell tower at New Rochelle. It will be similar to that erected by him at Westfield.

DOES THIS SETTLE IT?

HAS THE SOURCE OF THE MISSISSIPPI BEEN POSITIVELY FIXED?

The Story of the Search For It During Two Centuries—Lake Itasca and the Little Stream That Nicollet Christened the "Cradled Achilles."

"I have stepped across the Mississippi river," said Dr. Coues. "It was easy, for the stream was only about 8 inches wide and 2 inches deep. I have seen the Father of Waters where he rises literally out of the ground and starts as an infant rivulet, destined to cut the United States in twain with the mighty volume of his adult flood.

"The story of the search for the source of the Mississippi reads like a romance. After the discovery of the upper river in 1673 by Joliet and Marquette, and the discovery of the falls of St. Anthony in 1680, by Hennepin, little more was known of the Father of Waters for nearly a century. In 1766 Captain Jonathan Carver ascended the stream as far as the mouth of Rum river. In 1798 the famous English astronomer and surveyor, David Thompson, in the service of the Northwest company, reached Turtle lake. This lake, which sends a tributary to the Mississippi, was for some time supposed to be the source.

"The first white man known to have visited the neighborhood of the actual source of the Mississippi was William Morrison, a fur trader, who was certainly at Lake Itasca in 1803 or 1804. He never published anything on the subject, and it is only very recently that his priority of discovery has been known. The next explorer of the sources of the river was Lieutenant Zebulon Montgomery Pike. He was the first American citizen to carry the flag of the United States into northern Minnesota. He was sent by the government to treat with the Indians and stop the sale of liquor in that region. Incidentally he purchased for $250 and some whisky a tract of land nine miles square, which included the present site of Minneapolis. Congress subsequently voted an additional payment to the Indians for this tract of $2,000.

"Lieutenant Pike proceeded by boat to the vicinity of the present Little Falls in Morrison county, Minn. He got no farther with boats, and so continued his journey through the winter of 1805-6 on snowshoes and with sledges northward. He finally reached Leech lake. This lake he mistook for the source of the Mississippi, and his report on this subject was held to be correct for some years afterward.

"In 1820 the Hon. Lewis Cass, accompanied by Henry R. Schoolcraft, the historian, went on an exploring expedition up the Mississippi as far as Cass lake, so named at the time by Schoolcraft. In 1823 an Italian traveler, J. C. Beltrami, went over David Thompson's route to Turtle lake and reported that lake to be the true source. Evidently, however, he heard from the Indians about Lake Itasca, for he mapped it with approximate accuracy, though he was never there and did not imagine that the Father of Waters sprang thence.

"Lake Itasca was rediscovered in 1832, when Schoolcraft, accompanied by Lieutenant Allen, United States army; the Rev. Mr. Boutwell and others, was guided to the lake by a Chippewa Indian, known as Yellow Head. On this occasion Lake Itasca received its present name, which was made up of parts of the words Veritas Caput, signifying the 'true head' of the river. The Latin was bad, for it ought to have been Verum Caput. The lake had previously been known by the French name of Lac a la Biches, meaning Elk Lake. This was a translation of the Chippewa Omoshkos Sogiagon.

"Schoolcraft's party made an examination of Lake Itasca, being satisfied that they had found the true source of the Mississippi. Not again until 1836 did any scientific man visit the spot. This was a Frenchman, J. N. Nicollet, who tried to ascertain the source of the feeders of Lake Itasca. Exploring southward, he reached the springs from which the infant river takes its rise. It should be understood that the Mississippi runs from its source directly northward for a distance of 50 miles before turning about in a sort of fishhook bend and starting southward. To the baby stream, before it enters Lake Itasca, Nicollet gave the poetic name of 'Cradled Achilles.' He established its course in connection with three small lakes, since named Upper, Middle and Lower Nicollet lakes—that is to say, he found that the little river ran through two of these small lakes and connected with the third. This explorer mapped the whole of the Itascan basin and determined the latitude, longitude and altitude with such accuracy that subsequent surveys have only confirmed and amplified his observations.

"The whole subject of which I have been speaking was befogged and thrown into dispute recently by a certain Captain Glazier, who, apparently for no other purpose than to advertise himself, published his alleged discovery of a new and true source of the Mississippi. By reducing the size of Lake Itasca, ignoring Nicollet's Cradled Achilles, magnifying a small side lake which he called Lake Glazier, and by stretching out one of the feeders of the latter, he produced a distorted map which actually imposed on the Royal Geographical society of Great Britain. Many of the errors thus originated have crept into the standard maps of the United States.

"It may be said that there is nothing further to be learned about the true source of the Father of Waters. As a matter of essential fact, the true Upper Mississippi is the river called the Missouri. The stream that flows from Lake Itasca is merely a tributary. I ought not to forget to mention that I walked along the bed of the stream termed by Captain Glazier the infant Mississippi for a considerable distance dry shod. The little brook was dried up. Late measurements have reduced the length of the Mississippi from 3,184 miles to 2,555 miles."

A CRITIC'S VISION.

OUR FRENCH VISITOR MISTOOK COWS FOR BUFFALOES.

Saw Rhinos and Black Pigs on the Plains This Side Chicago. Scandalized By Our Sleeping Car Accommodations But Likes the American Clam.

Mme. Grandin came as the correspondent of a Paris journal to visit the World's Fair and has recorded her opinion of New York, Chicago, and other things.

Here are some of the curios culled from Madam's always amusing and never dreary volume:

New York is a city of infernal noises.

The streets near the docks are narrow and dirty, and on each side are phenomenally high houses, uniformly red and frightfully ugly.

No sky is to be seen. An immense viaduct runs over head in the streets on which trains rush by every few minutes.

On the streets is an indescribable chaos of carriages, tramways, wagons, and a terrible noise of electric bells, loud gongs and carriage wheels, which, however, does not seem to worry the passers by. How different to the picturesque crowd of our Paris streets, with the little work girls without their hats, and the elegantly dressed women and the gay boulevardiers!

The Americans are all well dressed, but they all look alike. They are are all very tall, very thin, and all in a hurry.

All Americans are shaved. They wear neither beards nor mustaches.

Apparently there are no women in New York. The tramways are full of men, and it would be almost impossible to tell their respective ages, for without beard or mustache they all look very much like boys.

Upon leaving the tramway we climb up on the iron viaduct to take the train. The carriages are very comfortable, with seats running down each side, except in the centre, where seats, placed crosswise, form a sort of private parlor. Through the windows I can look into the houses. How agreeable it must be for the inhabitants to have to submit every three or four minutes to the inspection of all kinds of people, who gaze in curiosity as the train speeds by! And with the black and greasy smoke entering the apartments every time the windows are opened, not to speak of the infernal noise night and day. Is it possible that they have had the idea of building an elevated in Paris? I am sure its Parisian enthusiasts have never seen it.

New York is divided into quarters—there is the Italian quarter, the French quarter, the Chinese quarter, and the Hebrew quarter.

Besides being the dirtiest, the last named quarter is the most populated in New York. Only one religion prevails, but all the different types of the world rub shoulders there.

Very old Hebrew families who have lived in New York since the foundation of the city are to be found there. But, contrary to their usual habit, they have not acquired wealth.

The Chinese quarter is very different. With exception of the houses, one would believe one's self at Pekin on seeing these long, yellow faces and braided tails and Asiatic robes.

The Americans detest the Chinese by pure antagonism of race. The Chinese detest the Americans equally cordially, and they only stay in the country to enrich themselves.

Another curious part of the town is the Bowery, the oldest quarter of New York city. Its population is made up of the lowest kind of people of all races, and it is dangerous to go on the Bowery at night unless well armed. The place is full of theatres, concerts and halls, which are frequented by thieves.

One of the most curious things in New York is to see the people of different color in the streets. You meet ladies well dressed, with yellow faces, red faces, black faces and chocolate faces and bronze faces.

What amused me very much was the unanimous preference given by these black ladies to white dresses. In fact, all the women in New York wear white dresses. In the summer all the women, young and old, wear this virginal costume in the street. It is very becoming to pretty girls, but it is frightful when worn by ladies with yellow or chocolate faces.

Another remarkable thing about the dresses worn in New York is the white apron, which many ladies wear at home and in the street. They are very pretty aprons, ornamented with lace or ribbons, but still the effect is not very becoming when they are worn with gloves and a bonnet.

The first time I saw ladies attired like this I thought they were chambermaids. Of course, I do not suppose that these ladies represent the aristocratic classes in New York, but I met so many of them attired in these aprons that I suppose it is a fashion with the higher middle class.

The bootblack in New York has the rank of a regular tradesman. His place of business is not as in Paris, modest and primitive. At the corner of each street is a kind of platform, on which are arranged a number of comfortable armchairs. The customers sit in these armchairs and read their papers comfortably, while the bootblack kneels at their feet and makes the boots confided to him shine like a mirror. This operation costs five sous. The American, who is very particular how his shoes look, has them polished several times a day, and from morning to evening the armchairs are crowded with customers.

I like the American clam. I don't know what it is, and I never saw one in France. But it is delicious. It seems to be half way between an oyster and a mussel, but it has a very fine and peculiar flavor. They eat enormous quantities of clams in New York—in fact, they even make cakes of them.

I journeyed to Chicago in one of those truly marvellous American palace cars. It was a beautiful trip. We sped along the side of the noble Hudson, a beautiful valley, closed in by high mountains.

We soon arrived at Buffalo. The buffalo in a savage state roams in the forest all through this country, and the city is named after them. We leave the train to get something to eat. But we have scarcely time to take anything before we have to resume our seats. The total cost of the dinner we didn't eat was $4.

We arrived at Niagara an hour later and stop at the Hotel of the Falls. Naturally we pay for a single night an exorbitant price. That would have been all right if we could have slept for our money. But my bedroom was close to the cataract, and the tremendous roar of the falling water kept me awake all night. I was really alarmed, for I did not know what caused the noise.

Leaving Niagara, we started off across the great plains. It was daylight, and I enjoyed the trip across the wonderful prairie. It is a desert, not of sand, but of grass—a sea of grass stretching to the horizon, and the grass blown by the wind, resembling the waves of a sea. Not a tree small or large, nothing but grass, dried and burned. From time to time we catch sight of immense herds of buffalo, and we see sheep and masses of black pigs, who scatter as the train passes. There are no stations among these ranches of the plains.

At night everybody turns into his sleeping section.

I was dreadfully embarrassed when I had to go to bed.

Men and women sleep next to each other, a simple curtain protecting each from indiscreet glances.

Yet this did not seem to worry the Americans. Just as if they were at home in their own bedrooms, the travellers of each sex began to undress, and did not hesitate to take off every garment before slipping into their berths.

I am not a prude, but I was scandalized, and I took care not to imitate my neighbors. I threw myself into my berth with all my clothes on, and as I was very tired I managed to get to sleep, lulled by the delightful snoring of all my neighbors.

WINTER BATHING IN THE SURF.

The Captain Thinks Winter as Good a Time for Bathing as Summer.

Sea bathing as a winter pastime has something of a frosty sound, even in the warm carpeted bath rooms. If a man talks about a cold plunge in the morning, when the thermometer hovers around zero, he is looked upon with awe as a phenomenal shock register and a man of uncommon courage. What, then, must be the thought of the man or woman who, totally disregarding the icy winds of winter on a bleak Jersey coast, will dip pleasantly every day in the briny deep and not shiver at all?

There are several winter bathers in Asbury Park. Two or three take only an occasional dip, but Captain Abram Baker, a wealthy resident of the Park, goes in very often. The captain is a character, with a physique to match. There has never been a time within the past twelve years that Captain Baker was not the most observed man in Asbury Park.

In the summer months his tall, powerful frame looms up like a Leviathan on the board walk. He invariably appears in a light blue outing shirt, a pair of linen trousers, and very seldom—only on extremely cold days—with an overcoat. If perchance he wears an overcoat the under coat is left off. Captain Baker is seventy years of age, and was one of the old forty-niners. He is strong and robust and walks with a soldierly bearing.

The captain believes that only the men who don't smoke or chew are able to stand winter surf bathing. He says he bathes about 25 times in November and about a dozen times in December and regularly from April to the middle of January, and would keep it up all winter but for the fact that Senator Bradley's bathing houses are just a little bit too icy for use. The Captain bathes every day from April 1 to September 15. He goes in twice a day, remaining in the water not over ten minutes at a time. He claims that to bathe longer than that time is injurious.

The captain claims that tobacco destroys animal heat and nerve power. He never overloads his stomach and takes plenty of outdoor exercise. The captain never frets or worries. He takes life easy and never allows any worriment to enter his mind, claiming that no one would fret if in good health. He avoids all the excitements possible, for they always, according to his doctrine, lower the strength.

"If people would do like this," says the captain, "they could bathe as well as I do, and to-day I feel as though I am no more than forty years old in my feelings and reality."

SHE HAD A LOVELY TIME.

The Recreation of a Stout Lady With a Flow of Language.

When the stout lady entered the elevated at 14th street she sat down on the left hand corner seat facing the engine. There were touches of finery about her dress, whose presence was explained when she caught sight of an acquaintance on the other side of the car, and immediately plunged across the aisle and sat down beside her.

"I've just been up calling on Lucy Powers," she began at once. "She used to live over near us you know and I promised as soon as she came back from her tower I'd run across and see her and this morning Mrs. Ebler told me she'd seen her on Broadway over here and so I just ragged out and came over here right away."

She had a large, limp mouth, and when she spoke her lips moved flutteringly like the leaves of a poplar tree in a breeze. Punctuation was a useless arrangement of the grammarian so far as she was concerned, while her idea of conversation evidently was that it was a form of social entertainment in which one person did all the talking.

"I was surprised to find," she ran on, "how cosily Lucy is fixed she has a real sweet little flat with real nice furniture and lots of dainty thing scattered all about you know and though it wasn't her calling day there were quite a number of people nice people too looking at the things she had picked up in their tower curiosities and such things you know and I got a real nice cup of chocolate though I can't say I like chocolate in the afternoon I prefer tea don't you I do."

When she did stop it was for absolute want of breath; her method of re-inflation being to draw in a long, deep draught of breath through the open mouth. Being once more charged she dashed in once more.

"I told William I'd call in for him when I left Lucy's as he wants me too look at some underclothing with him and he never so much as buys a pair of socks now without first consulting me which is very complimentary you know though somewhat trying when you have so many things to look after I declare these cars do make such a row you scarcely hear what any one is saying this is Franklin street isn't it well good by dear I'm so glad to have seen you come over right soon now won't you I've had such a lovely time good by."

And with this she drove her way into the string of incoming passengers, leaving her friend with a feeble, inquiring look in her eyes, her mouth partly open as though gasping for breath, and her hands feebly clutching at the air like one faintly fighting against suffocation.—N. Y. Sun.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.
From the New York Sun of February 3, 1895.

Increasing Use of Drugs in Tablet Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a R variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and I the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. P Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by saturating inert material A with the mixture, just as homœopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual N physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of S taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. Now as the use of tablets is, the form T of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and A perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very B slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical U profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled and careful apothecaries L and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately E certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous S is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 SPRUCE ST., NEW YORK.

MEN WANTED To take orders. No delivering or collecting. Experience not necessary; steady employment; best terms; write at once and secure choice of territory. ALLEN NURSERY CO., Rochester, N.Y.

was much. You see the fact almost that is just this: I inquired quietly for the biggest liar in town—one that would lie easily for small pay—and young Riddle was recommended; in fact, very strongly recommended. So I gave him a dollar to tell that story, and he earned the money. By Jupiter, he more than earned it. He gave me an experience, the equal of which I never had had before. For, though I suspected that Eddie Ames (alias Eddie Barker, alias a good many other names and every one a thief's name) wasn't in that coffin. I had no more idea than you had who was in it."

"You are from Boston," said Mr. Warren. "You suspected that Edward Ames was not dead. Then you must have much important information. Dr. Maxwell should see you before he goes."

"Before he goes where?"

"To Boston, to find out how my child was brutally murdered in that wicked city, and thrust into a thief's coffin."

"We don't need to go to Boston for that," said the detective, earnestly. "It wasn't done in any wicked city; it was done right here in this town!"

CHAPTER III.

HORACE RIDDLE TELLS THE TRUTH.

In the pause which followed the detective's declaration, both men heard the sound of sleigh bells.

"There is Dr. Maxwell," exclaimed the clergyman. "I know the bells. Can we not prevent his useless journey?"

At the first words the detective had run out of the room. Mr. Warren hurried after him. When he reached the front door, Mulligan was returning up the walk.

"I called to him but he did not hear me," said the detective. "At any rate he did not stop. I should say that there wouldn't be much use in chasing the team he's driving."

Mr. Warren shook his head. The doctor's horses were much the best in Williston.

"He will drive to the junction, I suppose," said Mulligan. "That's the only place in these parts that a man can get away from in winter. Very good, I have half an hour to spare. Suppose I tell you what I know about this case?"

"Do in Heaven's name! I can never rest until it is all made clear."

"If you expect me to make it all clear to-night," rejoined the detective, "I may as well warn you that you'll be disappointed. This is at once the simplest and the most complicated puzzle I ever saw, and I've had a hand in the best that Boston could afford, including the famous Bell case."

"How do you know that the crime was committed in this town?" demanded the clergyman. "I hold Edward Ames guilty, and yet you say that the story that he was here was a lie. Why did my daughter come here? Where did she meet her murderer? Why did she not come to me?"

"She came to you," said the detective, gravely. "Indeed, the fact that she did so is almost my only clew."

"What! She came here?"

"Mr. Warren, I don't want to startle you, but it is an unquestionable fact that, a little after nine o'clock last night, your daughter stood outside that window and looked in upon you as you sat at work."

What would the grief-stricken man have given in exchange for the power to take that knowledge back with him such a little way into the past? His life, gladly, for it would have saved hers.

"You can guess how I know this," continued the detective. "It was not a difficult problem. Assuming that the crime was committed here, I thought it fair to believe that the girl came to this town of her own free will. People are not carried about the country prisoners, in these days. Believing that, I knew where to go for traces of her presence. I have seen too many of such cases to have any doubt what she would do.

"So I made investigations under your window. The snow was soft and wet that night up to nine o'clock when the cold snap set in. Her footprints, formed in the wet snow, were perfectly preserved. It was only necessary to brush away an inch or two of light snow that lay over them. Then I made my measurements. I had just completed them when a noise that I made alarmed you in here, and I had to get away. By the courtesy of Capt. Thompson I was enabled to compare my measurements with your dead daughter's shoes, and the result leaves no doubt as to the state of the case."

"Sir," said Mr. Warren, "it seems to me that you solve this dark riddle completely. At the time you mention, and thereafter, the coffin which was supposed to contain the body of Ned Ames lay in his father's house. Who watched beside it? Who permitted my daughter's body to be hidden in it?"

"There," said the detective, laying his hand on the clergyman's arm, "you touch exactly the point where the mystery becomes as dark as the tomb. Here are the facts. It was Mr. Ames who watched beside the coffin. We insisted upon it, and sent his son Frank to bed after the latter had volunteered for that duty. Frank was worn out with his journey and at last consented to his father's arrangement."

"This is madness," exclaimed Warren. "It makes Samuel Ames a party to this crime. Preposterous! I have known him thirty years and I would stake my life that he had nothing to do with this."

"So would I," responded the detective, calmly, "though I've known him only a few hours. When this case stood in my mind as it stands now in yours, I own that I was stumped. But I knew there must be some way out, for the facts were plain. If the girl was here on Thursday night she couldn't have been murdered in Boston several days before. You see, from the first it looked doubtful whether the crime could have been committed there, for in that case why was the coffin ripped open after having been once closed?"

"I had thought of that, and it had seemed to me possible Ames might have feigned death by the use of drugs and have permitted himself to be put into the coffin."

"No, sir; not into that coffin. He wouldn't have lived in it five minutes. It was airtight. No, I say again, that explanation wouldn't stand. The deed was done on Thursday night in this town, and the bodies were exchanged—"

"Exchanged! Then you believe that Ned Ames is really dead?"

"I don't know. It's barely possible. However, the essential point is that your daughter's body was put into that coffin in the Ames house on Thursday night."

"While Samuel Ames sat by and permitted it!"

"No; while he was asleep—drugged of course."

"Drugged? Are you sure of that?"

"What he says makes it practically certain. He remembers the first hour alone beside the coffin. Then he knows nothing until he found himself sitting there with the light of early morning streaming into the room. He was ashamed to own that he had slept, and so he said nothing about it until I questioned him. Then he described his experience, and his sensations as awakening in such a way as to make me perfectly confident that he was drugged; and the thing that makes his story certainly true is that he described the effect of a drug about which I'm sure that he knows nothing at all. It's a mixture of choral and one or two other poisons of that class."

"How was it administered?"

"Easily enough. There's a pitcher of water and a glass on the table in the dining-room of the Ames house every morning. Mr. Ames drank from that glass about ten o'clock. Of course the drug was in it. Now, the man who put it there is the murderer, but the trouble is that any man in town could have done it. Secret entrance to that room was perfectly easy on that evening."

"Might not the drug have killed Mr. Ames? I shudder at the thought of such awful sin. How can human beings do such deeds?"

"It's beyond me, but they can. However, there wasn't much danger of killing Mr. Ames. The man who used the drug was evidently skilled in its use."

"Could anyone not trained in medicine—" Warren began, and stopped aghast.

The detective looked keenly at the clergyman.

"I see what you mean," he said.

"No, no; it was merely a horrible fancy. My mind is strained to the verge of madness."

"His flight looks bad," said Mulligan.

"Flight? Whose flight?"

"Come, Mr. Warren, let's not fence with each other. Dr. Maxwell has got out of town in a hurry."

"I won't hear of such a thing. What motive is possible? The mere fact that a drug was skillfully employed is not enough."

"Certainly not. Thieves use it."

"And Edward Ames was a thief."

"But we don't know that he was here. Come, let's see what we do know. Your daughter ran away from home some years ago. You've never been able to find any trace of her. Didn't you look too far away from home? After I left the cemetery I communicated by wire with an assistant of mine who was in the Junction, which is the nearest considerable town in this place. He was on his way here. In reply to my questions, he wired that Charlotte Warren was seen there Thursday afternoon, but he couldn't find out how she got there. Now what do you say to the theory that she's been there all the time? And if so, what young man of this place has made most frequent visits to the Junction? Who's got the speediest team of horses in the place?

"Well, that's only a theory, and I hope that Maxwell is all right. But remember that you never knew on whose account Charlotte left her home, and—"

"I have always believed that Edward Ames was guilty. If she loved Maxwell, why were they not honorably married? On the other hand, she knew there was no hope of my consenting to her union with Edward Ames."

"Well, I give that up. We don't know enough yet to consider such questions with any hope of getting anything out of them. If Ned Ames was in town at the time I'd be pretty near sure of him, but I can't get a trace of him. Who's there?"

"I hear nothing."

"There's some one at the door. Not that one; the back door of the house."

Mr. Warren went to the window and looked out.

"A man and a boy. Who can they be?"

He hurried out of the room, and presently returned with Horace Riddle and old Abner Riddle, the boy's father.

"My son's got something to say to you, Mr. Warren," said Riddle. "Speak up and tell the truth for once in your life."

This tender parental admonition appeared to make little impression on the boy. He was staring at a book on the study table.

"That's the Bible, ain't it?" he said.

"It is," replied the clergyman.

"That's the book you swear on, and it makes it worse for you if you don't tell the truth. I'm willing to do it. You know I wouldn't lie to you, anyway, Mr. Warren. I never did. And if I put my hand on that book, and cross my heart, you'll be sure that what I say is true."

"If you mean to tell us that you lied in the cemetery," said the clergyman, frowning upon the young barbarian, "it's unnecessary. This man has already told me all about it."

"That's what I came here for," said the boy, firmly. "I told father that the man would tell, and you'd think what I said wasn't so. It was this way: This man came to me, and asked me flat if I'd tell a lie for a dollar, and I said I would.

"Then he told me to say what I did say up in the graveyard, and when he put those words in my mouth, you could have knocked me down with a feather. I didn't dare to tell him, for fear that I wouldn't get my dollar, but the truth was that I really did see Ed Ames in the woods back of High street, not half an hour before [illegible]

"I say this with my hand on the book, Mr. Warren, and it's true—it's true as what's in the book; every word of it."

The little fellow's manner carried conviction.

"Well, I've run up against a good many queer things in my life," said Mulligan, "but this beats them all. Young man, I believe what you tell me, and I want to say that it'll be worth more than a dollar to you, before we're through with this affair.

"Mr. Riddle," he continued, "you take your son home, and keep an eye on him all the time. What he says is likely to convict somebody of murder, and I don't suppose it's necessary to tell either of you that it isn't a thing to be talked about yet."

[TO BE CONTINUED.]

A WAR PRISON SHYLOCK.

Operations of a Money Lender Among Union Prisoners.

"Whenever I see a steamer approach the Pacific wharf out there," said a former officer in an Iowa regiment, now an inmate of the Soldier's Home at Santa Monica. "I recollect an incident of the war. I was one of 600 prisoners sent from Macon to Charleston, 1864. Not one of us were injured during our stay.

"But all of them got hard up for money. When they were in Richmond, in Libby prison, communication with the North was comparatively easy to those who had friends willing and able to send provisions and money. In Charleston it was very different. The prison fare was very poor, and the medical attendance was as bad as could be. In the cradle of secession the people seemed to be very poor. Before we had been there very long the money even of the richest of the prisoners was gone. There were many among us who were the sons, brothers, or near relatives of those in the North, who had plenty of money, but they were cut off from communication with us. Many people in the North sent gold to friends in prison, but it never reached us.

"There then appeared among us a new prisoner. He was, he said, a Union officer from a New York regiment. He had very little of the soldier about him. He rather reminded you of a whiskey drummer or a Chatham street clothing dealer. But he had a charm. He had money to lend—Confederate money. The money would not buy much, but it would buy something. A dollar in gold could be sold for about $20 in this currency outside the prison. We did not have any gold, but he did not demand gold. He lent his Confederate money for Northern drafts at double the rate of gold in the Charleston market. That is, he would give you $1,000 in Confederate money for a draft of $100 on a father, brother, wife or son in any of the great Northern cities. He said he would take the risk of collecting the drafts, and plumed himself on his generosity. He soon had customers and did a fine business. From officers he took notes endorsed by other officers. For these he charged at the rate of $500 in Confederate money for a note of $100—four times the rate for gold in the Charleston market.

"These operations occupied about six weeks. Altogether the man had secured drafts to the amount of $50,000 in gold, for every draft stipulated that it was to be paid in gold. Gold was then at a big premium in the North, so that drafts for $100 would be worth $150 or perhaps $200 in the North, if it were paid in gold. The speculator intended to make money both ways. If he could collect all he would have from $75,000 to $100,000 in greenbacks for his drafts.

"One day two Union officers were exchanged by the flag of truce in the harbor. One of the lucky fellows was the money lender. The other was a cavalry officer who had been a prisoner for many months. The latter had long watched the performance of the money lender and had resisted all inducements to borrow. The two went out of the harbor together and were received on board the Cosmopolitan by Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, the Adjutant-General of the Department of the South.

"The money lender and the cavalry officer had occupied the same stateroom on their northern voyage. During the voyage, the money lender became confidential, and the cavalry officer became convinced that he had never been an officer in the Union Army, but that he was simply put in the prison at Charleston to "work" the prisoners for the Shylocks of that city.

"As the Arago steamed up the bay toward the dock at Fortress Monroe, the money lender pulled from under the mattress a satchel. This was his only baggage. The cavalry officer had only the clothes on his back, and those he had borrowed from Gen. Woodford. The two were on deck. The money lender pushed his way eagerly to the forward deck and stood by the captain. Near him stood the cavalry officer admid the crowd of passengers who were watching the shores and participating in the excitement of a landing after a three days' sea voyage. Some incident of the occasion produced a sudden rush to the vessel's side. In that instant the money lender let go his grip on the satchel. Quick as thought it was seized by another hand and quietly dropped into the waters of the Chesapeake Bay.

"No one saw it done, for it was dropped on the side of the ship where none was looking. The cavalry officer was calmly leaning over the starboard rail contemplating the beautiful expanse of Hampton Roads, apparently caring nothing for the stir and clamor of the landing. The money lender exclaimed at his loss, and offered a reward for the return of the satchel and its contents. No one could offer him any comfort. He went down to the pier a very sad man, and no one seemed to sympathize so deeply with him as his comrade of the Second Cavalry.

Would Not Stand It.

"Here," thundered the South American President, "is a letter from that Yankee importer with the word 'dictated' at the bottom of it."

"Yes, sire," humbly said the secretary.

"Have him fired out of the country on the first steamship. I am running all the dictating business in this country myself."—Indianapolis Journal.

The Wrong Tank.

Janitor—I want to see the tank, mum.

Lady of the Flat (snappishly)—Well, he ain't here; and what's more I don't expect him before 2 or 3 in the morning.—Judge.

The joy that isn't shared with another dies young.—Ram's Horn.

AS WE SEE THINGS.

INFLUENCE OF THE INNER LIFE ON THE EXTERNAL WORLD.

How an Individual or a Scene May Have an Entirely Different Appearance to Two Persons—Happiness and Sorrow Made by Ourselves.

There have been philosophers who declared that the earth on which we stand and the stars on which we gaze have no real existence, but are merely the outcomes of our inner selves. Perhaps the best answer to this is that the mind itself, at least that of most people, refuses to receive the idea. The difference between the me and the not me is too sharply defined in the inner consciousness to permit Bishop Berkeley's notion from taking root within us.

Yet we cannot afford to overlook the germ of truth which this idea contains. Though not literally the creation of our thought, the outer world is to each one of us largely that which we make it. Nature herself, in all her varied scenes, whatever she may be in reality, shows herself to us in the light which we throw upon her. One man looks at a landscape and sees land and water, grass and trees, hills and plains, and nothing more. Another, a farmer, sees the growing crops, the fallow land, the noxious weeds, the prospect for future tillage and the obstacles to be overcome. Another, with a painter's eye, sees every variety of form and color, proportion and perspective, harmony and contrast, beauty and sublimity. To the melancholy man all is tinctured with gloom—a leaden pall covers even the gayest scenes—while to the joyous everything seems bright and glad, and even the dreariest of November days only suggests the radiant sunlight that is sure later on to struggle through the clouds.

So with the sights of a city. For each of us as they take on the aspect of our own mental condition. How differently they impress the citizen who has spent his life among them from the foreigner who views them for the first time! What a different message the stately and magnificent buildings bear to the absorbed man of business and to the architect who appreciates every detail of their construction!

If there is so wide a divergence in the aspect which inanimate things have for us, the difference is still greater in the way we regard the men and women by whom we are surrounded. Character is a complex thing, difficult to detect, impossible to fathom, yet we presumptuously venture to gauge and pronounce upon it with the smallest modicum of knowledge. It is curious to notice how differently the same person will impress various individuals. His friend will perhaps see no fault in him, his enemy no virtue. One will put faith in him; another will suspect his every action. One will deem him cold hearted; another will think him affectionate and kind. It must be that their own personalities are reflected in him, and that to a certain extent he does thus become for a time, while under their influence, what they suppose him to be always. It is certainly true that the good and gentle find far more goodness and gentleness in the world than those who are deficient in such qualities. It is the selfish man who is the keenest to detect selfishness in others; it is the overbearing who complain most of the arrogance and pride with which they are met, and the unjust who murmur at the injustice they receive. On the other hand, the loving and sympathetic discover love and sympathy everywhere; the noble and true bring to light nobility and truth which might otherwise be hidden. Thus to a large extent we develop the character of those we meet. By a subtle magnetism we draw like to like and evolve out of other personalities the characteristics of our own.

Even the outward circumstances of life are largely what we ourselves make them. We are accustomed to consider prosperity a blessing and adversity a curse, but quite frequently they change places. It is the spirit in which they are received that determines their result. The rich and self indulgent man, surrounded by luxury and opportunity, may be far less happy than his poorer neighbor who brings industry, fidelity and generosity into constant exercise. The same privileges that raise one young man to honor and usefulness are a snare and temptation to another. The same recreation that invigorates one enfeebles another. The same sorrow that softens one and leads him out of self to works of kindness and helpfulness prostrates another and renders him valueless. It is that which is within a man that so acts upon the externals of life as to decide their results to him, and through him to others.

If this be so, then happiness or wretchedness is largely in our power, and most of our complaints only bear witness to our own remissness. We may rightly recognize the futility of struggling against outward events which we cannot control, but we can always bring to bear upon them such a spirit and influence as shall turn evil into good and bitter into sweet.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A Startling Announcement.

An English literary man who was on the verge of bringing out a book at the Pitt Press ordered his proofs to be sent to him at a house where he was engaged to dine out, intending to look them over in the half hour after dinner. The printer's boy however, was late in bringing them, and the gentlemen had already rejoined the ladies in the drawing room when the company was electrified by hearing the sonorous voice of the butler announcing, "The devil from the Pitt has come for Mr. Jones!"—San Francisco Argonaut.

The Value of a Hyphen.

I recall an advertisement which actually appeared, sans hyphen, recently in a London daily, to wit: "Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Levi, having cast off clothing of every description, invite an early inspection."—Chap Book.

BAMBERGER'S

THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE

Newark, N. J.

Exceedingly Great Values

—IN—

Linens, Towels and Toweling.

The following and many other great inducements are offered to induce you to make, at this early date, your purchases of Linens and Linen Goods for the coming spring season.

ALL LINEN TOWELING twilled and very heavy, bleached and unbleached, 18 in. wide, 12½c, value, at......8½c yd

SILVER BLEACH TABLE LINEN very heavy, 55 inches wide, new Damask designs, value 39 cents, at......29c yd

ALL LINEN TOWELS, with knotted fringe and handsome borders, full bleached size 18x40 inches, 25c value, at............17c each

ALL LINEN TABLE DAMASK bleached, 64 inches wide, beautiful designs, fine quality, value 65c, at....49c yd

ALL LINEN TABLE NAPKINS, large size, pure bleach, in handsome patterns, value $1 25 per dozen, at..................98c doz

ALL LINEN TABLE COVERS, full 2½ yards long, with handsome colored borders, fine quality, value $1.75, at.........$1.19 each

☞ Orders by mail and requests for samples receive prompt attention.

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,

147 and 149 Market Street,

Near Broad Street. Newark, N. J.

"A Friend in Need is a Friend Indeed."

A friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm and after using it six weeks I believe myself cured of catarrh. It is a most valuable remedy.—Joseph Stewart, 624 Grand avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

My son was afflicted with catarrh; I induced him to try Ely's Cream Balm and the disagreeable catarrhal smell all left him. He appears as well as any one.—J. C. Olmstead Arcola, Ill.

Price of Cream Balm is fifty cents.

Gun Club Banquet at Finderne.

The Raritan Gun Club, consisting of the following parties: George B Cramer of North Branch, W Camman, Hon J D Bartine, J B Garretson, Dr H G Wagoner, W W Davenport and James Brown, Jr, of Somerville, P V Z Stryker, Dr J P Hecht and A B Rohn of Raritan, enjoyed a very elaborate spread at The Finderne Friday night. The menu card was well filled, and some daintily delicious dishes were served proving Mine Host White a thoroughly competent caterer. After dinner had been disposed of, bowling, pool and billiards were indulged in.

Lady Cyclers on Four-Wheelers.

The Lady Cyclers of Plainfield went Monday night in a stage to New Brunswick, where they were entertained by the New Brunswick Lawn Tennis Club. The evening was spent in dancing and singing, after which refreshments were served at the Mansion House. The quartette from Rutgers College rendered several very fine selections, after which the young people left for home. Among those present were the Misses Ethel Green, Arline Crane, Irina Shepherd, Minnie French, Hazen, Betta Yerkes, Grace Langdon, Mrs. Ned Williams, and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Green.

Next Thursday the club will go to Philadelphia to visit Mrs. Dillenbeck, formerly of this city.

Neaf Apgar's New Enterprise.

Neaf Apgar of Evona, who for several years has had charged of the ammunition department for Squires, the sporting goods man of New York, has severed his connection there, and started in the shell-loading business for himself at 294 Broadway, New York. Apgar has a host of friends among the sportsmen of the country and through his efforts has built up a large business in the shot gun cartridge line. He is considered as having no superior as an expert loader and handler of powders and success in his new venture is assured him.

Profits, $125.

Notwithstanding the fact that the tea of the Ladies Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed Church was not as well patronized as it should have been, Mrs E. T. VanWinkle, chairman of the committee who worked so hard for its success, is rejoicing in the fact that about $125 was realized as the result of their labors.

Rheumatic Pains.

Dr. David Kennedy's statement that the real cause of rheumatism was the imperfect action of the kidneys, and that Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy opened the clogged ducts, permitted the secretions to pass off, relief and comfort following as a natural result was so reasonable that sufferers seized at it with avidity and many a victim of rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago has been cured by using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy.

The Estey Pianos and Organs.

Constitutionalist readers will notice the advertisement of the Estey pianos and organs. The name of Estey is a guarantee of superiority, and any one looking for a reliable instrument, either in the way of a piano or organ, should call on Messrs, Estey & Saxe, 5 East 14th street, New York City.

—Joseph Sohl, the energetic new partner in the management of Music Hall, was highly complimented last night on the clean condition of the renovated house.

—The children that attend school in the Wadsworth building have been enjoying one advantage that the other school boys have not had; the driveway to the barn is covered over with ice in fine condition for skating.

—John Tier & Sons have only about half a crop of ice gathered. They stored away all the surface of the lake, and should the Winter continue cold for a few days they will gather the second crop of ice, which yesterday was six inches thick.

THE BALL OF THE SEASON.

The Ackerman Reception at the Casino in February.

Cards were issued yesterday for what will probably be the most brilliant reception of the season. It will be given by Mrs. J. Hervey Ackerman of 318 West Seventh street, Monday evening, Feb. 11, in the Casino of the Union County Country Club. Mrs. Ackerman will receive, assisted by her daughters, Mrs. Ernest R Ackerman, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, and Mrs. Robert Rushmore. Guests are expected from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, the Oranges, Philadelphia and Baltimore.

Mrs. Ackerman also announces "At Home" Tuesdays, Feb. 19 and 26.

Republican Organization.

At the recent reorganization of the Republican City Executive Committee Wm. R. Codington was elected Chairman, Roger Murray Vice-chairman, J. B. Coward Secretary and Treasurer, and the following men were elected from the various wards to constitute a finance committee: J. F. MacDonald, first ward; George D. Patton, second ward; Wm. Kirk, third ward, and Abram Angleman, fourth ward.

He Is a Rev.

A surprise to most Plainfield people will be the announcement that D. A. MacPhie, physical instructor of the Y. M. C. A., is, besides being a Christian gentleman, a minister of the Gospel, and entitled to the prefix Rev. He preached yesterday in the Westfield Presbyterian Church.

DEATHS.

BROOKES—On Tuesday, Jan. 29, 1895, Maria Brookes, widow of Bamber Brookes of Malden, England, in the 90th year of her age. Funeral services from the residence of her grandson, G. N. Hartley, 73 Rockview avenue, on Thursday, Jan. 31, at 3 p. m.

McLUSKEY—In this city Saturday, Jan. 26, 1895, Miss Mary McLuskey. Funeral services from the residence of her sister, Mrs. J. C. Shaw, 141 East 9th st., Tuesday, Jan. 29, at 3 p. m.

FOSTER—Jan. 25, 1895, Maria C., widow of the late Amos C. Foster of Westfield, N. J. Funeral from the residence of her son-in-law, Norris Taylor, Ralph street, Belleville, N. J., Monday morning Jan. 28. Interment in Westfield.

MURPHY—In this city of diphtheria, Friday, Jan. 25 1895, John F. Murphy, son of Wm. and Mary Murphy. Funeral strictly private from the residence of his parents, 140 North ave., Saturday, Jan. 26, at 2:30 p. m.

FIELDS—In this city Saturday, Jan. 26, 1895, Mrs Mary Fields aged 5[illegible] years, 9 months. Funeral from her late residence, 505 West [illegible] st., Monday, Jan. 28, at 9 a. m., from the house and at St. Mary's church at 9:30 a. m. Friends and relatives are invited to attend. Interment in St. Mary's Cemetery.

SMYTH—Of pneumonia, January 27, 1895, at 713 Grand street, Jersey City, Miss B. A. Smyth of Asbury Park. Solemn Requiem Mass at 10 o'clock Tuesday, January 29, in St. Peter's Church Jersey City. Interment at Plainfield, N. J., on the arrival of the 12 45 a. m. train. Service will be held at St. Mary's Church. Friends are respectfully invited to attend.

The Finderne,

under its new management, to be conducted as a

STRICTLY HIGH-GRADE RESORT

Inclosed piazzas, steam heat for Winter.

Open All the Year.

A. E. WHITE, Manager,
1 9 tf Finderne, N. J.

Prof. A. Wehner,

TEACHER OF THE PIANOFORTE.

ALSO VOICE CULTURE.

Graduate of the Conservatory of Leipzic, Germany, desires a few more pupils in Plainfield.

References given and required.

Address letters to the office of this paper.
1 21 tf-c

ELECTRIC TELEPHONE

Sold outright, no rent, no royalty. Adapted to City, Village or Country. Needed in every home, shop, store and office. Greatest convenience and best seller on earth. Agents make from $5 to $50 per day. One in a residence means a sale to all the neighbors. Fine instruments, no toys, works anywhere, any distance. Complete, ready for use when shipped. Can be put up by any one, never out of order, no repairing, lasts a life time. Warranted. A money maker. Write W. P. Harrison & Co., Clerk 10, Columbus, O.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 7, 1895. No 6

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

AWARDING THE PLUMS.

Councilmen Distribute the City's Official Patronage.

SOME OF THE SALARIES RAISED.

City Clerk Particularly Favored by an Increase of $200—Corporation Counsel to Be Paid for Extra Work—Complete Refutation of the Republican Organ's Libel on Councilman Frost—It Is Shown that the Editor of that Organ Himself Audited the Bill Which He Denounced as Irregular—Council Determined to Investigate the Water-Supply Rights—Liquor-License Applications—Capt. Grant Still on Top—Much Other Important Business.

Every member attended the session of the Plainfield Common Council Monday, and much important business was transacted. A protest was received from property-owners against the pond-hole on Clinton avenue, and that matter was referred to the Board of Health with a request for immediate action. A petition for electric light on West Fifth street between Central avenue and New street was referred to the Committee on Police and Public Lights; one for electric light at the westerly corner of Watchung and North avenues was referred to the same committee with power. Varian & Bobb applied for reduction of the Music Hall license; their plea was referred to the Committee on License. The Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company and Samuel P. Dunn asked for the return of the assessments they had paid on the abandoned project to open Peace street to the brook; on investigation the Clerk was directed to refund the amounts they had paid. A petition for more light at the far end of Arlington avenue was referred to the proper committee.

LIQUOR LICENSES.

The following applications for liquor licenses were received and referred to the License Committee:

Saloon—Charles Smith, Alexander D. Findley, John Rafferty, James Conoelly, James Day, John Sullivan.

Wholesale—Frank Linke.

Hotel—John Beerbower, Fred Caspar, John Goff, Jacob Stimm, Wallace Miller.

PLAINFIELD'S HEALTH.

The annual report of the Board of Health was received and filed, showing the following record of deaths:

Feb., 1894, 10; March, 8; April, 13; May, 17; June, 25; July, 24; Aug., 21; Sept., 17; Oct., 17; Nov., 14; Dec., 22; Jan., 1895, 22; total, 210, of which 8 were from accident.

Thirty-six of the deaths had been of persons 70 years old and upwards. Sixty-five had been of persons 5 years old and under. One hundred and nine had been of persons between 5 and 70. Eleven deaths were caused by scarlet fever and diphtheria. From Oct. 1, 1893, to Oct. 1, 1894, Plainfield recorded 90 marriages and 287 births; the births were 155 male and 132 female.

The Board reported that the matter of dumping was restricted to one locality, and that none but licensed scavengers was permitted to operate. The number of deaths was less than for the year before, and the death rate compared favorably with that of other cities.

A STRING TO THIS APPROPRIATION.

The Council of 1893 having appropriated $2,000 for a quarantine station, which money was never used by the Board, the Board declared its intention of making use of it during the year in establishing a pest-house; and $1,200 was asked for as this year's appropriation for operating expenses.

Messrs. Fisk and Dumont declared that the pest-house appropriation was for one year only, and that its privilege expired at the close of '93. The Clerk was on their motion directed to notify the Board to that effect, and the report of the Board was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Reports of the Collector, Treasurer, and City Physician were received and filed.

NOMINATIONS BY THE MAYOR.

The following appointments made by Mayor Gilbert were unanimously confirmed:

Corporation Counsel—Craig A. Marsh.

Street Commissioner—Robert A. Meeker.

Overseer of the Poor—Andrew Vanderbeek.

City Physician—M. B. Simpson, M. D.

Chief Engineer of the Fire Department—Thaddeus O. Doane.

First Assistant Engineer—James A. Martin.

Second Assistant Engineer—J. W. Murray, Jr.

Members of the Board of Health—George W. Rockfellow, H. Otis Newman.

Pound Keeper—Fred Wenzel.

Regular Police—George W. Grant, Christian Frederickson, Thomas McCue, Joseph Cooney, Patrick Kiely, Patrick Flanagan, William J. Boston, James Saunders.

Special Police—S. H. Hope, Thos. Clarkson, Wm. Reddy, John Flynn, Geo. H. Rockafellow, Jacob Kritsey, Wm. Dagnall, Chas. Lever, Alexander Jones, Morris Higgins, Vincent W. Nash, David F Stewart, Andrew Muir, Edward Maynard, Dennis Carney, William W. Robinson, Joseph Galbraith, Edward Martin, Wm. H. Hillman, Henry F. Pugh, Nathan Pollard, Piney Yeoman, Chas. Post, Edwin H. Dobbs, Chas. Gloor, James E. Totten.

The nominations of John Hartpence and Nicholas Meyers to be regular policemen and Martin Vanderweg to be special policeman were referred to the Committee on Police and Public Lights for investigation, their names not having been considered by the Police Board. No special comment was made except in the case of Vanderweg, who was reported by Mr Fisk as having been expelled from the Fire Department for insubordination.

NEW POLICY AGAINST TAX ADJUSTMENTS

Chairman Dumont of the Committee on Finance reported that the committee advised against granting the application of James E. Martine and others for the apportionment of taxes on the Martine estate. He said that taxes were 12 years delinquent, and that the lands which had been taxed on $175 and $250 an acre as farm lands were now being offered for sale as building lots at $4,000 an acre. He felt that this sort of apportionment was bad policy, and his recommendation that the petition be not granted was adopted. The Committee on Finance was on his motion authorized to confer with the Assessor concerning similar matters, with a view to securing to the city without evasion full payment of taxes of farm lands turned into building lots.

Mr. Westphal of the Committee on Laws and Ordinances reported that in the matter of the encroachment of the Edison Electric Light Company's poles on Plainfield streets the company had been consulted and had asked for a few days grace; this had been granted, and the committee would report later developments.

STREET RAILWAY EXTENSIONS NEXT SESSION.

Mr. Fisk of the Committee on Streets reported progress in the matter of street-railway extensions. Several conferences had been had with the company, and the negotiations had been favorable. He would be prepared to report definitely and in full Monday night, Feb. 18, and he therefore moved that when the Council adjourn it be to meet again on that date. This was carried. A meeting is likely to be held also Feb. 25, for the consideration of the liquor-license applications.

A resolution was adopted for the advertising for bids for crushed stone and similar supplies.

The rules of order were adopted as by-laws.

A new ordinance to govern the cleaning of snow and ice from sidewalks was adopted on second reading and ordered engrossed and advertised preparatory to final passage. It is the intention of the Council to have the sidewalks within the prescribed limits kept paved substantially and maintained in perfect passable condition.

It was stated that the commissioners were about ready to report on the Madison avenue opening, and that at the next meeting that matter would be taken up.

LEAVE YOUR RAZZOR TO HOME.

Mr. Westphal introduced an ordinance designed to prohibit the carrying of concealed weapons and to prevent the discharge of firearms in public. Its provisions included that no one could carry razor, butcher knife or other deadly weapon concealed, and it was pointed out that this would prohibit a man from carrying his razor to the barber's to get it sharpened, or his carving knife to the grinder's. Nevertheless the ordinance was adopted on its second reading, and ordered engrossed and advertised, Messrs. Dumont, See and Stockton voting No.

Mr. Dumont reported that Landlord Coward had agreed to add a story to the fireproof vault for the use of the city, at an additional annual rent of $50. The Committee on Finance was instructed to have this improvement accomplished.

MR. FROST VINDICATED.

Mr. Dumont called attention to the publication in The Courier-News of an editorial attacking Mr. Frost. The article said:

> There is one very interesting bill on file for printing done by the Engineering News Company of which Mr. Frost is Treasurer. The bill was sworn to as correct by Mr. Frost as Treasurer of the company, and a little later at a Council meeting Mr. Frost as a committee member passed judgment upon it and affixed his name in approval to it. This particular sort of proceeding is specified as irregular by the laws of the State in no ambiguous terms. Would the Plainfield public like further details of this particular transaction? The Courier-News can furnish them.

Mr. Dumont said that it was due to Mr. Frost to explain that this particular piece of work was the publication of the sewer maps, a matter which his house had taken charge of as an accomodation to the Council. He submitted the original bills, showing the actual expense attached to every part of the work, and these bills were from workmen merely employed under the management of Mr. Frost's company, the aggregate bill being just what those workmen had charged for the actual labor and supplies. Mr. Frost's company had no interest in the work whatever, and had not profited thereby. The bill had been endorsed by Messrs. Frost Erickson and See of the proper committee, and audited by Frank Willetts Runyon, City Clerk and City Auditor. Mr. Dumont moved that in justice to Mr. Frost the copy of the attack be filed with the City Clerk with the original bills attached completely refuting its insinuations. This was adopted.

Six cuspidors and a water cooler were ordered for the city offices.

SALARIES.

The salaries of the city officials were fixed for the year as follows:

Corporation Counsel, $1,000, and in addition such amount as the Council should decide for extra work on the sewer matter, such extra pay to come from the sewer fund. City Clerk, as such, $800, and as City Auditor $400. Treasurer, $700. Assessor, $1,000. Collector, $1,300. Judge, $800, Street Commissioner, $1,700. Captain of Police, $90 a month. Regular police, $60 a month. Special police, 25 cents an hour while on duty. Overseer of the Poor, $500. City Physician, $250. Chief Engineer, $700. 1st Asst., $200. 2d Asst., $100. Drivers, $55 a month to the two who have been in the service more than three years, and $50 to the others.

These salaries are the same as before, with the following exceptions:

Corporation Counsel, hitherto $1,000 without extra. No opposition to the extra allowance.

City Clerk, hitherto $700 for the clerkship and $200 for auditing. Increase advocated strongly by Mr. Fisk, and voted against by Messrs. Dumont, Erickson, Frost and Ginna as too great a raise.

Overseer of the Poor, hitherto $400. Mr. Ginna highly commended the work of Mr. Vanderbeek, and said that that officer by his careful services saved the city each year more than double his salary. The extra $100 should be considered as his due for office rent.

Two three-year drivers, hitherto $50 a month Mr. Dumont protested that $50 ought to be the top figure for all drivers, as plenty would be glad to get the job for that money. Mr. Erickson said the drivers were on duty all the time, 24 hours a day, and Mr. Frasee said they ought to be paid fully $55.

STILL AFTER THE WATER SUPPLY COMPANY

On resolution of Mr. Fisk, and without debate, the Corporation Counsel was directed to prepare an opinion and submit it to the Council, stating what territory was covered by the charter of the Plainfield Water Supply Company in the language "the township of Plainfield and adjoining towns", what right the Plainfield Water Supply Company has to sell to other companies water from the Netherwood wells, and what right the Plainfield Company has to obtain from the Plainfield watershed water to be delivered to the Union Water Company and the Elizabeth Water Company for consumption in Elizabeth. These, held Mr. Fisk, were important questions which ought to be settled now, once for all.

PURITY OF THE SUPPLY UNQUESTIONED.

Mr. Fisk requested that Mr. Frost explain the portion of the Water Committee's recent report on the water-supply investigation referring to the possibility of contamination from surface water.

Mr. Frost said that the Plainfield water was as pure as any on earth, and that the committee had only pointed out the possibility which would result if the pumping were forced in an effort to supply too large a population. The point was that the Plainfield water should be kept for home consumption, and that if a strain were kept up on the wells in the endeavor to send water to the whole county or more the natural filter of the earth contributing to the wells would be damaged and open waterways would be established, admitting water and its impurities without the saving intervention of natural filtration. It was a remote possibility, not a present actuality. No alarm need be felt, and the water could safely and happily be used so long as the capacity of the wells was not overtaxed, which overtaxing was not likely to produce results for years to come.

The ordinances for the regulation of the construction of buildings and for the establishment of the office and duties of the inspector of buildings, were taken from the table and referred back as on second reading for further consideration.

After paying its monthly batch of bills, the Council adjourned.

"A Friend in Need is a Friend Indeed."

A friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm and after using it six weeks I believe myself cured of catarrh. It is a most valuable remedy.—Joseph Stewart, 624 Grand avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

My son was afflicted with catarrh; I induced him to try Ely's Cream Balm and the disagreeable catarrhal smell all left him. He appears as well as any one.—J. C. Olmstead Arcola, Ill.

Price of Cream Balm is fifty cents.

Perils of Mountain Travel.

Stonewall Jackson, a horse-trader of Martinsville, drove off the river bank into the Passaic river, near the home of Thos. Terrill, Wednesday night. His horse was drowned, and the wagon wrecked, but Jackson escaped.

—An umbrella that keeps you dry and that is handsome to carry, and yet that collapses quickly to be packed in the grip, is the latest novelty in the stock of Jeweler Asa Collier.

HYMENEAL.

Delanoy—Corliss.

A social event of no small importance was the marriage of Miss Annie Wright Corliss to William Cooper Delanoy of New York, which took place Tuesday afternoon at 1, at the home of the bride, "Rowlanding", Central avenue. Miss Corliss was one of the most popular girls in Plainfield society, and although the invitations were necessarily restricted to the intimate friends the house was crowded to its utmost capacity, over 200 people from Plainfield, New York and Philadelphia witnessing the ceremony, which was one of the prettiest ever seen in this city.

The house was very handsomely decorated with lilies, creeping cypress, palms, and other flowers and all daylight was excluded from the rooms on the first floor which were lighted by candles and lamps. The ceremony was performed in the drawing room at the west end of the house. The bow window in which the clergyman stood was a veritable bower of lilies with a background of cypress and was lighted by a large silver candelabrum Rev. Dr. J. Wesley Brown of St. Thomas Church, New York, officiated, and the music was by the Grace Church choir boys under the able leadership of Mr. Cock.

The bridal party entered the room from the stairs through a passageway kept open through the crowd of guests by two white ribbons, the ends of which were held by Miss Elme Corliss, sister of the bride, and her cousin, Miss Coolidge of Orange. There were four bridemaids and three ushers. The bridemaids all wore pink silk covered with white chiffon and carried large bunches of pink roses. The ushers wore the conventional frock coats with dark gray gloves, and gardenias in their coats. Mrs. J. Edgar Corliss, the mother of the bride, wore an eminence silk gown and carried a huge bunch of violets. The bride came in on the arm of her grandfather, J. Howard Wright. She wore white satin and a tulle veil fastened by a diamond pin and orange blossoms. The gift of the groom, a diamond Crescent held her gown at the throat. The party was met at the end of the beribboned aisle by the groom and his best man, Edward Delanoy. The bride was given away by her grandfather.

The bridemaids were Miss Talmadge of Netherwood, Miss Ginna of Watchung avenue, Miss Lockwood of Philadelphia, and Miss Johnson of Bridgeport. The ushers were Howard Corliss, the brother of the bride, Dunbar Wright, her uncle, and Mr. Gilbert of New York.

Everyone stood during the ceremony, which was read in an impressive manner by Dr. Brown. The choir boys sang the Lohengrin wedding march during the procession and chanted softly during the service.

After the bride and groom had received the congratulations of their hosts of friends an elaborate breakfast was served from a very handsomely set table in the dining room. The centrepiece of smilax and callas was particularly effective. The credit of the entire breakfast is due the Max Wiertz who had carte blanche to do the best he could and the result was fully equal to the collations that have been served by New York caterers in the past few years in Plainfield.

The guests who had come from New York on the special were provided with a train to take them back at 3, while the bride and groom left shortly before for Florida where they will spend the honeymoon.

Their exit from the house was accompanied by the usual showers of rice, and the trap that took them to the station had been surreptitiously decked with streaming white ribbons. An old shoe was hurled after the departing vehicle and many threw discretion to the winds and followed Mr. and Mrs. Delanoy to the gates with good wishes and rice. On their return from Florida the young couple will go to housekeeping in their Madison avenue apartment in New York.

The presents were very numerous and handsome, but were not shown, as many of them had been sent to New York.

Quite as many of the guests were from out of town as were from Plainfield. Among the many were: Mr and Mrs J Howard Wright, Mr and Mrs J Parker Mason, Mrs Robert L Burnett, Mr and Mrs F O Herring Mr and Mrs Irving H Brown, Mr and Mrs Henry A McGee, Mr and Mrs Alexander Gilbert, Mrs William E Lowe, Mrs Evarts Tracy, Mrs William Palmer Smith, Mrs Henry P Talmadge, Mr and Mrs Henry O Adams, Mr and Mrs Delanoy of New York, Mr and Mrs De-Witt, Mrs Orville T Waring, Mrs Walter E Stewart, Miss Stewart, Mrs Marion S Ackerman, Mrs H M Stockton, Mrs Joseph Sandford, Mrs Wilbur Fiske, Mrs W J Roome, Mr and Mrs L G Timpson, Dr and Mrs Kimball, Mrs Moore, Mrs Adams, Miss Johnson, Miss Grace Cooley, Miss Whiton, Miss Maude Van Boskerck, Miss Lizzie Van Boskerck, Miss Dumont, Miss Huntington, Miss Yates, Miss Minnie Wood, the Misses Solly, Mrs Munger, Mr and Mrs Walker, Clifford McGee, J Stowell Anthony, L E Waring, Roger Erickson, W H Brown, Alexander Hudnut, Howard Coolidge, Benjamin Rush, and W H Case.

GOOD FELLOWSHIP AT THE CAMP.

John Hand's Devotees Share with Their Friends an Evening of Sociability.

The regular meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., was held Monday evening, at which time a delegation from Col H. B. Reed Camp, No. 40, of Somerville, was present.

After the business of the evening was concluded, the Woman's Relief Corps and comrades of the Grand Army and their friends were invited to the room, when a social hour was spent.

Commander Coriell of Post 73 was called on and made a few appropriate remarks, giving strong evidence of his friendship to the Camp. Capt. Vickery of Camp 40 in a few words expressed his pleasure in being present, and President Mrs. M. C. Dobbins of the Relief Corps gave words of encouragement.

Past President Mrs. Morse recited "The Blue and the Gray", which the audience greatly enjoyed.

Past Commander Wm. Hand, for whose brother the camp was named, told the circumstances of his late brother's enlistment. A young man had enlisted but owing to a deformity in his right arm he was unable to handle a gun, and John Hand being present at once offered his services. He was the first Plainfielder killed and brought home.

First Lieutenant Parker of Camp 40 was interesting in his remarks of patriotism, as were also First Sergeant Dickey and J. B. Dungan. Second Lieutenant Lorrie also spoke a few words.

First Sergeant Horace Martin of Camp 28 favored the audience with two flute solos, accompanied by Miss Ada Nash; and Sergeant of the Guard H. S Thatcher gave an amusing recitation.

Comrade Mattox and his daughter, Miss Try Mattox, were heartily received in reciting several excellent selections.

Remarks were made by Past Commander Dobbins and other comrades, including a visiting comrade from Brooklyn.

Those present were then asked to go to the room below, where coffee, cake and sandwiches were served in abundance.

After the inner man had been satisfied, an adjournment was made to the post rooms, where some instrumental music was enjoyed, given by Bert Naylor and Bert Blake, on violin and piano.

It was rather late when the joyous company broke up, but all expressed themselves well pleased with the evening's entertainment and hoped it would be repeated.

Competition the Best Cheapener.

(From The Trenton True American.)

The first question for the Legislature to ask itself in the matter of cheap gas is, what right has the Legislature to fix a price upon a commodity of ordinary purchase and sale.

If it can say what gas can be sold for, why not also fix the price of coal, which is much more a necessary of life and an attribute of comfort.

People can and do get along without gas; they cannot maintain existence or prosecute business without coal.

The reason why the coal miners and coal transporters and coal sellers have been allowed to do their business in their own way is because it is not an attribute of government to carry on the business for itself or to arbitrarily establish rules and rates whereby private capital shall carry it on.

Nothing could be more manifestly unjust and oppressive than for the State to require any business to be carried on at unprofitable rates, and the experiment of compelling this to be done has always failed, even when the tremendous surge of the French revolution sought to fix the price of bread.

The public good is best served by encouraging the formation of these semi-public corporations, and leaving it to competition between them to produce low prices.

This the Legislature has a right, and ought to do.

If there is authority in the present law which fosters a monopoly in the manufacture and furnishing of gas, the Legislature can wipe it out, and should do so.

This is the best way to test the rhapsodies of quondam inventors and specialists, who, in every trade and business, claim to be able to prosecute that business better than those who are in it and have made a success of it.

There is plenty of capital that would be glad to go into the manufacture of gas, at 30 cents a thousand feet, if it be demonstrated that that be possible, and the Legislature ought to give them a chance not only in Trenton but elsewhere in the State.

—Prof. Samuel Dickie will speak in Music Hall next Sunday afternoon.

GREENGOODS GANG.

The Swindlers Operating in This Vicinity.

A VICTIM FROM THE SOUTH.

Julius Oifred, a Practitioner from Louisiana, Is Relieved of $300 at the Fanwood Clubhouse—Was Promised $3,000, and Got a Wad of Paper.

The Plainfield police were visited by a stranger Monday afternoon who complained that he had been robbed by greengoods men.

His name he gave as Julius Oifred, and his home Redwine, La., where he said he was a medical practitioner.

In response to greengoods circulars and letters he had journeyed thither to receive $3,000 for $300. He was met at South Bethlehem yesterday by a heavy-set, dark complexioned young fellow of about 21 years. This chap took a seat behind him in the train to Plainfield, and they were met at the Plainfield station by a Fanwood hackman.

Driven to the Van, or Fanwood clubhouse, on the county road, they were, he says, met at the door and admitted by the proprietor. He says that he was shown into a room where were two elderly men, and that the proprietor locked them all in there, laughing as he turned the key.

$3,000 was counted out to Oifred by the two old men, and he was given a box into which he thought he had seen them place the pile of bills. He paid over his $300, and was escorted to the Fanwood station by the young man from Bethlehem. A ticket was bought for him to Bound Brook, and he was cautioned not to open the box till he got well away from the neighborhood. As soon as he was aboard the train, however, he went to a toilet room, and found the box contained nothing but a pile of paper with a dollar bill on top. He left the train at Plainfield, and Captain Grant and Sergeant Kiely promptly investigated his story.

The strangers had gone on a train to New York, and the proprietor of the Van disowned all knowledge of them and their game. He said they had merely used his place as a meeting place just as any of the traveling public might use it.

Detective Charles W. Dodd of the Jersey Central took the fleeced stranger in hand this morning, because there have been several other just such cases at the Van during the past month or more, and gleaned what information he could in addition to that which he has been carefully gathering for weeks back.

AN ORCHID TEA.

Charming Event at the Home of Councilman Ginna.

About 125 of Miss Ginna's friends assembled Saturday afternoon at the spacious family home, 1107 Watchung avenue, at an orchid tea given in honor of the fair hostess's friend, Miss Hutton of Baltimore. The house was gorgeously decorated with rare and beautiful orchids from the celebrated private conservatories of Stephen A. Ginna, father of the hostess. A novel and strikingly artistic effect was produced on the banquet table by a huge pyramid of orchids in the centre, at the apex of which was a single pale-blue flower of indescribably delicate tracery, which was so rare and perfect as to be well nigh priceless, so seldom does this special variety blossom. The harmony of the exquisite table-setting was enhanced by massive lavender-trimmed candelabra.

GOLDEN WEDDING.

Mr. and Mrs. John Flannery Get Married Over Again as They Were 50 Years Ago.

Mr. and Mrs. John Flannery of Scotch Plains celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday evening, by inviting a number of their friends to witness their re-marriage. Rev. Dr. Parks performed the ceremony, and the answers of both were given as clear and happy as they were 50 years ago. A number of handsome presents were given to the bride and groom. Among those present were:

Mr and Mrs Oliver, Mrs Riley and daughter, Mrs Dobbins and daughters of Kearney, J E Flannery, Frank Flannery and Miss Herring of Plainfield, Mr and Mrs E L Hand, Mr and Mrs Noble, Rev J H Parks, W B Noble, George Johnston, Harry Flannery, Miss Grace Robison, Miss Nellie Flannery, and others of Scotch Plains.

All left near midnight with best wishes for the happy couple, and that they might live to celebrate many more anniversaries.

—The bowling game between the Elizabeth and Plainfield teams, which was set for Friday night, has been postponed indefinitely.

(Copyright by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.)

CHAPTER IV.

FRANK AMES' DISCOVERY.

In the afternoon of the following day the body of Charlotte Warren was committed to the tomb.

Detective Mulligan—whose total lack of Irish characteristics suggested that he could find another name for himself by looking in his family Bible—held what he called a conference after the funeral. Nobody else was present. He opened the discussion by remarking to himself that Charlotte beat any woman he ever knew for keeping a secret.

"Never did I see a corpse that had less to say," he remarked. "She walked a considerable distance through the snow, and got her dress and her shoes wet, and then she partially dried them before a hot fire (her dress is scorched a bit) and that's all I know about what she did in this town."

The fire he surmised to have been that which had burned in the room where Ned Ames' body, or at least his coffin, had lain on Thursday night. But that was guesswork. He had failed to find any trace of the girl's presence in or about the Ames house. If she had approached the house in the usual way, her footprints had been obliterated by those of the crowd that had attended the funeral. If she had approached in any other way, he could not find out what it was.

There was also the puzzle of the weapon which had made such a peculiar wound. He had searched the Ames house twice openly and once secretly and had failed to find anything in it which would answer the requirements of the case.

By careful questioning of Horace Riddle he had located the spot in the woods where the boy had seen Ned Ames—or thought that he had seen him—but the detective had not succeeded in getting a clew at that point which would guide him a single inch in the direction which the hunted criminal had taken.

It must be remembered that the capture of Ned Ames was desired for a double reason. Mulligan had been pursuing him for weeks as one of the shrewdest active operators in a league of high-grade thieves which had given the Boston police no end of trouble. Even if innocent of the murder, the young man's liberty was forfeit to the law. In view of these facts Mulligan decided to try it again in the woods, on a somewhat different "lay."

Rev. Mr. Warren had formed a very high opinion of Mulligan's abilities, and he believed that big, hearty, pleasant-faced man, so different from the detective of romance, concealed the spirit of the bloodhound in his heart, and would yet track the criminal down. The clergyman grew impatient whenever Mulligan was out of his sight. He wished to know every new fact the instant it was brought to light. Only by concentrating his mind upon the problem of detection could he keep his grief within bounds. Blessed is he who has work to do at such a time. Early in the evening Frank Ames called upon Mr. Warren, whom he found pacing his study in eager expectation of a visit from the detective. Frank brought painful news. His mother had not rallied from the shock of the terrible scene at the grave. On the contrary, her endurance had been so seriously overtaxed that, at her time of life, the gravest results were to be feared. She lay ill, and had relapsed into a merciful unconsciousness of her sorrow. In Dr. Maxwell's absence there was no competent physician in Williston, and it had been necessary to telegraph for one who lived in the Junction. He had not then arrived. There never is any lack of good nursing in a New England town, however, and Samuel Ames had found abundant help for the bedside of his wife.

On hearing this news, the clergyman thought it his duty to go at once to Mr. Ames' house. Frank remained with Anna Warren.

At such a time, when the whole village fairly throbbed with excitement, it may not be a matter for wonder that Frank Ames displayed agitation. Yet Anna, who was at tremendous nervous tension herself, could not help remarking upon the condition of her companion. The pallor of his face was heightened by his heavy brows and black mustache. His hands trembled. He paced the little parlor in the manner of one tortured by the most harrowing thoughts.

"The sight of you," said Anna, "makes me regard myself as a marvel of self-control."

He wheeled about suddenly, and faced her.

"And the sight of you," he said, "makes me lose what little self-control I had before."

His tone frightened her. She asked him with a trembling voice what he meant by that.

"Anna," he said, approaching her, "we have been friends a good many years. I remember you almost from the day when you were born, and I have watched you grow year by year into the beautiful woman that you are to-night. How have you regarded me?"

"As a friend, certainly," said Anna. "Have you ever had cause to think otherwise?"

"I'm afraid not," he replied, while his lips quivered.

"Upon my word I do not understand you," cried the girl.

"If you could see my heart—but there, I frighten you. Yet I can't help it. I have that to say to you to-night which demands that both of us should be stronger than human flesh and blood can be. Something has happened; something that you do not suspect—any more than I did a few hours ago. I believe that it gives me an opportunity—such as a thousand lives, if I might live them one after another on this earth, would not bring—the opportunity of serving you in an emergency involving awful risks and the most harrowing difficulty."

He spoke wildly, yet with such evident, deep purpose that the girl was startled into calmness. There is such a possibility, though few there be who are ever called upon to know it by actual experience.

"Tell me exactly what you mean," she said, and the steadiness of her tone amazed him.

"You love Robert Maxwell?"

"How can you ask me that? I am to be his wife."

"I know that, but in this modern life it means little. Do you love him enough to do him any service that one human being can do another? Do you love him as I love you? Stop! This is no time to evade and disguise the truth. Hear me out. When I tell you what I propose to do for you my disclosure will have to be made. You will know that no motive of human conduct save love alone is strong enough to account for it. I have said it, and there is an end. And now for him. Does your love answer the test?"

"I believe," said the girl firmly, "that there is nothing he could ask of me that I would not do."

"He cannot ask it. You must do it without the asking. You must serve him at your own cost, and at your own risk, and at once."

"What does he require of me?"

"Surely you must suspect."

"I cannot guess your meaning."

"Where is he now?"

"You know well enough. He is in Boston doing his best to solve the mystery of my sister's death."

"Can you believe it? Do you not see that his sudden departure is a flight? Not a word! You must hear me. Who resisted to the utmost the opening of that coffin? Who has been most diligent in casting suspicion upon my brother? Who, at the disclosure of the secret of that grave which so nearly closed over the most horrible of crimes, was the first to leave this place? Already the detective suspects him, but it has been reserved for me to find the absolute proof of his guilt."

He spoke with such appalling conviction, that his words froze the heart of the girl. Yet she found strength to say:

"I do not believe it."

"Let us not waste time. Supposing I convinced even you; supposing that you could not longer doubt; would you deliver him up to justice or would you save him?"

"You cannot do it—. Stay! I will answer your question. I would save him."

"At what cost?"

"At any cost."

They faced each other with such intensity of deadly earnestness, that each felt the other's thought as if it had been a magnetic force throbbing in the air between them.

"At the cost of yourself?" he demanded.

Again that awful calmness settled upon her.

"I know now what you mean," she said. "You have discovered strong evidence of Robert's guilt—enough, doubtless, to satisfy you. In connection with the old slander that joined his name with my sister's ruin, and, supported by the strange fatality of his conduct, you think that conviction would follow. You have doubtless discovered what I know, namely, that his whereabouts on Thursday night cannot be proven, because he was driving alone on the road that leads toward Lincoln. So the case stands, and you propose to me that you will hide the evidence which you possess if I will promise to marry you, as the price of it."

He bowed his head.

"What is your evidence?"

"If it is conclusive, have I your promise?"

"If it is conclusive to whom?"

"To you."

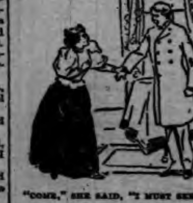
"I am to be judge and jury—to convict him and sentence myself?"

He winced, but recovering himself instantly, answered firmly:

"Yes; I trust wholly in your word."

"You have it. Now for your evidence. I have no fear of it."

"Wait till you have heard. You know that I suspected him from the first. Besides that, I believed that my brother had really died and that his body was in the coffin that I brought here with me. I think there is no doubt that these facts will be established on investigation. You must know I had some evidence of his death before I left Boston. Against it is only Horace Riddle's story, which you know to be worth nothing.



"COME," SHE SAID, "I MUST SEE IT."

"The case stood thus with me, and I was confronted by the problem of the disappearance of my brother's body. I believe—in fact, I now know—that it was taken from the coffin and your sister's substituted. Her full story I cannot pretend to read, but the detective will do that. My attempt was to find my brother's body, and I have succeeded!"

To say that Anna Warren heard this statement with calmness would be to pass the bounds of reason. Her heart seemed to stop. Even a woman may doubt, though ordinarily she is spared that misery by the absence of logic.

This discourse removed Edward Ames from the field of conjecture. The man whom she had believed to be guilty had proven an alibi measurable only by the distance between this world and the next. Having been mistaken in what she held to be practically certain, her faith in all things was shaken—which is the way with women at such exceptional moments. But faith reasserted itself. As yet she had had no proof. The mere finding of the body could not convict her lover.

Yet she shuddered at the question which she must ask next, and her lips moved almost without sound.

"Where was it?"

"In the old Maxwell house on High street," he replied. "It is there now."

Her face was like a mask of white marble. She put her hand on his arm.

"Come," she said; "I must see it with my own eyes."

CHAPTER V.

THE MYSTERY OF NED AMES' BODY.

The Maxwell home on High street was a hundred and forty years old. Little of the original structure remained except the great oak framework, which might stand some generations longer.

It was untenanted. The young physician—the last of his race—had abandoned it about a year before. He had built a modern house and furnished it luxuriously in anticipation of his marriage with Anna.

Dr. Maxwell was a man of considerable means for that part of the country. He was not in the least dependent upon his practice, otherwise he would have gone to a more favorable location for money making. But situated as he was, he much preferred to remain in Williston. He loved the town for its great beauty, and for the quiet which favored his studies.

The old Maxwell place was on High street, about a hundred yards from its junction with a thoroughfare called Broadway, as the Williston people said, because it was the narrowest street in town. The Ames house was on Broadway, which, in its lower part, was the business street of the place. There were three residences on its upper portion, and Samuel Ames' was the last of them in the direction of High street. Clustered about the junction of Broadway and High street were many great trees, some of which extended their branches almost across one or other of the two thoroughfares.

It was more than half a mile from Mr. Warren's residence to the abandoned house in which Frank Ames had found his brother's body. There was courage enough displayed in Anna Warren's visit by night upon that dreadful errand to furnish forth a dozen martyrs.

They avoided the observation of chance passers upon the street. It had been agreed between them that they should make all haste; and, after Anna had been convinced of the truth of her companion's story, they should go to his father's house. There was little chance that the discrepancy in time would ever be discovered. It was much safer than a return to the Warren house would have been.

"When I think of this discovery," said Ames, as they trod the silent street, "I am amazed that it had not been already made. What more convenient hiding-place was possible? No one visits the old house. Had the grave closed over your sister's body there would have been no suspicion, and my brother's corpse could have lain there until its removal was convenient or until time served for its burial in the old cellar.

"If this detective had not been convinced that my brother's death was only a pretense, he would have solved the mystery at once. My belief in its reality made the solution easy. I went to the house this evening. I secured entrance by means of an upper window—"

"All the doors were locked," murmured Anna, shuddering.

"Yes, and you know who had the keys. Oh, Anna, believe me I do not speak heartlessly, nor am I moved by jealousy. The facts are to blame, not I. Some day when you are able to see my conduct in a clear light I believe that you will know it to be good, that you may even learn to love me as one who—"

"Hush! I cannot listen. Tell me how you found him."

"I knew where to look. I put myself in the murderer's place. Where would he hide it? I thought at once of the cellar. There is a great, old-fashioned furnace there in which a human body could be burned. Why he did not do it that night I could not at first understand. Now I know that he must have been forced to attend to his horses—remember he had ostensibly gone driving—and that having done so he dared not return to the house that night.

"My conclusions were correct. My poor brother's body lay on the cellar floor. There was scarcely a pretense of concealing it. Anna, can you bear the sight?"

"I can and will. There is but one difficulty. How can I get into the house?"

"I have unfastened one of the windows on the lower floor. All the doors are locked or nailed up. You must enter that way."

She did not hesitate. When they had reached the house, she made him enter by the window first, and then he drew her in after him. The lantern which he had used on his first search was hidden in the room they entered. He lighted it, and carefully shielding the flame so that it would attract no attention if anyone chanced to be passing, he led the way to the cellar. It was divided into two parts by a partition of brick with a light wooden door. Frank laid his hand upon the latch.

"Summon up your courage," he said. "But why should I say that? You tremble less than I do. No words can express how I admire you for what you are doing this night. Courage is the sum of all the virtues. Yet I must warn you. When I open this door, his body will lie before you."

"Open it," she whispered, awestruck.

He obeyed. The lantern's light flashed into the darkness.

There was a moment's pause. Then, with a hoarse cry, Frank sprang forward.

"It is gone!" he shouted, utterly oblivious of caution. "The body is not here."

"It never was here," breathed the girl. "Why have you brought me?"

"I swear to you that I saw it lying there this night. Bend down!"

He held the lantern to the floor of cement.

"There! In the dust do you not see the outline of his form?"

She saw it. Dust and ashes lay thick upon the floor, and it was possible to trace something like the imprint of a human body.

"In heaven's name, who can have done this?" cried the girl. "Frank Ames, if you have a heart in your breast, answer me: are you speaking the truth?"

If ever a man swore an oath to which credence could not be denied, Frank Ames did it then. It would have been madness to doubt his word. The truth flashed out of him, and there was no gainsaying it.

Hurried search convinced them that the body was not in the old house. Having failed, they went out as they had entered. They reached the street by the little side gate which they had used when they came in.

"I will return and obliterate our foot-prints," said Frank. "Hold! How blind I have been!"

He led the way toward the main gate which admitted to the walk leading to the front door. Two men's footprints were visible. They had entered and left the house in that way.

"We are too late!" gasped the girl. "Robert is lost."

"I have convinced you, then."

"No, no!"

"But I have. I know it. Yet the service I would have rendered you is now impossible. I cannot claim the reward."

"Not yet, but work! I shall need a friend. He will need a friend. I do not believe him guilty, but it would be folly to deny that he is in peril. Save him, and I will never forget what you have done."

"That is worth working for," he said. "But it is not all. A man demands more. If I save him, though you yourself believe him guilty, or if he never returns, thus confessing his guilt, what shall be my reward?"

"Urge me no further. I am utterly incapable of thought. Come with me to your father's house. We must be seen there. Then you must take me home."

Seeing that she was indeed yielding to the horrors of that night, he silently obeyed her, fearful that his resistance might actually distract her.

They found the Rev. Mr. Warren at Ned Ames' house, and with splendid self command the girl told him the story that had been agreed upon. She had come to take him home.

Frank insisted upon sharing the walk, and the girl dared not refuse. She wished, indeed, to keep him near her that he might act at her command in any emergency.

A bright fire blazed in the clergyman's cosy parlor, and in its light and warmth stood Robert Maxwell, waiting.

Rev. Mr. Warren was surprised to see his visitor, and the feelings of the other two who saw him call for a word that has not yet been put into the language.

Maxwell explained his sudden return by saying that he had found his investigations in Boston so simple as to require only a few hours' search. He had reached that city at six o'clock in the morning and had left on the noon express. In that short time he had convinced himself that Ned Ames had not died; that the pretended death was a ruse to throw the officers of the law off his track, and to facilitate the murder of Charlotte, which, for some reason hitherto undiscovered, had become necessary.

This information greatly interested Mr. Warren, and he would have discussed its bearings at great length with Maxwell, but Anna interposed. She would not permit her father to excite himself further. With gentle persuasion she made him consent to go to rest. But Maxwell and Ames did not leave the house. The situation would be regarded as unusual in any other part of the country; but in Maine the chaperone is an article imported only in small quantities and very little in demand.

When her father had gone, Anna told Maxwell exactly what she had done that evening. She omitted nothing except Frank Ames' declaration of love for her. Maxwell guessed that, and his wrath knew no bounds. Nothing but the presence of the woman they both loved prevented a personal encounter. Maxwell accused Ames of conspiring against him. He scoffed at the idea that the body of Ned Ames had ever been in the old Maxwell house.

"The idea is monstrous," he exclaimed. "I tell you that Ned Ames is not dead."

Before Frank could frame a reply, a new voice broke into the discussion.

"I beg to disagree with you," it said. "Eddie Ames is dead, and I have seen his body."

All turned toward the door into the hall, and there stood Mulligan, bowing apologetically.

"I knocked several times," he said, "but you were so interested that you did not hear me. Can I come in? Thank you, Miss Warren. And what have you to say in reply to me, Dr. Maxwell?"

Frank Ames did not wait for Maxwell's reply. He turned upon Mulligan.

"So it was you who removed the body?" he exclaimed.

"No, it wasn't. I found it, but somebody relieved me of the trouble of removing it. It was there at nine o'clock this evening. It isn't there now. Where is it. I'd like to know? And by [illegible], as the record says. Now, how did the body get into that cellar? Thank heaven for the hardened snow under the soft feathery stuff that fell in the latter part of Thursday night. I did a little scraping outside the house and found some footprints. They were unquestionably those of the man who brought the body. He wore rubbers. By the way, Dr. Maxwell, what time did you drive by the house on your way back from the Junction?"

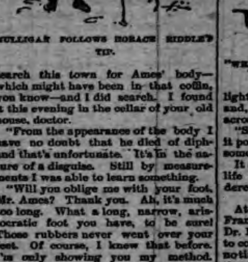
"A little before ten."

"Returned from Boston rather sooner than you suspected, didn't you?"

Maxwell suppressed an oath.

"You know why," he said, angrily. "I was dogged by one of your men. If you want me watched, do it yourself. Here I am."

"Quite so; and I'm pleased to see you. Now, let me briefly state the facts. I didn't believed that Eddie Ames was dead. I believe Horace Riddle's story. But all the same it was my duty to search this town for Ames' body—which might have been in that coffin, you know—and I did search. I found it this evening in the cellar of your old house, doctor.



MULLIGAN FOLLOWS HORACE RIDDLE'S TIP.

"From the appearance of the body I have no doubt that he died of diphand that's unfortunate. It's in the nature of a disguise. Still by measurements I was able to learn something.

"Will you oblige me with your foot, Mr. Ames? Thank you. Ah, it's much too long. What a long, narrow, aristocratic foot you have, to be sure! Those rubbers never went over your feet. Of course, I knew that before. I'm only showing you my method. Now, Dr. Maxwell. So; a very different foot, indeed. Those rubbers would have fitted you nicely."

CHAPTER VI.

BETTER THAN HE DESERVED.

Anna looked beseechingly at Frank. The time had come when, if he could render any service, he could exact a heavy price. Not that the girl was convinced of her lover's guilt. Far from it. But she was thoroughly frightened, and a frightened woman will take any help that offers.

Behind Mulligan's back Frank formed the word "wait" with his lips.

Maxwell was pale, but he showed little fear.

"Wouldn't it be a good idea to measure my rubbers, they're in the hall," he said.

"Excellent," said the detective; and he went to get them.

He measured them carefully.

"They 're not the ones," he said at last. "The others were wider. I congratulate you."

Anna had taken Maxwell's hand, and had thrown one of her arms over his shoulder. As the detective turned away to replace the rubbers in the hall, the girl drew down her lover's head, and kissed his lips.

Ames trembled with jealousy, but the next instant he recovered himself, and darted a sudden, meaning glance at Anna.

Then he took Maxwell's hand.

"I am heartily glad of this favorable turn in your affairs," he said. "It has been an awful strain upon us all. For my part I am quite worn out. I am going home. Good night. And good night to you, Mr. Mulligan."

The detective had just reentered the room. Anna accompanied Frank into the hall.

"Keep them here half an hour, at all hazards; and remember your promise," he whispered. "I tell you the man's lost unless I save him."

He left the house. Anna, terribly agitated by his last words, returned to the parlor, and tried to carry out his instructions. But for some reason which she could not understand, the detective was determined to thwart her plans. He succeeded in getting Maxwell away from the house some minutes within the time which Frank had set.

They went to the doctor's house. No one lived there but Maxwell and an old woman who acted as his housekeeper. The detective insisted upon going in. He said that he had urgent matters to discuss which he had not dared to mention before Anna.

They entered together. There was only a dim light in the hall, but it was enough to reveal to the keen eyes of the detective the form of Frank Ames, who seemed to have been descending the stairs just as they came in, and also endeavored to avoid being seen by darting into the unlighted parlor.

The detective followed him, striking a match as he did so. He lighted the lamps on the table and turned to Ames.

"Good evening again. Mr Ames." he said, cheerfully. "I didn't expect to see you so soon."

"I came to have a talk with Robert," responded Ames; "and I'll tell you frankly that I didn't want you to know anything about it."

"Sorry to disappoint you, Mr. Ames," Mulligan replied, "and still more sorry to ask embarrassing questions. What have you got under your overcoat?"

"The remainder of my clothing and most of my body," rejoined Ames; "but I don't know that it's any of your business."

With a movement as quick as a flash, and doubly surprising because of the man's slow and somewhat indolent manner, the detective sprang upon Ames and wrested his overcoat open.

A pair of rubbers fell to the floor. Mulligan seized them and measured them with the minutest care.

"Where did you get these?" he demanded.

Ames sank into a chair. He rolled his eyes appealingly toward Maxwell, who said not a word. He seemed to be stricken dumb.

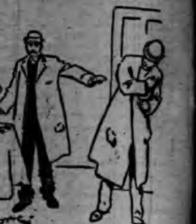
"It's all over, Bob," groaned Ames. "I did my best for you for her sake."

"Pretty shrewd work, Mr. Ames, but very dangerous," said the detective. "It's a crime, you know. You guessed he'd have the right pair of rubbers in his house and you came to get them. Very good; where are they?"

"In a closet in his bedroom upstairs."

"Well, this completes the case. I arrest you, Robert Maxwell, for the murder of Charlotte Warren."

Ten minutes later, Frank Ames paused for a moment before the house of Rev. Eliot Warren. The lower part of the house was dark, but there was a light in a window of the second story, and, as he looked, a shadow passed across the curtain.



"WHAT HAVE YOU GOT UNDER YOUR COAT?"

"Shall I win her?" he murmured. "Is it possible that my life is to be worth something after all?"

It couldn't have been a very happy life to look back upon, for he shuddered, as he turned away.

At ten o'clock the next morning, Frank Ames received a message from Dr. Maxwell, earnestly requesting him to come to the doctor's house. He lost no time in complying. The physician and the detective sat together. Both were smoking, and both very much at their ease. There was little to indicate that they were prisoner and warden, except the extremely incongruous addition of a large revolver to the articles of luxury with which a little smoking-table at the detective's right hand was laden.

"Dr. Maxwell wished to speak to you," Mulligan said, "or rather he wishes me to do so. You have done the best you could to stave off the inevitable, and you have other claims which entitle you to be the first one to hear the extraordinary history of this crime which will now be laid before you. In the first place, your brother's body has been found again."

"Where is it?"

"In the back room of Capt. Henry Thompson's undertaking shop where it was taken by the captain at my direction last night. You see I was strictly within the facts when I said that I did not remove it.

"Here is another fact: Of course it seemed probable when the body was found in this town, that it had reached here in that coffin, but that is not true. Medical examination has shown that Edward Ames has not been dead more than forty-eight hours.

"Fact No. 3—The mysterious person who conveyed the body to the old Maxwell house has been found, and Dr. Maxwell is not the man. The man's name was Ames."

"What!"

"Edward Ames. In short, he walked there. Those rubbers were his. There is no possible question about it. The prints of nails in his shoes are to be discerned on the inside of the rubbers. Now how did this extraordinary thing happen? Why there can't be two explanations. When a dying man goes to a doctor's house why does he do it? Because he knows that he'll die if he doesn't get treatment. You see Ned Ames didn't know that Dr. Maxwell had moved. He went there to throw himself on the doctor's mercy, and ask his help. I'd like to see you find any other explanation.

"Perhaps you'll say that he might have been simply seeking shelter. That won't answer. He had shelter, and I know it. I worked Horace Riddle's tip down to that. He saw Eddie in the woods. Now, a man can't live outdoors in Maine at this season of the year. Knowing that obvious fact, I asked myself, and also several other people who were better informed, what shelter there was in those woods. And I learned about that hut of spruce logs which you and your brother built so long ago, but built so well that it's weather-proof yet.

"I went there and found traces of Eddie, but I didn't find him. Then I came back to town, and on my way—it was then evening, for I had waited some time in the hut—I happened to see you coming out of the old Maxwell house. Then I went in, and you know what I found. I found, in the first place, that you'd entered by an upstairs window, which was wholly unnecessary, for the lock of the front door had been picked. By whom? Why, a child could answer that question. Your brother was an adept at picking locks.

"Why did he do it? Because he'd rung the bell and failed to find anybody. He must have supposed that Dr. Maxwell was out. He couldn't wait out there in the snow. It was then ten o'clock of Thursday night. I know that by the condition of his footprint in the substratum which was then forming into ice. He preferred to wait for the doctor inside. He picked the lock; got into the hall; fell on the floor and died there.

"You see he'd been sick of diphtheria in Boston. He was getting a little the best of it when he had to skip. The exertion and exposure were too much for him. He was dying in that hut in the woods and he knew it.

"Now, then, if he died in the hall, as the marks in the dust show me, how did his body get into the cellar? Why you carried it there. Nobody else could have done it. Nobody else had any motive. Your motive was to throw suspicion on Dr Maxwell. How did you know that Eddie was in that house? Why, he must have left a message in some secret cranny of that old log hut. You went there. The snow tells me that.

"Now we've cleared your brother's case all up. He didn't murder the girl because he was too sick to raise his hand against her.

"Don't you dare to move or open your mouth, Frank Ames, till I get through with you. I'm a good, quick shot, and you're fair game.

"It was a slick trick, taking his robbers off, and slicker still to bring them here, and wait for us to catch you with them. Now, of course all this clears Dr. Maxwell, and if it does what becomes of you? Why, you're my prisoner, that's all. Now perhaps you wonder why I arrested the doctor last night. Well, I did it so that you'd keep quiet and give me a little more time.

"By the way, I've had some slight tips from Boston this morning, and I made up my mind who was the head of the thieves' gang to which your brother belonged. You were the man. I've also found out where that poor girl lived in Boston; and a man who looked very much like you used to visit her.

"Knowing all these things, it is easy enough to see what happened to her down here. But what did she come here for? That's the only point that isn't clear. Of course I can guess at it, but I'd like cold facts, and for that reason I'll make a bargain with you. You'll remember the Lynde street job in Boston. Well, they hang folks in Massachusetts and they don't in Maine. You tell me all about this case, and I give you my word of honor that I'll let you be tried here, instead of taking you back. Is it a bargain?"

Frank Ames' white lips moved, but no words came from them.

"Doctor," said the detective, "have you a drop of brandy? It'll do him good."

The wretch swallowed the spirits greedily and revived somewhat.

"It is a bargain," he said, "though I deny that Lynde street job. But I'm done up. There is no hope for me, and I might as well speak out, for at least I wish to deny that I meant to murder that poor girl.

"You are right in all that you have said. It was I to whom she fled. She thought it was simply a secret marriage. I deceived her by the usual stories. I had another wife living and Charlotte found it out too late. She was afraid to come home then. Let me pass over all that. Her story is too common, I suppose. Of course I wearied of her, but I would have provided for her always, and would have kept her near me, if I had not learned to love her sister. That was two years ago, and from that moment I schemed to be rid of Charlotte.

"She was wholly under my influence. I intended to use her to break Maxwell's engagement with Anna. My plan was to have Charlotte come home and refuse to tell her story. Then I would have thrown the blame on Maxwell.

"It suited my convenience to bring her here when I sprung that plot to save my brother from arrest. Charlotte came by means which I provided. She went to her father's house, and looked in upon him through the window. She could not bear to face him. She returned to me at my father's house. I feared what she would do, and so I drugged my father lest he should see her.

"When she came I took her to the room where lay the coffin. I had removed my father in his stupor to another room. Charlotte and I quarreled. I tried to force her to carry out her intention of going to her father, and somehow—I don't know how—I let her see the real secret, that I loved Anna.

"Her wrath was terrible. In an instant she would have alarmed the house. I sprang upon her to stifle her screams—for I knew that she would scream in a second. She fell with my weight against her, and her head struck one of the heavy metal handles of the coffin. I had no idea that she was much hurt. My horror and remorse were terrible when I found that she was dead.

"Then the scheme of hiding the body came to me. I wrenched open the coffin; I took out the paper books with which it was weighted and burned them in the fire; I put her body in and closed the coffin as best I could. That is the whole story. Do you believe me?"

"I do," said Mulligan, "and I will keep my word. My curiosity, I think, has saved your neck. Is there anything more, Dr. Maxwell?"

"Nothing. May I go to Anna now? I must have her help in breaking the news to this wretched creature's parents."

"My mother is beyond knowing it, thank God," said Ames. "As for my father, he is a man of iron. He can bear anything."

He spoke so calmly that even the experienced detective was deceived, and believed that this was the confession of a despairing and beaten man.

But Frank Ames was not that kind of a man, by any means. He was watching his chance. As Maxwell turned to leave the room the detective's attention was distracted for a moment. It was time enough for the desperate criminal.

In a flash he had leaped upon Mulligan, and had got his hands upon the revolver. There was a struggle, violent, but so brief that before Maxwell could interfere it was over. Ames had secured possession of the revolver; he had pulled the trigger intending to send a bullet through his adversary's heart. But the detective's quickness saved him. He struck up the barrel of his pistol. The weapon was discharged in an almost perpendicular position, and the bullet, striking the murderer under the chin, passed entirely through his head. He was dead before his body touched the floor.

"Which was better than he deserved," observed Detective Mulligan, in relating this adventure to the present writer.

[THE END.]

A BOROUGH DEFICIT.

MAKING ENDS MEET AT THE CLOSE OF THE YEAR.

Street Railway Company Criticised for Using Salt on the Tracks—To Hunt Out Tax Delinquents.

The North Plainfield Borough Council meeting was called to order at 8:15 Friday evening by Mayor Needham. Councilmen Lounsbury, Valiant, Winckler and Peck were present. Clerk Arnold read the minutes of the previous meeting, which were approved.

The clerk's report was then read as follows:

Received from T. H. Crosley, Secy.		$ 25.00
" " Marshal Whitely		1.00
Borough deficit		$1,088.70
	Balance
Fire Dept.	$422.59
Light Account	$856.16
Road Account		$1,001.82
		$2,621.81
		$1,295.10
Total deficit		$1,466.32

M. B. Lunger was elected a member of Warren Engine Company some time ago, and the company asked that he be confirmed. It was referred.

A communication was received from Lewis C. Wyckoff and others, asking that a sidewalk be laid on Howard street from No. 10 to 26. It was referred.

A. I. Smalley and others asked Council to remedy the extremely bad condition of Somerset street from Howard to Regent streets. The proper committee was given charge of the matter.

The office vacated by P. M. French on the Board of Health, by reason of the expiration of his term, was filled by the Mayor. He appointed E. F. Smith.

Mr. Lounsbury of the Sewer Committee reported progress, and Mr. Peck reported that the fire-gong had been repaired and was now all right.

The monthly batch of claims was presented, referred, and later ordered paid.

Collector Spencer made the following reports:

Received license money, $225 each, from the following: Hipp, Zeller & White, Boyce, Speigel. Total, $900. County Clerk's fees 5 per cent; balance, $855.

1892 taxes collected since the last report:

Borough	$ 22.44
Lights	142.74
Roads	103.81
Fire department	71.39
	$ 340.86
Previously reported	11,679.84
Total	12,020.70

1894 taxes collected since the last report:

Borough	$ 191.86
Lights	620.82
Roads	658.22
Fire Dept.	687.21
Sidewalks	30.00
	$ 2,228.31
Previously reported	7,207.82
Total	$ 9,735.13

Clerk Arnold stated that notes amounting to $2,500 would fall due before next meeting and asked that they be renewed to pay bills. The borough, he said, needed $4,799.

Mr. Lounsbury in a resolution asked that Tuesday, Feb. 12, be designated as registry day; and that Feb. 19 and March 5 be designated to alter and revise the lists, and transfer the names of any so desiring. The election will be held March 12. The resolution was adopted.

After a recess of ten minutes, Mr. Lounsbury brought up the question as to the right of the street railway to use salt on the tracks, and claimed they had been doing it. They have, he said, the right to use it on switches, but there is a fine attached to the use of salt along the rails, and he thought the offenders should be looked after.

Mr. Valiant moved that the collector be requested to present a full list of delinquent taxpayers as far back as time goes, so the borough would know its resources. It was adopted.

Messrs. Valiant and Peck offered resolutions renewing for two months the several notes which fall due soon, and have them charged to Road, Light and Fire Department accounts. They were adopted.

Mr. Peck moved that when the Council adjourned it be to meet Friday, Feb. 15. This was carried.

Mr. Winckler moved that the Auditing and Finance committees be authorized to examine the books, accounts and moneys of the clerk and collector, which was adopted. Mr. Valiant thought that the collector's and clerk's book should balance, and he wanted to see the thing done in a business-like manner, so that the borough would know exactly where they stood.

Mr. Lounsbury moved that the council go into executive session, which they did. The matter of sewerage was discussed, Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed and Engineer F. A. Dunham being present to give their opinion when needed.

Grassland's Ungrateful Station.

The little railroad station at Grassland that was built a couple of years ago has been almost totally destroyed by boys and tramps. A few nights ago three tramps who wanted to keep warm built a fire on the floor of the station. A man from Fanwood who was passing saw the blaze in the building and went to investigate. The tramps fled, and the fire was extinguished with snow.

Two Sisters Die at Once.

Mrs. Pamelia Smith of Somerville died there Thursday night. She had a sister, Mrs. William Lyons, living in Perth Amboy. The sisters were very fond of each other, and when news of Mrs. Smith's death was telegraphed to Perth Amboy the word came back directly that the sister had also died at almost the same moment.

THE SUNSET LEDGE.

ITS STORY AS TOLD BY THE OLD CALIFORNIA MINER.

The Two Contractors Who Refused to Heed a Timely Warning—Fifteen Years After a Blast Released a Pair of Grinning Skeletons.

In Butte county there is a quartz mine which has been abandoned for many years. Only the oldest residents of the vicinity remember the names of the locators, and scarcely a trace of the shaft and buildings remains. The ledge was discovered away back in the early days, when quartz first attracted the notice of prospectors; when many worthless ledges were worked because the miners had not yet learned how to read the value of such ore by the minerals in it, its location, dip and contact with other formations. The Sunset ledge was small, flinty and absolutely worthless, but the men who discovered it thought it worth development. They put down a shaft 100 feet in depth in wet and treacherous ground, and they used no timbers. Then they let a contract to two men—a Cornish man and an Irish man—to construct a tunnel 100 feet in length from the bottom.

Sometimes untimbered ground will stand apparently firm and safe for a time, and then, with no perceptible cause, suddenly get shaky and fall or close in. This was just what occurred at the Sunset mine. The two men in the tunnel had almost finished their contract and were "squaring up the face" of the tunnel when one of the men employed on the surface was lowered rapidly, ran to them and told them to leave the mine instantly because the shaft was closing in.

Why the men refused, in the face of a certain horrible death, to heed the warning is a mystery. The messenger begged and threatened, but they were obdurate. They laughed at him, told him to sit down and smoke a pipe with them and said they would leave the tunnel only when they had "finished her up in shape." Perhaps they imagined the man was playing a joke upon them or that it was a scheme to get them to leave the mine before their contract was fulfilled. At any rate, they refused to leave the mine, and the man who warned them returned to the surface only just in time to escape the fate of the men below. The shaft, with a roar, closed in, and they were entombed.

No effort was made to rescue the buried men. It was impossible to save them if they were not killed by the cave, and it was supposed that the tunnel had also collapsed. To sink a shaft 100 feet through treacherous ground would take a long time even in these days, when all the "modern appliances" for such work were at our disposal.

The mine was abandoned. Fifteen years went by. The story of the mine and the buried men became an old one. Their names were forgotten. They were like men who go down to the sea in ships and perish in sight of their homes. Their friends know that somewhere in the sea their bones are bleaching, somewhere in a great sepulcher upon which they may look, but into which they cannot see.

Fifteen years after the caving in of the mine some prospectors overran the locality. They were told the story of the Sunset ledge, and they went to its croppings and to the dump where the shaft had been and tested the ore they found there. Whether they found any gold is not known, but they found something which encouraged them. Perhaps they were not well versed in quartz and believed that any ledge would pay if developed. They resolved to reopen the mine. It was their opinion, they said, that the Sunset company had not put their shaft down in the right place nor sunk it deep enough. They (the new company) would choose a better spot, sink their shaft much deeper and tap the ledge on the pay shoot.

Old men who heard of it shook their heads and prophesied failure. They said no luck could come from disturbing dead men's bones, but the new company began and finished their shaft. Then they excavated a tunnel and raised an inclined shaft, hoping and expecting to strike the ledge where their judgment had led them to believe the pay shoot was.

One day, when they fired a blast, there was a rush of water down the incline, and the miners were driven out. After much trouble and expense a larger pump was put in and the mine cleared, and the cause of the sudden flow was explained. The upraise of the new company had entered the old tunnel of the Sunset company about 20 feet from its face. And there on a heap of rock, leaning against the walls, were two grinning skeletons. The bones of the dead contractors who had sat there grinning at their fate and for 15 years patiently waiting to be found were removed from the mine and given decent burial. The mine was again abandoned and will probably never be again opened.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Queer Ways of the Toad.

Paternal affection is not perhaps the precise emotion that we should be disposed to look for in the cold blooded frog. But the Surinam toad appears to exhibit this praiseworthy attitude of mind toward his numerous progeny. When his mate lays her eggs, the solicitous father places them carefully upon her back, where in due time their presence causes an irritation that produces numerous small holes, into which the eggs forthwith drop. In these cells, which, from mutual pressure, get to be hexagonal, like honeycomb, the young frogs are finally hatched, and for a bit scramble about their mother's back, hiding in their nurseries when danger threatens.—London News.

Newbern, N. C., was named after Bern in Switzerland by Baron de Graafenried, a Swiss, who founded the town in 1709.

HYMENEAL.

MacIlvaine—Laing.

The marriage of Elizabeth Harned Laing of Denver, formerly of Plainfield, to Archibald G. MacIlvaine, General Manager in the United States for the London and Lancashire Insurance Company of England, was quietly solemnized at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. George W. Fletcher, 62 West Eighty-third street, New York city, yesterday, Rev. Dr. Houghton of "The Little Church Round the Corner" officiating.

The ceremony was performed after the beautiful rituals of the Episcopal marriage service in the presence of relatives of the contracting parties. Senator MacIlvaine of Virginia and Dr. MacIlvaine of Petersburg, brothers of the groom, were present, accompanied by their mother Mrs. MacIlvaine also of Petersburg, Va.

The groom's uncle, Judge Roger A. Pryor of the New York Bar, with his wife and daughters and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene M. Laing of this city likewise witnessed the ceremony.

The wedding trip will include a short sojourn at the Ponce de Leon, St. Augustine, Florida, a sail to Havana, Cuba; thence to New Orleans, Virginia, and finally to the Hotel Waldorf, New York, which will be their future home.

MAD DOG AT THE PLAINS.

A Neighboring Village Terrorized—One Man Bitten.

Scotch Plains's usual quiet morning solitude was broken today by the appearance of a mad dog. The dog was first noticed at the house of E. M. Johnston where it bit a fine, large Newfoundland dog belong to Mr. Johnston, after which it started toward the village, meeting Edward Dowarth, who was standing on the street. It bit him but fortunately did not bring blood. It next went for Bill Vealer who was on his way to work. Bill made a kick for him which missed the dog but landed Bill and his dinner pail in the gutter. The dog started toward Springfield.

When near the Stout farm it met John Klemser, who was on his way to the city. The dog made a spring at him, tearing his coat. John threw out his arm to ward off a second attack, and the dog bit him in the hand. The dog then started on toward Springfield. John resumed his journey to the city, stopping at Dr Westcott's to have the wound cauterized. Had the dog made its appearance an hour later it would have been much worse as the streets would have been full of children on their way to school. A number of dogs known to be bitten will be shot by their owners.

Hebrew Christening.

The christening of Louis Goldstein, the eight-day-old son of J. Goldstein of Park avenue, was celebrated today by Rabbi Simon Schnur of New York after the usual rites and ceremonies of the Jewish church, in the presence of relatives and friends of the happy father.

Among those present besides the Rabbi was the child's grandmother Mrs. Silverman, A. Goldstein, uncle of the little fellow, the Messrs. Cohen brothers-in-law of Mr. Goldstein, all of New York, Mr. Byrens of Philadelphia and Messrs. Leichtentritt, Samuel Dreier and B. Guttman of Plainfield.

A pleasant time was enjoyed by all, the child's health being drunk and a feast following. The mother is doing well.

Little People Surprised.

Little Miss Martha Codington, daughter of ex-Judge Codington, was intending to surprise her little brother Albert today by having a party of friends at the house, but last evening Mrs. Codington surprised both the little people by having the party last evening from 5 to 8. Little Misses Margaret Ross, Florence Smalley, Mabel Jenkins, Elsie and Nellie Giles, Aggie and Emma La Boyteaux, Florence Morrison, May Mulford, and Masters David Smalley and Harold Skaden, beside several other little people of the neighborhood were present. Pretty games were played and music and dainty refreshments were enjoyed by all.

The affair was in every way a great success, and no one enjoyed it better than the little host and hostess of the evening.

H. E. Needham has been in the Borough Council six years, and Mayor one term, and progressive North Plainfield Republicans feel that it is time he rested on his laurels and gave some equally deserving Republican a chance.

Henry L. Einstein, owner of the Bound Brook Woolen Mills, has bought that intensely partisan organ, the New York Press, and that radical sheet will continue its frantic efforts to pull the wool over the eyes of the American people.

Rev. Dr. Washington Gladden of Columbus, Ohio, recently returned a clerical pass which a railroad company had sent him, with the following explanation: "I never use clerical tickets, because I know no reason why clergymen should have privileges not granted to the mechanics and laboring men, and because I am not satisfied that railways have any right to grant the favor to anybody."

—The quarantine has been removed from the house of John Ulrich.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER

Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

PEANUTS AND THE CIVIL WAR.

An Enormous Increase in the Peanut Crop Due to Old Soldiers.

"I don't suppose there are many people who know that the ever-popular peanut came originally to this country with the first cargo of slaves that landed on our shores," said a dealer in nuts and fruits, "but such is the interesting fact. The peanut is a native of Africa, and in its wild state is as full of oil almost as a fat 'possum. Cultivation and change of soil have greatly reduced its oleaginous quality, although the nuts raised in North Carolina secrete enough oil yet to make them in demand in France, where they combine with their African progenitor and cottonseed to make a great deal of the olive oil we find in our restaurants and groceries.

"And I don't believe there are many people outside of those who have it who ever heard of the peanut habit. You don't like raw peanuts, do you? I thought not. No one does until he acquires the habit, and then he wants his raw peanuts just as regular as he wants his tobacco, provided he chews or smokes—and if he has the peanut habit the chances are he is not a tobacco chewer. The funny part of the peanut habit is that it prevails only among veterans of the late war who served either in Virginia or Tennessee or North Carolina. These are the States where the bulk of the peanut crop is grown.

"Perhaps you can remember how things were before the war. If you can't, I will tell you that the peanut then was chiefly a holiday luxury to the great mass of people in this country. The day when the circus was in town, or when the county fair was showing its pumpkins and four-minute horse trots, or when the great and glorious Fourth of July had come around again, were about the only occasions when the popular yearning for the peanut was in any measure satisfied. On these memorable occasions the nut was shucked and masticated until it couldn't rest.

"It was only in the towns and large villages that the favored few could have peanuts with them always. Before the war there wasn't a peanut roaster in the whole country outside of the big towns and cities, and the rural dealers bought their stock already roasted and delivered to them in big, coarse bags. To-day every cross-roads from Maine to California has its peanut stand and its wheezing steam roaster, and the great American nut has no better standing on circus day or Fourth of July than it has on any ordinary day of the year, except that there is greater concentration of energy as to its shucking and chewing on these red-letter days.

ST. BERNARDS IN HARNESS.

The Policeman Was in Doubt Whether to Admit Them to Prospect Park.

One of the strangest rigs that ever appeared on a Brooklyn highway drove up to the entrance to Prospect Park several weeks ago, when the sleighing was good. It consisted of a tiny sledge, built Russian fashion, with low runners and a high front.

In it sat a boy about 12 years of age and a little girl about 10. Both were dressed in the height of fashion for such youngsters, and were muffled up and kept warm by the most gorgeous of fur robes. It was their team, however, which attracted attention.

They were not horses nor goats, but huge, shaggy St. Bernard dogs, that had evidently been trained to the work, for they obeyed the "Gee up!" and "Ho!" of the youthful driver, like the gentlest of roadsters. The policeman at the entrance to the park didn't know whether to let them in or not.

He consulted his book of park ordinances but could find nothing there prohibiting the admission of secured dogs to the park. Still, he was doubtful about letting the team in. In the meantime a large crowd had gathered around and were petting the dogs.

The youngsters in the sleigh got more and more impatient as the policeman stopped thinking it over, and finally he stood up and said:

"If you're not going to let me in, say so, and don't keep me standing here."

The crowd was indulging in a good laugh at the boy's indignation, when a sergeant of police came along, and after hearing all about the trouble decided to let the team in. The little fellow thanked the policeman most courteously, climbed into the sleigh beside his pretty companion, raised his hat to the officer, and then swinging his whip in the air, cried, "Gee up!" to the dogs, and was off at a regular trotting pace.

He Wanted to Know.

The New York Girl—Lord Dumley, did you ever hear the joke about the museum keeper's two skulls of St. Paul, one when he was a boy and the other when he was a man?

The Englishman—No; what is it?—Life.

Counselor McCarthy's Obsequies.

The funeral today of Edw. Dorr McCarthy at his late residence [illegible] Park avenue, called together a large number of mourning friends from New York, Philadelphia and Plainfield. Many prominent members of the legal profession were noticed in the solemn assembly.

The pallbearers were the Messrs. Delaney, Goodyear and Gove of New York, Mr. Reynolds of New Brunswick and Messrs. Ohl, Scott, Walling, Case and Perkins of this city. A notable feature of the funeral procession was the noble coal black stallion, for years his master's favorite saddle horse which with his all trappings on, slowly walked behind the hearse in charge of his groom, who carried in his hand the master's riding-whip. The body was sent to the Germantown Cemetery.

MEDICINES IN TABLETS.

From the New York Sun of February 3, 1895.

◆

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were no druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homœopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. New as the use of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled and careful apothecaries and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 SPRUCE ST., NEW YORK.

MEN WANTED To take orders. No delivering or collecting. Experience not necessary; steady employment [illegible]
[illegible] NURSERY CO., [illegible], N. Y.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

Plainfield, New Jersey.

TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

PARTICULAR MENTION.

James Hallock, who has been ill with the grip, is out again.

Miss Fanny Westphal of the West End is kept at home by illness.

H. C. McVoy is once more attending to business after a short illness.

Miss Try Mattox returned last evening from a visit with friends in Newark.

Mrs. Joseph Carbone and children of North avenue are laid up with the grip.

Miss Stella Shotwell of College place is obliged to leave school on account of her health.

Mr. Apgar of Spooner avenue, who has been ailing some time, is now confined to the bed.

Peter B. Matthews returned last night from a very enjoyable trip to Philadelphia.

Miss Neva Dimmitt of East Ninth street is spending a few days with friends in New York.

A party will be held at the residence of Miss Daisy Sprague, Spooner avenue, Friday evening.

Charles Dupee and Percy Brown are taking a college preparatory course in New York city.

Miss Edna French of Craig place will entertain some of her friends at a salmagundi party Feb. 11.

Special Policeman Dennis Carney of Cottage place is out again after two weeks of grip and pneumonia.

Mrs. S P. Craig and daughter Miss Beatrice, returned home yesterday from a short visit in Hartwick, N Y.

William Apgar and family, who have lived on the Hancock farm near Evona for several years, moved to Millington, Somerset county, today.

Miss Johnson, who was one of the bridesmaids at the Delaney—Sorlies wedding, is a guest of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Adams of East Sixth street.

I. Winthrop Travell, principal of the High School, was kept at home today with the grip, from which he has been suffering for several days.

Rev. J. O. Ferguson of Somerville, brother-in-law of Counselor W. K. McClure, has been appointed chaplain of the Soldiers Home of Newark.

Miss Bessie Cushing and Miss Emily Mutton of Brooklyn, who have been guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hand on Park avenue, have returned home.

W. H. Shearer of Westfield, the well-known and popular general agent of the Metropolitan Insurance Co., has just recovered from a slight attack of pneumonia.

C. B. Clifton has purchased the lot at the corner of West Seventh street and Spooner avenue, and E. T. French, the rising architect of Plainfield, is drawing plans for a handsome residence to be built there and occupied by Mr. Clifton as soon as completed.

Wait for the Elevator.

The Camera Club held their regular monthly meeting last Monday in their rooms in the Babcock Building

Rev. T. Logan Murphy and A. L. Titsworth were elected members. The Committee on the Fair was continued and a purchasing and membership committee was appointed. An exhibition of the Newark slides will be given next Tuesday evening for the members and friends only. The Waterbury slides which were sent here by mistake have been returned They will be shown here later. The club have been assured that the elevator will be finished by the middle of March, and as soon as that is in running order the Plainfield slides will be given. The balance of the evening was passed in social intercourse.

Card to the Public.

In regard to the greengoods operations which are alleged to have been committed at my club-house, I desire the public to withhold its verdict till the facts are shown on investigation Meanwhile, I assure my friends that I have had no connection with any unlawful operations. My rooms have been rented to applicants the same as in any public house, and if any illegal business has been carried on by them I have had no knowledge whatever of it.

C. VAN DEVENTER.

$100 Reward $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Props., Toledo, O

Sold by druggists, 75c.

HAVE TAKEN IN THE WOMEN.

Ivanhoe Council Believes in Maintaining the Good Things of Life.

Last Tuesday the first "Ladies night" of Ivanhoe Council, No. 1074, Legion of Honor, was held in their commodious council chamber on Park avenue, several of the Grand officers of the State being present. It has for some time been optional with the various lodges of this order to admit women to membership, but it was only recently that Ivanhoe Council decided by vote that they would avail themselves of this privilege.

Considering the exceeding cold of last evening, a goodly number of the fair sex was present and listened with much interest to the earnest remarks of the speakers. It was intended to provide a musical and literary entertainment in honor of the guests of the occasion, but at the last moment Companion Titsworth who had this feature of the entertainment in hand, received a wire announcing the non-arrival of the expected artists because of the grip Past Commander T. C Smith, who occupied the chair in the absence of Commander Allis through sickness, stepped into the gap and after cordial words of greeting introduced Grand Commander Ralph of Hoboken, who spoke most earnestly of the benefits, social and monetary, to be derived from membership in this rapidly growing order, and urged the women to inform themselves fully as to the great personal benefit it would be to them to join hands with the host of fathers, husbands and brothers who were already enrolled.

The speaker was followed by Grand Orator Downey of New York city, who dwelt particularly on the ever-increasing strength of the Legion of Honor as an insurance order, founded as it is on the soundest business principles, and carried on by men of undoubted financial ability and shrewdness. Orator Downey quoted insurance statistics and State Commissioners reports on fraternal insurance to show that this organization stood at the head for soundness and strength and amount of capital. Companion G. L. Van Emburgh followed in a very happy speech, in which he reiterated and enlarged upon the remarks of the previous speaker with regard to the local branch No 1074, and spoke most cordially to the women who had braved the inclement weather to lend their presence to the occasion.

The remarks of Companion Titsworth, which followed, closed this feature of the evening's entertainment, the companion expressing regret that he was notified as to the impossibility of securing the musical artists, so late that he could not substitute, begging the indulgence of his friends at the failure, and cordially thanking the women for their attendance and interest The entire party then adjourned to Tier's parlors across the street, where a bountiful collation was served.

The Salvation Army.

A treat is promised every one who takes part in the special meeting at the army hall on West Second street, Thursday evening, Feb. 7. Colonel William Eadie who will be in charge of the meeting is the Chief Secretary of the work in the United States and second in command to Commander and Mrs. Ballington Booth; he is by birth a Scotchman and possesses many of the well-known characteristics of that particular race and is a very powerful speaker. Every action denoting earnestness. His experience in the army has been long and varied having held appointments both in Canada and the old country before coming to the United States.

He will be accompanied by the National Headquarters Staff brass band of New York city. This capital organization of players have been in Plainfield before and we doubt not that many friends will be glad to again welcome them and listen to their music. They will introduce several new songs, choruses and selections.

Adjutant George Wood, late A. D. C to Brigadier Evans, who has been placed in charge of the newly formed Northern New Jersey District, of which Plainfield corps forms a part, will also be on hand to assist. The inside meeting which commences at 8 and to which admission is by tickets at 10 cents, will be preceded by a unique illuminated parade through the principal thoroughfares of the city.

Good Samaritan Pangborn.

John Noble, formerly an employe at Starin's shipyard in New York, went to Philadelphia soon after he lost his position, and last night at a late hour he landed in Plainfield, on his way back to New York

At the North Avenue station he asked a hackman where he could get a night's lodging. He was referred to the police, and was told they had no place for him

The man did not have the appearance of a tramp, and apparently was a very worthy person.

From the station he went to North Plainfield, where he met a good Samaritan in the person of Chief Marshal Pangborn, who, when he heard his story, gave him a comfortable place for the night.

This morning he was given a good breakfast, and by Collector Spencer a warm coat, which he needed very much, and he went on his way with gratitude for North Plainfield.

Since the 15th of last February Chief Marshal Pangborn has taken care of 73 worthy persons in a similar way, and deserves much credit for his humanitarian feelings for the world's unfortunates.

—Effort is making to present a theatrical entertainment to the Casino during Easter week for the benefit of the Plainfield Relief Association.

IN paint the best is the cheapest. Don't be misled by trying what is said to be "just as good," but when you paint insist upon having a genuine brand of

Strictly Pure White Lead

It costs no more per gallon than cheap paints, and lasts many times as long.

Look out for the brands of White Lead offered you; any of the following are sure:

"Atlantic," "Jewett," "Brooklyn."

For Colors.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

These colors are sold in one-pound cans, each can being sufficient to tint 25 pounds of strictly Pure White Lead the desired shade; they are in no sense ready-mixed paints, but a combination of perfectly pure colors in the handiest form to tint Strictly Pure White Lead.

A good many thousand dollars have been saved property-owners by having our book on painting and color-card. Send us a postal card and get both free.

NATIONAL LEAD CO., New York.

Shaft No. 2.

The next attraction in Music Hall, "Shaft No. 2", to be presented Friday night, Feb 8, has been received with much favor in New York and Chicago, and will be seen for the first time in this city.

The play deals with the trials and ultimate triumphs of an electrical engineer Jim Rathburn, and the audience is treated to a succession of new and interesting stage pictures and given a number of surprises in the line of mechanical and electrical effects never before introduced in a play.

One scene of more than ordinary interest is a representation of the shaft of a mine with the tram car running up and down and the miners at work. It is a very realistic picture of the interior of a mine.

In another act a storm is produced by new electrical and mechanical contrivances, and it is spoken of as the most wonderful and realistic reproduction of nature in her turbulent mood ever attempted on the stage.

The electrocution chamber in the State prison is shown with all the paraphernalia of this death-dealing system.

The piece abounds in many new and attractive features, and will no doubt meet with as favorable a reception from the playgoers here as it has elsewhere.

Librarian's Report for the Month of January, 1895.

Volumes on accession book, Dec. 31, 1894	12,789
" added by purchase and binding	79
Volumes added by gift	16
Volumes now in the library	12,874
Number of card-holders	2,482
Cash rec'd from fines and sales	$ 20 81
" " " non-resident subscriptions	$ 2.00
Cash received from sales of catalogues	$ 3.00
Home Circulation.
Fiction	1195
Juvenile	567
Biography	149
Travel	225
Philosophy	18
Religion	28
Sociology	26
Philology	4
Natural science	62
Useful arts	24
Fine arts	36
Literature	224
History	187
Bound magazines	13
Total	2802
Total for January, '94	2408
Increase	394
Periodicals subscribed to by Babcock Scientific Library	25
New periodicals for general library	7
Visitors to building	3,645

EMMA L. ADAMS,
Librarian.

Newspaper Serials.

That great detective, Sherlock Holmes, whose stories were all told long ago, and which have been published and republished till everyone has read them, is accused by another Plainfield paper of having made his first appearance in "The Sign of the Four". That only shows how little that paper knows of current literature, for the first appearance of Holmes was in "A Study in Scarlet". Both the tales mentioned have been in print a long time now, and the paper which is about to publish them is only filling its columns with ancient history. Conan Doyle's brand-new stories, however, appear from time to time in The Daily Press, which inaugurated the publication in Plainfield of short serials by the best writers of the day. All of the serials printed in this paper are new, and copyrighted to Daily Press use. When printed in The Press, they are printed for the first time. In this as in all respects The Daily Press leads.

Muhlenberg Minstrels.

Tickets for the Muhlenberg Hospital benefit are selling rapidly. Those desiring them would better purchase at once, as the number is limited. They can be had of any of the patronesses and at Reynolds's, Randolph's and Hebard's pharmacies.

J. Parker Mason will have charge, and be the stage manager, which gives assurance that the affair will be a success.

The orchestra will be from New York, under the leadership of Mr. Ross of the Lyceum Theatre.

—A mission will be begun Feb. 14 in Grace Church under the charge of Rev. Dr. S. S. Barrett, General Missioner.

GOOD MUSIC AND READINGS.

The Verdi Quartette and Miss Jackson Entertain for the Y. M. C. A.

The first of the regular entertainments of the Y. M. C. A., in the new hall, was given last Tuesday by Miss Addie Parker Jackson, reader, and the Verdi Ladies Quartette. There was unfortunately but a small audience to greet the talented young women, but those who were present accorded them a reception that was far warmer than the temperature of the hall. It was an unusually cold night, and an unusually enthusiastic audience, and those who braved the zero blasts were well repaid by the programme which the fair ones presented. Miss Kathryn Krymer has a remarkable voice of wonderful depth and power, and a winsome way of thanking her audience for its appreciation of her talent. The solo "As still as the night", by Bohm, was sung by Miss Krymer with commendable sweetness and delicate shading.

Miss Ida VanDuyn was likewise in marked favor with the audience, and was recalled with decided emphasis after her song "Marionella".

The singing of the quartette was very pleasing, the well-trained voices blending harmoniously in all of the numbers they rendered.

Miss Jackson as a reader is a favorite in Plainfield, and it seemed a shame that her readings were not listened to by many times the number present. At her every appearance an encore was demanded, and she responded most graciously. Her recitation of one of H. C. Bunner's metropolitan sketches entitled "The Tenor", was probably the best of all her well told stories.

Receiving Pasteur Treatment.

Chas. F. Carter and John Kelmeer, victims of the Scotch Plains mad dog, have been admitted to Pasteur Institute for treatment. The brain of the dog is being examined there.

Sheridan Gets a Month.

Philip Sheridan, who had pleaded guilty of an assault upon the Italian shoemaker on Liberty street, was sentenced Saturday in Elizabeth to the county jail for thirty days.

DON'T starve yourself if you have dyspepsia, indigestion, or a weak stomach, as you cannot build up the system on a low diet, but eat generously, then take one of immediately after meals until cured. These pills cause the flow of bile and pancreatic fluid to occur as the food leaves the stomach—nature's method; and it is wise to observe natural laws, for in this way only can we expect perfect cures. Dr. E. R. Mackey, one of New York's most celebrated physicians, and hundreds of other noted physicians, vouch for the pills. If you are constipated, get bottle with white label, otherwise with yellow. At druggists', 25 cents, or send to us for free sample.

Dr. Deane's Dyspepsia Pills

DR. J. A. DEANE CO., Kingston, New York

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, held on Thursday, Jan. 3, 1895, at 2:30 p m.

Continued.

Public Buildings—John C Blore $1 34; Williams & Bennett 9; Elizabeth Town Gaslight Co, 87 75; D A Woodhouse, 9 28; Elizabeth Moran 25; Edwin T Earl 8; The Suburban Electric Co, 11 11, 7 96, 12 45, 7 17, 8 75; William B Tucker, att'y, 25 84; E P Edwards 34 10.

Members Pay—Noah Woodruff $52; J F Hubbard 68.25; W H Swain, 22; Frederick Miller 22; W B Holtkamp r 77; Geo W Littell 28; Geo M Morrell 22.

Committee Expenses—W H Barton 5; Noah Woodruff 13 20; J F Hubbard 13 75; W H Swain 9 70; F L Graves 15 50, 7 50; Frederick Miller 22 50.

Jail—J W Hildebrandt & Co, $45 85; Michael Bender $1 94; Henry Sauer 18 40; Henry J Schmidt 5 20; James O Brokaw 23 02; E S E Newbury 45 72

Coroner—Geo H Horning $14, 58 66, 44 50, 36 69

Incidental—Wm Howard $57 10.

Salaries—E. R O'Reilly $41 66; S Rusling Ryno 25

Lunacy—New Jersey State Hospital, $7,801 38.

Election—Alex Maguire, Agt, (C A Hunter) $30; Emil Wessinger 3; Henry M Looker 22 87; David M Potter 18 75; S S Woodruff 35; G H Koester 3.

County Road Repairs—James W Fink $50

Court—Geo Kyte, Sheriff, $1,179 52; Herbert W Knight 110; Jas Ritchie 75; Lewis S Hyer 60; John Williams Crane 65; T F McCormick 391 67; Wm Howard 83 24; Edward Newmarker 150; Samuel Morgan 10; E B Kelly 14 89; W B Frazee 9 90; John McNamara 5; John Keron 255; Michael W Boyle 7 50; Robert Walpole 14 7 18; Samuel Morgan 3 58 5 60; Isaac A Bunn 6; Wm H Sault 5; Henry J Schoppe 30; Henry Smith 5; John H Sheridan 5; Jas H White 13; Amos Moffett 7; Emil Wessinger 8 08, 6 92; S Cahill, Jr. 5; Daniel Donovan 8; Jas Denman 4 20, 2 60; Henry C Cores 18 18; V W Nash 3 15; John Kennedy 8 80, 12 20; Jos E Mosher 17 90; W B Mattox 14 80; Jacob Schilien 15 54; Chas K Moore 41 84.

Bridge—Philip Feltman $16 50; Jas J Brennan 148, Louis Quien 16. Wm R Ogden 10; Frederick Meyer 8 50; Jas J Brennan 50; David B Beebe 32 30; David D Smalley 5; Geo W Heath 3; Louis Quien 9 75; John M Knapp 5; John Nestor 3; Joel Moffett 20 83; Jas Coles 8; Sparkman & Seagar 2 50; C C Bailey 5; Jas B Woodruff 13; A M Drake 8; Louis E Burguillier 6 50; Frank Murphy 45

Freeholder Halliday moved to adjourn, which was carried.

The Director declared the Board adjourned to Thursday, Feb 7, 1895, at 2:30 p m.

S Rusling Ryno, Clerk.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

E. P. THORN,

No. 125 Park Avenue,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,

For Family and Medicinal Use,

A SPECIALTY.

3-26-y

No Lamp like "THE MILLER"

Every one perfect whether it cost $1.00 or $100.00.

The Improvements (our patents) make "THE MILLER" A PERFECT LAMP.

Particulars cannot be given here, but we assure you it will pay to see "The Miller." Established 1844. We make a complete assortment of Lamps, Brass Tables with Onyx Tops, etc.

READY TO LIGHT, WITHOUT REMOVING CHIMNEY.

Many Designs Specially Beautiful for Gifts.

EDWARD MILLER & CO., 10 and 12 College Pl., bet. Park Place and Barclay St., New York.

☞ To warm a room buy a "Miller" Oil Heater.

☞ Cut this out and save this card, etc.

For sale by W. L. Gavett & Co.

FEBRUARY PRICES.

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,

73 Market Street, Near Plane Street

Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.

PRICES DURING FEBRUARY.

Tapestry Brussels carpet per yard, only	50c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$10
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, only	$20
Velvet carpet per yard, only	75c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$15
Antique oak sideboards, only	$13 50
Extra super all-wool ingrain carpet per yard, only	50c
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, in rug covering, only	$30
Fancy couches and lounges, only	$5
Low priced ingrain carpet per yard, only	25c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$20
Body Brussels carpet per yard, only	80c
Antique oak chiffoniers with mirrors, only	$8 75
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, in silk covering, only	$40
Dining-room chairs, high back, antique oak, per set only	$7 50
Antique oak extension tables, only	$8 50
Oilcloth per yard, only	20c
Hall stands, only	$5 50
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$25
Three ply carpet per yard, only	75c

PORTLAND RANGES—The prices on these Ranges are not reduced, as we are not allowed to do so by the manufacturers. We have made reductions in all other departments not mentioned above at the same rate as in this ad. Easy terms. Goods delivered free to all parts of the State.

STORING FURNITURE—Having just erected a new building at 88, 90 and 92 Bank st., we can safely say that we have the most complete Storage building in the State, and at such low rates. All locked rooms. Furniture moved with vans by careful men in city or country. Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,

73 Market st., near Plane st., Newark, N. J.

[Copyright by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

CHAPTER I.

I began at last to think that the ball would never come to an end. I had looked forward to it with absolute dread, for I was well aware of the plan which my uncle and Madam Trelawney had devised between them. I had already recognized that the lady's son was charming in his boyish frankness, but I had seen from the first that it was intended he should propose to me before the night was ended—this night of all nights in the year!—and I was resolved on my part that he should do nothing of the sort.

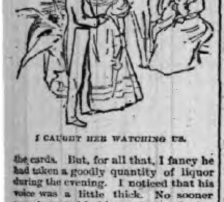
Truly, he was a gallant boy; I can fancy (for an old woman may surely tell her grandchildren she once was beautiful) that we made a pretty couple as we danced together; I know that madam treated me with quite unusual consideration, and once I caught her watching us with an altogether delightful air of satisfaction. Frank, too, did his dutiful best to offer me such attentions as are proper in a lover; and though I was resolved to thwart his mother, and to keep him from courting rejection, I could not but enjoy the little play in which I was acting. I pictured the surprise of all the good folks who were now watching me, when the news of the morrow should reach them. And, though I longed for the end of the ball, and the more serious adventure which was destined to follow, I found the situation vastly amusing.

Perhaps it was this fact which chiefly helped me to keep poor Frank at a distance.

"You are always laughing at a man," he said, reproachfully, during an interval between two dances; and upon my soul I was hard put to it to find an answer. I could scarcely say that for him I had only pity; and yet this would have been the truth, even though I was well aware that his disappointment would be only for a week or two.

At any rate, when the hour of our departure had come, his devotion was still undeclared, and madam looked upon me a shade less kindly, I thought, when I went to take farewell of her. But, in truth, I was by this time too completely overcome by excitement to notice little details in the comportment of these people. They were all conspirators against my happiness and Dick's. I knew they would be checkmated within the hour, and already I could have laughed in their faces.

My uncle was a great gamester, and never known to lose his coolness. On this night he had gained a large sum at the cards. But, for all that, I fancy he had taken a goodly quantity of liquor during the evening. I noticed that his voice was a little thick. No sooner were we seated in his coach than he lay back in a corner and slept peacefully. Soon he was snoring.



I CAUGHT HER WATCHING US.

I was thus left alone. Indeed, I could not have talked with him had it been otherwise; yet I now wished I were compelled to try, for the excitement I was in came near to being unendurable. I could see nothing through the windows of the coach: nothing but the dim reflection of my own pale face against a background of utter darkness. Had I been able to take note of the landmarks as we passed them, I might have been calmer; as it was, we had hardly been gone from the house five minutes when I began and continued to feel passionately assured that the very next moment would be productive of the event to which I looked forward so eagerly.

The drive appeared interminable. I began to think that Dick must have come early and grown tired of waiting, and I knew that if he did not keep tryst, my heart would simply break. And then, frightening me despite my eager anticipation of it, came the first sign.

I saw a sudden blackness move past the window. A pistol cracked, and as the carriage ceased to move I heard a man's voice speaking sternly to the coachman and his companion on the box. It struck me the sternness was singularly well acted; for the coachman had been in the plot from the first. He happened to have a fancy for my maid Genefer, and Dick's bride was a superfluity once she had undertaken to make sure of him.

My uncle stirred in his corner, muttering incoherently, but he was still more than half asleep when the door of the coach was opened, and a tall, graceful figure (how well I knew it!) stood dimly outlined against the darkness. The newcomer was masked, and put a pistol to my uncle's head.

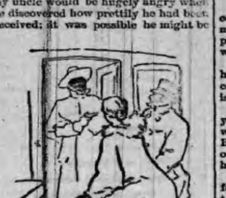
"You ride late, sir," he said; and I wondered at the skill with which he disguised his voice. "I presume you carry firearms, and must ask that you will trust them to my keeping."

I can hardly report my uncle's words. Indeed, they were not coherent, so great was his indignation. But he gave up his pistols and the highwayman straightway flung them far into the darkness.

"Your purse," he continued, politely. Then when he had received this also: "Sir Richard Courtney's luck at the cards has passed into a proverb. Tell your friends, sir, that you have given their I. O. U.'s to one who will never ask for payment, for I have no doubt I shall find them here."

He put the purse into his pocket. "There is a diamond ring, too," he said, "and a watch," and these things he also received and pocketed.

All this time my uncle had been cursing him for a thief, and swearing he would see him hanged within a month upon the highest point of the moorland. As for me, I had enjoyed the proceedings to begin with, but now I began to be afraid. Precious time was being wasted. There were others who must use this road in returning from the ball, and there was the risk of their coming to the rescue of my dear uncle, and spoiling the plans on which so much depended. Moreover, I conceived that my uncle would be hugely angry when he discovered how prettily he had been deceived; it was possible he might be carried by his resentment as to make it appear that this mock robbery was real, and so bring Dick to serious trouble. It was with great relief I saw that it was ended.



HOW WELL I KNEW IT.

The highwayman spoke again. "You have a lady in your company," he said. "I must trouble her—"

"Scoundrel!" said my uncle, angrier than he had been at all. "Do you rob helpless women also? Oh, but you shall hang high!"

"'Beauty,' quoted the highwayman—'and I am sure the lady is beautiful—'Beauty unadorned is best adorned.' I must ask the lady to step from her carriage a moment and give me the jewels of which she surely has no need."

My uncle would have hindered me, but I was past him in a moment, and stepped out of the carriage.

"Your necklet," said the highwayman, holding forth his hand.

I took the pearls from my neck, and pressed his hand in passing it to him. "Be quick!" I said, in a whisper. "Where is your horse?"

He paused a moment. "I saw the gleam of a bracelet," he said. "I must relieve you of that, also."

Again I obeyed him, but the fear that others would come while he still stopped fooling became more urgent. "I'm ready," I whispered, so eagerly that I wonder my uncle did not hear. "Why do you wait?"

Again there was a pause. He appeared a little disconcerted. "And I think you are wearing a ring," he went on.

I took the ring from my finger; as I gave it to him I clutched his hand, secure in the protecting darkness. "Take me!" I said. "Take me!"

Again he was silent for a moment. When he spoke it was in a curiously altered voice, and with a little delighted laugh.

"Dost mean it, sweet?" he cried. "Come, then!"

I gave a scream of alarm (a portion of the play we had arranged together) as he caught me round the waist and landed me upon his horse. A moment later I was clinging to him for dear life as we dashed headlong into the black night and went forward across the moorland. I heard him chuckle as my uncle roared his indignation after us.

CHAPTER II.

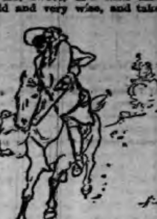
We rode on and on through the darkness. At first my excitement was so great as to render thought impossible; moreover, the riding was of the roughest, and I had all I could do to keep my seat. But gradually, as I began to grow more accustomed to my situation, I was overtaken with a most dreadful misgiving. The rider had hitherto seemed like enough to Dick, for I had known he would do his best to change his voice; and, as for his foolish robbery, it was just of a piece with his natural love of mischief. But now I began to feel certain that some impostor had taken his part; that I had eloped with another man—and him a common highwayman. Imagine my distress! I could conceive of no method of extricating myself from the position; a sense of blank helplessness came over me, and I could do no more than cling tightly to the highwayman and await the event.

We had ridden some miles, when he suddenly drew rein and dismounted, landing me lightly beside him.

"Upon my soul!" he said, "here is a pretty adventure! Heaven knows that I had always a passion for the unusual, or I should be still a humble usher in Brancaster academy. But, tell me, what am I to do with you?"

I suppose I had hoped against hope; to find my fears were justified was a disastrous blow to me, nor could I make any answer.

"I would not wish a braver sweetheart," he continued, speaking with an odd and attractive perplexity. "But what have we gentlemen of the road to do with wives? Why, sweetheart, you heard the promises of your guardian. He will surely do his utmost to fulfill them, and how should I dare go to the gallows if I knew that I left you widowed and alone? I trust a score of maids would weep a little if poor Jack Arthur went the common way; but God forbid that any should remember him at a week's end. It may seem that I am ungallant, yet I protest I do not like my share in this adventure. Kiss me, sweet, and then fancy I am old and very wise, and take my counsel, which is: that you permit me to conduct you back to some place near your home. And yet—I would not wish a braver sweetheart!"



IMAGINE MY DISTRESS.

And then, moved by the kindness of his words, and his pleasant voice, I lost command of myself and burst into foolish weeping.

"Sir," I said, "I am altogether at your mercy. I have done that which will shame me all the rest of my days. But, indeed, I thought you were another, my sweetheart, whom I should have married to-morrow."

I fancied he spoke less gayly than before: perhaps he had not hoped altogether that I would take his sage advice. "Ho, ho!" he cried, "then my good fortune is but another theft to my account? I do not understand. You were to have married your lover to-morrow, and yet you entreat a stranger, and a highwayman at that, to carry you off! This is the maddest of adventures."

"Sir!" I said, "my uncle stands to me in the place of father and mother."

The highwayman chuckled. "Poor child!" he said, and softly stroked my hand, which, it seems, he had been holding for some minutes. "Poor child!"

"He would have me marry one whom I do not love, and I began to fear that presently he would overcome me, and compel—"

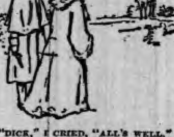
"The old hunks!" cried the highwayman. "You shall marry whom you choose. Nay, I withdraw my foolish wisdom; come with me, and before the night is here again you shall be Mistress Arthur. Believe me," he added with a pretty conceit—"believe me, there are many who will envy you."

"But, sir," I interrupted, "you forget what I have told you. Of late I have been closely guarded, for my uncle had discovered that I have given my love to a yeoman of the place, and it was arranged that he should stop the coach on our return from the ball and carry me away with him."

The highwayman laughed loudly. "And that is why you did not faint or scream?" he said. "I fell in love with you because of that, and that is why I was so flattered at your suggestion of an elopement. But, what will the real lover do? Will he stop the coach a second time, and find the bird flown? I warrant he will play the part exactly. I should hardly be surprised to hear he had let himself be captured."

I could not endure his jesting. "Sir," I said, "I am in your hands, and it is small wonder you find my plight only laughable. I have made myself a show for all the country to laugh at. Never a peddler but will be selling ballads in a se'nnight about this that I have done to-night. Yet I could believe you kinder than most. I entreat that you will help me."

He was sober in a moment. "Upon my soul!" he said, "the case is one to puzzle a very Solomon. I would do much to help you, but I am not altogether free to do so as I would. To be frank, my life hangs upon my escaping out of these regions with all the celerity I can command. And my life . . . But listen!"



"DICK," I CRIED, "ALL'S WELL."

He broke off, and, kneeling, placed his ear to the ground. Then he arose, with a curious, excited laugh. "The adventure grows in interest," he said. "Here comes the honest yeoman, and in hot haste."

I listened eagerly, and heard far off the sound of a horse galloping furiously along the rough track, which was then the only road across the great moorland. I saw a sudden movement on the part of my companion, and perceived that he was fingering his pistols as he stood silent in the darkness.

"Not that!" I cried, entreatingly.

"There will be need of an explanation of some kind," he said; "perhaps you will undertake it. I confess I have not a sufficient gift of words, and I am a little inclined to doubt whether your sweetheart will be in the mood for explanations. Doubtless, as a gentleman of the road, he will ride armed."

The sound of hoofs grew nearer. He was silent now, and listened most attentively to the approaching sound. Presently the rider was quite near.

"Dick!" I called. "Dick! all's well, and I am in the company of a friend of yours and mine."

A moment later he was upon us, and sure enough he held a pistol in his hand. He jumped from his horse in an instant and caught me to him; but it was the highwayman who spoke first.

"Sir," he said, "I see by the pistol you carry that you take a very proper view of the situation. And yet I believe that everything may be explained. If you will consult the lady—"

"Dick," I said, "this gentleman is a friend. He took me with him, very much against his will, because I asked that he would take me; and I did that because I thought that he was you. You know our plan. He is—"

I paused. The highwayman laughed. "I follow, day by day, the trade which it pleased you to adopt for a single night. I anticipated you by a few minutes. We are both of us tall men, and the lady took the difference of voice and manner as a clever disguise. I was engaged about my ordinary business when she appeared to suggest that I should elope with her. I will confess my good luck amazed me at first, but I was quick to embrace it; nor did I discover how far astray my conceit had led me until the very moment of your approach. We were endeavoring to devise a method of restoring the lady to her friends when you appeared to solve our difficulty."

"You forget," said Dick, doggedly, "you forget the little matter of the money and jewels you have stolen."

The highwayman started. "'Convey,' the wise call it," he replied, with some tartness. "But the only course is, that I should surrender everything to you; and then it should be clear to you that I am no less than a messenger of Providence to you and the lady—a god from the machine."

Dick was silent, his arm about my waist, his figure held ready for action.

"The good uncle has been robbed of goods and niece," went on the highwayman, easily. "You come upon him in his distress, hear the tale, and straightway go in pursuit of the thief—the good uncle called me 'thief'—and compel him to disgorge. In truth, the least the uncle can do is to give you the lady in return for his goods. For, though perhaps you do not guess it, you have shown some bravery to-night."

The thing was beautifully clear. "Indeed," I cried, "he shall do no less. Dick, we will go back; and I promise you shall marry me when you will, and with his consent. Do you not see it?"

"He ought to do so," said Dick, grudgingly. "I suppose we must thank you, sir."

"Oh!" said the highwayman, lightly; "there is no need of thanks. Here are the jewels and the purse. But first"—he opened the purse and extracted some scraps of paper—"I promised to liberate certain poor debtors, and that promise I must keep."

He tore the paper into fragments and leaped upon his horse.

"Farewell!" he cried, and vanished into the night. Nor did I hear of him again until he was hanged two years afterwards for a daring robbery.

At least there was one who wept at the news of his death—and she a happy wife.

[THE END.]

Danced Away the Night.

One hundred guests attended the debut of James Boice's youngest daughter, Miss Lucy Boice, at the homestead on the road from New Market to New Brunswick. The debutante was attired in white-cream satin and point-lace.

The costumes of the guests were very beautiful, cream and light blue being the prevailing colors.

The guests were from New York, Bound Brook, Plainfield, New Market and New Brunswick, Rutgers College being well represented. Supper was served at 11:30. Music was furnished by Mr. Hart of New Brunswick, and dancing was kept up until 4:30 a. m.

Why Reform Hall Should Be Open Evenings.

Because the men need it; they have requested it. They tell us "We have no place to spend our evenings but the saloon, and we will not go there". Other men tell us "We have to go the saloon to get warm". These are sad facts for the Christians of Plainfield to confront. Christians, there is a great work for someone to do in this city. Won't you lend a helping hand? Won't you help to rescue the perishing? Won't you see that Reform Hall is open for these men every evening?

J. N. P.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The opening reception in connection with the Y. M. C. A. convention to be held Feb. 14-17 will be in charge of the Christian Endeavor societies of the city. Representatives from all these societies met in the Association building this morning to make arrangements for the affair.

Persons holding $5, $8 and $10 membership tickets in the Association are entitled to the privileges of the entertainments which will be given from time to time.

Work has commenced on the bowling alleys, and will be pushed as rapidly as possible. The furnishing of the main hall is about completed, and presents an attractive appearance.

—Chicago was 14 degrees warmer than Plainfield at 8 a. m today. Buffalo was 4 degrees colder. Albany was the same as Plainfield. North Dakota was 4 degrees colder.

WEAK WOMEN

and all mothers who are nursing babies derive great benefit from Scott's Emulsion. This preparation serves two purposes. It gives vital strength to mothers and also enriches their milk and thus makes their babies thrive.

Scott's Emulsion

is a constructive food that promotes the making of healthy tissue and bone. It is a wonderful remedy for Emaciation, General Debility, Throat and Lung Complaints, Coughs, Colds, Anaemia, Scrofula and Wasting Diseases of Children.

Send for Pamphlet on Scott's Emulsion. Free.

Scott & Bowne, N.Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

Touch and Go.

Touch the spot in the back, chest, limbs or side, where the pain is, with an

Allcock's Porous Plaster

and the lameness, soreness, stiffness, congestion, will go at once, leaving comfort, health and strength behind.

Imitations are never reliable. Therefore always insist upon having the genuine ALLCOCK'S.

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,

Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills

are a marvelous specific for cases of biliousness and indigestion.

BURNED ITS JACKET.

Somerville Way Train Delayed by Too Much Fire at the Engine.

Train No 35, Somerville local, in charge of Conductor Geo. Terrell and Engineer Stephen [illegible], due here at 3:45 p m., was delayed Tuesday for several minutes, it being discovered that the jacket of the engine was on fire. It is, perhaps, not generally known that locomotive boilers are covered with a wooden jacket consisting of longitudinal strips about three-fourths of an inch thick and from two to three inches wide, substantially the same as the more familiar covering of stationary engine boilers, and that over this jacket is placed the nicely painted covering of thin sheet metal so familiar to the eye.

The constant high degree of heat to which this jacket is necessarily subjected reduces it in time almost to charcoal, and occasionally it gets on fire. This was the case with 35 yesterday afternoon. As soon as the discovery was made water was forced through on the flames, and it was thought that they were wholly extinguished, but they were again discovered on arriving at Somerville. So difficult was it to reach the fire because of the outside metal covering that the return trip was delayed for more than an hour. The train, which is scheduled as No. 58, eastbound local from Somerville, on the time sheet, due in this city at 4:50 did not arrive until 6 p. m.

No 14, eastbound express from Wilkes-Barre, carrying mail from the West, due here at 5:51 p. m., was 33 minutes late, being detained by western storms.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan. 20, 1895, trains will leave Plainfield as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 35 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

6.27 p. m.—WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

7.26 p.m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8.42 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Washington and the South—[illegible]

Sundays, [illegible]

For Baltimore only [illegible] week-days.

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

Sundays [illegible]

For New York only, 6 10 a. m., daily.

For Philadelphia [illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

[illegible] with through Buffet parlor car [illegible]

For Sea Isle City and Ocean City [illegible] weekdays.

For Rahway—[illegible]

For New Brunswick—[illegible]

For Woodbridge—[illegible]

For Perth Amboy—[illegible]

For East Millstone—[illegible]

For Trenton—[illegible]

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible]

For Flemington—[illegible]

For Freehold—[illegible] via Monmouth Junction, week-days.

For Jamesburg via Monmouth Junction—[illegible]

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible] Sundays, [illegible] do not stop at Asbury Park on Sundays.

For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—[illegible]

For Boston—[illegible] daily.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton Street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Plainfield—[illegible]

S. M. PREVOST, General Manager.
J. R. WOOD, Gen. Pass. Agent.

FOOLED MR. RUGG.

Went to the Door to See a Friend from the Lodge, and Was Surprised by a Birthday Party.

The cold weather found everything warm and happy at the home of Coal Dealer C. H. Rugg on East Second street Tuesday. Biting frost did not keep his friends from remembering his birthday anniversary in most pleasant fashion. A gay party met at the home of J. C. Van-Dyke, East Front street, and went in a body to the home of Mr. Rugg. His wife had kept him from going to the lodge by inviting in some out-of-town friends, and the doorbell was muffled while a member of the family kept watch. Promptly the party arrived, and when they had been secreted in the hall Mr Rugg was told that a friend from the lodge wished to see him. He asked that he be brought in, but was told that he had no time to walk. Mr. Rugg then went into the hall, and was astonished to find the large gathering of friends. He made a speech of welcome as bright as brief, and all were taken in and made at home. Music, games, and superb refreshments, made the hours pass joyously, and 1 o'clock, the parting hour, came all too soon.

Among those present were: Mr and Mrs Fredicks, Mr and Mrs Startup, Mr and Mrs Van Dyke and Miss Maud Van Dyke, Mr and Mrs Bragman, Mr and Mrs Van Fleete and Miss May Van Fleete, Mr and Mrs Holden, Mr and Mrs H W Marshall, Miss Emily Coriell, Dr Peacock, Mr Clark, Mrs March, Mr Swackhamer, Miss Chandler, Miss Wilson, Miss Van Eps.

—A quorum not being present at the annual meeting of the New Jersey Building Loan and Investment Company held in the Republican Association rooms last evening, the election of officers was deferred till Feb 19.

—Plainfield will be well represented at the G. A. R. Encampment to be held in Trenton, Thursday and Friday. Several important measures will come up for consideration, in which the Plainfield delegation are interested.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Newark [illegible] Saturday only, [illegible]

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible] night. Sunday—[illegible]

Leave Somerville, [illegible] Sunday [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield [illegible] Sunday—[illegible]

Leave Easton [illegible] Sundays—[illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

6 45 a. m. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport and Tamaqua.

7 10 a. m. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge Branch.

7 26 a. m. for Flemington, D. L. & W. R. R., Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.

8 54 a. m. for Flemington, High Bridge branch, D L & W R R, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Nanticoke, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.

[illegible] way for Easton connecting at Junction for stations on D. L. & W. R. R.

[illegible] for Flemington, [illegible] Allentown, [illegible] Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Sunbury and Williamsport, Wilkesbarre and Scranton. Buffet parlor car to Mauch Chunk.

[illegible] way for Easton, connecting at High Bridge for stations on High Bridge branch.

[illegible] for Flemington, Easton, Bethlehem, Bangor, Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, [illegible] Tamaqua, Buffet parlor car to Scranton.

[illegible] for Flemington.

[illegible] for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading and Harrisburg.

[illegible] for Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.

[illegible] Sunday for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton. [illegible] Sundays for [illegible] Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Reading and Harrisburg. [illegible] Sundays for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading, Harrisburg, &c. and at Junction for D. L. & W. R.

For Atlantic City, [illegible]

Long Branch, Ocean Grove, &c.

Leave Plainfield [illegible] Sundays—except Ocean Grove [illegible]

For Perth Amboy, [illegible]

For Freehold [illegible]

ROYAL BLUE LINE.

Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia, [illegible]

For Trenton [illegible]

For Baltimore and Washington at [illegible]

For Chattanooga, New Orleans and all points south with through vestibule sleeper, via Shenandoah Valley Route at [illegible] Sundays [illegible]

For Buffalo, Chicago and all points west, week-days at [illegible]

RETURNING—LEAVE PHILADELPHIA, [illegible]

From 24th and Chestnut streets, [illegible]

Leave Trenton, Warren and Tucker sts., [illegible]

Plainfield passengers by trains marked * change cars at Bound Brook.

Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket agent at the station.

J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Supt.
H. P. BALDWIN, Gen. Pass. Agt.

MAKING TURPENTINE

AN EXTENSIVE INDUSTRY IN CERTAIN SOUTHERN STATES.

How the Trees Are Tapped and the Resinous Gum Gathered—Departments and Divisions In the Work All Under the Keen Eye of the "Rider."

Dialect-writers find a fruitful field among the "Tar Heels" of the Carolinas, Alabama and Georgia. In the cool depths of the turpentine woods, with the gashed trees yielding up their resinous gum, the balmy air and the picturesque "hackers," "dippers" and "scrapers," with the ever vigilant "rider" watching everything, is a phase in southern life which has long been the delight of authors and the pleasure of artists. The crudity of the implements and the stills used in making turpentine and rosin lend additional interest to this old industry, and the gypsylike habits of the turpentine makers add to their ragged, illiterate charms.

Turpentine is the distilled gum of the pine trees of North and South Carolina, Alabama, Georgia and part of Florida. The season begins when the first spring sap rises and ends when cold weather checks the flow of the tree's blood. In January or February the "hacker," with his keen bladed ax, begins the round which ends with the season. He is the expert of the woods and knows his trees and just how much hacking they will stand. His task is to cut the "boxes" in which the thick gum of the wounded tree will collect. A box is a wide incision about six inches deep, a wedge shaped cut in the tree, and he hacks from 90 to 100 boxes a day. The first boxes are cut near the roots of the tree, and they are cut as close together to the height of a man's head as can be done without killing the pine. The hacker leaves a width of bark between each box so as to preserve the vitality of the tree. When the trees are leased to the turpentine makers, the terms of the lease limit the number of boxes to each tree, but when it is desired to work the pine to the fullest extent the gashes are carried up to a height of 20 feet or more.

After the hacker comes the man who "corners" the boxes. This "corner" is a cut in the top of the box to guide the sap into the cavities left for the gum, and the man who "works" the "crop" goes systematically from box to box, starting the sap anew with fresh incisions, working in this way 10,000 boxes during the season. The sap or gum fills the boxes with a clear, sticky, thick fluid, and this is removed by the "dipper." Scattered through the woods are barrels in which the "dipper" deposits the gum, which is then hauled to the still. About a quart of sap is taken from each box by means of the trowel shaped scoop used by the dipper, and then the hacker comes along and starts the flow afresh by wounding the tree again. The turpentine maker watches his men closely, for the Tar Heels are an easy going people and require to be urged by the "rider," who goes through the woods on horseback examining the crop, hurrying the dippers and hackers and sending the barreled gum to the still.

The first or "virgin" sap which flows in the spring makes the best rosin, and the poorest is the product of the hardened gum which is left on the sides of the boxes when the sap "turns down" in the fall. This is removed by the "scraper," who moves through the woods with his scraping tool, gathering the leavings.

The still is a large copper vat hooded with a close fitting cover in which is a funnel which in turn is connected with the "worm" of the still. This worm runs down into another vat near at hand, and in this vat the fumes or vapor of the heated gum is distilled into turpentine. Fire under the copper vat heats the gum, and the volatile parts rise to the funnel, pass into the still and are condensed by the water in the second vat into spirits of turpentine. The residuum left in the vat is the rosin of commerce, which is passed through a series of strainers and sieves to the barrels, which are made on the spot. The turpentine, however, cannot be barreled so easily, for it will work through an ordinary barrel. It is placed in white pine barrels which have been coated inside with several coats of strong, hot glue until the barrel is impervious to the subtle fluid.

The trees are worked for five or six seasons, and then the turpentine maker moves to another part of the woods. He started in North Carolina, crossed over to South Carolina and is still moving toward the gulf. Forest fires destroy the pines faster than the backer does, for the flames sweep over large areas before they die out. Careful owners of turpentine woods have the pine straw and fallen underbrush raked away from their trees before the season begins, and collecting this material in some safe spot wait for a quiet day when no wind will cool the wet finger, and then they burn the rakings.

Negroes are common laborers of the turpentine woods, but white men are plentiful. They live in rough shanties in the woods, with the stables for the mules and horses near at hand. No work is more healthful than turpentine making, for it is all out of doors in the depths of the balmy, health giving pines, free from the malaria of the swamps and from sudden changes of weather.—Chicago Record.

Horsepower.

The difference between nominal, indicated and effective horsepower often puzzles people. Nominal horsepower is an assumed quantity, used for the convenience of makers and buyers in describing the dimensions of the engines. Indicated horsepower is the amount shown by computations of the indicator diagram. Effective or actual horsepower is the work an engine can do or the difference between the indicated horsepower and the horsepower required to drive the engine when unloaded.—New York Tribune.

THE QUEEN BEE.

She Is the Foundation, the Life and Soul of a Hive Colony.

A queen bee is essential to the colony. She is readily picked out, but by a close observer by her great length. She lives generally for about five years, but her term of life varies in different individuals from two to five or six and in rare instances even to seven years. A queen is fed with the daintiest and best all through her embryo stage, and when hatched comes out a full queen. If any other queen is hatched—and sometimes one or two more are, pretty soon after—the rightful ruler assails the rival claimant in a life and death battle, the "stinger" being plied vigorously like a death dealing sword by both contestants, while the hive looks on in mute interest to see the issue of the battle. This is almost decided in favor of the assailant. She is then the undisputed queen and is so regarded. Yet the great company of "workers" are in some senses the real governors, and the hive is a great social democracy. If by any mischance the queen is killed, then the "workers"—who are undeveloped females—go to work to produce a new one. The egg they select for the trial is attended to with the same care, and the embryo bee is fed with the same selected food, as in the case of the egg that had produced the legitimate queen. It makes a queen, and she serves in that capacity.

Except in swarming time, the queen never leaves the hive, only on the one occasion of her bridal tour. Selecting some one for her husband, she invites him out to go with her—and their connubial relations are carried on entirely while on the wing in the air—like the chimney swallow's. The bridegroom never returns. He drops dead, and the queen returns from her one and only aerial excursion a fully fecundated bee, ready to begin her great life work of egg laying. Some days she will lay as many as 2,000 eggs; in all, about 20,000 eggs.

In "swarming" a large part of the whole crowd goes out. They leave behind the remains of the old colony, which had grown too numerous, thus compelling the "swarming" or seeking a new home by a great part of the hive. The queen goes with the swarmers, and here they follow closely. If she alights on a branch or other place, they all settle there, clinging closely together in a great mass, by much the same method as a mass of burdock burs will stick together, and the farmer's wife and "all hands" used to bang away on tin pans to govern the movements of the swarm by fright if possible.

So close does the swarm follow the queen that when once in flying over a lake the queen became weary and dropped into the water every bee went down with her to death by drowning.—New York Dispatch.

BRUSSELS AND TAPESTRY.

The Difference Between These Two Kinds of Carpets Explained.

By placing a brussels and tapestry carpet side by side a clearness and sharpness are noticed about the brussels carpet which are absent from the tapestry. In the latter there is a mistiness about the colors, and the pattern lacks that sharpness and delicacy which characterize the former. This is due to the process of manufacture. A brussels is a yarn dyed, and a tapestry may be described as a printed fabric, but the printing is done upon the yarn before the process of weaving.

The whole method of manufacture is most ingenious. In the making of a five frame brussels no fewer than 1,280 ends of face yarns are required for the weaving of one piece of standard quality, each frame consisting of 256 bobbins, and 256 ends only can come to the face at each pick of the pattern. Therefore 1,024 ends of yarn are hidden in the body of the fabric. There are many qualities of tapestry, but in the production of the standard quality only 216 ends of face yarn are required, instead of 1,280, which shows at once that the brussels carpet has the great advantage of being thicker, softer and altogether a more durable cloth apart from other advantages which it possesses. There is a limitation in the number of colors used in a brussels. In tapestry there is no limit. In the brussels the whole of the colors used show a more or less striped appearance at the back of the fabric.

In a tapestry they do not show at the back at all. This fact is made use of by householders in purchasing carpets, this being about the only way the average person can tell the difference between them. In order to pass off tapestry as brussels some ingenious makers have resorted to the striping in a regular manner of the backs of the former. The stripy effect in the latter is broken and irregular. A casual observation of the clearly defined character of a brussels pattern should enable a buyer to distinguish between the two fabrics.—Furnishers' Gazette.

Shakespeare and Bacon.

A famous historian well known personally in Boston told the following story when he was asked what he thought of the Shakespeare-Bacon controversy: "I was once librarian in a small town, and it was my custom to catalogue books on the real meaning of Daniel, astrology, modern spiritualism, etc., under the general head 'Insane Literature.' When any volume written in support of the Baconian theory appeared, I catalogued it under the same head."—Boston Journal.

Warned In Time.

"William," said Mrs. Youngwife from the head of the stairs to her husband, who had come home at an early hour in the morning, "there is some of my homemade cake in the pantry, a new kind that I made today. I put it where you can easily find it."

"All right, dear," responded Mr. Youngwife. "How considerate of you! I might have eaten some of it without thinking." And the grateful husband made a supper of cold beef.—Philadelphia Times.

TROLLEY STILL DEFERRED.

FANWOOD TOWNSHIP CONTINUES ITS DISCUSSION.

From The Press of Feb. 2.

Chairman Terry called to order the meeting of the Fanwood Township Committee last night and the special committee on the trolley matter were asked for their report.

T. J. Nichols, chairman of the committee, said the committee could not present a favorable report. They had worked hard to get signers, and had succeeded in getting a number of signatures, but not a majority. He was very sorry such was the case, but the committee had worked for the Forest avenue route, being led to believe they could succeed. If the Town Committee saw fit to defer the granting of the franchise tonight, the special committee would endeavor to secure signatures for that route, as they already had some signers.

Mr. Gaddis said he would like to present to the Committee an application for a franchise for an electric road beginning at a point at the corner of Mountain and Park avenue, running to Midway, to Forest, to the station. He hoped the Committee would grant the application and order it advertised, so the company could go on.

The company had been pledged by bankers $10,000,000 to go on with the work as soon as franchises enough were obtained to guarantee them that the line could be finished. The contract had already been given out, and the work started for a short line between New Brunswick and Raritan. He only referred to this to show the people of Fanwood Township that the company was acting in good faith.

Mr. Miller moved that the application be received and ordered advertised in The Plainfield Daily Press for fourteen days, according to law. The motion was carried.

Mr. Gaddis asked the Committee to grant the application for the franchise for the main line through Midway avenue, so the company would not be delayed any longer in starting the work. The company was not to blame, because the signatures for the loop had not been obtained, and it was unjust for the Committee to withhold that which they were certain to grant at some future date. It was only standing the company off when they were acting in good faith and had done all that they could when they made the application for the short line.

After a heated discussion, Mr. Gaddis promised to give bond to the Committee to build the short line to the station if the signers could be obtained.

Mr. Miller moved that the franchise be granted to the Philadelphia and New York Traction Company, at an adjourned meeting to be held Wednesday, February 6, the company to put up a $10,000 bond satisfactory to the committee. The motion was carried.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Miller that in view of the fact that a mad dog had been running at will through the town that all dogs in the township be chained for 30 days and all dogs known to be bit be killed at once. This was carried. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, the bills were read and ordered paid, the treasurer's report was read and accepted, and the committee adjourned to meet Feb. 6.

"Ladies First."

An apt illustration of the ofttimes ludicrous way in which little people profit by their training was given not very long ago by one of Plainfield's young citizens in embryo. This young man has a sister nearly his own age, and one of the cardinal points of his daily education was that he should always give way to her for "ladies should always be first". That the youth has learned the lesson well was made apparent one afternoon when the disobedience of both youngsters to a request of the parent could no longer be overlooked and they were called up for punishment. Stepping from in front of his sister with a bow which would have done credit to Chesterfield himself, the little fellow gravely said "Ladies first, Mamma!"

Stopped Their Little Game.

(From The Dunellen Call.)

Some of our commuters have been in the habit of getting on the 4:30 express from New York and remaining in the rear car, which is left off at Plainfield and brought here by the shifting engine, thus saving about fifteen minutes and the many stops of the local. Last Saturday two of our townsmen were a little taken back when they arrived at Plainfield, by being informed that they would have to get off and wait for the local, as an order went into effect last Thursday which stops this time-saving scheme.

Our Authority Was the Fire Department Records.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: In your issue of yesterday, in describing the fire of the previous night, you do me an injustice in ascribing the origin of the fire to a barrel of gasoline near the boiler. This is entirely wrong, as I have not, nor ever had, any gasoline in my establishment, either for general use or any other purposes. I trust that you will make this correction. G. O. Keller.

Plainfield, Feb. 2, 1895.

—The Dachshunde, Marcel, owned by Mrs. U. T. Hungerford of Netherwood, has recovered from his partial paralysis, so as to be able to move around again, through the treatment of Dr. F. O. Harber, veterinary surgeon.

FIRE AND A RUNAWAY.

The Department Has a Brave Tussle with Burning Acid and Gasoline.

A young man from Dunellen ran into T. J. Carey's office on Front street last evening and said there was a fire on Washington avenue. He wanted the key to Box 42 to send in the alarm, but Mr. Carey thought he would better attend to it himself, which he did.

When he pulled the box the steam gong sounded only two blows, although the alarm went into the various house gongs all right and the department responded quickly.

A few minutes later Chief Doane sent Inspector Herbert Chamberlain to adjust the valve in the whistle. He then pulled the box again, and the alarm sounded all right.

The fire was in a small frame building situated on Washington avenue near Front street, owned by Christopher Becker, and leased by G. O. Keller as a dyeing establishment.

Mr. Keller was at the place at 6, and left soon afterward when he claims everything was all right. After supper he joined some friends and spent the evening with them in North Plainfield and did not return home till nearly midnight, and knew nothing of the fire till 8 this morning when a little girl told him.

In the building was a considerable amount of chemicals, a barrel of gasoline near the boiler, an engine, boiler and various other goods valued altogether at $900, on which there was $600 insurance, held by Agent M. M. Dunham. Agent W. A. Woodruff held a policy for Mr. Becker on the building.

The fire started in the second story of the building, and is supposed to have been caused by heat from the boiler breaking a carboy of acid.

The department after an hour of hard work succeeded in extinguishing the fire, though everything in the building is a loss. The firemen had a fierce battle against the acid and gasoline.

When Driver Townley of Alert hose wagon had arrived at the Washington avenue bridge he left the team standing. David Dunavan was on the wagon putting on his boots. Just then a stream of water struck one of the horses and frightened them into a run. Mr. Dunavan in attempting to get hold of the reins was thrown off, but not injured. The team went on to Rockview, Mercer, Sycamore, and Willow avenues, and came back to Washington avenue, where a young man named Cornwell, jumped on the seat and stopped them. The right hind wheel of the wagon was sprung a little, and one of the side lamps was smashed.

The recall was sounded about 11:30.

Surprise Reception.

After the prayer meeting was over in Hope Chapel last night, a surprise reception was given to Mr. Yerkes by his Bible class. A musical and literary programme was rendered by Miss Lizzie Firstbrook, Miss Duckworth, Miss Higgins, and Mr. Lee.

A beautiful chair was presented to Mr. Yerkes by his class; and Mr. Munger, teacher of the Men's Bible class, in presenting the gift, spoke of the faithfulness of Mr. Yerkes's class.

In receiving the gift Mr. Yerkes said that he could n't find words to express his gratitude, but that he was greatly indebted to them for the fine chair, and would spend many happy moments in it studying his Sunday-school lessons.

All then repaired to a side room, where good things were served in abundance.

The pleasant time was largely due to the untiring committee, consisting of Mrs. Bowman, chairman, Mrs. McComas, Mrs. Higgins, and Mrs. Cox.

Lady Cyclers on Their Travels.

The Lady Cyclers of Plainfield went yesterday to Philadelphia, and were entertained by Mrs. Clark Dillenbeck, formerly Miss Morrison of Plainfield.

Arriving at Philadelphia, they went direct to the Mint, and after spending an hour there, and wishing for all they saw, they went to Wannamaker's, where the large organ was played for them, and if some of the Plainfield young men had only been there the happiness would have been complete.

At 12:15 the party took the train for Mt. Pleasant, where Mrs. Dillenbeck lives, and where a very fine dinner was served much to the delight of all. After dinner was over, whist was enjoyed, the lucky winners being Mrs. Williams and Mrs. Dillenbeck, each of whom won a bottle of perfume, and Miss Arleen Crane and Mrs. Fred Green, who won a very handsome key ring apiece. The party left Philadelphia at 8, and, much to their discomfort, did not reach Plainfield till nearly 12.

Among those who enjoyed this treat were Miss Arleen Crane, Miss Ethel Green, Miss Minnie French, Mrs. Ned Williams, Mrs. Fred Green, Miss Grace Langdon and Miss Nette Yerkes.

Swindling by Forged Checks.

Thomas Worth, the Somerset street harness maker, has been victimized by a stout, light complexioned man of 35 or 40, who bought a set of harness and some blankets, presenting a check for $26, signed A. C. Blair, in payment, and receiving a small cash balance in excess of the bill.

He was not as successful in his attempt to swindle Mr. Zimmerman the Front street hardware merchant, from whom he ordered a stove, a keg of nails, and two shovels all to be delivered to A. C. Blair, but his offer to pay was refused until the goods were delivered, so he departed without securing his cash rebate.

—Mrs. L. Coles has taken possession of Room 203, Babcock Building, where she is prepared to do fashionable dressmaking, using the Taylor French system.

Rates of Advertising

SPACE	WEEKS 1	2	3	MONTHS 1	2	3	6	12
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50	$15.00
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00	20.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	25.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	30.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	37.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	40.00
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	35.00	45.00	80.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00	140.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 50 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you, whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything.

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
H EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR,
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos, always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.
7mly

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches a strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood!
Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

L. B. WOOLSTON, J. P. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS' SUPPLIES, 101-103 NORTH AV
[illegible]

BRIAR PIPE GIVEN AWAY

Duke's Mixture

WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF
DUKES MIXTURE
for 35 cents
Every pipe stamped DUKES MIXTURE or ATC
2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1894, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer

FOR MALARIA,
GENERAL DEBILITY,
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle.
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. CO.
RAHWAY, N. J.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE NEVERSLIP
THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE.

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.

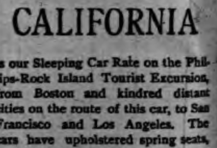
Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,
Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.

On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dealers in hardware blacksmiths' supplies, etc., sole agents for Union county.



$6.00
........TO........
CALIFORNIA

is our Sleeping Car Rate on the Phillips-Rock Island Tourist Excursion, from Boston and kindred distant cities on the route of this car, to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The cars have upholstered spring seats, are Pullman build, and appointments perfect.

You have a special manager on the car all the way, and excursions run once a week, leaving Boston every Tuesday. Save money by taking this popular mode of travel.

Address for full particulars,

A. PHILLIPS & CO.
296 Washington st., Boston, Mass

JNO. SEBASTIAN,
Gen. Passenger Agent, Chicago.
8 23 Feb 8

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss VanAlstyne of Chatham Centre, N. Y., is the guest of Mrs. VanAlstyne of Watchung avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Reamer of Brooklyn are visiting Mrs. Reamer's brother, L. G. Van Nest of Duer street.

William C. Ayers, one of Plainfield's oldest and most honored citizens, will be 90 years old on Lincoln's Birthday.

Halsey Compton has just returned from a short hunting trip to North Carolina and reports an abundance of game.

George E. Firstbrok of Essex street is on a business trip to Worcester, in the interest of Ely & Williams of New York.

Mr. Kiem, the Socialist stump-speaker of Rahway, is the guest of Jacob Grieb of West Third street during his stay in this city.

George Stevens of Plainfield and Mr. Case of Elizabeth have been chosen end men for the Muhlenberg Hospital Minstrels.

Miss Flo Honegger, formerly of this city and now of Staten Island, is the guest of Mrs. J. R. Hill of Belvidere avenue, Netherwood.

Miss Teddie Scrymser, one of the leading belles of New Brighton, S. I., is visiting her friend, Miss Marie Dryden of West Seventh street.

Roswell G. Horr of Plainfield will lecture in the town hall, Rockville, Conn., the evening of Feb. 26, on "Work and How to Get a Living".

W. H. Miner has started a choir of boys in St. Francis Catholic Church, Naugatuck, Conn., for vesper service, at which service he plays.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich has been called to Amherst, Mass., to make an address to the college students on the Day of Prayer, and preach in the village church.

Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Allen and their mother Mrs. Thomas Stead who is 97 years old, are all confined to the house with grip. Dr. Probasco is in attendance.

Capt. Wm. B. Ostrom attended as a member the recent 125th anniversary of the Marine Society, and was a notable contributor to the after-dinner reminiscences.

Cards are out for receptions to be given by Mrs. D. N. Groendyke and Mrs. John Gray Foster at their home on Mercer avenue Wednesday, Feb. 13, and Thursday, Feb. 14.

Mrs. Charlotte Emerson Brown of East Orange will address the members of the Monday Afternoon Club on the subject of parliamentary law, at a special meeting to be held for this purpose in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church, Monday afternoon, Feb. 11, at 3.

Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Smith of Central avenue have returned from Hartwick, N. Y., where they attended the ninetieth birthday of Mrs. Smith's father, L. R. Proctor. Mr. and Mrs. Proctor recently celebrated their sixty-fourth wedding anniversary in Nevada. Both are enjoying excellent health.

John P. Brown, whose whistling gave the audience so much pleasure during the "Trip to Chinatown" Thursday evening, is a friend and former classmate in England of George Harrison of this city, who drives Carl Koerth's mineral-water wagon. The two friends had a pleasant time after the theatre comparing notes and talking over old times.

E. Maxwell Honeyman, son of Editor A. V. D. Honeyman, is now in the highest class of the North Plainfield public school, and is planning to enter a Philadelphia or New York school of medicine. He is a bright young man with a decided bent for the medical profession, probably inherited from the two skilful physicians who preceded him in the family.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

Mr. Travell was absent yesterday with a return of the grip, with which he has been suffering for several days. His position as teacher of the Cæsar Class was filled by Ralph Campbell '93, now a student at the New York University, who was visiting his friends in the High School yesterday.

The regular meeting of the Kappa Delta Phi took place yesterday afternoon. The programme was "An Afternoon with the Heroes of the Revolution". The speakers were: J. V. Beekman, Jr., Israel Putnam; A. B. Crane, James Otis; C. B. Morse, Benjamin Franklin; L. H. Rand, Francis Marion; Henry Eggerding, John Paul Jones; J. H. Craig, Thomas Jefferson; H. H. Rapalye, Samuel Adams; E. L. Serrell, Count Pulaski; G. A. Horne, George Washington, Charles Noble, Patrick Henry; H. B. Drake, Anthony Wayne; F. W. Cornwell, Marquis de Lafayette; J. C. Whiting, The Heroes of the Land of Penn. Several amendments to the constitution were adopted. The programme committee reported the following debate for next Friday: "Should foreign immigration to this country be restricted?" Affirmative, Henry Eggerding, Charles Noble; negative, Carl C. Phillips, Edgar L. Serrell.

Socialist Headquarters.

The Socialists of the West End have at last found headquarters. It is the intention of the members who reside in the West End to renovate the store at the corner of South Second street and Grant avenue, and in the future have it for their meeting place. Work on the interior will be begun at once.

Mr. Hoffman's incubator, West Front street, has hatched out a 5-toed Plymouth Rock chicken.

"OF THEE I SING."

DR. SMITH TELLS HOW OUR NATIONAL HYMN WAS WRITTEN.

First Scribbled on a Scrap of Waste Paper; Sung on July 4, 1832, in Boston, and Since Then in All Parts of the World.

Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes once said facetiously that he supposed the three people in the world whose poems were the best known were himself, one Smith and one Brown.

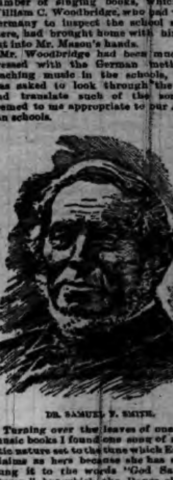
The one Brown he had in mind was the Mrs. Brown who wrote "I love to Steal Awhile Away." The one Smith was his old college classmate and long-time friend, Samuel Francis Smith, D.D., the author of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee."

Dr. Smith is still among the living, one of the last of that famous class of Harvard '29 men which included, besides the late Dr. Holmes, the Rev. James Freeman Clarke, Prof. Benjamin Pierce, Judge Curtis, Judge Bigelow and a number of others well known in Massachusetts' annals and beyond them.

In October, 1894, Dr. Smith was eighty-six years old. He recently told a contributor of the New York Herald the following story of the birth of the national hymn:

I did not know that I had written a national hymn till the conviction was forced upon me. While I was a student in the Theological Seminary in Andover, Mass., Mr. Lowell Mason, through whose efforts the study of music was introduced into the public schools of Boston and elsewhere in this country, brought me a number of singing books, which Mr. William C. Woodbridge, who had visited Germany to inspect the school system there, had brought home with him and put into Mr. Mason's hands.

Mr. Woodbridge had been much impressed with the German method of teaching music in the schools, and I was asked to look through the books and translate such of the songs as seemed to me appropriate to our American schools.



DR. SAMUEL F. SMITH.

Turning over the leaves of one of the music books I found one song of a patriotic nature set to the tune which England claims as hers because she has so long sung it to the words "God Save the Queen," but which the Danes claim as theirs, and which the Germans claim as theirs, and which the Germans claim as original with them, and of the real origin of which I believe no one is certain.

The music impressed me by its simplicity and easy movement, and I was at once moved to write a patriotic hymn of my own, which American children could sing to this same tune, which I did on a scrap of waste paper, probably finishing it within half an hour.

That was in February, 1832. I gave the hymn to Mr. Mason with others—some translations, others my own—and thought no more of it. The following Fourth of July I happened into Park Street Church in Boston, where Sunday-school children were enjoying a patriotic festival. It was at this children's Fourth of July celebration that "America" was first sung, the words of which I had written a few months before. Since then I have heard it sung all over the world.

As to the story which has been told of the sending of the original of "America" to the Pope, it is not true. An autograph copy was sent, framed, by a friend of mine, as an individual, to be deposited in the Vatican library at Rome; the original is still in my own possession.

It was of Dr. Smith that Dr. Holmes wrote in his poem to "The Boys," composed for one of their Harvard class reunions:

And there's a nice youngster of excellent pith—
Fate tried to conceal it by naming it Smith;
But he shouted a song for the brave and the free,
Just read on his medal, "My Country, of Thee."

Speaking of the difference between college life to-day and in his own student days, Dr. Smith said the chief difference is the decrease of class spirit owing to the largely increased number of men in the classes to-day. "Our class at Harvard," said Dr. Smith, "numbered sixty when we graduated, and we all knew each other well. We had the chance to measure, mark and weigh each other, and were almost like brothers of one family."

For the last few years of Dr. Holmes's life the remnant of the class of '29 gave up holding their annual reunion at one of the hotels, and dined at his residence as his personal guests. These occasions lasted from 4 in the afternoon till late at night, and the reminiscences exchanged were peculiarly entertaining, saddened only by the dwindling numbers.

Dr. Smith has led too busy a life to sentimentalize over his work, until this year not even taking the trouble to hunt up the manuscript of his famous patriotic poem, to which he always referred when questioned as "scribbled upon a bit of waste paper somewhere."

It Was Very Sudden.

She—Do you think the time will ever come when woman will propose?

He—I don't see why it shouldn't. Suppose you propose to me to-night, and I said yes, what—

She—Oh, Henry, this is so sudden! But never mind; it is just as well, and mother, I know, will be delighted.—Milwaukee Catholic Citizen.

The Coming Woman.

When lovely woman runs the trolley
Pedestrians won't know where they're at,
She'll gayly run them down—by golly,
While studying some fair fare's hat.
—Cincinnati Tribune.

AT THE BICYCLE ACADEMY.

'Twas at a female cycling school,
Where bloomer costumes are the rule;
And fairy forms in trousers hid,
Essay the bike as she is rid.

A rare and radiant vision she!
A dream! a song! a rhapsody!
To whom none other there was like,
Came forth to tame the festive bike!

She cast about a bashful glance,
Gazed at her wiry steed askance;
They eyed her bifurcated skirt,
And wondered if a tumble hurt.

Then, at the master's stern command,
She grasped her steed with trembling hands;
A gasp, a sigh, with anguish pent,
A bounce, a boost, and up she went.

Prate not to me of dire alarms,
Of fire and floods and martial arms;
For depth of woe there's nothing like
A frightened female on a bike!

She stuck, she strained, she vainly strove
To make that pesky pedal move;
She pumped, she pushed, turned ghastly
white,
And worked both feet with all her might!

And now she starts; she seems to feel
A thrill of life along her wheel!
But, oh! a bump! a zigzag slump!
Girl; bike, spokes, legs, all in a lump!
—Evening Sun.

FOR ONE MORE SHOT.

A Short Story of the Civil War Told by an Old Soldier.

"Here was a battle going on," said an old soldier; "nothing very heroic about it nor anything very tremendous, except that more or less men were getting killed and wounded all the time. Patches of woods with open spaces intervening, the line stretched along in the edge of the woods and across the open spaces. Along in front an open space, and on the other side of that the Confederates, in woods like ourselves, where there were woods, but in light earthworks and rifle pits between. That was their position, and we had advanced toward it as a part of some general movement, and our business was to stay there and keep the troops in front engaged.

"Veteran troops, ours were, except for such recruits as were scattered among us and except for a few enthusiastic men that liked to shout, using ammunition sparingly and not shooting much unless they thought they had some sort of chance for hitting something. Thoughtless, sometimes, about themselves, but pretty careful generally, and protecting themselves as much as they could. But even with that, and with the fighting slow, we managed in the course of the day to lose a pretty good lot of men.

"Here, now, was a man in my regiment shot through the body. He crawled away toward the rear. I don't know why he wasn't picked up by the hospital men, but he wasn't. Just back of that part of the line where our regiment was stationed was a little farmhouse. In front of this house was a sort of open yard or space in which there was one tree; it wasn't a very big tree, and I don't remember what kind of tree it was, but I remember that two of its roots ran away from the trunk a little above ground for four or five feet, and between these roots there was a little hollow, just a little sort of depression in the ground. The front yard was maybe eight or ten yards back from the line; that is, it might have been that much back to the tree.

"The man crawled along slowly until he came to the tree, and he crept partly into that little depression; I suppose it looked sort of inviting; it was a place; it wasn't just out doors, but was a sort of place by itself, and the tree gave it a kind of companionship, too. He crept partly into the little hollow and then stopped and raised himself up so that he was half sitting up, propped up on one arm and hand, and he sat up that way and looked at the brigade commander, who was standing in the yard. The brigade commander had been the Colonel of the wounded man's regiment, and he knew every man in it; he knew this man; and, of course, every man in the regiment knew the Colonel—the General he was now—and from knowing him so long and so well the men had all come to rely on him and to look to him.

"Red was creeping out around the wounded man now, and staining the little hollow as he sat there, propped up on his arm looking at the General. There was a sort of wistful look on his face, as though he thought the General could help him, and the General looked down on him very soberly; in fact, with a very great pity. Just a few feet away, more or less, men were being killed and wounded all the time, but that was going on in an orderly, business fashion. This man was just dying, just simply dying by himself, and you could see his life fade as you looked at him, and you could see the red stain spreading in the little hollow, and making scallops here and there where it ran up into little shallow gulfs and bays making off from the main depression.

"He was getting weaker and weaker, and was going fast, but all the time looking up at the General with that look on his face.

"'If I could only have one more shot,' he said. You see, he wasn't thinking of home or friends. He was thinking of the battle; his last wish was for one more shot; and a second later he collapsed, and fell dead."

A Family Reunion of Wives.

William Cox, of Monticello, Ky., ate a New Year's dinner at which sat three of his living wives, and he is only 38 years of age. His first was Miss Minerva Smith, who bore him nine children and was afterward divorced. Mr. Cox then married Miss Julia Stephens, and he was soon divorced from her. No children resulted from that union. He then wedded his present spouse, a Tennessee woman, and seven children have blessed their home. His first two wives have married again and there is now a feeling of harmony and good will existing between them. On New Year's Day Mr. Cox spread a banquet at his home and invited his two former helpmates to celebrate the event with him. They responded, and the day passed without a ripple of dissatisfaction or unpleasantness. Cox was first married at the age of 14.

Of all sorts of earthly good, the price is self denial. The lower must be sacrificed for the greater; the coarse give place to the finer.—H. D. Hitchcock.

Self-knowledge is best learned, not by contemplation, but action. Strive to do your duty, and you will soon discover of what stuff you are made.—Goethe.

If we are ever in doubt what to do, it is a good rule to ask ourselves what we shall wish on the morrow that we had done.

A BISHOP'S SALOON.

TO BE RUN ON THE SAME PRINCIPLE AS THE LIQUOR SALOON.

Good Cheer, Free Lunch, Games and Everything but Intoxicants Furnished—The Experiment to be Tried in Wicked Chicago First.

Priest Rainsford of an Episcopal church in New York has for a long time advocated a church saloon, where beer could be sold. Bishop Fellows of Chicago is about to try a saloon experiment, but without liquor.

He will not sell rum or any other kind of intoxicant, for he proposes to compete for the patronage and influence of the liquor saloon with what he calls the "home saloon." He is going to put in practical operation the plan he suggested at the Father Mathew celebration at the Auditorium several months ago.

"What," he said, "has the Church or the temperance movement to offer in a material way in competition with the saloon? Nothing. I have been investigating the saloon business. I have had men at work finding out all about their methods and the business. We propose to apply those principles to the conducting and management of places where we can offer everything that the saloon does in the way of warmth and light and a place to sit down, and a place to get something to eat and something to drink, except intoxicants. I have the figures in my pocket now, and I believe these places can be made both self-supporting and self-propagating.

"For 5 cents we can furnish a hot drink of coffee, tea, or something of the sort, or other non-intoxicating drinks, together with a pretty fair meal of bread, meat, and potato salad, or something of that sort. For 10 cents we can do very much better. It is an experiment that has proved successful in London, Liverpool, Manchester, and other English cities. It promises well for Chicago. It can only be demonstrated by experiment.

"If one proves successful a hundred will, and we want to locate them right where they are needed. Our first one will be opened in the 'levee' district probably, and others wherever they can be made successful. We want them to be as places of gatherings for friends and acquaintances, something like the wine shops of Paris and the Continent. They will be perfectly respectable.

"People want light and warmth and a place where they can feel they have a right to be, and therefore it is not a question of welcome or privilege. I believe such a work as this, if it proves successful, will be worth fifty years of merely intellectual temperance work. The more I study this matter the more I am impressed with its possibilities. One of the features of it is that it shall be self-supporting.

"It will be carried on as a part of the general scheme of the People's Institute, though not necessarily in connection with the institute. They will be planted where they can do the most good, and these places of refreshment where they are most needed. The institutes will be educational, recreative, and broadly undenominational in their work. They will be open seven days and seven nights in the week. If I had the money it would cost to establish one church where, say, 150 worship Sunday, I could establish two or three institutes."

Bishop Fallows will not resign his bishopric nor his connection with St. Paul's Church. He could not, in keeping with the ecclesiastical organization of the Reformed Episcopal Church. He will simply leave the details of parochial work to an assistant or perhaps two.

DR. DEPEW ON FREE LUNCH.

He Believes It an Ingenious Preparation for the Destruction of Men's Souls.

"Free lunches!" exclaimed the doctor. "Well, I did say something about free lunches, didn't I? And if I'm not mistaken I referred to them as ingenious preparations, too. Well, they are. I meant all I said about young men becoming slaves to drink. It's a terrible thing, and I think the free lunch is largely responsible for it. It's a most ingenious contrivance; and do you know," the Doctor lowered his voice, "do you know that it's simply put in a place to make a man thirsty? Yes, sir, I tell you that the free lunch is composed of food of such a character that it keeps a man thirsty and forces him to buy liquor to keep himself comfortable. It is made up of pickled herring, corned beef, fish cakes, salted potatoes, pretzels, cheese, smoked beef, potato salad, and dozens of other dishes the main ingredient of which is salt. And as sure as a man eats free lunch just so sure will he be a drinking man unless he is possessed of rare self-control. Why, I tell you the free lunch is more to blame for the number of drunkards around than anything else. A man takes a drink and a bite; the bite makes him thirsty and the drink makes him hungry, and many a man who would leave a saloon after having imbibed one drink will stick all day as long as the free lunch is there. It isn't the drink that keeps him, but the ingenious make-up of the free lunch; and that's why I say it's a blotch on civilization and should be wiped out.

"Perhaps you wonder how I know all this. I'll tell you. I travel a great deal, and wherever I go I always make it a point to talk with the man next me. I ask him his business and make him tell me all about it. That's why I'm always prepared to address any kind of an audience on almost any kind of a subject. Now, among others, I have talked to many hotel men and liquor dealers, keepers of fashionable cafes as well as German saloon keepers, and, as the free lunch is a sort of hobby of mine, I always make them tell me about what they spread out for their customers in the eating line. I used to wonder how they could afford to spread a free lunch, but all liquor dealers tell me that it's the most paying investment they make, and I believe it is."

$10,000 for a Tunnel Kiss.

A peculiar suit has been instituted at Bulla, Ala. Mrs. Sue Robbins was a passenger on the Louisville train the other day; so were Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Lemons, a young couple just married. The train was passing through a tunnel and Mr. Lemons, who had left his wife's seat, just behind Mrs. Robbins, returned to it, as he thought in the darkness, and proceeded to kiss his newly wedded bride. About this time the train emerged from the tunnel and disclosed that his supposed bride was Mrs. Robbins, who is a young widow. She has sued for $10,000 damages for the mistake, and will not admit the act was not intentional.

Cupid is always shooting, and forever making Mrs.

P. P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.
Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. orders by postal, P. O. box 166, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 89 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 3ly19

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROVI
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.
OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.
Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Office cor. Front St. and Park Ave.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security.

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 21 Somerset St.

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
30 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N J.

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER.
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 208 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to.

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed.

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.
TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.
Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.
Kes of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and
Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery Notary Public. Offices corner of Park avenue and Second street.

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 135, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES E. THIRKS,
Dentist,
43 Somerset street. A new local anesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
(Successor to T. J. Carey.)
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—34 W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1 no. Moving a specialty.

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 30½ W. Front street, to 341 West Front, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

TWENTY
Years experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 2 doors above Peace street.
Mr. JOHN E. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to shoeing, Forging, Interfering and Interfering Horses. Speedy Quarters stopped in an incredibly short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Livery and Boarding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No. 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
Piping. Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning.
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL, 6.

Estey
Pianos
Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Installments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business.

PEERLESS INDIANA.

HER SUPERIORITY OVER ENGLAND'S LATEST BATTLE SHIP.

With 4,679 Tons Less Displacement, the Indiana Has the Same Speed, the Same Coal Carrying Capacity and Heavier Guns Than the British Battleship.

Since Dec. 19, when the new first-class battleship Magnificent of the British navy was launched at Chatham dockyard, the experts on ship building of all countries have devoted a good deal of time in commenting upon and criticising the new vessel.

They have almost, without exception, used the French ship Sardegna and the American battleship Indiana as their standards of comparison.

Even the English constructors who have spoken of the Magnificent have agreed that the enthusiastic English constructor who stated that the Magnificent was the most powerful vessel afloat, was wrong, and almost without exception they point to the Indiana, now building by Messrs. Cramp of Philadelphia as one superior to the Magnificent.

The Indiana is not yet afloat, but before summer she will be flying her commission pennant, and some American naval officers say that she will be worthy of the title that the Englishmen bestowed on the Magnificent—that is "the most powerful vessel afloat."

UNITED STATES BATTLESHIP INDIANA.

As a matter of fact a comparison of the respective merits of the Magnificent and the Indiana appears unjust to the latter, for the Indiana was designed and contracted for in President Harrison's administration, and the appropriation for the Magnificent was not made by Parliament until 1893, and so the latter has every reason to be, and is, more modern than her American rival.

Leaving aside, however, the improvements of the last few years for comfort of officers and men and the little details of mechanism, and viewing the Indiana and Magnificent purely as engines of war, the Indiana is, in the opinion of ship builders, the better vessel of the two.

The Magnificent mounts four 12-inch breech-loading rifles, twelve 6-inch rapid fire, sixteen 12-pounder rapid fire, and twelve 3-pounder rapid fire guns, or forty-four guns in all.

Out of this battery the Magnificent can fire eight guns either ahead or astern, and with these eight guns she can throw 1,632 pounds of metal.

Here the Indiana's superiority is demonstrated. Her battery consists of four 13-inch breech-loading rifles, eight 8-inch breech-loading rifles, four 6-inch, twenty 6-pounder rapid-fire guns, making in all thirty-six guns, or eight less than the Magnificent.

With these, however, she can throw 4,864 pounds of metal either ahead or astern, which is 3,225 pounds more than the English battle ship can throw.

In the matter of firing abeam the Indiana's superiority is demonstrated by the fact that with twenty-four guns the Magnificent throws out 3,575 pounds; the American ship, with four guns less, throws 5,660 pounds, or 2,085 pounds more than the Englishman's pride.

BRITISH BATTLESHIP MAGNIFICENT.

It requires three minutes under battle conditions to fire one round from a 12 or 13-inch gun and the ships would be just equal on this point, but in three minutes the American could throw 5,376 pounds either ahead or astern and the English ship could only throw 4,494 pounds.

Firing abeam as fast as possible with all available guns, the Indiana could throw 12,558 pounds, while the Magnificent's score would be but 8,440 pounds.

As regards armor, the thickest part of the Magnificent's is 14 inches, and the Indiana has 18 inches of Harveyized steel at her thickest part. The steel used in both navies is practically the same, and if there is any preference it must rest with the American product, for the Harvey nickeling process is an American invention, and has been longer in use on this side of the water.

A fact which should, in the opinion of steel experts, prove conclusively that American steel is the best in the world is that the Russian Government, after causing an examination to be made of the steel plants of all European countries, awarded its contract for ship armor to the iron and steel works in Bethlehem, Pa.

With all of the Magnificent's forty-four guns trained seaward and fired simultaneously she would throw a weight of metal the total of which would be 4,295 pounds, while the Indiana under like conditions, would throw 5,920 pounds, or 1,625 pounds more than the English ship.

Speed is still a matter of conjecture, but both vessels are designed for 17 1-4 knots, but neither one has yet demonstrated that she will fulfil the requirements in this direction. If precedent counts for anything, though, the Indiana will live up to them, for every ship built by Cramp and Sons has exceeded the contracted speed by at least a quarter of a knot.

Some constructors regard it as very remarkable that the Indiana, which has 4,679 tons less displacement than the Magnificent, should have an equal coaling capacity and a heavier battery and yet make the same speed, but this is due largely to the lightness of the machinery.

She Was Clever.

Mamma—Agnes, are you marrying Mr. Bones of your own free will?

Agnes—No, indeed. Out of respect to his late grandfather's.

A girl being asked by her teacher what kind of a noun "kiss" was, replied, with a blush, that it was both proper and common.

A lazy man is always talking about how hard he has to work.

STORY OF KRUPP.

THE GREATEST GUN MAKER OF THE WORLD.

Hardships and Struggles of the Early Members of the Family. An Incentive to Poor Boys with Genius. Potatoes as the Principle Article of Diet.

A letter from Berlin not long since announced the important information that the Krupps, the great steel manufacturers of Essen on the Ruhr, Prussia, had under serious consideration the advisability of establishing a branch of their great manufacturing industry in America. If this should happen to be true it is a most important fact, for the establishment of a great plant in this country by the Krupps would be of inestimable value.

The great Krupp Works at Essen are known to be the greatest manufacturing plant in the world, and are the development from a small forge driven by water power, which Friedrich Krupp established between Essen and Altenessen in 1810. The Krupps had owned for a brief season the "Good Hope" Iron Works at Sterkrade, but had abandoned them in 1808, selling out to Heinrich Huyssen of Essen. It was while these works were being operated by his mother that young Friedrich Krupp imbibed the idea of discovering the secret of making cast steel, which was at that time known only by the English forge masters at Sheffield. At his little forge this forerunner of the greatest manufacturing industry of the world worked with tireless energy, sometimes cast down, but generally hopeful, until at last, during the latter part of 1814, he announced to the world that he had succeeded. The secret of producing and perfecting cast steel was his.

In 1822 Friedrich Krupp, the possessor of the greatest secret known to the world, had met with such reverses that he was compelled to give up his home on Limbecker street in Essen and move into a little cottage near his works, which stands to-day in the midst of the great works an object of reverence to all the thousands of workmen who earn their daily bread in the great foundries. Friedrich Krupp's life was purely one of experiment and discovery, and it remained for his son, Alfried Krupp, to make the name world famous.

Broken down by reverses, with hope abandoned and health wrecked, Friedrich Krupp died on Oct. 8, 1826, at the early age of 39 years. Before he died, however, he confided to his son, Alfried or Alfred, as we shall call him hereafter, the secret of making his famous cast steel. The boy, who was destined to become the great "Cannon King," was then only a grammar school boy of 14 years of age; but he put all the joys of boyhood's years behind him, and, with unflinching courage, accepted the sacred legacy left him by his father, put off the rosy prospect of youth, and donned instead the rough garments of the forge worker. Under the provisions of his father's will he had been made superintendent of the works, while his mother, Therese Krupp, was to carry on the business.

With remarkable self-abnegation and the most wondrous energy this tender boy took his place at the anvil, and for fifteen years labored side by side with his hired workmen. In his own account of his struggles he says; "Working hard, often all night long, my food being for the most part potatoes, coffee, bread and butter but no meat, I felt the responsibility of a harassed father of a family. For twenty-five years I persevered, until at last, under gradually improving circumstances, I conquered a decent living. My most vivid impression of the distant past is the recollection of the long continued, ever threatening danger of ruin and its avoidance through patience, self-denial and labor. For a period of fifteen years I earned only sufficient to pay my workmen their wages, and for my own labor I had no other recompense than the consciousness of duty done. With this recital I desire to encourage every young man who has nothing, is nobody and wants to be something."

Alfred Krupp's first great triumph came in 1851. It was the opportunity offered by the World's Fair at London to bring about a comparative test of the products of English and German steel makers. It had been considered impossible by English makers of cast steel to cast an ingot of more than twenty-five hundred weight under the most favorable circumstances. Krupp placed upon exhibition a finished and polished block of steel weighing 4,300 weight.

Immediately the English steel makers raised an outcry that there was some deception about it, and that it was a fraud, therefore unfair to bring it into competition with their product. They also sneered at the assertion made by Krupp that his cast steel could be forged, and asserted that cast steel, if heated to the necessary degree to subject it to the hammer, would crumble and disintegrate.

Krupp immediately showed them that his block of steel was solid and not a fraud, and that he could not only cast but forge his steel. He had the block sawed in twain, after which pieces were cut from it and forged into all manner of tools under the hammer. Not only was the great crank of an engine forged but blades for knives, nail rods for gun barrels, and fine razor blades were made from it. The scraps were then melted and run into a solid ingot again. This satisfied the English steel founders that they had much to learn.

Krupp's triumph was complete, and Essen, which had hardly been known outside of Germany, became known all over the world, while Krupp received the highest award of the exhibition, the council medal.

The Golden Rule was the guiding star of this noble man, who, when asked to accept a title, said; "No; I want no title further than the name of Krupp."

Thus Alfred Krupp builded for himself a monument more enduring than marble and more indestructible than brass. He was always the kind and considerate friend and not the proud dictatorial employer to his workingmen. Thus his name is graven on their hearts, and his memory will live as long as mankind endures.

If the Krupps should decide to come to America to establish a great steel works, the indomitable energy of the family can prepare us to see an American Essen grow up in our midst. Alfred Krupp builded his own monuments in the great mills of Essen in Prussia; there is room for Friedrich Alfred Krupp to build a like monument for himself in an American Essen. The whole land stands ready and eager to welcome him.

Just the Thing.

Jerkins—Do you consider journalism proper work for a lady?

Perkins—Certainly. All women have a fondness for press work.—Truth.

BAMBERGER'S

THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE

Newark, N. J.

Exceedingly Great Values

—IN—

Linens, Towels and Toweling.

The following and many other great inducements are offered to induce you to make, at this early date, your purchases of Linens and Linen Goods for the coming spring season

ALL LINEN TOWELING twilled and very heavy, bleached and unbleached, 18 in wide, 12½c. value, at........ 8½c yd

SILVER BLEACH TABLE LINEN, very heavy 58 inches wide, new Damask designs, value 39 cents, at.... 29c yd

ALL LINEN TOWELS, with knotted fringe and handsome borders, full bleached size 18x40 inches, 25c value, at............ 17c each

ALL LINEN TABLE DAMASK bleached, 64 inches wide, beautiful designs, fine quality, value 65c, at.. 49c yd

ALL LINEN TABLE NAPKINS, large size, pure bleach, in handsome patterns, value $1.25 per dozen, at.................... 98c doz

ALL LINEN TABLE COVERS, full 2½ yards long, with handsome colored borders, fine quality, value $1.75, at... ..... $1.19 each

☞ Orders by mail and requests for samples receive prompt attention.

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,

147 and 149 Market Street,

Near Broad Street. Newark, N. J.

COLD ENOUGH.

Eight Below Zero, in Plainfield, During the Night, and After Sunrise.

Nobody in Plainfield has been found to tell of colder weather in this city during the past 15 years than that of Tuesday. The record of the night was 8 below zero, and that figure was maintained till 7:45 this morning, when the mercury began to rise a little, standing at 4 below at 8:30, and gradually creeping up till at noon it was 8 above.

This record of 8 below seems to have been the rule all over town. Two of the most accurate records are those of Mr. Milliken at 830 Central avenue, whose self-registering thermometer points N. E., and H. P. Reynolds at the corner of Park and North avenues, whose thermometer is protected from the winds and exposed to the temperature only.

The lowest figure reached during the night by either of these registers was 8 below, and that they still maintained at 7:45 after sunrise.

The method of registering may not be generally understood. Within the tube and above the mercury is a tiny metal float which stays at whatever point the mercury pushes it to. Thus the extreme record is shown, and after taking an observation the metal float can be drawn down again to the level of the mercury by the use of a magnet outside the glass. The thermometer is constructed with a double tube, and each branch of the tube contains one of the floats, so that both the highest and the lowest temperature are shown

---

—George VanBlake of 320 Richmond street, coachman for J. W. Johnson, was taken from his rooms in the barn to his home, in a carriage, suffering from an attack of the grip

ON KEEPING ACCOUNTS.

The Uninitiated Taught How to Keep Track of Their Money.

The woman whose price is above rubies, whose husband rises up and calls her blessed is she who knows "where her money goes." She keeps an account book.

Most women, by the way, keep account books. They have Russian leather volumes three inches by two and a half, gilt-edged and bearing in gilt letters the legend "Accounts." They usually receive these little gifts at Christmas, and for the next three weeks they make sundry unintelligible jottings in them. But that is not the sort of account book the prudent business woman or the thrifty housewife keeps.

The regulation account book makes no boast of beauty. It has stiff board covers, is about ten inches long by eight inches broad, and is provided with ruled pages. These pages are not only ruled across, but at each side they have two vertical lines ruled, making two one-inch spaces at each edge of each page. In these spaces dates and dollars and cents may be kept neatly.

The left hand page is devoted to income, and the right to expenditures. The date on which a sum of money is received, the person or source from which it is received and the amount are entered in a straight line on the left-hand side. On the opposite side the date of any expenditure, the thing for which money has been expended and the amount spent are entered. At stated times the income and the outgo are balanced. Once a week or once a month is a convenient time.

Here is a specimen page from the account book of an ordinary woman—Miss Mary A. Smith:

Jan., 1895.	Credit.	Jan., 1895.	Debit.
Car'd from p 1..	$54.27	Car'd from p 2.	$37.12
12—P. O. Smith.	15.00	13—Coat	17.50
17—MrsPOSmith	5.00	13—Gloves	2.00
		13—Theatre tck's	2.00
		14—Car fare	25
		14—Luncheon	65
		15—Hairdressing	1.50
		16—Flowers	[illegible]
		19—Singing le'ns.	8.00
Total	$74.27	Total	$70.27
Carry to page 5..	4.10

Miss Smith will begin next week with a blank page for expenditures and $4.10, representing her assets. As she gains more from Mr. and Mrs. P. O. Smith or any other source, she will duly set them down, and on the page opposite her manner of disposing of her wealth. The account book will serve as a record, a reminder and often as a warning. In fact it is as a warning that the account book is particularly valuable.

SLATE PENCILS AND SLATES.

Millions of Them Used Yearly in Schools and Elsewhere in This Country.

Only one firm in the United States is making pencils from native slate. There are imported many slate pencils—that is, pencils made of slate—from Germany, and also some soapstone pencils from abroad. The native soapstone-pencil industry languishes, according to those interested, because of the recent reduction in the tariff upon imported soapstone pencils. Millions of pencils made of slate are turned out at a quarry in Pennsylvania. The rough slate is sawn into suitable pieces by machinery, and from each piece a special machine cuts six pencils of standard length, 5 1-2 inches. These pencils come out rounded, but not pointed. Deft boys take them by twos and threes and quickly point them at an emery wheel rapidly revolved by machinery. The pencils are then put up in pasteboard boxes of 100 each, and these boxes are placed in wooden cases containing 10,000 pencils. The wholesale price of slate pencils is only $6.75 a case. Pencils that break in the making are made up into "shorts," measuring 3 1-2 or 4 1-2 inches, and the shorter pencils are made also from small fragments of slate. Pencils wrapped in American flag printed on paper cost $2 a case more than the ordinary standard bare pencil, and pencils wrapped in gilt paper come somewhat higher. It is an easy bit of ciphering to make out that pencils at $6.75 a case of 10,000 are worth about two-thirds of a mill, or one-fifteenth of a cent each.

Pencils imported from Germany sell in the market at about the price of the native product. The American labor is much better paid than the German labor, but the cost of the American pencil is not much greater than that of the German pencil because machinery is so much more used here than abroad. The German pencils are in large part made by hand in the homes of the German work folks, and the price paid for the work is wretchedly small.

Some of Our Proverbs.

The following proverbs are familiar specimens of the Chinese coinage, and in several instances where they harmonize with similar ones in our own language, the English version is given also:

"Virtue is the surest road to longevity; but vice meets with an early doom." [Virtue is its own reward.]

"Time flies like an arrow; day and months like a weaver's shuttle." [Time and tide wait for no man.]

"Let every man sweep the snow from before his own doors, and not trouble himself about the frost on his neighbor's tiles." [Mind your own business.]

"Attend to your farms and mulberry trees that you may have food and sufficient clothing." [Take care of your business and your business will take care of you.]

"To paint a snake and add legs." [Drawing the long bow.]

"Let us get drunk to-day while we have wine; the sorrows of to-morrow may be borne to-morrow." [Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.]

"Abstain from false accusing that the good and honest may be in safety.] [Bear not false witness against thy neighbor.]

"The court is like a ship at sea—everything depends on the wind." [Put not your trust in princes.]

"For him who does everything in its proper time one day is worth three." [A stitch in time saves nine.]

"To cut off a hen's head with a battle ax." [Much ado about nothing.]

"The truths which we least wish to hear are those which it is most to our advantage to know." [The truth is disagreeable.]

"If you don't enter the tiger's den you cannot obtain her young." [Nothing venture, nothing win.]

"One strand of silk doesn't make a thread." [One swallow doesn't make a summer.]

"A thousand chiefs, a thousand plans." [Too many cooks will spoil the broth.]

"There's a time to fish and a time to dry nets." [There's a time for all things.]

"The teacher should not leave his books or the poor man his pigs." [Let the cobbler stick to his last.]

"It thunders loudly, but little rain falls." [Much cry and little wool.]—Sel.

For Mother's Sake.

General O. O. Howard's description of his life at West Point should be an incentive to every young man. He tells how he braved the ridicule of the cadets by going to religious services and doing work in the Sunday School. He said it cost him more to take his stand and run the gauntlet of their scoffs and sneers than it did later to face the cannon and musketry of the battlefield. "But I gripped my Bible, shut my teeth, and went, for mother's sake."

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTION WITH OVER THREE SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS. PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue

Public pay stations fitted with long distance instruments:

J B Long's, Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange, 175 North ave opp depot
E. [illegible] barber, Grove and Front sts
G W V M [illegible] 4th and Park avenue
Frank Rowley, Somerset and Craig place
J C Field, Somerville
J [illegible] Gutridge, Netherwood
Hotel Albion, Park ave and 6th street

Subscriber's Name.	Address.
Ackerman Mrs. J. E.	2 8 West 7th st
Adams, Dr D C	46 Grove st
Adams H C	115 [illegible]
Addis & Son	127 North av
Andrews F W	215 Central av
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 6th st
A[illegible] Hose Co., No	W 2d st
Babcock, Geo H	8th and Union sts
[illegible] F A	[illegible]
Brakeley, P W Dr.	Duer st
Boone C W Dr.	7th and [illegible] sts
Boswell, John	Central ave, cor 9th st
Boorhower J B	Park av and 2d st
Berg, Joe F, M D	12? E 6th s
Bird A G	140 North av
Bedle, Runyon & Co	208 Park av
Board of Education	8th st and Arlington av
Booth, E H	Central av
Brook-side Sanitarium	Somerset st
Brown J M	612 Central av
Central Times	102 E Front st
Clark E B	331 [illegible] av
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Crane Fred F	65? North av
Closson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
Constitutionalist Office	105 North av
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	230 W Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs F A	24 LaGrande av
Cruikshank, S. A	Belvidere av
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, B F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy	Park av & Front st
Daily Press	103 North ave
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Decker, F—pay station	Westfield, N J
Doane, T O—Chief F D	4?5 W 4th st
Dunn Fred W	Park and North av
Dumont, John B	151 E 7th st
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave, and 7th st
Fire No 1	West 2d st
Engine No 2	21 [illegible] near Park av
Engine No 3	Somerset st
Evans, Geo C	27 Washington ave
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
[illegible] L	[illegible] Duer st
Fisk, Chas. J	211 West 7th st
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French Bros	Somerset st
Fritts, Dr J T	426 Park av
Fleming, Howard	1017 Park av
French, C Frank	69 Somerset st
do do	227 Park av
Gaston, M. D., W F	5th and New st
Grant Geo W Chief of Police	4?5 W 4th st
Griffen, A M	110 E Front st
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 5th st
Hegeman, B. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	703 Watchung av
Herder Albert	4th st, near Park ave
Hoagland's City Express	102 North av
Howell H O	1?1 North av
Holmes E B	206 Madison av
Hagen Chas W	29 Rockview av
Hummer & Mulford	220 Park av
Ivins D C	231 Watchung av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L.	213 W Front st
Kaufman W T	3?3 W 7th st
Kelly & Son	LaGrande av and Scott pl
Kirkner, J	3rd and Division sts
Leggett Pharmacy	Park av and Front st
Linnett W N	120 Jackson av
Lowrie W H, Dr	312 Park av
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L N	Crescent ave
Linke, Frank	227 W Front st
Lounsbury, F C	Plainfield av
[illegible] R A D	[illegible] North av
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
MacDonald, J F	1?6 E Front st
Marsh Craig A	109 E Front st
Ma[illegible] W B Dr	Babcock Bldg
do do	97 Rockview av
McQuaide James C	731 W 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
[illegible] G W V	Park av and 7th st
Muhlenberg Hospital	[illegible] W 3d st
Murray, Dr. W E	107 Watchung av
Murray J W	313 W 4th st
Music Hall	[illegible]
Myers, J K	1?5 E 7th st
Newhall, Henry B	144 E 7th st
N Y & N J Telephone Co	175 North av
Park Club The	Washington av
[illegible] T B jr	Rockview av
Perkins Ed C	Central av
Plainfield [illegible]	154 E 3rd st
do Electric Light Co	Madison av
do Gas Light Co	E 4th st
do Street Railway Co	Grant av
do Water Supply Co	Netherwood
Police Station	Park av and Bellevue av
do Chief's Office	Park av
Ford Machine Tool Co	2nd st
Pope J C & Co	E Front st
Postal Telegraph & Cable Co	104 Park av
Potter, C jr	427 W 7th st
Potter Printing Press Co	6?8 South av
Probasco J B Dr	E Front st
Randolph, L W	43 Front st
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Reed Chas A	77 Myrtle av
Reed & Coddington	Babcock Bldg
Reinhart J W	69 Belvidere av
[illegible] L A	Watchung av and 4th st
Rogers W H	408 W 5th st
Rowley Frank	45 Somerset st
Roberts, D S	127 North av
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and 4th st
Rogers, D W	229 W 2d st
Rouse, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves
Runyon, A M & Son	402 Park av
Runyon, A M & Son	416 Madison av
Rushmore, Dr Edward	420 Park av near Fifth st
[illegible] H. G	521 4th st
Runyon, Chas W	1?9 North av
Rice, R. W. & Co	cor. Emily and Duer sts
Rushmore Robert	3rd st and Grant av
Saunders W L	36 Mercer av
Serrell, Lemuel W	625 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Shaw, R J	Front st., opp. Park ave
Shepard A D	Fanwood
Slater F M	77 Jackson av
Smalley Bros	North av
Smith, W P	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Smith, Jas A	225 W Front st
Streuli H A	[illegible] Hillside av
Stevens F R	205 South av
Stevens Geo C	Grant av and W Front st
Stephenson W J	145 North av
Sykes T F	Front st Fanwood
Talmadge, Henry P	Netherwood
Taylor Mrs M	30 Rockview Terrace
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Terrill & Cole	720 W 2d st
Thompson, A D	147-149 North av
Thompson, A E	Farragut road
Thickstun, Jno A	323 Madison av
Titsworth, Joe B	41? W 7th st
Tomlinson, Dr T H	2?? La Grande av
Tobin Geo J	131 North av
[illegible]	[illegible]
Van [illegible], W J	[illegible]
[illegible], O. H.	[illegible]
Upton & Blatz	[illegible] W Front st
Union News Co	[illegible]
United States Express Co	1?? North av
Union County Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington av
Van Sickle J W	[illegible]
Wadsworth, [illegible]	[illegible]
Western Union Telegraph Company	[illegible]
Wharton, Clifton J	[illegible] 3rd Place
[illegible]	[illegible] West Seventh st
[illegible], J F	8th st, near Grant ave
[illegible]	[illegible]

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	60c	Hempstead N Y	[illegible]
Astoria, N Y	50c	Hoboken N J	[illegible]
Babylon, N Y	60c	Hunter's Point N Y	[illegible]
Bath, N Y	40c	Irvington N J	[illegible]
Bayonne N J	45c	Islip N Y	[illegible]
Bergen Point N J	35c	Jamaica N Y	[illegible]
Bayside N Y	50c	Jersey City N J	[illegible]
Bay Shore N Y	75c	Keyport N J	[illegible]
[illegible]ville N Y	[illegible]	Kingston N J	[illegible]
Belvidere N J	60c	Laurel Hill N Y	[illegible]
[illegible]ville N Y	[illegible]	Leonia N J	[illegible]
Bloomfield N J	35c	Little Neck N Y	[illegible]
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	[illegible]
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	[illegible]
Brooklyn N Y	35c	Madison N J	[illegible]
Caldwell N J	45c	Matawan N J	[illegible]
Carlstadt N J	40c	Millburn N J	[illegible]
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	[illegible]
Chatham N J	30c	Morristown N J	[illegible]
Closter N J	40c	Newark N J	[illegible]
Colt's Neck N J	75c	New Brunswick N J	[illegible]
Coney Island N Y	35c	Newtown N Y	[illegible]
Cresskill N J	[illegible]	New York N Y	[illegible]
Dover N J	40c	Orange N J	[illegible]
East Norwich N Y	60c	Pamrapo N J	[illegible]
Eatontown N J	50c	Passaic N J	[illegible]
Elizabeth N J	15c	Paterson N J	[illegible]
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	[illegible]
Fairview N J	40c	Rahway N J	[illegible]
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	[illegible]
Far Rockaway N Y	45c	Seabright N J	[illegible]
Flatbush N Y	35c	Short Hills N J	[illegible]
Flushing N Y	40c	South Amboy N J	[illegible]
Fort Lee N J	40c	South River N J	[illegible]
Franklin Park N J	35c	Staten Island N Y	[illegible]
Freehold N J	50c	Westfield N J	[illegible]
German Settlement N Y	[illegible]	Woodbridge N J	[illegible]
Glen Cove N Y	50c	Yonkers N Y	[illegible]
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton N J	[illegible]
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	[illegible]

Electric Lights.

A Vienna professor gives it as his opinion, after much research on the subject, that all delicate persons and those who suffer from nervousness should never remain long in a room lighted by electric lights, its effect on the nervous system being such that after awhile they generally become uneasy and depressed and find it impossible to concentrate the attention for any length of time. Young persons, on the contrary, and those with strong nerves find the influence of the light extremely beneficial, especially when the brain is overworked and tired, the effect being much the same as that of strong coffee —i. e., increased activity of the nervous system.

Through Algerian Spectacles.

In a delightful paper before a club recently Mrs. Fannie C. Barbour, the writer and traveler, gave a description of her visit to some Algerian ladies. Through the interpreting friend who accompanied her the hostesses conveyed their polite pity at her extraordinary costume. "Where," they asked in plaintive pity for the unfortunate American, "are her Turkish trousers?" When told that she came from America, they asked where that was, and on hearing that it was across a great sea complacently remarked: "Not so great as our Mediterranean. There is no sea like that."

—The Christian Endeavor society of the Park Avenue Baptist Church will celebrate Christian Endeavor Day Friday evening with special exercises. Rev. J. W. Richardson will make an address.

DIRECTIONS for using CREAM BALM

Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostrils. After a moment draw a strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. Price 50c. at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

COLD IN HEAD

The Finderne,

FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.

Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.

HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.

(Table d' Hote from 1 to 3:30) Steam heat; inclosed piazzas; everything immaculate. When out driving let us entertain you.

A. E. WHITE Manager,
1 9 tf Finderne, N. J.

DEATHS.

COLLINS—At St. Joseph's Hospital, New York, Feb. 4, 1895, John L. Collins, aged 27 years, [illegible] months.
Funeral from his father's residence, [illegible] Plains, Thursday, Feb 7, at 8:30 and 9:30 at St Mary's Church, Plainfield, N J. Friends and relatives are respectfully invited to attend.

SCRIBNER—On Monday, Feb. 4, 1895, Nathan A. Scribner, aged 70 years.
Funeral at residence, Bo[illegible] road, Wednesday, Feb. 6, at 2:30 p. m.

AYERS—In this city Feb. 5, 1895, Arthur A., son of Alonzo T. and Ella Ayers, aged 4 years, 8 months and 19 days.
Funeral private.

MORAN—In this city Feb. 3, 1895, Patrick Moran, aged 75 years.
Funeral from his late residence, 631 South 2d street, Tuesday morning Feb 5, 8:30 at house and 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Church. Friends and relatives are respectfully invited to attend.

SLEVIN—In this city Sunday morning, Feb. 3, 1895, Andrew Green Slevin, aged 27 years, eldest son of James L. and Emma G. Slevin.
Funeral from St. Mary's Church, Tuesday, Feb 5 at 10 a. m. Train leaves New York at 9:30, Jersey Central railroad.

PENDLETON—At Morris Plains, N. J., Thursday, Jan 31, 1895, Henry Pendleton.
Funeral services from Mt Olive Baptist Church Monday, Feb 4, at 3 p. m.

ELECTRIC TELEPHONE

Sold outright, no rent, no royalty. Adapted to City, Village or Country. Needed in every home, shop, store and office. Greatest convenience and best seller on earth. Agents make from $5 to $50 per day. One in a residence means a sale to all the neighbors. [illegible] W. P. Harrison & Co., Clerk 10, Columbus, O.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 14, 1895. No 7

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

A BRILLIANT AFFAIR.

Plainfield Society Attends the Ackerman Reception.

A SUCCESS IN ALL ITS FUNCTIONS.

The Casino of the Country Club Affords a Scene of Gaiety—All the Local Social World Was There to Enjoy the Beautiful Event.

The fact that the lenten season is but a few days distant, when the mantle of seclusion and quietude is donned by society, added to the brilliancy and success of the reception given by Mrs. J. H. Ackerman in the Casino of the Country Club last Monday. The reception had long been anticipated as one of the events of the season, attending which would be a lavish display of entertaining seldom observed outside of the metropolis; and it was a happy realization of the fondest desires of those who participated.

Never has the Casino presented a more animated appearance, and gaiety was the predominant element.

The spacious ballroom had been transformed into a veritable bower of beauty, by the artistic arrangement of plants and flowers by Butler of New York. Smilax and wintergreen were everywhere, sheltering from view every object save bright foliage. In front of the stage was arranged a tier of potted palms, obscuring the orchestra from the guests, and along the north and south walks the smilax was trailing as though growing from mother earth. At short distances bunches of roses added a variety of color and made a pretty effect, emitting a fragrance that permeated the whole room. Surrounding the fireplace, in which logs were brightly blazing, potted palms were again in evidence, and more smilax and wintergreen served as decorations to screen the glossed bricks from the vision. The balcony was also a bower of flowers. Along the sides of the ballroom and in the alcoves seats were arranged for the use of the guests. The suffused glow of the electric lamps, which were almost hidden from view by flowers, added a finishing touch to the exquisiteness of the ballroom surroundings.

As the orchestra of five pieces, under the direction of Elliott of New York, commenced to discourse sweet music from behind the tropical plants, the guests began to arrive and the constant intermingling of the varied-colored gowns of the women relieved the sombreness of the conventional dress of the men, and made the assemblage a brilliant spectacle.

The guests were received by Mrs. Ackerman, assisted by her daughters, Mrs. E. R. Ackerman, Mrs. Marion Ackerman and Mrs. Robert Rushmore.

Mrs. J. Hervie Ackerman was becomingly attired in a dress made of black sunset moire, trimmed with white Irish point lace, with panels of lace in the skirt. Her flowers were violets, and jewels moire pearls.

The gown of Mrs Ernest Ackerman was made of pale blue crepe de chene. About her neck she wore a bertha of Brussels lace. A bouquet of pink violets were her flowers.

Mrs. Robert Rushmore's dress was of white crepon, trimmed with blue mirror velvet. Pink roses were her flowers.

Mrs. Marion Ackerman was prettily arrayed in a gown of sea green silk, combined with pink satin, and trimmed with Valenciennes lace. She carried pink roses and green orchids.

The serving of refreshments was commenced at 9:30, and was continuous under the direction of Thomas Tombs, steward of the Country Club. The principal serving table was in the woman's reception room, and the second on the piazza, one end of which had been attractively shut off by a garden scene. On the principal table was an immense centrepiece of pink roses, and a miniature aquarium, which was a marvel of culinary skill. Here was a salmon in a lake where real goldfish disported. The waiters were distinguished by white waistcoats. The menu was as follows:

Consomme, Finger Rolls,
Oyster Poulette,
Chicken Croquettes, Chicken Molonaise,
Lobster Molonaise, Salmon Molonaise,
Fois Gras in Aspic,
Chicken Sandwiches, Ham Sandwiches,
Watercress Sandwiches,
Glace Fantasie, Charlotte Russe,
Petit Fours, Bon Bons,
Mottoes,
Coffee and Lemonade.

The principal serving table was illuminated by electricity which issued from small bulbs encased in wax candles, a method that was novel and unique, and only one of the many features which contributed to make the affair a success in all its details.

The display of potted palms was valued at $1,000, and the smilax was brought from the South for this occasion.

The guests included the following prominent people:

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Olcott of New York.
" " A. D. Shepard.
Dr. " D. B. St. John Roosa of New York.
Mr. and Mrs. Hervie of Boston.
" " Tilney of Boston.
" " K. U. Webber of Springfield.
" " Clifton Wharton.
" " Charles Lawson.
" " E. N. Erickson.
" " E. S. Hooley.
" " F. O. Herring.
" " H. O. Fleming.
" " J. P. Mason.
" " J. F. Raymond.
" " Townsend Rushmore.
" " James Hallock.
" " L. G. Timpson.
" " H. C. Adams.
" " Wm. M. Stillman.
" " C. B. Corwin.
" " George M. Randall.
" " G. H. Squires.
" " Alexander Gilbert.
" " E. H. Ladd.
" " Leander Lovell.
" " John F. Harman.
" " H. C. Munger.
" " Craig A. Marsh.
" " Eugene H. Hatch.
" " Joseph H. Sandford, Jr.
" " August Kleinecke.
" " Henry Depew.
" " A. W. Haviland.
" " Lemuel W. Serrell, Jr.
" " George Chapman.
" " C. Arthur Baynon.
" " W. D. Murray.
" " Roger F. Murray.
" " J. W. Murray, Jr.
" " J. Evarts Tracy.
" " Howard Tracy.
" " J. B. Dumont.
" " E. L. Waiz.
" " J. K. Myers.
Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Hedges.
Mr. and Mrs. George H. Goddard.
" " Wm. J. Roome.
" " B. A. Hegeman, Jr.
" " James R. Joy.
" " Wm. F. Arnold.
" " Joseph Sandford, Sr.
" " L. V. F. Randolph.
" " C. F. Randolph.
" " Samuel Huntington.
" " D. N. Groendyke.
" " George W. VanBoskerck.
Rev. and Mrs. C. L. Goodrich.
Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wadeworth of New York.
" " Albert Drake of Westfield.

Misses Dumont, Yates, Huntington, Halloway, Waiz, Evans, Waring, Hunter, Haviland, Betts, Morgan, Tracy, Titsworth, Newton, Kenyon, Marsh, Randolph, Abbott, Kirkner, Munger, Gardner, VanBoskerck, Cooley, Cock, Gilbert, Schipper, Yerkes, Hasbrouck and Erskine.

Miss Lockwood of Philadelphia.

Misses Drake, Cox and Wadeworth of New York.

Dr. Endicott, Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, Rev. Dr. Rodman, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, Dr. F. C. Ard.

Messrs. Murray, VanBuren, West, Huntington, VanBoskerck, Waring, Moore, Matthews, Cooley, Waiz, Beebe, Munger, DeGraff, Lowe, Freeman, Cock, Drayton, Morgan, Leonard, Streuli, Masters, Corlies, Schipper, Borden, Wills, Martin, Marsh, Erickson, Bloodgood of Elizabeth, Augustus Wadsworth of New York.

Upset, But Happy.

A gay party of Plainfield's young people met at the home of Lester Baldwin of Rockview avenue last Tuesday and went to Westfield on a strawride.

Just before reaching Westfield the sleigh turned out of the bad ruts in the middle of the road and tried to drive at one side but the incline proved too great and the young people were spilled out into the snow. Fortunately the team was not going at a high rate of speed, and Louis Cooley had the presence of mind to spring at once to their heads, while the rest of the party gathered themselves up and climbed back to their places in the sleigh. No one was seriously injured, although there were sundry bruises and strains. The young people then righted the sleigh and proceeded on their way sadder but somewhat wiser.

The Misses Bessie Baldwin, Mabelle Smith and Louis Cooley acted as chaperones.

The rest who enjoyed the evening's experiences were Miss Eleanor Williams, Miss Elsie Smith, Miss Marion Safford, Miss Ma[illegible] Honeyman, Miss Nellie Schutt, John Hull, Aubrey Hull, Lester Baldwin, Fred Bonny, Langdon Howard, Charles Turrill and Douglass Drake.

The Musical Club.

Mr. and Mrs. B. O. Bowers of LaGrande avenue entertained the Musical Club at their lovely home last Tuesday, and a programme of high merit was enjoyed. It included the following:

Violin Solo—The Post, Schubert—Arthur Freeman; vocal solo—'Twas April—Miss Delphine Bowers; zither and violin solos—Miss Benz and Mr. Petrie; vocal solo—Hark, Hark, the Lark; Who is Sylvia, Schubert—Mrs. Collins; violin solo—Schubert's Serenade—Mr. Petrie; vocal solo—Arthur Freeman; zither and violin solos—Miss Benz and Mr. Petrie.

At the conclusion of the above the club partook of refreshments daintily served. An evening of rare pleasure was thus brought to a close.

To Get the Styles.

John H. Doane, who always keep in touch with the latest happenings in the shoe world, a fact by which his customers frequently profit, has gone to New York today to inspect several leading lines of Spring and Summer footwear, and also to select a complete line of tennis, bicycle, and other sporting goods for the coming trade.

A False Diagnosis.

La grippe is confounded by many persons with a severe attack of catarrh, which in some respects resembles the former. These individuals suffer severely with pain about the forehead, eyes and ears, with soreness in throat and stoppage of the nasal passages and in fact, are incapacitated for work of any kind for days at a time. These are catarrhal sufferers. Ely's Cream Balm has been used with the best results in such cases. The remedy will give instant relief.

—Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., will confer the second rank on one candidate this evening.

JUDGMENTS IN COURT.

Plainfield Boys Arraigned for Handling Firearms.

CARELESSNESS SHARPLY CENSURED.

Grand Jury Commended for Finding Indictments, But Sentences Are Suspended Owing to the Youthfulness of the Prisoners—Counselor Craig A. Marsh Pleads for the Poor.

[From The Elizabeth Journal of Saturday.]

There was not a very large attendance at Court this morning. It was, however, sentence day, and judgment was passed in several cases of more than ordinary interest. The three Plainfield boys who were indicted as the result of the killing of Henry Greenleaf, a young companion, through careless use of firearms, were arraigned immediately on the opening of Court.

The boys were Clarence Roeap, aged eleven years, who fired the fatal shot, William Morgan and Samuel McDonald, the latter only eight years old and very small. The fathers of the young prisoners, and other friends, were in Court.

Prosecutor Marsh said it was a pitiful sight to see the boys in Court charged with crime, but the grand jury under the charge of Judge VanSyckel felt it their duty to find the indictments, which were drawn under the act of 1885, which makes it a crime for minors to use firearms.

The boys, excepting Roeap, had previously pleaded not guilty, but this morning asked to enter pleas of non vult, which the State accepted. The parents of the young prisoners were allowed to speak.

Charles McDonald, the father of the youngest boy, is a New York lawyer. He said no one regretted the deplorable consequences in the case more than himself and family, but there were some facts that he wished to present to the Court. His boy, although so young, was charged with using a rifle, which conveys an idea to the public of gross carelessness. The facts were that the boy is taking lessons in athletics and general sports, and among other things is taught how to handle a rifle. The weapon was a small Flobert rifle, and he exhibited to the Court the miniature cartridge used.

Mr. McDonald said that everything had been done to prevent a similar accident. The gun which had been used on this occasion has been destroyed, and the rifle his boy used taken away from him.

William Morgan, father of the Morgan boy, in behalf of his son, explained how his son came in possession of the rifle by purchase from Mr. McDonald, and by his consent. He expressed his regret over the sad result, and said he did not desire to cover up anything or to evade any blame.

Mr. Roeap spoke very briefly for his son, simply expressing how greatly he deplored the sad consequences, and said he was making every effort to guard against any such occurrence in the future.

Judge McCormick responded that the Court felt constrained to say that the grand jury had done its duty in bringing in these indictments. It has been the means of setting people thinking about the matter of the use of firearms. The indictments were proper for the protection of the community. As to the boys themselves, two at least, were so young, the community would not expect the Court to impose a penalty upon them. The result of the shooting was very unfortunate, sad, and it was to be hoped a similar occurrence will not take place in this county. Under the circumstances the Court suspended sentence in the cases of all the boys.

Peter Kane, one of the boys charged with the careless rifle practice whereby Monace Evans was killed, was also in court, accompanied by his mother.

Counselor Craig A. Marsh made a statement that Kane's mother was too poor to employ counsel, and he made a motion in her behalf that counsel be assigned.

Judge McCormick said the Court had been informed that Kane's mother had already paid a fee to a lawyer for her son's defense.

Mr. Marsh said that was not so. Judge Coddington appeared for the boy at the coroner's inquest, but was not paid.

The Court reserved its decision.

John Klopf, a saloon keeper of Fanwood who was indicted for selling without license and keeping a disorderly house in permitting card playing, was next arraigned.

Lawyer Connelly made a plea for the prisoner, making the statement that the men who had made the charge against him had drunk liquor in his place, played cards there and had not paid their bills.

To this statement Prosecutor Marsh said that he did not wish Klopf to go back with the idea in his mind that anyone had voluntarily gone before the grand jury. The witnesses against him were fairly dragged there, and the indictment was found because Klopf was habitually violating the law.

Judge McCormick rebuked the prisoner and imposed a fine of $20 and costs.

PLAY AND MINSTRELS.

Official Announcement of Who Will Appear in the Muhlenberg Benefit.

Following is the official programme, of the Muhlenberg Hospital Benefit entertainment:

One Act Comedy:
TEA AT 4 O'CLOCK,
By Mrs. Burton Harrison.
CAST:

Mrs. J. Parker Mason	Mrs. W. L. Saunders
Mrs. L. W. Serrell	Mrs. Irving H. Brown
Fred W. Walz	Henry L. Rogers
George Taggart	James S. Anthony
Irving H. Brown	William R. Cock

Richard L. Colburn, New York.

MINSTRELS.
CAST:
Centre Man.
Fred W. Walz.
End Men.

Clarence Cree, Eliz'th	Geo. O. Stevens
Geo. F. Schoonmaker	Howard Beebe

BANJO CLUB.

Fletcher Hallock	James Hallock
Westerly Abbott	Dalziel Schoonmaker
Geo. F. Schoonmaker	Elston French
Geo. P. Smith	Mr. Taylor, Westfield

DOUBLE QUARTETTE.

Geo. B. Schoonmaker	Rob't Lewis, New York
Frank Cokefair	Fred W. Walz
William Runyon	Arthur Freeman
Robert Clark	Elmer E. Runyon

Leader of Orchestra—Eugene Rose of the Lyceum Theatre, New York.

Stage Manager - - Joseph Parker Mason
Business Manager - - Lewis G. Timpson

OBITUARY.

J. K. Hoyt.

The funeral of J. K. Hoyt took place Tuesday in this city.

J. K. Hoyt was a well-known Newark journalist and literary man, and his death occurred Friday morning in Plainfield, where he was visiting his wife's sister, Mrs. Matilda Rushmore. Mr. Hoyt had not been strong and well for several months, and for some time has not been engaged in any active employment, his last work being the writing of editorial matter for the Newark Times.

Mr. Hoyt was nearly 70 years old, and leaves a wife and one son, who live on an orange grove in the west coast of Florida, where the late Mr. Hoyt has spent several Winters.

Mr. Hoyt began a successful business career in New Orleans as a general dealer and factor for plantations, and thus amassed a snug fortune, but lost all during the war. He was also in the hardware business in New York.

He had always a taste for writing and turning to journalistic work, became editor of the New Brunswick Times, which was then owned by the late Judge Guild. Early in the '70s he took a trip to Florida and wrote for the Newark Daily Advertiser a series of remarkably interesting letters descriptive of the scenery and resources of the country.

T. T. Kinney, then editor of the paper, was highly pleased with the letters and offered the writer the position of managing editor, which Mr. Hoyt accepted. In this capacity he continued to serve with credit to himself and the paper until some time after Noah Brooks became the chief editorial writer in 1885. He afterwards did editorial work on The Journal and other newspapers.

During all this time Mr. Hoyt was prominently identified with all literary enterprises, and clubs in this vicinity, and all received the impress of his talents. He translated "The Journey to the Moon" and other French books. His reputation has been most widely established, however, by his Encyclopedia of Familiar Quotations, published in conjunction with Miss Anna Ward, of Bloomfield.

On the completion of this excellent piece of work, Mr. Hoyt and his wife moved to Florida, and joined their son on his plantation. Meanwhile, his pen was never idle, and many contributions to various publications swelled the sum total of his extensive literary and journalistic life work.

Mr. Hoyt was a valuable contributor for The Constitutionalist during his lifetime.

Dig Out the Hydrants.

During the last snowstorm a number of hydrants in the borough have been completely buried with snow. The North Plainfield authorities would do well to follow the example of Chief Doane, in uncovering and testing them for the protection of the borough property in case of fire.

—The carriages at the Mundy-Addis wedding yesterday were in charge of Adam and James Blair, and the service was highly creditable.

ROYAL IN NAME AND NATURE.

Plainfield Arcanumites Celebrate Their Growth, and Enjoy a Happy Time.

Plainfield Council, 711, Royal Arcanum, had a notable celebration last night of the acquisition of their two-hundredth member, and the large number present at the session were "glad they came". The Plainfield Council is one of the largest organizations in this city, having acquired its phenomenal growth on the strength of its benefits to members.

Not only did the Council accomplish what it had set for the night, but it went even further, and elected the 201st. The 200th was M. L. Bullock, admitted by card from Passaic, and after him was Henry F. Bitterbusch, transferred by card from Somerville, and an additional proposition for membership was received.

E. W. Conklin had been deputized by the District Grand Deputy to install E. C. Pease chaplain, and James K. Arnold sentry. Wm. B. Remsen acted as guide, and introduced Deputy Conklin and the new officers to be installed.

Mr. Conklin was assisted by Past Regents P. A. Emmons and S. C. Baker, and performed with dignity and decorum the installation.

Mr. Bullock, introduced to the officers and members, was impressed with the importance of his membership, completing as it did the second century of the roll call. He was welcomed with well chosen words by Regent A. M. Rea, the central idea expressed being that the men and the society were a great help one to another, and it was hoped he would be of value to the society proportionate to its worth to him. All were in a most happy mood, and it was with much pleasure that business was concluded for entertainment.

James Phillips of Evona, one of the members, gave funny character sketches and songs, in his clever style, being repeatedly recalled. He was followed by Fred DeForest Crosier, an inimitable original dialect story teller, who is a credit to his profession of newspaper man as well. He had a ceaseless fund of humor, and he always amused and never offended. The people could not seem to get enough of him.

There was singing by Fred J. Pope, and piano music by W. R. MacClymont, Orator Burtis had charge of the entertainment, and himself gave some happy recitations. During the programme Exerding's best were passed, and the air was speedily blue with fragrant Havana smoke.

Not till near midnight did the merry men seek their homes, and then it was to tell their wives what a great and glorious institution was the Royal Arcanum, from which the widows and families of members receive such substantial benefit.

TOPSY, TOPSY-TURVEY.

She Gee'd When Ordered to Haw, and Down She Went with the Cart.

This morning, after removing a cart full of dirt from the cellar of Love Bros. recent purchase, which adjoins Dreier's on West Front street, Charley Nelson led Duffy's high-stepping black mare Topsy to the dump back of the Babcock Building for the purpose of unloading. On this particular trip Topsy seemed to have a load on her mind, for she "gee'd" when ordered to "haw" and Charley and Topsy started down the slide with the inverted dump cart as an improvised toboggan. Witnesses to the affair ran down the bank and in the confusion grabbed Charley's hair, mistaking it for Topsy's mane, but matters were soon straightened out and an inventory showed that no damage was done. Charley removed some of the rich Jersey soil from his immaculate waistcoat and things in general assumed their wonted aspect of Sabbath happiness in the region of Plainfield's Commercial Palace.

UNCLE PETER'S WILL.

Investigation in Progress, and Contest Probable.

Ex-Judge Wm. R. Codington, who has been consulted by several heirs under Peter Wooden's will as to the advisability of contesting it, is at present making a searching investigation of the affairs relative to the matter, and should such research bring warrantable facts to light a contest will doubtless result.

Another Verdict for Dr. Kennedy—A Philadelphian Cured of Gravel.

Philadelphia, Pa., Item.

Since the investigations of the claims made for Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy by the press, they have received letters from every State in the Union, and find the remedy fails in few cases.

The opinion of the average physician has been that kidney and urinary troubles could be cured only by long and persistent treatment. Dr David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy acts quickly, curing obstinate cases in a very short time.

One of our best known citizens, Mr. John J. Neil of No. 2437 North Eighth street, was a sufferer from gravel, in speaking of his case, said: "I had a very bad attack of gravel, and Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, taken about one month, completely cured me. I cannot say too much in its favor."

Favorite Remedy is prescribed with unfailing success for all diseases brought about by an excess of uric acid in the blood. In rheumatism, dyspepsia and nerve troubles, it has made many cures that were considered beyond the aid of medicine. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy can be obtained of all druggists at $1 a bottle or six bottles for $5.

Young Women to Make Sweets.

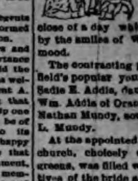
The young women of the Presbyterian churches will give an exhibition of candy making, and conduct a sale of the same, in the Crescent Avenue Church parlors, Tuesday afternoon and evening, March 5. In the evening there will be an exhibition of live dolls. A large committee of which Miss Tracy is chairman have the matter in charge.

YOUNG HEARTS UNITE.

With Pure Delight Their Tender Vows Are Spoken.

LILY PERFUME AND ORANGE BLOOM

Afford Their Happy Token—Grace Church Enshrines a Charming Sight, a Wedding Gowned in Pink and White.



HAPPY to all hearts and beautiful to all eyes was the pink and white wedding which took place in Grace P. E. Church Tuesday afternoon at 5, an hour when the sun lingered gently at the close of a day which had been favored by the smiles of Winter in her softest mood.

The contracting parties, two of Plainfield's popular young people, were Miss Sadie E. Addis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Addis of Orange street, and Clarence Nathan Mundy, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Mundy.

At the appointed hour the handsome church, choicely decorated with evergreens, was filled with friends and relatives of the bride and groom.

The bridal party proceeded up the centre aisle. Miss Alice O. Smith, formerly musical instructor of the bride, was at the organ, and her interpretation of the wedding march from Lohengrin added to the brilliancy of the effect.

The bride was beautiful in a gown of ivory-white Lansdowne silk, with feather trimmings and pearl passementerie; she wore a tulle veil, with natural orange blossoms and lilies of the valley in her coiffure and corsage. She carried an ivory-bound prayer-book.

The maid of honor, Miss Tillie M. Barnes, cousin of the bride, was gowned in white crepe de chene, with white lace and satin ribbon trimmings. The bridesmaids were Miss Gertrude Haskard of Elizabeth, cousin of the bride, who wore a gown of white crepe de chene, with lace and rhine stone buckles, and carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations; Miss Lizzie Barnes of Elizabeth, cousin of the bride, in a gown of pink crepe de chene, with lace and rhine stone buckles, and carrying a bouquet of pink carnations; Miss Hannah Merrill of Elizabeth, also cousin of the bride, in a gown of pink silk and white, with lace trimmings, and carrying a Martha Washington bag; and Miss Jennie Addis, sister of the bride, in gown of pink silk and white lace trimmings, also carrying a Martha Washington bag.

The best man was Charles B Barnes of Elizabeth, cousin of the bride.

At the altar the party were met by Rev. Dr. E. M. Rodman, who performed the very impressive ceremony of the Episcopal Church, the responses being noticeably clear and distinct.

The strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march were heard as the ceremony was concluded, and the party left the church while this favorite recessional was being played.

The bride and groom were driven to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was given to the immediate friends and relatives.

Guests were present from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Bayonne, Elizabeth and Roseville.

An excellent supper was served about 6, after which music was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Mundy were the recipients of many handsome and valuable gifts. The ushers officiating at the church were Walter F. Barnes of Elizabeth, cousin of the bride, Harry Hamilton, Chauncey L. Lane of New York, and William H. Addis, brother of the bride. They wore boutonnieres of white carnations and lilies of the valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Mundy left on the 7:25 Philadelphia train for a journey South. They will live in Plainfield.

Mr. Mundy has an excellent situation with the Seaboard Lumber Company of New York.

The happy couple have the best wishes of a very large circle of friends.

Among the gifts was a very handsome pair of embroidered pillow cases, made by Mrs. Elizabeth Garret of Elizabeth, age 80, grandmother of the bride.

Four Big Successes.

Having the needed merit to more than make good all the advertising claimed for them, the following four remedies have reached a phenomenal sale. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds, each bottle guaranteed—Electric Bitters, the great remedy for liver, stomach and kidneys. Bucklen's Arnica Salve, the best in the world, and Dr. King's New Life Pills, which are a perfect pill. All these remedies are guaranteed to do just what is claimed for them and the dealer whose name is attached herewith will be glad to tell you more of them. Sold at L. W. Randolph's drug store.

MARY A. LIVERMORE.

A DISTINGUISHED WOMAN OF THE PRESENT CENTURY.

She Did Valiant Service During the Civil War and Became a Patriotic Platform Orator. Retiring from Active Life to Pursue Literary Duties.

No woman was ever more appropriately claimed by every portion of her own extended land than Mrs. Mary A. Livermore. No woman was ever more widely known personally. She has lived in the North, the South, the East and the West. She has lectured in nearly every State in the Union, and even Europe has its claims upon her, for she has lectured in England and Scotland, and on the Continent, through interpreters.

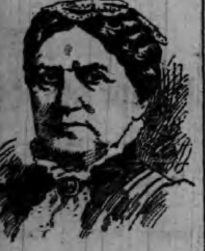
Mrs. Livermore is a link between two generations. She knew and thought with the great thinkers of a generation ago. Garrison and Wendell Phillips were her compatriots. She not only lived with Emerson, Whittier, Longfellow, Lowell, Hawthorne and their contemporaries, but, with Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, she has lived to see the "last leaf" flutter from the bow where it clung, for Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes was the last man of a group of brilliant literary lights of which Boston may well be proud.

A mere slip of a girl, she left her father's home to go into what seemed the far South, in response to a call from a family school in Southern Virginia.

While she was in the South, Mary Ashton Rice, as she was then known, saw unutterable deeds of barbarism, and was brought face to face with the miseries of slavery, which she did not fail to study, and which fired her with enthusiasm for a cause to which a good portion of her energies were to be devoted, for she had not then thought of the suffrage question, in which she is now so deeply interested.

When she left her position in the South and returned to Massachusetts, teaching a school of her own in Duxbury, and afterward relinquishing it, in 1845, to become the wife of the Rev. D. P. Livermore, she was ready to sympathize with the anti-slavery sentiments constantly growing warmer in the North, and after moving with her husband to Chicago in 1857, she made use of the columns of the paper Dr. Livermore published there for soliciting the co-operation of the public in behalf of the Union soldiers of the civil war.

After moving to Chicago Mrs. Livermore wrote for every department of her husband's paper, besides attending to all her household duties, and the care of her children, at the same time furnishing stories and sketches for periodicals. But with the work of the United States Sanitary Commission began the most telling work of her life.



MRS. MARY A. LIVERMORE.

It was about that time that the lyceums, which were always on the lookout for novelties, frequently asked her to go and relate her experiences in working for the soldiers on condition that she was to have the entire evening's proceeds for the benefit of the commission. Such offers were not to be refused, so she always went.

"I had never dreamed that anybody knew who I was," said Mrs. Livermore, in relating her experiences, "or that my experiences were of interest to any body, until we began to have our great sanitary fairs for the benefit of the commission, and then I began to read in the papers that Mrs. Livermore had done this or that, and with the success of our first fair began the real trials.

"There had been a great deal of anxiety on our part, for the starting of the fair had involved a debt of $10,000. But there were no fears after the first day, when we took $25,000. Everybody entering the halls in which the fairs were held was obliged to pass under the national colors, and even the traitors not only passed under the colors, but came to ask us if there was anything they could do to help us."

In beginning her lecturing, however Mrs. Livermore's interest in the suffrage question was by no means cooled. She had in one savings bank $8,000 in her own right. She informed her husband that with this she intended to establish a paper to be devoted to the cause of woman suffrage.

The result was a pronounced success for the Agitator. When in 1870 the Boston suffragists wished to establish a paper there was nobody among them who felt competent to assume the responsibility, and Mrs. Livermore was asked to become its editor. William Lloyd Garrison, Colonel Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Lucy Stone, Dr. Henry Blackwell, and Mrs. Julia Ward Howe were the founders of the Boston publication, but of them all only Garrison had had any newspaper experience, and Susan B. Anthony's Revolution in New York was the only publication of the sort in the country, aside from Mrs. Livermore's.

And now, after an active public career of forty years, one of America's most famous women has decided to make herself a little less of a living sacrifice to public demands.

Such is the life of a wonderful woman of the age, who has witnessed progressive changes in every sphere relative to woman, who has seen the development of philanthropies, the establishment of colleges, the revolutionized attitude of the press and the legislation for women where a half a century ago there was practically none. All this she has witnessed, in all these things she has participated, yet, never failing to mingle with the young people surrounding her, she has failed to grow old.

Beauty without amiability is a [illegible]

A SILENT TOWN.

CHILMARK, MARTHA'S VINEYARD, FAIRLY SPEECHLESS.

The Sign Language Universal. A Taint of Heredity Carried Through Successive Generations for Two Hundred and Fifty Years. The Social Caste.

Martha's Vineyard's deaf and dumb inhabitants afford one of the strongest instances of the power of heredity ever recorded. Here is the isolated little community of Chilmark, primitive New England folk of the purest strain, numbering 146 persons, of whom 36, men, women and children, are deaf and dumb and were born so. That is to say, of the entire population 25 per cent. are speechless—one in every four.

In five families of Chilmark, of the 26 children 15 are deaf and dumb.

Stop and consider what this peculiar marvel of science and sociology means in a place where all the citizens, every family, and all the children, come in contact with each other every day for years.

Every fourth person, for instance, who goes to the village grocery, can't tell in words what he wants to buy. Every fourth Chilmark citizen who applies for his mail at the Squibnocket Post Office is unable to utter his name. When the Chilmark ladies gather for the weekly sewing circle, as likely as not the same fatal proportion of one in four prevents several gossip-loving females from relishing the latest and choicest bits of social and domestic small talk without the aid of an interpreter.

All the boys and girls who go to the village school and the school mistress herself must understand the significance of the mystic signals and combinations which make up the finger language of those whom heredity has deprived of speech.

Chilmark is thus divided into three parts intelligence and one part unintelligence. Social lines are drawn at "the hearing Smiths" and "those deaf Joneses," and the "hearing son" of the deaf Mr. Robinson must not be confounded with his unfortunate deaf brother.

So it happens that every day in the year this queer little community down by the thundering shores of the Atlantic Ocean is the scene of a series of singular pantomimes, carried on in the streets, in the stores, in the family circle, and from Chilmark back doors.

The grim pathos of this condition as it appears at first glance to the outsider is in great measure diminished when it is learned that these kindly and generally well-informed people are proud of their affliction and have come to regard it as a kind of plume in the hat of the race. They know that they are living examples of one of Nature's inexorable laws, and are therefore unique, and where there are so many of them the horror and the shame of the affliction become less keenly felt.

Elsewhere the afflicted are screened as much as possible from public gaze, and invariably from public notoriety. But these people gave me a great lot of photographs of ancestors extending back four generations. These are all pictures of people who never spoke a word from the day of their birth.

Martha's Vineyard is peopled mostly by Mayhews, who occasionally let in an outsider under pledge of good behavior and due regard to their supremacy.

Edgartown, the first inhabited portion of the island, was founded by a Mayhew, Governor Thomas Mayhew, in 1642. He had a crown grant of the island and settled there as a missionary to the Indians. Many of the homes in the island have a litographed family tree of the Mayhews hung up on their parlor walls, showing the ramifications and early intermarriages of this sturdy stock.

The early Mayhews were entirely unafflicted and devoted themselves to establishing Indian schools, teaching the Indian girls to spin, &c. But Benjamin Mayhew, their descendant, who flourished at the end of the last century, had eleven children, four of whom were congenitally deaf and dumb.

Thus it seems that Chilmark is a community, two of whose first settlers were deaf and dumb, and their descendants have perpetuated the misfortune to an alarming extent. This has happened purely as an atavistic occurrence. It cannot be discovered that any of the instances of intermarriage have been nearer than third or fourth cousins. It cannot, therefore, be said that results, in the shape of deterioration of an originally sturdy stock, which invariably follow the marriage of close relatives, have been factors in this case.

Chilmark is an unusually healthy place. Its inhabitants are tall, well formed and sturdy, and live to an old age. If they die at eighty they are thought to die young. Lovely, fourth child of the original Benjamin Mayhew, is still living at the ripe age of ninety-seven years. An age of 100 is almost frequent in the neighborhood.

ABOUT TO PROMISE TOO MUCH.

How the Diffident Young Rector Narrowly Escaped Making a Bad Break.

"It was during the war of the rebellion," said the diffident and blushing assistant rector, addressing the Young People's Friday Night Prayer Meeting, "that a company of Union soldiers were ordered to take a rebel battery. Quickly they sprang to the charge, but alas! before they reached the guns they broke and fled ignominiously.

"That is, all except a certain corporal, who rushed in and seizing a gunner by the throat, carried him off, an astonished captive.

"And when the company reached the little clump of woods from whose shelter they had started, they gathered around the gallant corporal and asked him where he had got his prisoner, and how he managed to capture him.

"'I went in and took him,' said the hero, modestly. 'Ah, boys, why didn't you keep on? There was a man for every one of you there!'

"And so I say to you, my dear young Christian soldiers," continued the rector fervent, "there is a man for every one of you in this world.

"Yes, my dear young brothers, there is a man for every one of you here!

"Yes, my dear young sisters, there is—er—there is—er—there is work for you all in the vineyard of the Lord if you will only seek for it.

"Let us now sing the 425 hymn:

"'Oh, save me from the careless word,
The swift, unbidden thought,
And make me always think and speak
Exactly as I ought.'"

And the young assistant sat down with an internally relieved expression, and

A WOMAN MISER.

PECULIAR CHARACTERISTICS OF HETTY GREEN, MILLIONAIRE.

Questionable Methods of a Crafty Woman. Accusal of Forgery Nearly 30 Years Ago Recalled By Suits Now in the Courts.

That remarkable character, Mrs. Hetty Green, the richest woman in America, whose closeness and eccentric habits of life most readers are familiar with, is about to figure in the court once more in a suit in which the most remarkable charges will be made on either side.

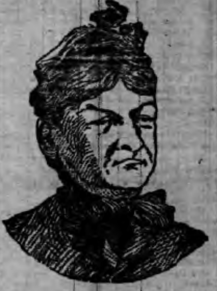
In Mrs. Green's suit against Henry A. Barling, the sole surviving executor of her father's will, for an accounting has already been going on for three years. Very recently Mrs. Green, in addition to her charges that, through the executor, many hundreds of thousands of dollars have been withheld from her, she also made the startling accusation that both her father, Edward Mott Robinson, and her aunt, Sylvia Ann Howland was murdered.

From these two relative who died nearly thirty-three years ago, Mrs. Green received about $10,000,000, which little nest egg she has rolled up like a snowball until her present fortune of $65,000,000 has been amassed.

If the affidavits which she has collected purporting to show that her father and her aunt was foully dealt with, are used in the coming trial, there is every likehood that the old charge of forgery against Hetty Green, which came so near being proved 30 years ago, will be revived.

The N.Y. World says:

The Howland will case is famous in court annals. There never was another case like it before or since. Hetty Green was the contestant. Three years after the death of her aunt, Sylvia Ann Howland, she came to the United States Circuit Court in Massachusetts with a will which she wanted substituted for the one already probated. The will was in Hetty Green's own handwriting, and the most famous experts of the day declared under oath not only their belief, but their almost positive assurance, that the two signatures which it contained were not made by the aunt, but were traced by Hetty Green herself over an origfual signature of Sylvia Ann Howland.



MRS. HETTY GREEN.

After a litigation in which some of the most famous lawyers in the country were engaged, and the expense of which amounted to $172,000 the case was dismissed in the lower court on a technicality.

While an appeal was being made to the Supreme Court of the United States, a private settlement was reached among the litigants, and as the whole matter was thus taken out of court, the charge of forgery could not be formally proved against Mrs. Green, who at the time was Miss Hetty Robinson.

The public knows that Hetty Green is miserly, tricky, ungrammatically in her speech, shabby in the extreme as to her dress and even untidy in her personal habits. They know that she has lived in hall bedrooms in cheap boarding houses, and eaten her meals in the kitchen with the servants from choice. They know that she walks daily across the Brooklyn Bridge to save three cents fare. She is not a woman of refinement, of culture, or of polish, but—and this a fact about Mrs. Green which is not generally realized—her family is one of the oldest and best in this country.

She is a Howland of New Bedford, belonging on her mother's side to the "Round Hill Howlands," so called from a certain locality in New Bedford, where the family has resided continuously for nearly three centuries. The old maritime city of New Bedford was founded by her ancestor, John Howland, the Puritan, who christened it after Bedford in England, his family home.

Hetty Green has the greatest estate today ever controlled by an individual woman, with the exception of Baroness Coutts. Hetty Green is worth $65,000,000 and no one has yet succeeded in compelling her to pay her taxes.

Went Him One Better.

"Out in Oregon," said a man from that State, "the air is so clear that you can see the peak of Mount Shasta, in California, from the peak of Mount Hood in Oregon, a distance of 276 miles."

"Here in the East we can see much further than that."

"Oh, come now."

"It's a fact. The moon is 240,000 miles away, but we can see it on a clear night."—Life.

Nothing to Hinder Now.

Lover—You are getting prettier every day.

Sweet Girl—Just now I am living on brown bread and water, to improve my complexion.

"How long can you keep that up?"

"Oh, indefinitely."

"Then let's get married."—New York Weekly.

Increasing a Public Nuisance.

The Lackadaisical Youth—You do me an injustice to call me idiotic because I let my hair grow so long. I do it intentionally to accentuate my individuality.

The Man—Then I take back what I said. It's not idiocy, but malice.—Chicago Record.

A Friend—If you love her, old fellow, why don't you marry her?

Bachelor [illegible]

NO TROLLEY YET.

Scotch Plains Still Guessing at Rapid Transit.

THE COMPANY PRESENTS ITS BOND.

Offers $10,000 Security for the Building of the Road, But the Town Committee Still Finds the Matter Presented in Incomplete Shape, and Defers Action.

The Fanwood Town Committee met at their rooms in Excelsior Hall Friday evening to receive the bond of $10,000 to guarantee the spur to the village and to grant the franchise for the Midway avenue route.

The representative citizens of the town were out in full force, notwithstanding the cold weather.

Chairman Terry called the meeting to order at 8:30. On motion the regular order of business was dispensed with, and the granting of the franchise was taken up.

Mr. Gaddis was asked to present his bond to the Committee for their consideration. The bond offered was that of Frank A. McKown, the president of the company. Town Counsel Codington was asked if the bond met with his approval. He said the form of the bond was regular, and the question was for the Committee to decide whether Frank A. McKown was worth $10,000. He himself did not known him personally, so could not say.

Mr. Gaddis said he had not given the question of the security of the bond much thought, as he did not think there would be any question about Mr. McKown being worth $10,000. If he had he would have had others on the bond with him.

Mr. Nichols, chairman of the committee appointed to secure signatures for the branch, was asked what progress the committee had made. He said the committee was in rather a peculiar position, as it now was in a fair way to secure the branch for either Park avenue or Forest avenue; but as some of the signatures were only promised and not made, he would like the Committee to accept a report of progress. He said Mr. Stanbury had offered to help the committee to secure signatures for the Forest avenue route, and that he could enlighten them further.

Mr. Stanbury read a letter from Mrs. Warren Ackerman, granting the right of way for what property is owned by her on said avenue. Mr. Miller said as a member of the Town Committee he would like to know where the people of the town would like to have the spur, whether on Park avenue or on Forest avenue.

Chairman Terry invited discussion from those present on the subject; but the people, with the exception of Thomas S. Young, (who was opposed to Forest avenue), did not seem to care where the branch was laid, so long as they were sure of having it in the town somewhere.

Mr. Gaddis wished the section in the ordinance regarding the branch line stricken out, as he said it was a blot on the franchise of Midway, and he claimed it was not legal to combine two separate applications in the one ordinance.

Mr. Codington said he failed to see how it was illegal or a blot on the franchise.

Mr. Gaddis said he had quoted the legal representatives of the company, but he would accept the ordinance if the Committee would grant it; or if the Committee would prefer it, he could make a new application to the Committee, when the signatures for a branch route were obtained and in legal form.

Making an application for a route for which the signatures had been obtained, and combining it with an application for a route on which the signatures were not obtained or in legal form, was illegal. He would rather have the Committee grant an ordinance that there could be no question about.

Mr. Miller then made the following motion: That on application being made by The New York and Philadelphia Traction Company for a franchise to be granted to them on Forest avenue from Mountain avenue to the Fanwood station, and as soon thereafter as legal time for publishing such application transpires, franchise be granted for a route on Midway, North and Forest avenues conjointly.

The motion was carried, Committeemen Miller and Terry voting Yes, and Committeeman Downer No.

Regular business was then taken up. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved, and the bills ordered paid. The treasurer's report was accepted, and the Committee adjourned.

Piano-Man Taylor.

F. S. Taylor, who has built up a thriving business in Elizabeth, has taken charge as owner of Hulett's piano rooms at 223 West Front street, and will deal in all makes of pianos, organs and musical instruments of all kinds, and carry a full stock of the standard and latest sheet music. Anything in the musical line, he proposes to supply at the best rates. Mr. Taylor opened his present Elizabeth store on the day of the blizzard in '88. He intends to make his Plainfield store, opened the day of the blizzard in '95, equally successful.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Rates of Advertising

Space	Weeks 1	2	3	Months 1	2	3	6	12
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50	$15.00
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	5.50	8.00	12.00	20.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	25.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	30.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	37.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	40.00
½ col.	9.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	30.00	54.00	80.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00	140.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of
Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything.

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
H. EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR,
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos, always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.
1aply

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc. Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in a strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanship manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business in all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

L. E. WOOLSTON, J. F. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS' SUPPLIES, [illegible]

BRIAR PIPE GIVEN AWAY WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF DUKES MIXTURE
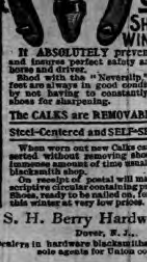
for 35 cents
Every pipe stamped DUKES MIXTURE or ATC
2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before uly 1, 1894, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer

FOR MALARIA,
GENERAL DEBILITY.
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. P. COLES DRUG AND MFG. Co
RAHWAY, N. J.



ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE NEVERSLIP
THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE.

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.

Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,
Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.

On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dealers in hardware blacksmiths' supplies, etc., sole agents for Union county.

$6.00
........TO........
CALIFORNIA

is our Sleeping Car Rate on the Phillips-Rock Island Tourist Excursion, from Boston and kindred distant cities on the route of this car, to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The cars have upholstered spring seats, are Pullman build, and appointments perfect.

You have a special manager on the car all the way, and excursions run once a week, leaving Boston every Tuesday. Save money by taking this popular mode of travel.

Address for full particulars,

A. PHILLIPS & CO.
296 Washington st., Boston, Mass.

JNO. SEBASTIAN,
Gen. Passenger Agent, Chic

SNOWBOUND.

Substantial Reminder of the Blizzard of March 12, 1888.

THE WISE COMMUTER STAYS HOME.

Jersey Central Train Service Badly Crippled—Street Cars Blockaded—School Children Have a Holiday, and Business Is at a Standstill.

From The Press of Feb. 8.

The fine powdery snow that began to fall heavily late yesterday afternoon was whisked by the high winds of the night into hard-packed drifts which interfered greatly with the morning traffic. The snowfall of the night was heavy, and though the moon tried to struggle through about 10 the storm kept up all night and well on to noon today, when the sun after sundry efforts succeeded in showing himself to the snowbound earth. The high winds continue, however, and the snow that has fallen is blown about as though a blizzard was still raging.

The Jersey Central passenger trains managed to pull through nearly on time up to 2:08 a. m., but freights were way off schedule. Officials Gilhausen, Peddle and Chief Despatcher Freck of the Central were at the Jersey Central Station at an early hour this morning, getting despatches from all parts of the system regarding the storm. Fortunately telegraphic communication was complete in all directions, all railroad wires being in good condition. The first train for Jersey City pulled out of Plainfield station at 6:23 packed to the doors and was nearly two hours reaching its destination. Much trouble was also experienced in crossing the ferry, fully forty-five minutes being consumed in the trip

The next eastbound train, which was equally well loaded, pulled out at 8:29 and made but little better time than its predecessor. The train due at 8:27 from Dunellen arrived at 9:05. Train No. 2 from Easton due at 8 p. m., puffed into the station with two snowclad engines in the lead, 35 minutes overdue.

The blue line flyer from Philadelphia, two hours overdue, was roofed over with a solid mass of frozen snow over six inches thick, and the engineer sitting on his box by the open window was encased ina glistening coat of mail from hat to waist, so hard that it had to broken from his clothing with a hammer. Trains No. 4 and No. 6, were stalled for over two hours at Somerville, and 5:04 from Philadelphia on the "P and R", due here at 10:08 was delayed at Belle Mead by three coal trains which stood on the switches unable to move because of the storm. They were finally dug out sufficiently to make a passage for the express, which arrived at 11:23.

The Newark and the Long Branch divisions are still blocked solid by the drifts.

The South Branch road from Flemington was opened sufficiently to allow the train due here at 7:58 to arrive at 11:08. Conductor Sam Johnson and Engineer Joe Case of this train report frequent drifts between Somerville and Flemington seven and eight feet high, and state that the snowplow worked all night in a fruitless endeavor to keep the tracks free. 514, the East-bound Philadelphia express due here at 6:05, with two big moguls in the van, puffed into sight at 11:16, having been instructed to cover the trip of No. 6 from the west due at 10:04, as well as its own.

516, the eastbound Philadelphia express, which also brings through Pullmans from the West, due at 2:14 a. m., was nine hours overdue. Local trains were made up at Somerville and Dunellen to take the place of express trains whenever possible, and were run necessarily with but little regard to schedule time. Up to noon no western mails arrived in the city. Deep drifts are reported from Fanwood cut and Bergen Point curve. The "stable" (round-house) at Jersey City was filled to the doors with engines unable to get out because of the frozen switches, and the only westbound train to reach this city up to noon was the paper train which left Jersey City at 7:30, arriving in this city at 9:05. The train covered the time of Nos. 1, 3 and 5, had two engines attached, and even then was forced to leave the passenger coaches at Fanwood and plow its way through with but one baggage and one mail car, returning later for the day coaches. The switches in the Jersey City yard were frozen and badly drifted, the flying snow filling them up almost as fast as the nearly exhausted yard hands, who had been working all night, could shovel them free. The levers in the switch tower, which in most cases operate several switches each, could hardly be moved, and the result was a practical suspension of all westbound travel until a late hour. It took the ferryboat "Plainfield", which left the New York side at 2:30 a. m., over an hour to make her Jersey City slip.

For over two hours this morning the waiting rooms, telegraph office, and baggage room were filled with a jolly crowd of would-be passengers, chatting, laughing, smoking or keeping Operators Scherberg and Stults busy sending messages to New York business houses announcing non arrivals because of the storm. "It's an ill wind that blows nobody good" said he of the luxuriant white beard, as with his hand still on the key he glanced up with his accustomed smile from a big pile of silver coins which lay in front of him, "but I hope it won't blow this way all day".

No. 501, the Blue line flyer, 9 00 from New York, arrived here at 12:46, the second train to reach here from Jersey City today; and 517 which followed at 1:27 reported the road in fair condition. No further delay was between here and New York, but the early afternoon trains are late.

Milkmen from all suburban points report the roads badly drifted. A. B. Wolfe of Plainfield avenue and city line plowed through drifts fully four feet high at 6 this morning to reach his patrons.

W. H. Dorlan broke the roads from Oak Tree at 3 this morning through five foot drifts. Milkman Barrett of Greenbrook says the drifts along the Dunellen road are worse than during the blizzard of '88, while Mr. Slight from Rahway found travel with a wagon so difficult that he was tempted many times to turn back, but the thought of many little children in Plainfield crying in vain for milk urged him on and he arrived here at 8:30 chilled to the bone from his eventful trip.

Mr. Rose of Netherwood farms is almost the one from the suburbs who found the roads passable, the high winds having cleared the roads nearly the entire distance.

Some of the Plainfield commuters rash enough to trust to the trains this morning had to walk nearly a mile in Communipaw, the trains getting stalled at the switches.

The morning papers and mails being hours late, and few people venturing outdoors, Plainfield business is practically suspended today.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTEBOOK.

When the bell rang at 8:30 this morning as the signal that school had commenced, there were sixteen boys, three girls and two teachers present, but new recruits kept straggling in until the total was raised to about forty.

Of course there were no regular classes, and all the students adjourned to Assembly Hall, where, until 10, when all were dismissed, most of the time was spent in singing. Miss Grace E. Overton of the Junior Class gave a thrilling recitation, "Jack", and afterwards read another selecton in response to he generous applause.

About twenty were present in the Grammar School classes in the High School building.

The Class of '96 held a class meeting yesterday afternoon. Miss Grace E. Overton gave a recitation in her usual excellent manner; after which several amusing games were played.

Charles Noble was elected class editor in the place of Miss Elizabeth Allis.

Miss Grace E. Overton was elected vice-president in the place of Miss Alice Thompson, who has left school. After the meeting, refreshments and a social time were enjoyed.

North Plainfield School.

About 100 pupils attended the North Plainfield school this morning, but all were dismissed, and no school was held.

The Electric Cars Blockaded.

The electric cars were run up to 2 this morning, and in making the last trip to the house the cars and the sweeper got caught near Plainfield avenue, where they remained the rest of the night.

Nothing more was done till this forenoon, when the scraper, attached to Frank Hand's horses, was taken out and an attempt was made to clear the tracks. Little headway was made, however, as the heavily drifting snow covered the tracks almost as fast as they were cleared. An extra effort will be made this afternoon to open the road.

The Somerset street branch is blocked from end to end.

Pennsylvania Railroad's Tours to "The Golden Gates."

Apart from the rare pleasures of visiting new places and witnessing novel scenes, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's tours to California will prove better educators than any number of lectures or books on travel. The immense scope of territory traversed will expand the ideas of all tourists, indelibly impress upon their minds enlarged views of this mighty Union and its vast possessions, and they will return to their homes prouder than ever of the great land whose borders are protected by the Stars and Stripes.

These tours have been arranged under the company's renowned personally-conducted tourist system, and magnificent Pullman trains will leave New York and Philadelphia on February 20 and March 20 1895.

Detailed itinerary will be sent on application to Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

A Stranger, But Knew Where to Get a Good Coat.

A colored man, a stranger in Plainfield, passing Harry Werner's clothing store about 6 last Friday, was tempted by the coats worn by the dummies.

Thereupon he lifted a nice warm ulster from one of the figures and then walked away.

John Hodgetts, a salesman for Mr. Werner, happened to be standing in the front part of the store, prior to going to supper, and caught sight of the theft.

He saw the man go into the butcher shop opposite, and started after him. The man with the coat then went down the street on a run, and when the store of the Sherman Outfitting Company was reached he threw the coat off, leaving it on the sidewalk. Mr. Hodgetts was unable to catch him. This is the third recent attempt to steal one of Mr. Werner's sample coats. Everybody covets such good clothing.

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTIONS WITH OVER 75,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J H Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depot
Hornley Barker Grove and Fillat sts
G W V Moy 4th and Park avenue
Frank Rowley Somerset and Craig place
J C Field, Somerville.
J B Gutteridge, Netherwood
Hotel Albion, Park ave and 9th street

Subscriber's Name	Address.
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H.	276 West 7th st
Adams, Dr D C	46 Grove st
Adams H C	115 E 6th st
Addis & Son	123 North av
Andrews F N	215 Central av
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 9th st
Alert Hose Co., No 1	W 2d st
Babcock, Geo H	5th and Union sts
Barnaby F A	Plainfield
Brakeley, P W Dr	Dunellen
Boone C W Dr	7th and Liberty sts
Bushnell, John	Central ave. and 9th st
Boorhower, J B	Park av and 2d st
Berg, Jos F, M D	123 E 5th st
Blair A C	139 North av
Bolen, Runyon & Co	244 Park av
Board of Education	9th st and Arlington av
Booth, R H	Central av
Brookside Sanitarium	Somerset st
Brown J M	612 Central av
Central Times	105 E Front st
Clark, R B	121 Crescent av
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Chase Fred F	255 North av
Clawson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
Constitutionalist Office	105 North av
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	530 W Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs F A	16 LaGrande av
Cruikshank, S. A	Belvidere av
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, R F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy	Park av & Front st
Daily Press	105 North ave
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Decker, F—pay station	Westfield, N J
Doane, T O—Chief F F D	438 W 6th st
Dunn Fred W	Park and North av
Dumont, John B	124 E 7th st
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave. and 7th st
Hose No 1	West 2d st
Engine No 1	2d st near Park av
Engine No 2	Somerset st
Evans, Geo C	27 Washington ave
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Force A L	22 Duer st
Fisk, Chas. J	211 West 7th st
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
Freight House	C. RR. Depot
French Bros	Somerset st
Fritts, Dr J T	428 Park av
Fleming, Howard	1012 Park av
French, C Frank	69 Somerset st
do do	297 Park av
Gaston, M. D., W F	5th and New st
Grant, Geo W Chief of Police	418 W 6th st
Griffen, A M	119 E Front st
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 5th st
Hegeman, E. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	702 Watchung av
Hadden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Hoagland's City Express	151 North av
Howell E O	191 North av
Holmes E H	203 Madison av
Hogan Chas W	20 Rockview av
Hummer & Mulford	229 Park av
Irvine D C	211 Watchung av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	213 W Front st
Kaufman W T	531 W 7th st
Keely & Son	LaGrande av and Scott pl
Kirkner, J	5th and Division sts
Leggett Pharmacy	Park av and Front st
Linnett W N	130 Jackson av
Lowrie H H, Dr	512 Park av
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L. N	Crescent ave
Linke, Frank	237 W Front st
Lounsbury, F C	Plainfield av
Mallinson A D	305 North av
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
MacDonald, J F	116 E Front st
Marsh Craig A	108 E Front st
Mathewson W B Dr	Babcock Bldg
do do	97 Rockview av
McQuaide James R	731 W 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
Moy G W V	Park av and 5th st
Muhlenberg Hospital	639 W 3rd st
Murray, Dr. W H	727 Watchung av
Murray J W	213 W 4th st
Music Hall	43B
Myers, J K	130 E 7th st
Newhall, Henry B	144 E 7th st
N Y & N J Telephone Co	175 North av
Park Club The	Washington av
Penton T B jr	Rockview av
Perkins Ed C	Central av
Plainfield Beef Co	254 E 3rd st
do Electric Light Co	Madison av
do Gas Light Co	E 4th st
do Street Railway Co	Grant av
do Water Supply Co	Netherwood
Police Station	Park av and Railroad
do Chief Office	Park av
Reed Machine Tool Co	8 2nd st
Pope J C & Co	E Front st
Postal Telegraph & Cable Co	104 Park av
Potter, C jr	427 W 7th st
Potter Printing Press Co	688 South av
Probasco J B Dr	E Front st
Randolph, L W	43 Front st
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave
Reynolds, E. P	Washington avenue
Reed Chas A	27 Myrtle av
Reed & Coddington	Babcock Bldg
Reinhart J W	69 Belvidere av
Rheaume L A	Watchung av and 4th st
Rogers W H	406 W 9th st
Rowley Frank	45 Somerset st
Roberts, D S	127 North av
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and 6th st
Rogers, D W	329 W 2d st
Rooms, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves
Runyon, A M & Son	402 Park av
Runyon, A M & Son	418 Madison av
Rushmore, Dr Edward	430 Park av near Fifth st
Runkle, H. G	321 6th st
Runyon, Chas W	109 North av
Rice, R. W. & Co	cor. Emily and Duer sts
Rushmore Robert	3rd st and Grant av
Saunders W L	95 Mercer av
Serrell, Lemuel W	625 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Shaw, B J	Front st. opp. Park ave
Shepard A D	Fanwood
Slater F M	37 Jackson av
Smalley Bros	North av
Smith, W F	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Smith, Jas A	125 W Front st
Streuli, H A	1300 Hillside av
Stevens F R	720 South av
Stevens Geo O	Grant av and W Front st
Stephenson W J	148 North av
Sykes T F	Front st Fanwood
Talmadge, Henry P	Netherwood
Taylor Miss M S	10 Rockview Terrace
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Terrill & Cole	320 W 2d st
Thompson, A D	147-149 North av
Thompson, A D	Farragut road
Thickstun, Jno A	223 Madison av
Tilsworth, Jos M	418 W 7th st
Tomlinson, Dr T H	213 La Grande av
Tobin Geo J	137 North av
Tracy, J Evarts	[illegible] 9th st
Tunison W J	322 Watchung av
Tweedy, G. B	125 Crescent av
Uhrich & Blake	122 W Front st
Union Beef Co	248 E 3rd st
United States Express Co	145 North av
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle J W	223 North av
Wadsworth, W B	420 9th st
Western Union Telegraph Company	At Depot
Wharton, Clifton jr	616 2nd Place
Woltmann, R	529 West Seventh st
Winchester, J F	W 8th st., near Grant ave
Wiers Max	344 W Front st

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD,		NEW JERSEY
Asbury Park, N J	60c	Hempstead N Y	45c
Astoria, N Y	50c	Hoboken N J	35c
Babylon, N Y	60c	Hunter's Point N Y	45c
Bath, N Y	45c	Irvington N J	40c
Bayonne N J	45c	Islip N Y	60c
Bergen Point N J	45c	Jamaica N Y	45c
Bayside N Y	50c	Jersey City N J	35c
Bay Shore N Y	75c	Keyport N J	50c
Bayville N Y	60c	Kingston N J	45c
Belleville N J	45c	Laurel Hill N Y	45c
[illegible] N J	45c	Leonia N J	45c
Bloomfield N J	35c	Little Neck N Y	60c
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	60c
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	50c
Brooklyn N Y	35c	Madison N J	40c
Caldwell N J	45c	Matawan N J	35c
Carlstadt N J	45c	Millburn N J	35c
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	35c
Chatham N J	35c	Morristown N J	45c
Chester N J	45c	Newark N J	35c
Colt's Neck N J	75c	New Brunswick N J	25c
Coney Island N Y	45c	Newton N Y	45c
Cresskill N J	45c	New York N Y	35c
Dover N J	45c	Orange N J	35c
East Norwich N Y	60c	Pamrapo N J	45c
Eatontown N J	60c	Passaic N J	45c
Elizabeth N J	25c	Paterson N J	35c
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	25c
Fairview N J	45c	Rahway N J	25c
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	50c
Far Rockaway N Y	45c	Seabright N J	60c
Flatbush N Y	35c	Short Hills N J	35c
Flushing N Y	45c	South Amboy N J	35c
Fort Lee N J	45c	South River N J	35c
Franklin Park N J	35c	Staten Island N Y	35c
Freehold N J	50c	Westfield N J	15c
German Settlem't N Y	50c	Woodbridge N J	25c
Glen Cove N Y	50c	Yonkers N Y	60c
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton N J	60c
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	60c

SCOTCH PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

John H. Thye has left his position with Liveryman Keeley of Plainfield, and returned home.

Gustave Keshule, a plumber in the employ of R. Jahn, intends suing A. L. Frentz for injuries received by a pair of stairs falling on him while at work on one of Mr. Schultz's houses on Stony Hill. Mr. Keshule claims it was through the carelessness of Mr. Frentz's workmen he received his injuries.

Fanwood Council, R. A., meet at their rooms in Excelsior Hall Tuesday evening.

Sheriff Kyte has been confined to his house with the grip.

DeMotte stage made every trip yesterday, notwithstanding the weather.

Mrs. William H Dean of Diamond Hill is confined to her bed with pneumonia.

John Oliver of Kearney spent Thursday with friends in town.

John Force, proprietor of Force's Hotel, should receive the thanks of all residents on Front street for making paths both sides of the road, after every snowstorm.

W. R. Buckley has accepted a position with a large wholesale grocery house of New York as salesman.

Regent W. E. Collins will entertain the entertainment committee of Fanwood Council at his home this evening.

Mrs. Philip Blank is confined to the bed with the grip.

Joseph Nestor while driving from Cranford yesterday frosted his face and ears.

The blizzard of Thursday and Friday held full sway in town, keeping business men home from the city, the school was closed, no prayer meeting was held at the Baptist Church last evening, and the morning mail did not arrive from New York until after 3 in the afternoon.

The tea which was to have been held at the Library rooms yesterday, was postponed on account of the storm.

John Scheien, employed at the Ackerman farm, attempted to make a path through town yesterday morning with a horse and snowplow, but the snow drifted in again as soon as they were opened.

ROMANY'S PRINCE WILLIAM.

He Lives Near East Hartford—His Tribe Are Noted Horse Trainers.

One of the most famous representatives of Romany Rye in this country is Prince William, as he is called, who, with his family, lives near East Hartford. There are branches of the family at New Haven and Bridgeport. The East Hartford branch of the family is the main branch.

The Williamses are all horse dealers. Attached to their residence are stables which, in winter, always contain a stock of fine blooded draft horses.

One of the interesting sights at the stables are the wagons that are used by Prince William and his family when they go off on their annual nomadic pleasure trips. These wagons cost from $1,000 to $2,500. Prince William's private wagon cost $2,500 and is fitted up in regal style.

In these trips around the country the whole family joins. These trips are made in the summer, spare horses being taken along and sold or traded. This means a cavalcade of a dozen fancy wagons and about 100 horses.

The start is made about the 1st of August, the entire family—men, women and children—being taken along. The party keeps together, traveling by easy stages, about 20 miles a day being considered a good journey. When in a hurry, they can make 40 miles a day.

The place selected for the night's rest is usually a grove. There the wagons are drawn up in a circle, fires are lighted and the evening meal prepared.

After supper the whole party gather around Prince William's tent or wagon, and the affairs of the family are discussed. A watchman patrols the camp all night to watch the horses.—New York Times.

Patriotic Red Men.

Miantonomoh Tribe, I. O. R. M., will celebrate Washington's Birthday in a fitting manner. There will be an address, entertainment, dance and collation, and all the friends of the tribe will be invited to accept their hospitality.

—J. T. Vail is kept busy securing tenants for houses and houses for tenants. He is reliable and popular not only in the real-estate business but in insurance matters as well, placing policies that are surely paid if loss comes.

P. P. VanArsdale,

PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 186, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 203 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 2jy1yr

Jas. M. Dunn,

Dealer in

GROCERIES, PROVI

Vegetables, Fruits, etc.

No. 224 Park Ave

OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.

Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S

ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.

OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.
Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,

FIRE AND LIFE

Insurance Agent,

Office cor. Front St. and Park Ave.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.

MONEY TO LOAN

On Approved Security. Mar6ott

Stoves, Ranges

—AND—

HARDWARE

OF ALL KINDS

J. J. HEIDELOFF,

No. 21 SOMERSET ST. 2-18-tf

CANOPIES

For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,

TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE

Mrs. Weigman,

20 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J.
mch30tf

John Chandler,

CARPENTER AND BUILDER,

Plainfield, N. J.

Residence and shop No. 228 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to. ap4y

E. B. MAYNARD,

PRACTICAL BARBER

AND

Artistic Hair Dresser,

No. 204 PARK AVENUE.

Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed. l17y1

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,

135 West Front St.

TINNERS,

PLUMBERS,

GAS FITTERS.

PARLOR STOVES,

COOK STOVES

HEATERS.

Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.

Kes of All Kinds are Made Here.

Tinware Made to Order.

Ranges, Brick and
Portable Furnaces

SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODINGTON.

Counsellor-at-Law,

Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery Notary Public. Offices corner of Park avenue and Second street.—je6tf

GEORGE W. DAY,

General Auctioneer.

Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 123, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of Constitutionalist. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES R. THIERS,

Dentist,

48 Somerset street. A new local anaesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.—je6tf

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,

(Successor to T. J. Carey,)

Furniture and Freight Express!

OFFICE—24 W. FRONT ST.

Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1 68. Piano moving a specialty.

A. WOLFF,

Manufacturer of

CIGARS,

And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 21½ W. Front street, to 201 West Front, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

TWENTY

Yeas experiencein the business.

SECOND STREET, 2 doors above Peace street

Mr. JOHN R. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to Shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredibly short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,

Liver and Boarding Stables

FOURTH STREET,

Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No, 114.

Parlor stoves,

Furnaces, Ranges,

Steam Piping, Plumbing.

Heater Work, Tinning,

Hardware.

A. M. GRIFFEN,

East Front Street.

TELEPHONE CALL, 6. 11 11-tf

Estey
Pianos
Organs

FULLY WARRANTED.

Moderate Prices.

Cash or Installments.

See Them Before You Buy.

ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. [illegible] MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

The Constitutionalist
A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.
PUBLISHED AT
Plainfield, New Jersey.
TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.
A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.
Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

PARTICULAR MENTION.

O. P. Rutherford of Evona is recovering from an attack of the grip.

Mr. Beach of Watchung avenue is confined to the house with the grip.

Mrs. Theodore J. Runyon of 411 West Fourth street is ill with the grip.

Mrs. George Thatcher is confined to her home with an attack of the grip.

E. P. Williams of West Seventh street has gone to Albany on a business trip.

Miss Mabelle Smith of Westervelt avenue is suffering from a sprained wrist.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Addie Coriell to Merton F. Langer.

Miss Ida Dunham is confined to her home on Arlington avenue with an attack of the grip.

Miss Florence Marsh of Plainfield avenue will give a social to her friends Friday evening.

Thomas Reid of the West End has accepted a position as agent for the Prudential Life Insurance Company.

Louis DeCamp of Plainfield avenue, an employe of the Potter Press Works, is confined to his home with the grip.

The engagement is announced of Miss Emma Kurshale and Arthur G. Adams. The marriage will take place soon.

Mrs. John Drayton of Franklin place is ill with the grip. Her infant daughter is suffering from an attack of bronchitis.

D. F. Stewart of John street, although painfully ill with neuralgia, continues to perform efficiently his duties at Hope Chapel.

George Firstbrook of Essex street, who has been traveling through Massachusetts, expects to arrive home on Saturday.

Mrs. Barnes, mother of Mrs. D. F Stewart, who has been ill since New Year's Day, is recovering under the care of Dr. Simpson.

The marriage of Miss Fanny Westphal, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Westphal, to George Gray of Brooklyn, will take place next month.

The little son of Walter Walker of Chatham street is quite ill from an attack of pneumonia, but Dr. Carman, who is in attendance, hopes soon to effect a cure.

John Daly and W. S. Gibson of this city spent yesterday on the Brazilian steamship Hildebrand, on which Mr. Daly took his departure for Para, South America.

J. C. Pope of West Fourth street is the latest to succumb to the grip. He was stricken suddenly yesterday afternoon at his office, and today he is unable to be out.

Thomas Henry of the West End, who has been lately employed by The Pond Machine Tool Company, has gone to Pittsburg, where he has secured employment as a machinist.

Dr. Daniel H. Thickstun, who went to Florida about a week ago for his health, has written to his son William Thickstun that he is feeling much better, and enjoys the southern climate.

Miss Louie M. Leggett of Princeton, who has been visiting friends in New York city, came to Plainfield yesterday for a few days visit with her brother, J. Howard Leggett of West Front street.

Samuel Q. Lawson of West Seventh street, who is spending the Winter in New York city, was in town Monday looking after his property and seeing if any damage was done by the blizzard.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. VanEmburgh of East Second street were called to Chester, Orange County, N. Y., Monday, to attend the funeral of James Roe, a niece of Mrs. VanEmburgh. They are expected home tomorrow.

A letter received today by Andrew W Johnson gives no hope for the recovery of his mother, "Aunt" Hetty, who is at the home of her other son, Russell, in New York city. Her heart is very much affected, and she refuses the most tempting dishes prepared by those who are doing their utmost to prolong her life.

—Hyde's meadows were covered yesterday afternoon and evening with crowds of swiftly skimming skaters, whose animated faces and many colored mufflers combined to make the ever changing kaleidoscopic picture one of unusual attractiveness to the crowds of onlookers who lined the banks.

$100 Reward $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure.

Send for list of testimonials.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Props. Toledo, O

Sold by druggists, 75c.

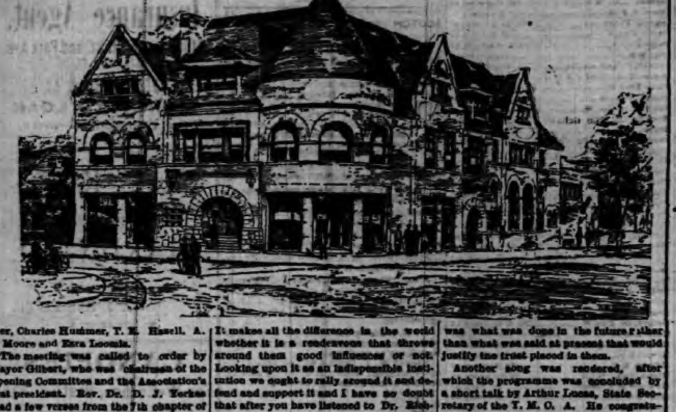
IN THEIR NEW HOME.

They'll Never Roam in Search of Better Quarters.

BUILT THIS HAS BEEN FOR PLAINFIELD MEN,

Helped by Fair Plainfield Daughters—With Past Review, an Era Now the Snugly Quartered Men Commence—Renew Their Youth, with Words of Truth from Past and Present Presidents.

BUILT for Plainfield's progress was the new Y. M. C. A. Building, and the finely appointed and pretty Assembly Hall of the structure was well-filled Feb., 13 by a representative audience which had gathered to enjoy exercises incident to the formal opening of the Association's new home. On the platform were seated the members of the Board of Directors, opening and building committees, a number of the local clergy, and the double male quartette, composed of F. S. Runyon, E. E. Runyon, Nelson Runyon, L. A. Hummer, Charles Hummer, T. E. Hassell, A. J. Moore and Ezra Loomis.



The meeting was called to order by Mayor Gilbert, who was chairman of the Opening Committee and the Association's first president. Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes read a few verses from the 7th chapter of Acts, after which prayer was offered by Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

Mayor Gilbert spoke in part as follows:

"The duty has been put on me tonight of bidding you welcome to this beautiful new home of the Young Men's Christian Association, and I can assure you the duty is doubly enjoyable to me simply because I was present at the birth of the Association. I was its first President. I am familiar with its early struggles and with many of the important incidents of its early life. I can reach back from its beginning to the present time; I can touch the past and present in the history of this Association. I can bring them both together, and I can realize perhaps more fully than the most of you how remarkable has been the success of this Association, and in looking back over the interval of time which reaches from the beginning, twenty-eight years ago, down to the present development of this Association, this beautiful building suggests to me how remarkable has been the growth and development of this organization. This building tells its own story of prosperity, healthful growth, development, public sympathy and support. It reminds me also of many changes that have taken place under my own observation in the aims and purposes and in the personnel of the Association. I can clearly recall the first meeting that was held in the modest little room on Park avenue 28 years ago. We were not ambitious then; we had no thought at that time of ever achieving a state of development that would warrant such a beautiful building as this. We simply hoped to organize and to do some good. There were only a few of us but we were interested in the work and ties that bound us together in our early association work developed into stronger ties of personal association, and I am proud to say tonight that I number among my personal friends tonight men whom I discovered in that association of long ago.

"But speaking now as Chief Executive of this city I think that I ought to congratulate the people of Plainfield on having this beautiful edifice added to the architectural development of Plainfield. Plainfield has fine avenues, beautiful streets, and charming residences, and all speak of the refinement of our people, but we have few public buildings, and these we need to express the progressive spirit and business methods of the people. There is nothing that serves so well to express the character and civilization of a people as the buildings they erect. The old world is full of the architecture of magnificent nations that have arisen, flourished and passed away, leaving nothing behind them but the ruins of old temples and public buildings, and these stand as silent monuments to the purposes and civilization of their time, and there they have stood for ages furnishing the historian reliable data for the writing of history. The old world has much to boast of in this line. From these we derive large benefits, but all these buildings were reared to perpetuate the glory of man, or of nations. The beautiful palace at Versailles has over the entrance this inscription: 'For the glory of France,' built by a prince for his own glory with money wrung from the people. How much different is it in the case of this building—money for which has been donated by a liberal people, donated as a recognition of the right of this Association to exist.

"You have given to the young men this beautiful building; you have enlarged their usefulness and increased their capacity for work, and you have laid upon them a new responsibility as well, and in order to discharge this responsibility and in order to give you what you look to them for now, it will be necessary for those who have the interest of the young men at heart to be generous in support. Now, that it is in position to do valiant work, it will need valiant support, and the money spent in this direction is well spent. As an investment, see what this institution is doing for young men in Plainfield. You all know, if you have sons, that when they reach a certain age and come home from an office or from being confined in a store you feel that they would like to go out and spend some time with their companions. Now, what is this association for these young men? Why, it is a rendezvous, a meeting place, and as a rendezvous and meeting place you want to see that it is a good place. It makes all the difference in the world whether it is a rendezvous that throws around them good influences or not. Looking upon it as an indispensible institution we ought to rally around it and defend and support it and I have no doubt that after you have listened to Dr. Richards and to Mr. Murray you will all feel that to support this institution would be a good investment to your sons and a good investment to Plainfield."

At the conclusion of the Mayor's address the quartette rendered a selection which brought forth many encomiums.

The following is a part of Dr. Richards's excellent address:

"When I came here tonight I was thinking of course, as we all were, of the work of the Young Men's Christian Association, and thinking of it with gratitude; but I found myself thinking especially of those gathering here tonight in this new building and what it meant to this Association to have at last a home of its own. I suppose my special duty was to bring a multitude of congratulations to the society itself and to all these friends who are gathered here, many of whom know what it is to have a home of their own, and when we think of it I do not know that there is any material advantage to be set ahead of the advantage of having your own home. A minister speaks of that subject with a little feeling, because it is an advantage that he never expects to possess. Belonging to a race of tramps he simply can look with envy upon those who have what is denied to him. It is not only the people who have a home of their own who are blessed; it is an advantage to the community. They have a great deal more confidence in their citizens when they own their own houses. You are not afraid of their behaving themselves in such fashion that it will be necessary for them to leave the place, if they own their own homes. Any institution comes to be worth more to the community, or at least be valued more highly when it can be properly housed.

"Now it seems to me that this is the special advantage the Young Men's Christian Association has assumed tonight. It is met in its new home; it has come to a place that belongs to itself and we hope that it will be soon paid for, and here it stands as one of the institutions of the city—something that will stand here forever as a home for the young men of Plainfield, and for the young men of our own families. We all have our own houses with their own parlors, with their own libraries, with their own privileges of social intercourse, and anything that is offered to those boys by the Young Men's Christian Association is an addition to a good many things which they have already. But after all, this thing is to be here to furnish a home for the young men in Plainfield who haven't one, and who are not likely to have a home for the present. I think our prayer to God is that as this building is now dedicated He will so fill it with His Spirit that has always guided it in the past, that this aim may be more and more completely realized, that this Association may be interested to offer to the young men of this city who need it most the advantages of a Christian home."

Dr Richards was followed by W. D. Murray, President of the Association. In opening he spoke of the time seven years ago when the subject of the Association owning a house was first broached, and now what a feeling of gratification and joy it afforded him to participate in their formal opening. He then described the efforts that were necessary to consummate their desire, which had found root in the minds of those taking an interest in the welfare of the Association. To illustrate the immensity of undertaking to erect such a structure, he furnished a few figures concerning the finances in this connection. The total amount subscribed was $47,300, of which $46 017 48 had been paid in. It had been necessary to get a loan of $2,500, which afforded the sum of $48,517.48 to draw upon. Thus far there had been expended $14,000 for land and $34,344 90 on the building. The contract called for $43,615, which left a deficiency of $10,000 still to be raised. Now the question was asked whether the result accomplished justified the cost involved? The work done in the past answered that proposition affirmatively. He said that many young men, who had pleasant homes, were simply content to live for themselves, and conform with the rules of society and law, but the Association was a field of labor in educating them to something better and higher than mere drones. The citizens of Plainfield he said had donated the building to perpetuate the religious work which they had undertaken, and it was what was done in the future rather than what was said at present that would justify the trust placed in them.

Another song was rendered, after which the programme was concluded by a short talk by Arthur Lucas, State Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. He congratulated the Association on possessing in many respects the finest building of its kind in the State. The structure stands for the highest ideal of manhood, and in its various departments would teach that there is something better and nobler than just living and something more than death. In the religion of Jesus Christ, he said there was need for creeds and sects, but the Young Men's Christian Association afforded a common platform and purpose to centre the mind and efforts for the salvation and elevation of the young men.

After Dr. Yerkes pronounced the benediction, the audience were invited to make a general inspection of the building, of which the majority availed themselves.

The cozy reading room, the pleasant parlor, and all the apartments, were admired by the visitors, and the completion of the building was commented on as one of the events in which Plainfielders should take great and pardonable pride.

Funeral of Miss Terry.

The funeral services of Miss Tillie Terry were held Tuesday afternoon from her late home on Richmond street. Rev. Cornelius Schenck conducted the ceremony.

A very large number of friends and relatives were present, attesting the high esteem in which decedent was held.

There were several floral tributes among which was a handsome pillow from the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, and a beautiful bunch of roses and smilax from the Women's Relief Corps. The pall bearers were: A. Wilson, Arthur Adams, Henry Adams and Herbert Bodine.

Interment was in the Methodist cemetery.

Dance in Friendship Hall.

A largely attended and very enjoyable dance was held in Friendship Hall, New Market, last evening. Guests were present from Elizabeth, Jersey City, Bound Brook, Somerville and Plainfield. Quite a large party went in a sleigh from this city and enjoyed the pleasant ride as well as the dance which followed.

Frasee's orchestra furnished excellent music throughout the evening, and the merrymakers did not disperse until a late hour. The affair was under the efficient supervision of Messrs. Egle, Van Dorn, Brant and Faulks.

Constipation

Is the most common form of Dyspepsia.

Dr. Deane's

Dyspepsia Pills

(white wrapper), one after each meal, cure the most obstinate cases. They contain no mercury, do not purge nor gripe, and impart a natural healthful tone to the stomach and bowels.

50 cents at druggists'. Send to us for a free sample.

DR. J. A. DEANE CO.,
Kingston, New York.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

THIRTY years' observation of Castoria with the patronage of millions of persons, permit us to speak of it without guessing. It is unquestionably the best remedy for Infants and Children the world has ever known. It is harmless. Children like it. It gives them health. It will save their lives. In it Mothers have something which is absolutely safe and practically perfect as a child's medicine.

Castoria destroys Worms.
Castoria allays Feverishness.
Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd.
Castoria cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic.
Castoria relieves Teething Troubles.
Castoria cures Constipation and Flatulency.

Castoria neutralizes the effects of carbonic acid gas or poisonous air.
Castoria does not contain morphine, opium, or other narcotic property.
Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep.
Castoria is put up in one-size bottles only. It is not sold in bulk.
Don't allow any one to sell you anything else on the plea or promise that it is "just as good" and "will answer every purpose."
See that you get C-A-S-T-O-R-I-A.

The fac-simile signature of Chas H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

E. P. THORN,

No. 125 Park Avenue,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,

For Family and Medicinal Use,

A SPECIALTY.

FEBRUARY PRICES.

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,

73 Market Street, Near Plane Street.

Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.

PRICES DURING FEBRUARY.

Tapestry Brussels carpet per yard, only	50c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$10
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, only	$20
Velvet carpet per yard, only	75c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$15
Antique oak sideboards, only	$13 50
Extra super all-wool ingrain carpet per yard, only	50c
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, in rug covering, only	$30
Fancy couches and lounges, only	$5
Low priced ingrain carpet per yard, only	25c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$20
Body Brussels carpet per yard, only	85c
Antique oak chiffoniers with mirrors, only	$8.75
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, in silk covering, only	$40
Dining-room chairs, high back, antique oak, per set only	$7.50
Antique oak extension tables, only	$8.50
Oilcloth per yard, only	20c
Hall stands, only	$5.50
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$25
Three ply carpet per yard, only	25c

PORTLAND RANGES—The prices on these Ranges are not reduced, as we are not allowed to do so by the manufacturers. We have made reductions in all other departments not mentioned above at the same rate as in this ad. Easy terms. Goods delivered free to all parts of the State.

STORING FURNITURE—Having just erected a new building at 88, 90 and 92 Bank st., we can safely say that we have the most complete Storage Building in the State, and at such low rates. All locked rooms. Furniture moved with vans by careful men in city or country. Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,

73 Market st., near Plane st., Newark, N. J.

J. T. VAIL, Real Estate and Insurance,

177 North Avenue.

E. E. Marshall & Co.,

Painters and Decorators.

167 NORTH AVENUE. (Formerly with A. D. VanSciver)

Wall Paper,

Window Shades,

Picture Mouldings.

We have just received 10,000 rolls of Wall Paper, which we guarantee to be 1896 goods, and that is what you cannot find elsewhere in the city. Our prices are lower than ever before. People contemplating papering and painting can save money by calling on the above named firm. We do no work but what is first-class and solicit your patronage.

CONDENSED GOVERNMENT.

Why Should There Be 300 Officials in Union County?

SOME THOUGHTFUL SUGGESTIONS FOR MUNICIPAL REFORM.

Frank Bergen Writes on the Methods of County, City, Borough and Township Government, Outlining a Greatly Simplified Plan That Is Less Costly and Cumbersome.

[From The Elizabeth Daily Journal.]

Aside from the temporary embarrassment of the National Government the public question in which the people are most deeply interested at the present time, is the problem of municipal reform. The existing methods of conducting the administration of municipal governments, except in rural districts and in rare instances elsewhere, do not satisfy the people. Taxes accumulate, discontent increases, sporadic movements for reform break out here and there, and end in nearly every case in relapse to the former condition. Advice is freely poured forth by the press in the form of books, essays and editorials. Petitions, memorials and remonstrances seem endless, and yet, year after year, the difficulty of administering the local government of a thickly settled locality increases. The reason is plain enough, but a practical remedy seems to elude all who try to find it.

The fact is that the influence of various socialistic theories during the last half century has laid on local governments numerous duties which they were not originally organized to perform, and the slow and discordant efforts that have been made to adapt the ancient forms of local government to modern uses have given rise to a vast mass of law, ranging from ordinances to constitutions, which have been construed in different ways by voluminous decisions of the courts. It is obvious that successful administration of such governments is next to impossible. One is rather surprised to find that their break-down is not more serious than it is.

The common experience of a municipal office holder, anxious to serve his fellow-citizens faithfully, is something like this: He is elected, by the impulse of some agitation, on the faith of his character, or because he may have been successful in some other career, and enters hopefully on the discharge of his duties, only to find himself embarrassed and perplexed by obstacles which he never appreciated before. After a few futile efforts to redeem his pledges, or gratify his ambition, he becomes disgusted or indifferent. He tries to attend to the public business at odd times, generally evenings when he has nothing else to do, and acts largely on rumor, gossip or current items of news he happens to read. If, feeling his helplessness, he falls under the influence of some one who is more familiar with the ropes, he becomes the subject of a boss, and loses the confidence of the people. By and by his constituents grow impatient at his conduct or inaction; he is turned out of office as a disappointment and sent back to private life fully convinced that the people in a republic are extremely ungrateful.

There is another class of officials who seek office for less worthy purposes. Some lively citizen, commonly called a hustler, gets his friends out to the primary, secures the nomination and is elected. He firmly believes that it is his duty to get something, not for himself directly, but for some of the friends who were most active in his support. He commences business in the caucus of his party, and must get a doorkeeper at least to show his constituents. Later he develops a strong desire to get something for the ward, township or locality in which he happens to live. Other members of the same board or body understand their duty in the same way, and so it often happens that the conduct of officials, who pass for honest men, becomes a raid on the public treasury instead of an administration of the government for the general welfare of the people. I do not believe that dishonesty is nearly so extensive among public officials as is commonly supposed. The true cause of the failure of municipalities to meet the just expectations of the people is rather the wretched system of government which has come into existence, and which is itself largely responsible for a false conception of official duty.

Since this question grew into importance and pressed forward for solution, the public mind has turned in different directions in search of a remedy. In 1875 it was thought or hoped that reform could be effected if special legislation were abolished, but that movement was not a success. Later a cry went out for one man power with direct responsibility to the people at stated intervals, but that theory of petty temporary monarchy failed to take root deeply. About the same time, schemes for local government by means of bi-partisan bodies were devised, and to some extent put in practice, and later still a few sublime characters began to advocate non partisan government in the centres of the population of a country whose government would perish with its partisanship.

There has also been more or less talk of trying "business principles," whatever they are, as a means of local government. If it is intended by this to establish a practical form of government over a given locality, adapted to its needs for the time being, and then to elect men of intelligence and integrity to administer the government within, if not according to, the law, there is much to commend it. If it means that political institutions that grow out of traits of human nature older and as tough as civilization itself, should be conducted as one would run a grocery store, a lumber yard or a bank, it is an unsound proposition. There is no better time to repeat and emphasize this fact than at present, when the practice of mingling the methods and avarice of business with the legitimate functions of government at Washington has culminated again in wide-spread disaster. In a country where officials are changed frequently, where the people are familiar with the methods of business, and but few make a study of the science of government, if there is such a thing, it is no doubt wise to employ business methods as far as practicable in conducting the routine work of government, but a good government, which is one of the grandest achievements of human effort, should not be degraded to the status of a mere commercial pursuit.

But no one can come to an end of a discussion of this subject while dealing in mere generalities. Any practical reform must be achieved by a concrete operation. Instead of trying to tell other people how other localities should be governed, suppose we discuss among ourselves how the government of Union county could be changed to our advantage. This county contains 101 square miles; its territory is bounded and intersected by several streams that provide surface drainage. Cranford is the central point, and no extremity is more than eight miles distant. The land is generally level, interrupted by a few considerable hills, but there seems to be nothing in the physical features of the county to interfere seriously with the suggestion I wish to make. Spread over this small territory there are no less than fifteen municipal governments, including three cities, nine townships and two boroughs, in different stages of development, and a county government underlying them all. The population of the county by the last census (1890) was 72,467, and is probably over 80,000 at the present time. In the offices of these several governments there are about 180 officials, not counting policemen, constables, school teachers, justices of the peace, overseers and surveyors of the highways and overseers of the poor. There are at least a hundred of these minor officials. In a word, there are about 300 people busy with more or less activity in the work of governing Union county. It is probably true to say, and I speak respectfully, that not one of these numerous officials ever read the laws they have been appointed to administer, and it is equally true that if they should do so it would not add much to their efficiency, for the reason that the vast mass of law which smothers them is simply inscrutable, both to the professional and the wayfaring man.

The assessed value of property in Union county for purposes of taxation last year was $34,613,387, and the aggregate debt of the fifteen municipal governments in the county is $5,113,011, bearing interest ranging from four to seven per cent., but nearly all at four. The annual interest charge is about $225,000. During the year 1894 the taxpayers of the county were called upon to pay to their respective collectors in cash the sum of $899,700. Deducting from this the sum of $225,000 paid for interest on debts, and we find that the people of this county paid last year the enormous sum of $674,700 for government, and probably not more than half a dozen of the taxpayers believe that they received the worth of their money. It must be conceded that a system of governments which produces such inadequate results for the amount expended should be reformed. It is a condition that is far behind and below the enlightened and progressive spirit of the age.

I am in favor of adopting the advice of Hamlet and reforming it altogether, being careful, however, at every step to remember that a government which does not fit the people cannot succeed. I believe that a radical change can be made which will bring the government of Union county in harmony with the sentiments of the people, diminish the cost of administration and add greatly to its efficiency. My suggestion is this: Abolish every municipal government in the county except the county government itself, and diminish the functions of the board of Chosen Freeholders to the lowest degree consistent with the constitution; then erect a new government over the entire territory of the county, based on a practical theory in harmony with modern ideas. Let the governing body proper consist of five or seven persons, to be elected, well paid and required to devote their whole time to the public service; define the outlines of their power with extreme clearness, and provide but few regulations for their conduct within the limits of their jurisdiction. Many of the so-called safeguards of legislation relating to municipalities are in fact sources of embarrassment and pitfalls. I am convinced that it would be better to circumscribe the general jurisdiction of a governing body clearly, and leave the methods of exercising the powers conferred largely to its discretion. This is necessary to the vigor and efficiency of the government.

It would be necessary to establish executive departments of the government, such as fire, health, street and police departments, but I do not think that any member of the executive departments, except the head officer of each, should be elected by the people or appointed by the governing body. The people in a thickly settled locality are too busy with their own affairs to spare the time required in a short campaign to make sufficient examination of the mental and moral fitness of candidates for mere clerkships and other minor offices, and the governing body should by all means be entirely free from the annoyance of the office-seeker, and, as far as possible, from dictation of the boss. Let the governing body establish the executive departments by ordinances, appoint the head officer of each, and remove him at pleasure. It is necessary for the governing body to have this power in order to maintain discipline, so as to conduct their important and complicated work successfully. The other officers should be chosen by a civil service commission.

The merits of the cause of civil service reform have been much obscured by the ridicule of its enemies and the folly of its friends. But the system has grown up slowly, between both obstacles, to a strong position, and can no longer be regarded as a subject fit only for a short plank in a platform to please the Mugwumps and make the delegates smile. In the last number of the Atlantic, Mr Theodore Roosevelt gives an interesting account of the progress and condition of the movement, entirely free from cant, although a little overloaded with enthusiasm. I am convinced that a radical and genuine plan of reform of municipal governments must include a provision for the selection of the minor executive officers by the approved methods of civil service reform.

This, in mere outline, is a form of local government I venture to suggest for Union county. It could be established by a statute which no doubt would be passed if the people desire it. A few of the advantages of such a change are (1) the territory would be rid at once of an oppressive mass of local laws and ordinances, complicated so as to be unenforceable by a still greater mass of inconsistent general laws. These laws for the most part are the experiments and failures of centuries, transmitted with increasing volume from age to age. We need a local government resting on the spirit of the age in which we live, and not on tradition and mistakes alone. (2) Its practical and efficient methods of administration would provide much better service to the people at much less cost than we get from fifteen different governments with rapidly changing officials, who attend to the public business in the evening and at other odd times. The success of the great commercial corporations is largely due to the fact that the governing body consists of a few persons, who consult rather than debate, and talk instead of declaiming. To this extent, at least, there is no objection to the substitution of business methods for the common practices of local governments. The value of such a change will be appreciated by anyone who has observed the difference between the action of gentlemen in a board of directors, and in a common council. (3) The population of Union county has doubled since 1870, and is likely to increase still more rapidly in the future. The inevitable course of events will force its territory under one local government sooner or later by the gradual process of annexation of the smaller to the larger towns. This is the common history of the growth of cities. The interests of all parts of the county are sufficiently identical to make it desirable that its growth and public improvements should be according to a common plan.

At present four municipalities in the county are preparing to construct separate sewer systems. Roselle intends to construct a trunk sewer to tidewater. Cranford will connect with the Rahway system. Westfield and Plainfield propose to try the plan of intermittent filtration. All of these systems will be constructed for local convenience only, and must of necessity be temporary expedients. In former years large sums of money were expended by the various municipalities of the county for the improvement of highways, and nearly all was wasted. We never dealt with the problem successfully until the unity of the whole territory of the county and the interest of each part in all other parts were recognized. May it not be so with the other public improvements which the increasing population of the county make it necessary to construct?

There are also objections to the proposition. The one most obvious is the unequal debts of the different local governments. In fact some of them are entirely free from debt. But this objection will seem to diminish on examination. Where the debts are there also are large quantities of taxable property, and the most costly of the necessary public improvements have been made. The rate of interest on the large debts is four per cent., and it is not unreasonable to expect that the saving in taxes by reason of a rational administration of the proposed government would go far toward paying the interest on the debt of the consolidated town.

It may also be objected that the proposed plan would give too much power to the governing body. But it is impossible for men to accomplish satisfactory results in dealing with difficult matters without freedom to act as good judgment may dictate, according to the actual conditions of the moment. As it is impossible to foresee remote conditions or emergencies, so it is impossible to prescribe how men can act to the best advantage years before they are called on to act at all. The plan, however, calls for a distinct demarcation of the limits of the power of the governing body, but leaves it comparatively free to act within those limits. That body would be responsible for the government of the whole territory; public attention would be fixed on the conduct of its members, instead of being divided as at present among numerous officials. The office being responsible and dignified would attract men of capacity, and its importance would lead to the selection of the best men who could be impressed into the public service when the necessity of doing so is properly appreciated. On this point the fate of all forms of popular local government must turn. The form of the government furnishes opportunities more or less convenient for the service or betrayal of the people by those entrusted with power. Some students of the subject seem to think that the form of the government is of more importance than the character of the men chosen to administer its power. I do not think so, although it is no doubt true that the form is one of the essential attributes of a good government. Herbert Spencer, who is regarded as the wisest of all men who have studied government profoundly, declared, before the strain of pessimism grew darker in his mind, that "the belief that by due skill an ill-working humanity may be framed into well-working institutions, is a delusion. The defective natures of citizens will show themselves in the bad acting of whatever social structures they are arranged into. There is no political alchemy by which you can get golden conduct out of leaden instincts." We must all bow to the dictum of this great man, but the progress of the cause of good government cannot be stopped by a disagreeable fact. It may be that the character of no popular government, whether of a nation or a town, will long remain above the level of the civilization of its inhabitants, but civilization is constantly progressing, and it is clearly the duty of the people to establish and maintain a form of government at least up to the level of their common intelligence. It is certain that our local governments in this county are not.

FRANK BERGEN.

A Dinner to Miss Cox

Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Marion Ackerman gave a dinner at her home on Ninth street to a few select guests in honor of Miss Cox of New York. The occasion was one of pleasant social intercourse. The dining tables were decorated with American beauty roses, and the trimmings were of the same color, lending a bright effect to the dining room. Max Wiertz catered.

The following were present: The Misses Dumont, Corey, Lawrence, Waldron, and Wals, Messrs. Munger, VanBuren, Walz, Wharton, Waring, and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges.

Consumption,

The incessant wasting of a consumptive can only be overcome by a powerful concentrated nourishment like Scott's Emulsion. If this wasting is checked and the system is supplied with strength to combat the disease there is hope of recovery.

Scott's Emulsion

of Cod-liver Oil, with Hypophosphites, does more to cure Consumption than any other known remedy. It is for all Affections of Throat and Lungs, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis and Wasting. Pamphlet free.
Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

Stand the Test.

A popular remedy is sure to be subjected to the severest tests, both practical and medical.

Allcock's Porous Plaster

receives the endorsement of medical men and private persons everywhere as the best remedy for colds, coughs, sore throat, pains in the back, chest or limbs.

Be Not Deceived. Imitations are not equal to the genuine. Get ALLCOCK'S and no other.

Allcock's Corn Shields.
Allcock's Bunion Shields.
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills

purify and tone up a debilitated system. They are absolutely safe.

BY THE WAY.

—The trial of the Welsh-Kane shooting case is now on in Elizabeth.

—The ever-welcome robin was seen yesterday on the Martine property, Park avenue, near Cedar brook.

—Sing Toy, of the North avenue Chinese laundry, has gone to Newark to be treated by the Chinese medicine man.

—The borough Board of Canvassers are busily engaged in making a house-to-house canvass prior to the Spring election, which takes place in March.

—Special Lincoln exercises were held in the North Plainfield Public School yesterday. There were recitations by Miss May Linbarger and Everett J. Peck.

—The board walk leading to the Watchung avenue entrance of the Y. M. C. A. Building was completed today. It will be replaced by flagging in the Spring.

—There is a scarcity of coal among a few of the coal dealers of this city, owing to the delay in shipping from the mines, caused by the heavy snowdrifts in Pennsylvania.

—Daniel Manley of West Third street was taken with a violent hemorrhage on Somerset street last evening and was taken home in a hack by his friend Patrick O'Keefe.

—S. VanFleet has moved from his store opposite the Babcock Building to the store formerly occupied by George Musgrave. Hop Lee, the Chinaman, has taken Mr. VanFleet's former store.

—The Camera Club furnished real enjoyment to their friends last evening when they gave an exhibition of the Newark slides. Rev. T. Logan Murphy in explaining the views added much to the pleasure of the large audience.

—The Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias, will hold their annual session in Trenton Wednesday and Thursday of next week. A. C. Pope will represent Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, and Charles D. Graw, Unity Lodge, No. 102, of this city.

—Howell Division, No. 97, Sons of Temperance, held an interesting session in their rooms last night. George Schafer was taken into membership, and two names were proposed. A committee was appointed to perfect arrangements for giving a social on the evening of March 7.

—A work of elegance and utility is the calendar issued by the New York Engraving and Printing Company of 320-322 Pearl street, New York. Each month's leaflet gives the face of a popular actress. The mechanical execution is a sample of the perfection of the company's work.

—Leggett, the druggist, corner of Park avenue and Front street, has a full line of absolutely pure toilet soaps, which he is selling at 15 cents a cake, or six cakes for 75 cents. Everything usually found in a first-class drug store can always be found at this old-established house, and his prices are always right.

—J. W. VanHorn of Duer street, who resigned his position as collector for the Prudential Insurance Company, ask The Press to tell the people of Plainfield that he has not gone out of the insurance business so far as the writing of policies is concerned, but that he is still writing policies for fire and life insurance in any good company in existence.

—"The Simple Story of How to Build an Electric Motor at Home" is the title of a serial now running in the Detroit Electrical Student. The story of how to build motor No. 2, and the battery to run it, told in language a child can understand, begins with the issue of March 2. Give the boys a chance. Electricity will be the biggest bread-winner of the 20th century. Perhaps your boy, if he gets a start, will make it his life work. The Student is a crisp little weekly for amateur students of electricity. $1 a year. Five subscriptions will bring the sender castings and material for one motor ready to be built, freight prepaid. Student Publishing Company, 28 Lafayette ave., Detroit, Mich.

Formerly a Plainfielder.

Richard Lanning Pirsson died at his residence, 24 West Sixty-sixth street, New York, Sunday morning, aged 48 years. The cause of death was peritonitis, and a distressing symptom was hiccoughs, which continued with much violence for two days. Mr. Pirsson was born in New York and had lived here all his life.

For several years he had been a dealer in granite at 19 Park place. He was a nephew of J. H. Morris of West Chester. Mr. Pirsson is survived by a widow and two children. He lived in 1886 at old No. 18, East Fifth street, next to Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut.

Cupid, the little god of love, will be given tribute in The Daily Press tomorrow by a special copyrighted St. Valentine's page, of literary and artistic excellence.

The best fiction by the modern masters is copyrighted to Daily Press service, 1 the six-day serials which have become so popular. Rudyard Kipling will tell his newest tale in Friday's and Saturday's issues; and Mrs. Alexander will begin a powerful novel in Saturday's issue also. You don't want to miss 'em.

To the largest and best newspaper in Union County, the Elizabeth Daily Journal, The Press is indebted for the article from Frank Bergen's pen, printed in this issue, on "Condensed Government". It is an able review of a novel theme, and will be read and discussed with thoughtful consideration by voters of both parties. The Journal was so neighborly as to lend The Press the use of the type in which the article was already set.

A valuable library for Jerseymen is a collection of the Annual Reports of the State Geologist. The volume for 1893 has just been issued, and is a credit to the painstaking research of Geologist John C. Smock and his assistants. There is just one way to know New Jersey, and that is through these geological reports. Accompanying the latest volume is a series of valuable maps, including one which shows the territory of the extinct mammoth lake Passaic, which it is believed once covered the central New Jersey interior.

Marvelous Results.

From a letter written by Rev. J. Gunderman, of Dimondale, Mich., we are permitted to make this extract: "I have no hesitation in recommending Dr. King's New Discovery, as the results were almost marvelous in the case of my wife. While I was pastor of the Baptist Church at Rives Junction she was brought down by pneumonia succeeding la grippe. Terrible paroxysms of coughing would last hours with little interruption and it seemed as if she could not survive them. A friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery; it was quick in its work and highly satisfactory in results. Sold by L. W. Randolph druggist. Regular size 50c and $1; our price 45c and 90c

Kitty Pilot Changes Hands.

Michael Quinn has sold his well-known prize-winner, the dark bay mare, "Kitty Pilot", to a Brooklyn horseman, and a valuable black mare from Mr. Quinn's stables became the property of Mr. Arkell of Westfield about the same time.

Fred DeForest Crozier, the humorist who entertained the Royal Arcanum, was the guest while in Plainfield Monday and Tuesday of Mr. and Mrs. H. E Lavell at their elegant home on Putnam avenue.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.
The Standard Railway of America
Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.
On and after Jan 20, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:
FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 25 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.
4.57 P. M.—WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday. For Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.
8.24 p. m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.
8 42 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.
For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]
Sundays, [illegible]
For Baltimore only [illegible] week-days.
For Newark and New York—[illegible]
For New York only, 6 10 a. m. daily.
For Philadelphia—[illegible]
FOR ATLANTIC CITY
(2 25 p.m. with through Buffet parlor car) Sundays [illegible]
Cape May, Sea Isle City and Ocean City [illegible] p. m. week-days.
For Rahway—[illegible]
For New Brunswick—[illegible]
For Woodbridge—[illegible]
For Perth Amboy—[illegible]
For East Millstone—[illegible] week-days.
For Trenton—[illegible]
For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible]
For Flemington—[illegible]
For Freehold—[illegible] via Monmouth Junction, week-days.
For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—[illegible] week days.
For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible] do not stop at Asbury Park on Sundays.
For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—[illegible]
For Boston—[illegible] daily.
For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton Street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.
Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]
S. M. PREVOST, General Manager.
J. R. WOOD, Gen. Pass. Agent.

THERE is but one way in the world to be sure of having the best paint, and that is to use only a well-established brand of strictly pure white lead, pure linseed oil, and pure colors.*

The following brands are standard, "Old Dutch" process, and are always absolutely

Strictly Pure White Lead
"Atlantic," "Jewett," "Brooklyn."

* If you want colored paint, tint any of the above strictly pure leads with National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors.

These colors are sold in one-pound cans, each can being sufficient to tint 25 pounds of Strictly Pure White Lead the desired shade; they are in no sense ready-mixed paints, but a combination of perfectly pure colors in the handiest form to tint Strictly Pure White Lead.

Send us a postal card and get our book on paints and color-card, free.
NATIONAL LEAD CO., New York.

—Zachariah Wilson has exchanged his property on Manning avenue for the house which formerly belonged to the late Mrs. Ann Wooden at Warren and Chatham streets, through the agency of Richard Cortell.

The Finderne,
FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.

Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.

HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.

(Table d' Hote from 1 to 3:30) Steam heat; inclosed piazzas; everything immaculate. When out driving let us entertain you.

A. E. WHITE, Manager,
Finderne, N. J.
1 9 tf

Central Railroad of New Jersey.
(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)
Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. 18, 1894.
PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]
PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
Leave Newark [illegible]
Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.
PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
Leave Somerville, [illegible]
PLAINFIELD AND EASTON
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
Leave Easton [illegible]
PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
WESTWARD CONNECTIONS
LEAVE PLAINFIELD.
5 45 A. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport and Tamaqua.
8 10 a. m. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge Branch.
9 18 A. M. for Flemington, D. L. & W. R. R. Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.
9 54 A. M. for Flemington, High Bridge branch D L & W R R, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Nanticoke, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.
1 2 4 6 ... way for Easton, connecting at Junction for stations on D. L. & W. R. R.
2 08 P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Sunbury and Williamsport, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. Buffet parlor car to Mauch Chunk.
[illegible] p. m., way for Easton, connecting at High Bridge for stations on High Bridge branch.
[illegible] P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Bethlehem, Bangor, Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Mauch Chunk, Shamokin and Tamaqua. Buffet parlor car to Scranton.
6 19 P. M. for Flemington.
[illegible] P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading and Harrisburg.
[illegible] P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.
[illegible] Sunday for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton. [illegible] Sundays for Easton, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Reading and Harrisburg, [illegible] Sundays for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading, Harrisburg, &c. and at Junction for D. L. & W. R. R.
For Atlantic City, [illegible]
Long Branch, Ocean Grove, &c.
Leave Plainfield [illegible]
For Perth Amboy, [illegible]
For Freehold [illegible]
ROYAL BLUE LINE.
Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia, [illegible]
For Trenton, [illegible]
For Baltimore and Washington at [illegible]
For Chattanooga, New Orleans and all points south with through vestibule sleeper, via Shenandoah Valley Route at [illegible]
For Buffalo, Chicago and all points west, week-days at [illegible]
RETURNING—LEAVE PHILADELPHIA,
Reading terminal, [illegible]
From 24th and Chestnut—[illegible]
Leave Trenton, Warren and Tucker sts., [illegible]
Plainfield passengers by trains marked * change cars at Bound Brook.
Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket agent at the station.
J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Supt.
H. P. BALDWIN, Gen. Pass. Agt.

THE MAIDEN AND THE BURGLAR.

There was a maiden, coy but forty,
 Visited by a dream of man
Who thought, however slightly naughty,
 Had ever crossed her life's short span.

[illegible] dark night, when all were sleeping,
 She found the wretch she long had sought;
For underneath her bed lay peeping
 A poor, lone burglar, freshly caught.

[illegible] lock of the door and quickly turning,
 [illegible] forth a pistol freshly cocked
And with a voice that told its yearning
 Her prisoner's plight she sternly mocked.

"Now listen to my ultimatum:
 You've got to marry me or die;
[illegible] I'm to the very lowest stratum,
 I'll have a husband or know why."

Then spoke the burglar, sadly speaking:
 "[illegible] proposition does not suit;
[illegible] be the man you are seeking,
 Why, darn you, madam, darn you, shoot!"
—Youngstown Vindicator.

A FEMININE UNSURPATION.

[illegible] Story of a Woman Who Read Out of Her Neighbor's Paper.

Every man was reading his evening paper when the Third avenue elevated left the City Hall station, and one of the women was also reading a paper. It was not hers, however, and was the property of the man who sat in the seat next to her.

She was a large woman of full growth, and filled most of the seat, so that the man, who must have been born a long way from the land of Anak, slipped edgewise into the fraction of the seat that was left vacant at the woman's side.

He quietly put on a pair of spectacles and began to read his paper, and the stout woman fixed a pair of gold eyeglasses on her firm, aggressive nose and began to read it, looking down over the man's shoulders and her own pectoral expanse. The man reached the end of the column and gave the paper a preparatory shake and rustle before turning the sheet when the woman laid her hand on his arm.

"One moment, sir," she said severely; "I have not finished reading the first page yet."

The little man gave a rabbit-like glance upward and sidewise.

"Excuse me, madam," he replied meekly, and held the paper unturned.

But the little man was a strategist. He could conduct a masterly retreat if he could not originate an attack; and when the train stopped at Chambers street he rose, with a fine assumption of its being his stopping place. But those who looked out of the windows saw him dart down the platform and take refuge in the very last car.

LOOKING BACKWARD.

The Millionaire's Sweet Regrets Over the Old Farm He Let Go for a Song.

It was summer time. The office window was open. The old millionaire had come in to confer with his lawyer, and had been told he could now foreclose his mortgage on a fine and coveted corner which he knew he could bid in for a song. He therefore felt at peace with all the world, and he wished that everybody might banish uncharitable and sordid thoughts and be of good cheer. He took off his hat and wiped his brow.

"I am thinking of going out into the country," he said, speaking in a kind of way of that humble region. "I like the country. We don't really know what life is here. I often wish I were back. I had a farm before I came to town—about 300 acres—as pretty land as ever laid outdoors—high, rolling sandy loam; fine big pastures, plenty of woods, and bubbling springs right on the place—never went dry the dryest season, and a magnificent orchard. I set out about ten acres, all to grafted fruit before I sold, and looked to seein' 'em bear—I could have sold ev'ry bar'l of apples for $2 right on the ground.

"But I sold—I sold. Yes, sir, I sold that 300 acres—$80 an acre, and came here and put every dollar into corners. Of course, hitting it just the time I did, the money has turned itself a good many times; but I don't know; I often wish I hadn't sold the old farm. I sold it to my brother-in-law for $80 an acre. That was twenty years ago, and I don't suppose he could get $40 an acre now——"

Here the sad repiner engaged in silent thought of his brother-in-law pounding away on the depreciated farm, and became suffused with such joy that, as he arose and put on his hat, he seemed like a statue of Ecstacy.

"No, sir; I don't suppose he could get $40. Fine farm, too."—Puck.

Woes of a Millionaire Congressman.

I found a millionaire member of Congress sitting in his hotel the other day surrounded by gloom so dense that it could have been shovelled away like snow from the sidewalk, and asked him what had happened. "I was just thinking," he said, "what a fool I was to come to Congress. It cost me $12,000 cash to pay my campaign expenses, in addition to two months' neglect of my business. When I am home about two-thirds of my time is taken up by people who come in to ask for offices. I have had candidates for foreign missions, consulates, department bureaus, United States attorneys, pension agents, about forty post offices and no end of Indian agents and land offices, and all I've succeeded in getting since Cleveland was inaugurated is one assistant keeper of a lighthouse, a place for which there was no candidate, and they asked me to name a man. I scarcely dare go home. I am being cursed all over my district by people who think I'm indifferent to their interests and ungrateful to my friends. It will take six weeks' steady talking to explain why I haven't been able to get the Republican officeholders in the district turned out and Democrats put in, and not half the people who hear the explanation will believe me. Until now I have never sought anything that couldn't be bought, but I've spent $10,000 worth of my time trying to get a $1,200 consular appointment for the son of one of my constituents, and can't make it. My business is going to ruin for want of attention, and there is a basket of letters on my desk at home that I have never had time to read."

Not Insured.

Mrs. De Style—Marie! Is the dog chained?

Servant—Yes'm.

"And the cat put out?"

"Yes'm."

"And the children tied to the bed-post in the nursery?"

"Yes'm."

"Very well. Then you may light the piano lamp."—N. Y. Weekly.

He Wouldn't.

"I would die for you!" insisted the [illegible] old suitor.

"Oh, it's very easy to promise," responded the maiden skeptically.—Judge.

THE BLOCKADE BROKEN.

Traffic Resumed in Town and on Railroad.

TRIBULATIONS OF THE POSTMEN.

They Plough Their Way Through Heavy Drifts, and Keep Snow-bound Householders in Touch with the Outside World.

From The Press of Feb. 9.

It was a lucky thing for the men who recently took the mail-carriers civil-service examination that they were not on duty yesterday, for the strength of even the oldest, in point of service, among the carriers was severely taxed in the attempt to cover the route. Yet each man made the regulation trips in spite of the many drifts, though all were thoroughly exhausted on their return to the office.

William Demarest covered his Netherwood district on horseback and encountered numerous drifts varying from 4 to 7 feet.

E. T. Dunn, who visits Clinton avenue and adjacent points, managed to pull through many deep snow piles in his sleigh, getting stuck several times, however, and being obliged to shovel himself out.

William B. Sharp, who looks after the residents of Washington Park and its surroundings, says the drifts in many places were shoulder high in upper Rockview avenue.

E. T. VanWinkle, whose route extends from the Park Avenue Baptist church pretty well out toward Metuchen, reports that Cedar Brook was frozen over for the first time in seven years, and drifts were met with beyond the brook which were well-nigh impassable.

John Neighbor did nothing but climb to the top of a drift and use his mail-bag as a toboggan to carry him down on the other side, while covering his route in the vicinity of East Second and Berckman streets.

J. F. Mullen who is so short that he could not see over some of the drifts in the neighborhood of the Pond Tool Works, simply got down and tunneled through them, pushing his pouch in front of him. While removing the mail from the Grant avenue box the gale lifted Mullen off his feet and landed him in the middle of the road.

J. W. A. Bauersachs, who looks after the territory adjacent to Summit, Fairview, Grandview and Westervelt avenues, slipped near Westervelt avenue, and fell headfirst into a seven-foot drift, and struggled out just as the piano in a neighboring house struck up "Swim out, O'Grady, swim out."

Substitute R. J. Reville, who covers the Third ward, reports six-foot drifts near Seventh street and Plainfield avenue.

All of the carriers were frequently obliged to break their own paths, even on their afternoon trips, so rapidly did the boisterous wind refill the cuts. Many kind-hearted citizens provided steaming coffee or hot beef tea for the chilled and snow-covered men, a favor which was duly appreciated by the recipients.

There were but three mails up to six o'clock last evening, a fact which of course somewhat lessened the labor of the carriers, yet they all knew they had been working when they hung up their pouches for the night. The mails referred to were a New York mail at 9:45 a. m., a mail from the South shortly after noon, and three sacks from New York which arrived at 5:10 p. m. All of them were overdue.

The Central trains were all run without regard to time-sheet schedules, there being nothing for Philadelphia between No 511 which arrived at Plainfield station at 12:50 and No. 525 which reached here at 7:33 p. m. Trains numbered 12 and 14 on the time-sheet eastbound from Easton were combined in one, arriving here at 8 p. m., two hours overdue. One freight only passed through this city during the day, and that was composed of sections of two eastbound fast freights. The first of these two trains is due to pass the station at 1:35 a. m., but did not reach here until 3:45 p. m.

The first train on the Long Branch division plowed its way through at 2 p. m., while the Newark branch was clear at noon and the trains followed time schedules more closely than any other portion of the Central system.

The B. and O. drawbridge over Staten Island Sound at Cartaret was caught by the wind and spun around like a top, stripping off the cogs and disabling the machinery to such an extent that the bridge must be repaired before it can be used again.

The Singer Sewing Machine Company's freight tug "Clark", carrying a crew of eleven, stuck fast in the ice of the Sound and the men suffered fearfully from the cold, one of the men being taken to the General Hospital on arriving at the dock.

The sidewheel steamer "New Brunswick", from New Brunswick to New York, is stuck fast in the ice on Staten Island Sound, and she will be obliged to remain there until the ice breaks up.

The skating is excellent all over the Sound, thousands having taken advantage of this unusual opportunity for sport yesterday and this morning.

Tom Birch, an employe of the Singer Sewing Machine Company Company, found the only weak spot in the ice yesterday morning while making a short cut from his home to the factory, and was fished out with difficulty by some dock hands, in a semi-conscious condition. The doctor who was summoned entertains grave fears that his involuntary bath will bring on pneumonia.

Many tugs are frozen fast at their anchorage. During the night trains occasionally pulled into the station, wholly regardless of time schedules, and in most cases pulled by two huge engines. A snow plow pushed by two "hogbacks" went solidly up the road at 10:30. Several passenger trains with one or two weary travelers aboard slid in and out between 10:30 and midnight. Train No. 16 from Easton due at 8:30 pulled in with two engines and a mixed crew at 12:49 and left three passengers from western points. All western trains were from two to six hours overdue. Freights were stalled all over the system, the weary trackmen and shovelers, many of whom have had no sleep since the storm commenced, having more than they could do to dig out the passenger trains. The train scheduled as No. 523, due here at 6:34 p. m. from Philadelphia, pulled by two "hogbacks", ran into a snowbank in the cut just east of Belle Mead, both engines jumped the track and ploughed into the drift, blocking both tracks.

The cut is one of the worst on the road and the drifting snow soon piled high above the smoke stacks. The wrecked engines are being dug out but the tracks cannot be cleared for many hours and Superintendent Peddle of the Central division has issued orders that no Philadelphia trains will run in either direction today. South Branch trains from Flemington are arriving from twenty to thirty minutes late.

The train from Allentown via Easton due at Plainfield station 10:24, pulled in with two snowclad engines in the lead over an hour behind schedule. Freights are not moving anywhere on the Central system and the freight-house crew are having a vacation in consequence. Mails are arriving irregularly and open very light.

The Southern mail due here at 6:15 a. m. arrived via Elizabeth at 9:23. Few New York mails had been received at time of going to press, the 8:16 which was half an hour late bringing but little as compared with the usual amount.

Very little expressage came in yesterday, delivery being suspended until 11 a. m., when a sleigh made the rounds with perishable goods. This morning only two of the usual fifteen express cars arrived up to 12 o'clock, and they were running very light.

Many edibles have taken a temporary rise in price because of this delay.

It will be days before the railroads will again assume their normal condition.

Over 200 Western Union messages were sent from the local office yesterday, by far the largest business since the blizzard of '88 and unlike that memorable occasion the wires worked perfectly all day. This morning Foreman Meyers of the New York office is putting up a solid cable at the station from which the wires will diverge to the office key board, making a much needed improvement over the old nest of individual wires. This fact has no connection with the storm however, having been contemplated for some time.

Buds That Feel the Cold.

Some rash black birches were betrayed into swelling their buds during the January thaw, with the result that the cold of the last two weeks destroyed the embryo leaves. It rarely happens that plants indigenous to the region suffer thus. The annual danger to the peach trees lies in the fact that they grow north of their natural habitat, and doubtless the same is true of the oranges in this country. The fig escapes the frosts of many Winters as far north as the southern extremity of Maryland, but it is nipped now and again, just by way of reminder that it is out of its latitude.

To Accommodate Travel to the Catskills.

Kingston, Feb. 8—The Ulster and Delaware Railroad Company has decided to extend its tracks to Kingston Point, a mile up the Hudson from Rondout. This will allow the Albany day boats to load their Catskill Mountain passengers direct at the trains instead of at Rhinebeck, across the river. At Kingston Point a large dock and terminal station will be built. The work will be begun in the Spring.

Want to Get Back.

It is reported that Arthur A. Zimmerman and Harry C. Wheeler are greatly dissatisfied with professional racing and are anxious to secure reinstatement to Class B. With this object in view they propose, it is said, to apply to the National Assembly at their meeting Feb. 18

Struck by the Blizzard.

A hackman at the North Avenue station yesterday afternoon had considerable difficulty in attending to business, on account of being under the influence of liquor. After securing a passenger from one of the trains, he had to be assisted by a friend in getting the man to his destination.

Body-Building.

Since Jan. 1, Physical Director MacPhie of the Y. M. C. A., has examined 119 young men and 46 boys for work in the gymnasium.

To accomodate the increased growth in the gymnasium classes, 30 extra pairs of dumb bells and 30 Indian clubs have been purchased and put into use.

Haymakers to Meet.

Miantonomah Association, No. 118½, Haymakers, will be revived Friday evening, Feb. 15. State President R. S. Lake will be present and make an address. A collation will be served afterwards, under Rule 17.

PROOF IS POSITIVE

THAT LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

Is Daily Curing Backache, Dizziness, Faintness, Irregularity, and all Female Complaints.

(SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.)

Intelligent women no longer doubt the value of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It speedily relieves irregularity, suppressed or painful menstruations, weakness of the stomach, indigestion, bloating, leucorrhoea, womb trouble, flooding, nervous prostration, headache, general debility, etc. Symptoms of

Yours for Health
Lydia E. Pinkham

Womb Troubles

are dizziness, faintness, extreme lassitude, "don't care," and "want to be left alone" feelings, excitability, irritability, nervousness, sleeplessness, flatulency, melancholy, or the "blues," and backache. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all this trouble as sure as the sun shines. That causing pain, weight, and backache, is instantly relieved and permanently cured by its use. Under all circumstances it acts in perfect harmony with the laws that govern the female system, is as harmless as water. It is wonderful for Kidney Complaints in either sex.

Bearing-Down Feeling,

Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills

work in unison with the Compound, and are a sure cure for constipation and sick-headache. Mrs. Pinkham's Sanative Wash is frequently found of great value for local application. Correspondence is freely solicited by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., and the strictest confidence assured. All druggists sell the Pinkham remedies. The Vegetable Compound in three forms,—Liquid, Pills, and Lozenges.

BY THE WAY.

—Baker Henry Liefke has placed a cash register in his store on West Front street.

—The enterprising young men of the North Plainfield Public School have organized a secret society known as the Phi Kappa Phi.

—It's a little soon to practice for it, but paste in your hat that the Crescent Wheelmen of Plainfield intend to hold a series of race meets on their new track this year.

—Mrs. Dr. Edwards, the celebrated clairvoyant, being prevented by the weather from going to Lakewood, will remain at the City Hotel till next Saturday morning.

Helping a Veteran.

Joseph Skelton of South Bethlehem, who has been stopping in Little Falls, Essex County, for some time past, came to Plainfield last Friday about 5, with no money nor place to sleep. He was on his way to his home, and was unable to go any farther.

Mr. Skelton is a Grand Army man, and belongs to the Post in South Bethlehem. He called at M. C. Dobbins's cigar store, where friends provided him with a supper, and later they took him to Cooper's Hotel, where he was given lodging for the night and breakfast this morning.

Today he was assisted to South Bethlehem.

He did not have the appearance of a tramp, and was loth to apply for help, and only did so because he was obliged to.

Grace Church Mission Service

Rev. R. S. Barrett, D. D., the General Missioner of the Parochial Missions Society, will conduct a mission in Grace Church, beginning February 14 and continuing until the 24th.

The object of the services is to enlighten the conscience, and invigorate the spiritual life of those who attend them. They are not intended solely for Grace parishioners, but for the benefit of all who will come to them, and all will be welcome. Sermons will be preached and instruction given by the missioner at these services, on subjects of personal religion and Christian belief and practice.

The services will be as follows:

Sundays—An early celebration of the Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m.; morning prayer, etc., at 10; children's service at 3:30 p. m.; evening prayer at 7:45.

Other days—Morning prayer at 10; instruction in the Christian life at 10:30 a. m.; evening prayer at 4; mission service, sermon and "After Meeting" at 8 p. m.; Holy Communion on Wednesday and Friday at 7:30 a. m.

Made Way for the Vets.

Commander W. W. Coriell of Post 73, this city, who attended the G. A. R. Encampment at Trenton, says that the reception given the Veterans by the Legislators of the Capitol city far exceeded anything of previous years.

The free use of the State House and legislative halls was given without reserve, and adjournment of the Legislature was made while the delegation from the Encampment was present.

Hot Springs of Plainfield.

Cedar brook, running through James E. Martine's property, is not frozen over, neither is a pond on his premises. A vapor arises from the brook, and from the pond, but neither is frozen. The cause is said to be because both are running spring water.

An Indoor Cycle.

An addition to the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium will probably be a stationary bicycle for exercising the muscles of the legs and the arms.

FREAKS OF NATURE.

MADE SO BY THE GRAFTING AND SPLICING PROCESS.

Dr. Born Makes Playthings of Tadpoles. He Cuts Them Up and Destroys Their Individuality by Giving Them Other Bodies to Grow Up With.

One of the most startling pieces of scientific intelligence has recently come before the public, masquerading in the staid garb of a matter-of-fact paper read before a German scientist society. It is a description of a series of experiments by Dr. C. Born, but it reads like an extract from the laboratory notebook of a mediaeval wizard.

Dr. Born has been carving up living creatures into bits and piecing the bits together in all sorts of ways. This, of course, is easy enough. The late P. T. Barnum was a pioneer in the art when he pieced together his celebrated mermaid with a monkey's body and a fish's tail. Dr. Born, however, can not only go him one step better, but he makes that step across the widest chasm in nature—the gap that separates death from life—the abyss between a pulsating, wriggling growing creature and a lump of flesh fast becoming putrid.

He not only pieces his bits together, but actually makes them live and grow, thus producing things with tails growing out of their heads, things with two tails and no head or with two heads and no tail things with two hearts and things with no hearts at all—enough to make the astonished beholder flee at once to his home and sign the pledge in an agony of remorse.

The creatures that Dr. Born has succeeded in patching together in this marvellous way are tadpoles and allied forms or amphibians—frogs, toads and the like—in the larval or undeveloped stage, when they are half flesh and half reptile.

This is as far as he has gone yet, but then he has only made a start. When he gets his hand in well there is no telling how far he may go, and the sanguine imagination refuses to allow its horizon to be hemmed in by a tadpole. It expands far beyond the Reptilia and ascends to mammals, and even unto the human family itself. Why not?

Tadpoles show such a wonderful ability to heal wounds and such unequaled energy of growth that the first hesitating blundering experiments are naturally made with them. But men can heal as well as tadpoles, and the human frame can take to itself bits of foreign tissue, too—witness the wonderful surgical transplantations of recent years!

This is how Dr. Born was led to make these experiments:

He was trying to see how far he could carry the wonderful power of regeneration shown by these larval amphibians and found that when one was cut in two the wounded surfaces soon became covered with skins and the pieces lived separately for eight days.

Curiously enough, he had the best success, not with two pieces that, when put together, would form a normal tadpole—that is, with the head of one, and the tail of another—but with two tail pieces. These experiments succeeded not with only two individuals of the same species, but also with those of different species, different genera, or even different families. He thus produced a monstrosity that was half frog and half toad. None of these lived to complete its metamorphosis from the larval stage into that of the full grown animal, but there seemed to be no reason why, with sufficient pains, they should not be made to do so.

Lest any one should suppose that the union was a mere growing together of the outside skin, Dr. Born dissected many of his productions, and established the fact that the entire tissue had grown into one so that the resulting creature was a physiological unit.

Startling as this discovery may seem, it is yet consistent with a principle pointed out by Darwin, but whose significance has not yet been fully realized by the scientific world. This principle is that nature does not oppose the growing together of two living substances not only of the same family but of different families.

We see every day a tree of one kind grafted upon another. Many varieties of luscious fruits have thus been artificially produced. You can tone down the acidity of a pear by grafting upon the tree when young a slip of a peach or plum tree.

In the animal kingdom the results of such experiments are even more surprising. Thus a mule was invented. Mules are a unique species. They were never seen until somebody crossed the horse and donkey families.

Theodore Roosevelt, in his book, "Hunting Trips of a Ranchman," mentions an extraordinary dog which was one of the household at his ranch in the Bad Lands. This dog was half dog and half wolf. In the daytime he was a dog, barking like other dogs; but at night he was a wolf, and he gave the true howl of the wolf on the still, northwestern plains.

These are the results of cross-breeding. They show that different species and different families can be ingrafted, the one upon the other and that nature is favorable to the process.

Now comes Dr. Born to prove that, while yet alive, living animal organisms can be spliced. This, however, is merely an advance upon what surgery has done in pumping the blood of one man into the veins of another, or in grafting the skin from one person to another, where as everybody knows, it grows and remains healthy.

To Make Sure.

Dashway—You believe in the efficacy of prayer, uncle. But suppose a chicken from your neighbor's yard should hop by your kitchen door and you should get down on your knees and pray for that chicken to enter, do you think your prayer would be answered?

Uncle Ebony—Mos' sartinly do, sah. But in dat case, sah, I should sprinkle a few grains of corn on the step.—Life.

Kansas's New Senator.

Mr. Baker is a fairly good lawyer and an honest man. He is always being hit unexpectedly. When Tom Thurston shot at Big Anthony on the streets of Leavenworth, the bullet hit Lucien Baker, who happened along at just the right time, as he did in the Republican caucus at Topeka last night.—Atchison Globe.

The Alternative.

Bandmaster—A leedle something for dot leedle Sherman band, please.

Householder—Why, you have not played yet, have you?

Bandmaster—Nein; but we vill if we don'd vas [illegible]—Judge.

DRAMA AND OPERA.

A SURFEIT OF FOREIGN PLAYS AND FOREIGN ACTORS IN NEW YORK.

Herbert Beerbohm Tree Makes a Favorable Impression. Fanny Davenport May Have a Theater of Her Own in the Ill Fated Casino. Grand Opera near Its End.

The London actor, Herbert Beerbohm Tree, made his American debut at Abbey's Theatre last week. He was greeted by an audience which, having welcomed him with hearty applause, settled down at once into a judicial attitude toward him, as though determined to ignore his fame and judge independently of his merits. An Anglomaniac element was present, it is true, and was eager to accept the English celebrity without hesitancy or discrimination, but critics, amateur and professional, were predominant in the assemblage, for there was no other new thing at the theaters to distract the attention of the first-night contingent. To these people, Mr. Tree proved his ability. His acting made no profound impression, and it may, indeed, have disappointed more of the observers than it satisfied, but it went far to demonstrate the justifiability of his reputation as a versatile depictor of character. It is all but certain that when he has appeared in a number of roles his flexibility of talent will have won for him a more positive meed of approval. Mr. Tree's first public bow in this country was made in the character of Gringoire, that French tatterdemalion poet and minstrel who makes and sings songs against Louis XI. We have had English versions of Theodore de Banville's short play before. The one used in this instance, entitled "The Ballad Monger," is worded by Walter Besant and Walter Herries Pollock. The prior actors in the piece here have been the late Lawrence Barrett in English and Constant Coquelin in French. Mr. Tree was a little like both of them. He had some of the declamatory force of Mr. Barrett and some of the reckless air of M. Coquelin, added to which he was excellently picturesque in pose and motion. He delivered the poems, especially "The Orchard of the King," with a good elocutionary method, with a proper sentimentality, and with a romantic aspect. Thus he introduced himself pleasantly, and raised the expectation of something more solidly and substantially admirable to come. Mr. Tree will stay a month in this city, and change his roles frequently, in order to prove to us that he really is the versatile artist which transatlantic fame declares him to be. He brings along a full company and a complete equipment of scenery, and so we shall get a rapid round of genuine London theatrical entertainments. No doubt culture and fashion will equally pay attention to Mr Tree.

Eleven plays of foreign make, counting in the three to be used by Beerbohm Tree, and leaving out two that have been thoroughly Americanized, are to be performed in New York this week, as against fourteen that are American. In the lead among the important works, by priority of production here, is "The Masqueraders," which is not to be displaced at the Empire this season.

Fanny Davenport will appear in "Gismonda" at the Fifth Avenue until the end of February, her time having been extended. That proves the substantial character of the drama's success. Miss Davenport will lease and manage the Casino, if the plan to turn that house over to vaudeville falls through. In that case she would lower the auditorium to the ground, thus gaining convenience and more room. She would act in some of the plays produced, and not in others.

Kathryn Kidder, another actress prospering in a Sardou play, "Madame Sans Gene," at the Broadway, is something of a manager, too, as she is a partner with Augustus Pitou in the venture. It is understood that several managers made rich offers to her for the Napoleonic comedy after she had purchased it for America, but she was determined to have a personal share in its triumph, if it should make one—and it has. It is holding a place among the best of the Broadway entertainments.

The dramatic version of the legend of Faust has been used by Lewis Morrison on tours during a few years past. This "Faust" gets into New York at the Grand Opera House. It keeps a red light on Mephistopheles throughout his deviltry with Faust and Marguerite, and has been accepted elsewhere as a thrilling play. Mr. Morrison enacts the Satanic plotter and tempter. He is a sound and virile actor of the legitimate class.

The admirable cast of "The Fatal Card," at Palmer's, is the means of making refined audiences accept and enjoy the excessively melodramatic scenes of that piece. The episode of the infernal machine's explosion, as presented with actors of the first grade, thrills Broadway audiences quite as thoroughly as Bowery assemblages are affected by similar things clumsily done. The change to "Trilby," which Manager Palmer is to make, will be a far departure. The Potter dramatization of the Du Maurier novel has gone into rehearsal.

There will be but two weeks more of the opera season, and the programme announced for this week is made up of works which have proved their popularity. The enthusiasm which always marks the close of the opera season set in at the "Faust" matinee two weeks ago, and has continued ever since, with, of course, the moderation in intensity which emphasizes the difference between a matinee and an evening performance. For several weeks the opera house has been so crowded at the matinees that the women have stood three or four deep at the rear of the orchestra seats. The particular enthusiasm of such an audience is of course centered on Jean de Reszke, although at the last "Faust" matinee Sig. Campanari, who sang Valentine, and acted the death scene splendidly, came in for six recalls. But the applause for anybody else is only incidental to the demonstration over the tenor. As soon as the curtain falls, women from all parts of the house rush through the corridors to the right-hand corner of the auditorium, toward the door through which the singers appear on the stage for the encores. By the time they have reappeared this corner holds a compact, mass of women cheering and applauding with as much strength as they are capable of exerting. The diplomatic Jean sweeps the crowd with one killing glance, and when he has finally disappeared every woman within reach feels that part of it was intended for her.

LINWARD.

Mrs. Green—A woman has to marry a man to find him out.

Mr. G.—Then she finds him out a good deal, doesn't she?—Detroit Free Press.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.
A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Lewis Bond has given up his position with I. H. Boehm.

Joseph B. Hall and family of Washington avenue will move April 1 to Grove street.

The engagement is announced of Benjamin Webster and Miss Ella Mirex of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer J. Garretson will commence housekeeping April 1, residing in Manning's flats, West Front street.

Henry Hansen of this city has rented the new house on Johnston avenue, belonging to John H. Staats, into which he will move about April 1.

Mr. and Mrs. James A. Love have hired a suite of rooms in Voehl's new building on East Front street, and will commence housekeeping April 1.

Dr. P. J. Zeglio, who purchased, last Fall, the Dr. Craig property, corner of Somerset and Pearl streets, intends making extensive alterations to the house before taking possession April 1.

Aunt Hetty Johnson, the aged mother of Andrew W. Johnson of 129 Duer street, is very ill at the home of her son Russell Johnson in New York. Pneumonia is her illness, and there is but little hope of her recovery.

Dr. Charles R. Thiers is making preparations to move from his present residence on Somerset street to 13 and 15 Grove street, the house formerly occupied by Dr. G. M. Field. Dr. Thiers expects to be settled in his new home March 1.

A. M. Frazee, Dr. Adams and Wm. T. Kirk represented Plainfield at the Palestine Commandery ball in Madison Square Garden Thursday evening. Wm. Sebring went to New York with the intention of going to the ball, but the storm prevented. Mr. Frazee returned at 9:15 last evening.

DEATH OF J. AUG. HINCHMAN.

He Was a Prominent Figure in Hotel Netherwood Life.

Col. J. Augustus Hinchman died suddenly of apoplexy Friday morning at Van Court Inn, Roselle, where he had been spending the Winter. He was at the head of the Bureau of Information of the Metropolitan Telephone Company, 18 Cortlandt street, New York, and was well-known among the business men throughout the city. He was born in Morris County, this State, 68 years ago. In 1850 he went to California, and was for several years Assistant Postmaster of San Francisco. He returned East in 1862 to accept a position with the Western Union Telegraph Company in New York city. Later he became chief clerk to Postmaster James. For the past three years he had been connected with the Metropolitan Telephone Company. For several seasons he was prominent in the social events of Hotel Netherwood, and was a valued Summer-resort correspondent of The Daily Press.

The Patient Blind Hymn-Writer.

(From The Elizabeth Journal.)

Few hymns by modern writers have been sung more frequently or more fervently than those of Fanny J. Crosby. There is hardly a modern Sunday-school hymn book that does not contain several beautiful hymns of her writing. In almost every house in the land, and in every Sunday-school, her hymns are sung. Yet it is not universally known that this gifted lady is blind, and that in addition to writing hymns she does a great deal of other Sunday-school work. She recently addressed large audiences in Plainfield, speaking for nearly an hour in one church. She has been blind since her childhood, but does not now consider it a privation, since her faculties are quickened in many other ways as if in part compensation.

Cedar Brook Hospitality.

The postman who braved snowdrifts and cold to deliver the mail at Cedar Brook Farm homestead instead of leaving it at the mail box at the entrance, was rewarded by a little hot collation by the farmer occupants.

Treatment of Eczema and Salt Rheum

These two complaints are so tenacious that the readers of The Press should know of the success obtained by using Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. Where all other treatments have failed, it has made a complete cure.

Perhaps no more horrible case of Salt Rheum was ever reported than that of Wilbur L. Hale, quartermaster, Pratt Post, G. A. R., Rondout, N. Y. Several physicians utterly failed to render him any relief; finally one of the physicians suggested that Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy be tried, and steady improvement followed its use, and a permanent cure resulted.

It is used with similar success in cases of scrofula, nervousness, kidney and liver complaints, and in all diseases brought about by bad blood and [illegible]

IN THE DEEP, DEEP SEA.

Fishes that Are Killed by Falling Up from Its Profound Depths.

At the monthly meeting of the Society of Natural Science of Hartfor, Prof. H. W. Conn of Wesleyan University delivered an interesting lecture on the "Bottom of the Sea."

Prof. Conn had a large number of instructive views of apparatus used in sounding and dredging, as well as photographs of many of the unspeakable creatures that the dredges has brought up. There is no sensible amount of light at a greater depth than 300 or 400 feet, the most sensitive photographic plates being unaffected even by prolonged exposure. The fishes are therefore obliged to hunt their food by the aid of dark lanterns, as Prof. Conn expressed it; in other words, they are phosphorescent, and see by the aid of the light that they themselves emit.

One of the great difficulties of deep-sea exploration is that it takes about all day to throw out one dredge and haul it up again, even although the line is worked by steam power. The dredges used until recently had a habit of becoming tangled immediately upon being thrown overboard, so that the day was entirely wasted. The great pressure at the bottom of the sea (from three to six tons on a square inch) will crush glass to a fine powder, so that it has been difficult to obtain good measures of the temperature in the deeper parts. The professor described an ingenious thermo-electric apparatus by means of which this difficulty has been overcome.

The greater part of the bottom of the ocean consists of red mud and globigerina ooze, the dead shells of a minute foraminiferous creature, so abundant that its shells make up a big part of the ocean floor. There is no life below three miles. In speaking of some of the fishes that inhabit the lower depths, the Professor said that they often "fall upward" to the surface and are killed by the reduction of pressure. The air in their swimming bladders, he explained, is compressed by the pressure of the ocean into very small space. When the fish is so unwise as to leave its native haunts to explore regions half a mile or so above him, the diminution in pressure causes the air to expand, and the fish become so buoyant that he cannot swim back again, and the further he rises the worse his plight becomes; and after a time he reaches the surface, by which time the expansion of the air has become so great that the fish is often literally blown to pieces, and is found floating about in this condition.

The Professor said that in the lower depths of the sea the quiet is so profound that in comparison with it the most barren deserts on the surface of the earth are scenes of the greatest activity; for on the desert there are variation in wind and in temperature, and alternations of day and night, while in the great depths of the ocean there is no life, there are no currents, the temperature is uniformly 33 degrees year in and year out, and night reigns perpetually. The surface of the ocean is the poet's favorite metaphor for unrest; but there is nothing so quiet and changeless as its profoundest depths.—Hartford Times.

Menaced by a Waterspout.

Capt. Echoff, commanding the Dutch tank steamship, La Hesbaye, from Antwerp, tells of a thrilling escape from being engulfed in the centre of a tremendous waterspout, which, during the prevalence of a terrific snow storm on the afternoon of the 21st inst., shot under her stern.

The huge and destructive water spiral by reason of the condition of the atmosphere, was not seen until it was almost on board the ship, although the deafening noise of its approach was heard fully three minutes before it was seen. Had it struck the vessel, as it would but for the prompt manoeuvring of the ship by her officers, none would have been spared to relate the experience. All on board for a time were panic stricken, and those who were on deck were drenched through and through by flying spindrift.

In speaking of the waterspout Capt. Echoff said that at the time it passed under the vessel's stern a dense and blinding snow storm was raging, and it was almost impossible to see the ship's bow from the bridge. The seas were rough and their washing up against the vessel caused the spindrift to fly in all directions. Dead ahead the deafening noise of the rapid approach of this phenomenon was heard, and in a few minutes it appeared a little on the port side of the ship. It was a huge formation fully a hundred feet in width through the centre, and had it struck the ship she would have been rent asunder.—Philadelphia Press.

Caprices of a Princess.

Although the Princess of Wales has not yet reached the throne, she is credited with some queenly caprices. When she travels a favorite white cat must always go with her, and another indispensable accompaniment is an assortment of little china animals, such as can be had in any toy shop. This latter necessity means no little trouble to her attendants as she never permits her room to be dismantled until the last moment, and the packing of the fragile pets has been the means of losing more than one train.

Jersey Ladies' High Hats.

Mr. Duncan of Newark has introduced a bill in the New Jersey Legislature which is intended to prevent women from wearing high hats in theatres or other public halls, at entertainments where an admission fee is charged, and where an unobstructive view is necessary. The penalty is to be summary ejection, and, on conviction before a court, a fine of $10. The bill was referred to the Committee on Miscellaneous Business.

We'll Get There.

Though the night be dark and the road be long,
We'll get to the end bimeby!
We'll rest in vales where the roses [illegible]
And the birds will break into sweetest song—
We'll get to the end bimeby!

Though the storm may rave and the ship be tossed,
We'll get to the end bimeby!
The roughest sea will be safely crossed,
The light will shine for the sailor lost—
We'll get to the end bimeby!
—Atlanta Constitution.

Denied.

Colonel—Are you one of the "advanced" women, Miss Passe?

Miss P. (haughtily)—Indeed I am not. I was 23 last birthday.

Husband—The most beautiful and accomplished women sometimes have the most commonplace husbands.

Wife—Oh, go along! You are such a [illegible]

TIRES OF HIS HOBBY.

A 'Millionaire's Peculiar Freak Will Go For a Song.

The New York Herald says that in a few days the house No. [illegible] Fifth avenue, which millionaire William Pickhardt, a wholesale dealer in chemicals, has been building for nearly fifteen years, will be sold at auction, with its costly stables.

The house is a four story brownstone one, with a handsome entrance and very large windows. In height the house is almost as tall as a downtown seven story office building. It has never had a tenant. Fifteen years ago Mr. Pickhardt determined to erect a home in proportion to his wealth, which would rival if not surpass, A. T. Stewart's mansion at 34th street and 5th avenue, which at that time was considered the acme of palatial residences. He purchased the ground at Seventy-fourth street and Fifth avenue, facing Central Park, and immediately sought a competition of English, German, and American architects for the plans of his new home.

The plans submitted by one of the Americans were accepted, and orders given to at once prepare the ground for the foundations. The question of cost was not to be considered. Each stone which went into the building was to be imported, and a special representative was sent to Germany to watch the stone quarried and cut to order.

When the foundations were laid work was suspended for a time, as the owner wanted to change the plans. In about a year work was resumed on the building and progressed rapidly until the first story had been erected. The walls were three and a half feet thick, and the rough raw edges of the stone gave the building a commercial appearance. Several changes were made and work resumed till three stories of the house had been built, when one day the owner of the house went to the architect and said there were some changes he wanted made and mentioned them. The architect replied that to make such changes the building would have to be torn down and built over again. After remonstrating with Mr. Pickhardt, who threatened to pull the building down himself and spend every dollar he owned rebuilding it to suit him, the architect withdrew and resigned his contract.

A contractor named Knaut was then engaged by Mr. Pickhardt. New and elaborate plans were drawn up by him for the mansion, which necessitated the demolishing of the two upper stories. Before Knaut's plans had been carried out he returned to Germany for a short vacation, but he died there shortly after his arrival.

On hearing of Knaut's death, Mr. Pickhardt remarked:

"It looks as though fate were against my home, but I'll not stop now, I'll try it again."

A third architect, an American, was engaged, and the building resumed. It proceeded very slowly on account of the frequent and important alterations insisted on by the owner. Finally, in 1889, when the walls were up and the roof was on, and little to do except finish the inside of the house, Mr. Pickhardt was dissatisfied with the result of his labors and expenditures, and said:

"The house isn't as I want it at all; it isn't what I intended it should be, and I'll never live in it, never! It has cost me already over $1,000,000, but that is not enough to ever make me live in such a house."

The only tenant the house has had since its erection is the watchman. A $50,000 organ which Mr. Pickhardt imported specially for his house nearly seven years ago has never been unpacked and is now lying in a storage warehouse.

Making Newspapers in Syria.

A learned Syrian traveller, at present enjoying a sojourn in Buffalo, said that the Syrian papers probably contained not the most distant allusion to the massacres in Armenia. After observing the ways of American newspapers he declared that the Yankee editor was in Paradise and didn't know it.

In Beyrout, said he, there is a censor, an officer of the Turkish Government, and to him must be submitted the first copy of every newspaper, and until he approves it not another one may be taken out of the pressroom. As there are some thirteen daily papers in Beyrout, it is easy to imagine what an inconvenience this is. It will not do to give the censor proof slips. He must see the entire sheet as it is intended for circulation. While the press waits the censor runs his eye over the journal. If there is a line of news which the Government would prefer not to have published, if there is a leader reflecting in the slightest degree upon the conduct of affairs in Constantinople, the censor draws his pencil through it, and the matter must come out.

In anticipation of such an occurrence, Syrian editors always keep in reserve several columns of matter in type. This is all most laudatory of the Grand Vizier, of all Turkish officialdom. It is carefully made up in portions of varying length, stickfuls, two-stickfuls, half columns, columns and squibs. If the censor orders part of the first forms out, these tales of fulsome flattery are immediately substituted, a fresh impression is taken, the censor approves, and the presses are started up.—Buffalo Courier.

The Barber Meant Well.

'I don't object to religion or its attendant features unless my life is endangered by it,' remarked the club kicker yesterday, as he fished a piece of lemon peel out of the bottom of his glass. As nobody paid any attention to this rather irrevalent remark, he continued:

"You see, my barber was shaving me the other day and I was almost in a doze when he had finished lathering my face. He hadn't said a word during this operation, but suddenly he leaned over with his razor poised just over my jugular vein, and hissed in my ear:

"'Are you prepared to die?'

"Well, frankly, I wasn't, and I didn't propose to die in that way, at any rate. So I gave him a shove, sprang out of the chair, and made a bolt for the street. As my face was full of lather, one of the other barbers followed me to see what was the matter, and caught up with me just outside the door, when he explained. Do you suppose that barber had designs upon my life? Not a bit of it. He was merely concerned about the welfare of my soul. I heard that he had gotten religious, and had adopted this rather startling mode of spreading the Gospel."—Phil. Record.

Anti-Crisis In Persia.

The Sha, of Persia, is said to drink a bottle of brandy a day. This may or may not account for the fact that we never [illegible]

CAN ANTS TALK!

The Precocious Insects of Merry England Evidently Can.

A correspondent of the London Quiver says:

I was one day standing in my garden near the trunk of an old willow tree, up which a scattered line of ants was crawling. After a time I observed an occasional straggler coming down in an opposite direction. Here and there a couple of ants, ascending and descending, happened to meet, but there was no stoppage and no talk. Presently, at about five feet from the ground I smeared a little hollow in the trunk with a large spoonful of thick treacle, to see how long it would remain undiscovered.

I then went away for a short time, and on my return found about a dozen ants busily feasting on the treasure. A minute or two later one of the feasters came slowly down the trunk with heavy feet, and when near the ground met a friend, whom he suddenly arrested on his way up, and with his antennæ, which he plied vigorously, held a good talk. What was said I know not, but the friend knew, and thereupon marched steadily on up the tree to the newly-found treasure. Meanwhile the bearer of the good tidings made his own way quickly back to the nest, a few yards off in the grass, to which I watched him. He was soon lost to view, but, beyond all doubt, he soon spread the news of treasure trove throughout the colony.

Within half an hour of that time a long line of hungry ants was marching direct to the tree, making straight for the feast, remaining there for a time, and then returning to the nest in another line on the other side of the willow. This procession of ascending and descending termites went on for some hours, in fact until dusk, when the numbers of advancing guests grew less and less, and finally ceased. Before it was dark not a single ant was to be seen, though early the next morning a fresh band of adventurers set out in the same fashion, coming and going all day until every morsel of the sweetness had disappeared.

Contrasts.

I. Lady (on the pavement, to her husband)—Look at the splendid carriage Councillor A—— and his lady are driving about in. I only wish we were as lucky!

Privy-Councillor's Wife (to her spouse)—I am getting quite ashamed of this old coach. Look how the people stand still and look at us with contempt. If you don't wish to drive me to despair, you must buy a new turnout.

II. Woodchopper—Here I've to chop firewood for that rich property owner, while he sits doing nothing the livelong day. I'd give anything to change places with him for one week.

Property Owner—I am the unhappiest man in the world, or I am much mistaken. It doesn't look as if I should ever get well again. The doctor says I ought to work. To be sure, if I had a strong constitution like that woodcutter outside there, I would chop wood from morning till night, and be as happy as the day is long.

III. Briefless Barrister—When I see His Excellency overwhelmed with honors and distinctions on the occasions of his jubilee, I feel as if I could burst. How miserable to pass through life unnoticed and uncared for!

Prime Minister—I would gladly forfeit all these distinctions if for one short year I might be young once more like that young lawyer, for instance, who is carrying on an animated conversation with his fair companion at the other end of the table.

IV. Young Man—There goes Lieutenant N—— with his wife, the loveliest and most amiable creature I ever set eyes on. Aye, these lieutenants always have the pick. Ah! poor me!

Lieutenant N—— (to his wife)—It will perhaps be best for us to part. You have made me wretched enough. I'd rather have wedded the poorest and plainest girl in creation than put up with such a vixen as you are!—Humoristiche Blatter.

Brother Jones Cracks a Chestnut.

An amusing incident occurred at the close of Sam Jones's sermon at Pulaski the other day. Stepping down from the pulpit and looking solemnly over the audience, the revivalist said:

"I want all the women in this crowd who have not spoken a harsh word or harbored an unkind thought towards their husbands for a mouth past to stand up."

One old woman, apparently on the shady side of sixty, stood up.

"Come forward and give me your hand," said the preacher.

The woman did so; whereupon Jones said:

"Now turn around and let the audience see the best looking woman in the country."

After taking her seat the revivalist addressed the men:

"Now I want all the men in this crowd who have not spoken a harsh word or harbored an unkind thought towards their wives for a month past to stand up."

Twenty-seven big, stapping fellows hopped out of the audience with alacrity.

"Come forward and give me your hands, my dear boys."

Jones gave each one a vigorous shake, after which he ranged all of them side by side in front of the pulpit and facing the audience. He looked them over carefully and solemnly, and then, turning around to the audience, he said:

"I want you all to take a good look at the twenty-seven biggest liars in the State of Tennessee."—Argonaut.

Exceptionally Honored.

A good old Methodist lady attending service in a Methodist Episcopal church one Sunday became happy under the preaching of the Word, and ejaculated "Glory!"

She was admonished to keep quiet by two of the brethren and nodded assent, but soon becoming forgetful responded, "Hallelujah!"

The brethren again called her attention to the annoyance and told her that if she did not keep quiet they would be compelled to remove her.

The sermon proceeded and the old lady, becoming very happy and forgetful of her surroundings, shouted out:

"Glory to God!"

This was too much for the brethren, who tried to lead her out; but she refused to walk, so they carried her. On the way she said:

"I am honored above my Master, for while he was carried by an ass, I am carried by two."—Philadelphia Record.

Love and reason are like the sun and moon—the one cannot rise before the [illegible]

SUNDAY IN TORONTO.

Everything Except Preaching is Illegal and the Law is Enforced Rigidly.

"Toronto is probably the tightest tied-up town on this continent on Sundays," said a traveller, as he called attention to the news that a Toronto newspaper publisher had been fined for printing an edition of his paper to give the news of a big Saturday night fire.

"Connecticut's old blue laws are mild compared with the modern ordinances of the second city in Canada. Every kind of business except, preaching, must suspend absolutely on Sunday, and about the only legal thing a citizen can do is to go to church, and he must be careful to go there in legal fashion.

"Street cars, omnibuses, cabs, and all public conveyances stop running Sundays, and it is against the law to hire a rig at a livery stable. The only way to get around is to walk, and the people wearily plod out to the city's beautiful park and are so tired when they get there they are unable to walk about in it and appreciate its attractions. I don't know if its against the law for a man to use his own carriage on the streets Sundays, but I don't remember seeing any vehicles about during many Sundays I have been there. Everybody walks. Maybe its against the law to run; I would not be surprised.

"The saloons, of course, are closed tight and totally. They close up early Saturday night—about 8 o'clock, I believe, in order to remove temptation from the path of the workingman, just in possession of his wages—and remain closed until Monday morning. There are no side doors. All the stores are closed, too, and it is impossible to buy a cigar or a stick of candy on Sundays.

"Sunday newspapers, of course, are not allowed. Nor alone this, but it is against the law to buy or sell a copy of Saturday night's paper on Sunday. A great many American newspapers are subscribed for in Toronto, but none are delivered on Sundays, and you get two newspapers on Monday morning. Maybe Toronto's Sunday closing laws are no stricter than those of some cities this side the line, but they are rigidly enforced, and Toronto is the driest and dullest town on this continent on Sunday."

HE GOT HIS PAY.

An Odd Coincidence That Occurred Between Borrower and Lender.

"Here is one of the odd coincidences of life," said my friend Williams. "Some time ago an acquaintance came to me and told me that he was in great need of $15, and at considerable trouble to myself I let him have it. He promised to return it in a few days.

"When three weeks had elapsed I mentioned the matter to him, casually, and he was profusely apologetic—would send it to me the following day, sure. It did not come, though, nor did I get any message from him. About two weeks after that I met him. He declared it was a shame I hadn't got my money, and vowed he wouldn't let another day pass without paying me.

"It went along, then, for a week or ten days, and, as my expenses were very heavy, I was considerably embarrassed, and needed the money badly. One night when I was feeling particularly discouraged, I sat down and wrote him a note. I said:

"'My dear sir—About six weeks ago I loaned you $15. Lest the paying it should occasion you any inconvenience, allow me to hereby make you a present of the money.'

"That will bring it if anything will, thought I. Judge of my surprise when by the next morning's mail I received a letter from the man, enclosing the $15. By the same mail exactly he must have received mine making him a present of it, and by the dates, both letters were evidently written at about the same hour."

NORTHERN INDUSTRIES GO SOUTH.

New England May Lose Its Prestige for Various Reasons.

A Boston journal publishes an interview with Mr. T. Jefferson Coolidge, the treasurer of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, on the subject of the removal of mills from New England to the South. Labor at the South, he declares, is lower than in the North, the mills are nearer the cottonfields, and there is a large saving in freight charges. Again, Southern railroads take cotton as fifth-class freight, while Northern ones take it as second and third class. Then, coal in New England costs $4.50 a ton, while in the South it does not cost more than $1.50.

It appears to be the opinion of Mr. Coolidge that, for the reasons which he gives, the number of Southern mills will continue to increase. He furnishes also another reason to which very little attention has been paid so far, but which certainly deserves a prominent place as one of the most important considerations in determining the course of our manufactures. Employers in the South are not hampered by the restrictions established by trade unions. They are not menaced by strikes. They are not interfered with by legislation advocated or secured by labor agitators; and the spectacle of the walking delegate or the strike manager is not constantly present before their eyes. Commercial business is permitted in Southern States to run in the ordinary channels established by the law of supply and demand; and many New England manufacturers, harassed by the artificial conditions established by some New England Legislatures, are betaking themselves to the South. Thus there has been of late a very marked increase in the number of mills and factories in that quarter.

Fire-horse Flash's Joke.

A horse in the Marion, Ind., Fire Department displayed rare intelligence this week. Flash is a sorrel of powerful build and full of playful tricks. Tuesday Flash grew tired of standing in his stall, and by some means opened the doors, releasing himself and mate. He then went to the fire-alarm switch board, and with his mouth turned the key, sounding the alarm. Both horses then backed under the harness, ready for the usual run. The firemen were about to drive out when the trick was discovered. The horses looked at each other in a knowing way, evidently enjoying the joke they had perpetrated on the astonished firemen.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

What Henry Clay Did With His Razor.

James Waddel of Jackson, Washington County, N. Y., exhibited a razor in an excellent state of preservation which was owned by Henry Clay about 1836. The instrument shows the name of its former owner finely engraved on the handle. It was given by the master to his slave, and descended to the present owner.—Troy Press.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.

From the New York Sun of February [illegible].

Interesting Use of Drugs in This Form—"Instead of Compounding [illegible] Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, greatly extended in its application within the last four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Compare physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or [illegible] chests a variety of drugs, R powders, potions, lotions, [illegible] what not. Such physicians [illegible] up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of [illegible] tends more and more toward [illegible] modern physicians to the methods of [illegible] predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years I ago, and the use of [illegible] in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually a variety of drugs and prescriptions [illegible] pared was P extended [illegible] It includes thousands of [illegible] pounds. Any physician [illegible] now have [illegible] tion of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least [illegible] tablets shall be ordered. Many prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid [illegible] are thus used by [illegible] A ing inert material [illegible] mixture, just as [illegible] remedies are prepared in the form of [illegible] pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing other drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with [illegible] of individual N [illegible] and to combine one [illegible] prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets [illegible] prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and [illegible] ing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of S taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of [illegible] applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of this change in practice through the [illegible] sening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for them [illegible] plied to his patients. [illegible] the use T of the tablet [illegible] greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and A perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very B slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside of the medical U profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled L and careful apothecaries and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compound." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else E [illegible] are moderately [illegible] some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard [illegible] S cines. So enormous is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S, are the initials of the ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to • make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 SPRUCE ST., NEW YORK.

MEN WANTED [illegible]

WASHINGTON NEWS.

THE FINANCIAL PROBLEM WHICH IS TROUBLING OUR STATESMEN.

Indications that the Democrats Will Not Follow the President's Lead. Foreign Views of Difficulties. American Honor Discredited.

The speech of Mr. Joseph C. Sibley, the Democratic representative from the Twenty-sixth Pennsylvania district, delivered in the House, January 8, and "withheld for revision," now appears in the official record. It is preceded by a caption and a poetic contribution, as follows:

"Money has been defined as the wheels of commerce. We have taken away one-half the wheels and are engaged in guessing why commerce moves so slowly.

"We have read in the lore of long ago
That a symbol of our life below
Is a boat with palsied men to row,
And a blind man at the rudder."

The alliterative passage in the speech which excited so much comment at the time of its delivery appears in the revised version as follows:

"Mr. Chairman—If I have read the Constitution of the United States correctly, it defines the position and duties of the Chief Executive and the powers and duties of membership of the House; and I tell you if ever a rebuke was needed to one who has trampled down the prerogatives of the people, it is needed to-day to that man who has used his influence, or attempted to use it, to create himself the sole governing power of this nation. [Applause on the Democratic side.] It has come to a time when to be the government of this people requires something more than a combination of brains, belly, and brass. [Renewed applause.] The members of this House have duties to perform, rights to be respected, and are answerable to their own consciences, to their own people, and not to the President, and in the discharge of those duties are not to be awed into a violation of duty by an exercise of executive powers outside his constitutional prerogatives."

The speech is accompanied by voluminous addenda, consisting of "extracts from writings and speeches of dead and living statesmen, political economists, philosophers, and patriots, relative to the effect of a shrinking volume of currency upon the prosperity of the country."

All attempts to bring the Democratic party together in support of President Cleveland's financial recommendations, or any financial bill whatever, have failed, and it is now apparent, even to the most sanguine, that there will be no financial legislation at this session of Congress. The Administration men in the House are still hopeful, or they profess to be, that some proposition can be patched up that can get a majority, but in the Senate all hope has been abandoned. The attitude of the Republicans in the present emergency has given rise to the report that if an extra session is called they will not favor the enactment of legislation affecting the currency, but will pass an act merely increasing tariff duties, and thus putting money into the Treasury. The two or three speeches which have been made by Mr. Reed during the present session indicate that this is the popular Republican policy. He has held all along that all that is necessary to relieve the financial situation is to have the receipts of the Treasury exceed the expenditures.

The financial crisis in the United States is regarded as the gravest feature of the general monetary situation in London and in all European business centres. A careful canvass of representative London opinion yields results which deserve serious consideration. It may be said at once that Mr. Cleveland's message failed to produce any effect in monetary circles in London. This was chiefly because the message was everywhere accompanied by the announcement that there was hardly any possibility of its recommendations becoming law in the present Congress. The President's ideas are approved by most London bankers. The only important criticism was a charge of inconsistency, wherein the President declares that all money should rank alike, and later suggests that interest on the bonds should be payable only in gold. The opinion of London bankers with American connections regarding the causes of the enormous transfers of gold to Europe is highly significant. All agree that Englishmen have stopped making fresh American investments. The dividends and interest from American securities, which are usually reinvested in that country, must now be paid in cash. This, of course, can only partially account for the flow of gold. A more important explanation is found in the general discrediting of American finances, public and private, which has undoubtedly taken place throughout Europe. This has caused a great change in the manner of conducting commercial business within a few months. European exporters, until recently sent their goods to America on six months' credit. A large proportion is now demanded in cash. The effect of this, especially with the increased foreign trade under the new tariff, has been a tremendous, extra, but temporary drain upon American treasuries. London bankers believe the new practice has become so extensive that it will account for a much greater movement of gold than has yet occurred. When confidence is restored and old methods are resumed, there will be another flood in the opposite direction.

ROGER LEWIS.

His Will on a Postal Card.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger says: Register Smithers yesterday issued letters of administration, with a will annexed, on the estate of Edward F. Vansciver, who committed suicide in the county prison on Jan. 9. His personal effects were valued at $300. The testamentary writing which was admitted to probate was a postal card addressed to "Louis Sacks, 232 East Cambria street, Philadelphia, Pa.," containing the following words:

"Phila., Jan. 9, 1894.—Mr. Sacks, take everything from the prison. Everything is yours. Yours truly.

E. F. VANSCIVER.

"Heartsick."

Sugar for Sugar.

"We don't want any poetry," said the editor, haughtily.

"I know it," replied the pretty girl, just as haughtily. "This isn't poetry. It's some doggerel that my 8-year-old brother composed. After reading what you publish I shouldn't have thought of offering you poetry."

And the editor really felt relieved when she made her exit and slammed the door.—Washington Star.

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

THEY ARE VERY SHOWY AND ARE ALSO VERY EXTRAVAGANT.

The Sleeve Remains the Sensation, and It Continues to Take New Shapes. Velvet Blouses are popular. Plain Skirts are also Fashionable.

Fashions in midwinter are not remarkable for new ideas or suggestive indications of the coming modes, but there is a spirit of unrest about them which brings many contradictions as to the changes we may expect. One authority asserts that the prospective skirts are to be made entirely without the haircloth lining and popular godet plaits, and that the sleeves are to be visibly reduced in size, while another positively assures us that the skirts are to be much fuller, stiffened and plaited to stand out well from the waist with the effect of a bustle, and sleeves more balloon-like than ever. But whatever may be in prospect, there is no question as to the immediate condition of fulness, and we may continue to model our gowns after the approved style of the day.

The skirts still vary in width between five and eight yards around at the bottom and the sleeve is constantly developing a new variety. The latest evening sleeve is simply a large bow of satin, velvet or ribbon about six inches wide, arranged high on the shoulder, with one large loop falling each way, and a knot or rosette in the middle. Satin loops are made double, and loops of velvet are lined with silk, while ribbon is tied in a bow with ends. A soft drapery of satin around the armhole is caught close at the top, and from this a frill of spangled lace falling down nearly to the elbow, is another pretty fancy. Sleeves are cut so that all the fulness comes from underneath instead of at the top of the arm, and again, to show the outline of the arm, at the inside, with the fulness falling at the back. The broad, sloping effect is given to the shoulders by wide, plain epaulets and fan plaitings of satin or velvet, edged with lace, as shown.

Blouses of velvet in a different color from the skirt are a very popular style in Paris. They are made quite plain, and worn with crepon, smooth cloth and silk skirts.

There is no disputing the fact that this is an extravagant period of dress, but there is such an endless variety in materials and ideas for using them that the fashions in vogue are compatible with small expense as well as large. Plain skirts are quite as fashionable as those which are trimmed elaborately with fur and jet, and at the moment nothing is more popular for dress trimming than black satin ribbon, which is not wildly extravagant even if many yards are required. A pretty idea for a colored crepon or plain woolen goods is to arrange bows of black satin ribbon five inches wide, with steel buckles in the centre, at intervals all around the bottom of the skirt. The bodice should be of silk, the same shade as the skirt, studded all over with irridescent jet, and across the front in the form of a yoke two bands of narrower ribbon. The belt, of black, must have a bow and long ends at either side of the front. Rose color, in all its shades, is still popular, and a new tone resembles the damask rose, with a shadow of black about it which makes it very rich, especially in velvet.

It is said that the tailor gowns of the early spring are to be quite lavishly and expensively trimmed with bands of the cloth stitched on in scroll patterns, with braiding, or with narrow bias bands of black satin, which is the latest fancy. These bands outline the seams of the waist and skirt.

Sashes are very popular again, particularly when they are of the new chine ribbons. A plain blue taffeta silk, made up plain for a young girl, has a sash of blue and pink chine ribbons. It is tied in a large bow in the back, and the ends fall on either side of the plaits in the skirt. Pale green silk makes a very pretty evening dress, with chine ribbon for a twist around the neck, butterfly bows on the shoulder as a substitute for sleeves, and a belt and sash at the back. Blue or pink crepons make useful dresses, and trimmed with lace insertion, two rows around the skirt, and striped on the front of the full waist, they are exceedingly pretty. Bands of satin ribbon to match the crepon go over the shoulders and terminate in rosettes and long ends on each side of the front.—N. Y. Sun.

'RAH FOR THE BOYS.

A SYSTEM OF MILITARY INSTRUCTION FOR PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Details of Equipment and Methods Prepared at the Instance of the G. A. R. and Committees of Public School Teachers.

Having got the American flag raised over nearly every schoolhouse in this country, the G. A. R. is at work with enthusiasm and determination to build up beneath those flags something which shall sustain them in all stress, under all circumstances, and against all opposition. They propose to create this sustaining force through military instruction in the schools.

At the last annual encampment of the Grand Army held in Pittsburg, the question of military instruction in the public schools was discussed, and Gen. George W. Wingate was appointed a "special aide to the Commander-in-chief in charge of military instruction in schools." At the request of several committees representing teachers in different cities he has prepared some suggestions as to the method to be persued. It would be best, he thinks, for the principals to devise a system.

If a plan has been decided upon, General Wingate says, the boys should be carefully measured in order to establish the extent of their physical improvement. The instruction should consist of:

The setting-up drill, facing and salutes marching by squads, manual of arms, regular drill by company and battalion. All scholars, including girls, should be drilled in the first three for fifteen minutes each day. Care should be taken by the teachers to see that the movements are performed with smartness and exactly as prescribed. Their value, both physical and mental, consists largely in snap and precision. Every boy should be required to salute all teachers whenever meeting or addressing them, and the teachers should be equally careful to return the salutes. This teaches self-respect and subordination to lawful authority.

Boys over 11, and who are at least 4 ft. 6 ins. tall, and whose parents do not object, should be drilled regularly in the manual of arms and by company and battalion two hours a week, outside school hours, great care being taken not to overtax the strength of the boys.

The drill should be regarded as a privilege. Faults should be punished by the deprivation of certain insignia, which may be adopted by the school, and a loss of membership in the battalion for a month. Discipline should be quiet but firm. Everything possible should be done to inculcate a military bearing, which involves an upright carriage, neatness in dress, attention, silence, and the utmost promptness in rendering strict obedience to all orders, whether from the instructors or the cadet officers. It should also be impressed upon the boys that absolute truthfulness, a high regard for personal honor, and an aversion to anything dishonest or tyrannical are expected of the citizen soldier—that they must be soldiers and gentlemen.

The boys should be divided into companies not exceeding forty or fifty strong as a larger number is difficult to handle. Each should have the usual number of officers and non-commissioned officers. The officers and non-commissioned officers of the companies and battalions should be selected from the boys showing good scholarship combined with proficiency in military matters, and manly bearings and characteristics. Warrants should be given to them by the Board of Education at the close of their term of service. A school for officers should be established.

In time the officers can put the battalion through the drill, but at the beginning an instructor is necessary. Properly there should be paid instructors who will devote their time to the matter. One of these can look after about six schools. It is hoped that the services of army officers can be soon had for this purpose in large cities. If the drills can be had in the morning or in the evening, it will be easy to procure sufficient volunteer instructors from the National Guard.

The question of uniforms should be left to each school. A cap alone is sufficient to begin with, and costs but little. In most cases it will be found that a plain uniform costs no more than ordinary clothes, and lasts longer, as the boys take better care of it. Ordinarily a cap and blouse will be sufficient, which may be worn by the boys at all times. A white webbing waist belt and plate adds very materially to the soldierly appearance where a dark blue blouse is used, and is inexpensive. Swords and belts for the officers should be provided by the authorities and belong to the school. The uniforms used in Brooklyn Grammar School No. 15 cost $6, and the cap 50 cents additional.

Grammar School No. 15 of Brooklyn has an organized battalion of 224 boys, commanded by Principal Wm. F. Felter, and divided into four companies. The battalion is limited to boys 4 feet 5 inches tall, which practically takes in those over eleven, who are in good health, who will uniform themselves, and who have a prescribed standing in their school work. The uniform is of blue cloth, with yellow stripes on the sides of the trousers. The cap has in front A. G. in a circle. All uniforms are alike, the cadet officers having their rank indicated by stripes on their sleeves.

Under our system of government we will never have a large standing army, and our strength and safety are in a general dissemination of military knowledge and training among the people. What the man and citizen ought to know in order to the full discharge of his duty to his country should be imparted to the boy. Nothing will so much aid to enlarge our State militia, and to give it efficiency and character, as the plan proposed. The military taste and training acquired in the school will carry our best young men into the militia organizations, and make those organizations reliable conservators of public order, and ready and competent defenders of the national honor."

Human Nature.

It is related that a certain man was recently very sad because his wife had gone on a visit, which she would not shorten in spite of his appeals to come home. He finally hit upon a plan to induce her to return. He sent her a copy of each of the local papers with one item clipped out, and when she wrote to find out what it was he had clipped from the papers he refused to tell her. The scheme worked admirably. In less than a week she was home to find out what it was that had been going on that her husband did not want her to know about.—Tit-Bits.

FALLING IDOLS.

THE GOOD ANTHONY COMSTOCK ACCUSED OF BLACKMAIL.

The Censor of Theatrical Posters and Cold Statuary Denies the Charge Made Before the Lexow Committee. Goff Believes There Is Rottenness in Denmark.

There is hardly a person in America who has not heard of Anthony Comstock. At the same time millions have read, the large majority with thankful hearts, of his work as secretary of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, and how he has tracked down and suppressed the nests of vice in New York and other cities where green goods operators, gamblers, thugs, bunco men, dealers in evil literature and pictures, lottery ticket fakirs, policy shops, and every other form of vice that existed under the nose of the police.

Mr. Comstock vigorously denies the story brought out before the Lexow Committee that he accepted a bribe of $1,000 to obtain the dismissal of an indictment against a printer of counterfeit money advertisements, but Mr. Goff, who must have known of the charges before they were made public, evidently attached some weight to them, else they would not have appeared. Mr. Comstock, who enjoys the moral support of the press of New York, has not taken the active means to bring his traducer to justice which he usually exhibits when engaged in clothing nude statues or suppressing questionable literature. This is the story as told by the report of the Lexow proceedings:

Mr. Goff then called Louis S. Streep, who told this story without question: In 1889 he was arrested by Anthony Comstock for printing green goods circulars. At that time, he said, he rented his printing office to a man named Bechtold, while he, the witness, was in the country. While he was in the Tombs Bechtold gave Streep's wife $5,000 in cash to deposit for her husband's bail. Before she deposited it Bechtold returned and got $2,000, saying that he had to give $1,500 to Anthony Comstock to prevent Streep's being indicted by the United States Grand Jury. Streep's bail was reduced at the same time to $3,000, and the cash was deposited. Streep jumped his bail and went to Europe. In July, 1890, he returned, went to the District Attorney of the county and confessed all he knew about the green goods circular business, and under the direction of the District Attorney made a search of the city with three Headquarters detectives for the men implicated by his confession. One day, after being out for many hours with detective Reilly, he called on Mr. Comstock, and said that now that he had arranged things honorably with the State officials he would like to get the indictment against him in the State courts dismissed.

ANTHONY COMSTOCK

"Comstock said to me, 'I am the only man who can get that indictment dismissed.' He said it could be done if I would give him $1,000. In August I called on Mr. Comstock with my brother and said to him, 'You said you could have that indictment in the State court dismissed. Here is a thousand dollars.' I had seven hundred dollars which my wife had realized from the sale of my printing office, and I borrowed three hundred dollars in three bills from my brother Robert, who was with me. Comstock took the money, saying, 'I am not accepting this as a bribe but as a donation to the society.'

Q.—And was the indictment dismissed?

A.—Yes, sir; two of them.

Q.—And you gave him that money to procure their dismissal?

A.—Yes, sir.

Mr. Goff—Here are the indictments endorsed "dismissed" at the time stated by the witness.

Senator Bradley—Who was the District Attorney then?

Mr. Goff—Col. Fellows.

Q.—Fully realizing your responsibility and the meaning of your answer, do you swear that you gave Anthony Comstock $1,000 for his influence in having these indictments dismissed?

A.—I swear before God and man I paid Anthony Comstock $1,000 to buy my liberty.

Senator Lexow—How do you bring this within the scope of our work, Mr. Goff?

Mr. Goff—I will explain in a moment, Senator.

Q.—Since then you've been indicted?

A.—Since then Anthony Comstock had me indicted on the same charge in the United States Court. I was convicted and am out pending an appeal.

Senator Lexow—How is this within our scope?

Mr. Goff—A failure to enforce the criminal laws is a neglect of duty by the Police Department. Also, we have shown that the police have protected the green goods men, and it is only fair to the police that we should show, if we can, that others have done the same.

Senator Lexow—It is a very serious charge against Mr. Comstock.

Law is law! Enforcement is enforcement! Laws were made for enforcement; not for reasonable enforcement. Law is absolute. Law is without qualification! Law is for the purpose of order—not a reasonable amount of order. Law is for the purpose of enabling men to enjoy equal opportunities of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Nothing is said about a reasonable amount of life or liberty or happiness.—Recorder Goff.

Faithful to its sacred page, heaven still rebuilds thy span, nor lets the type grow pale with age that first spoke peace to man.—Campbell.

BAMBERGER'S
THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE
Newark, N. J.

Exceedingly Great Values
—IN—
Linens, Towels and Toweling.

The following and many other great inducements are offered to induce you to make, at this early date, your purchases of Linens and Linen Goods for the coming spring season

ALL LINEN TOWELING twilled and very heavy, bleached and unbleached, 18 in. wide, 12½c, value, at........8½c yd

SILVER BLEACH TABLE LINEN very heavy, 55 inches wide, new Damask designs, value 39 cents, at....29c yd

ALL LINEN TOWELS, with knotted fringe and handsome borders, full bleached size 18x40 inches, 25c value, at............17c each

ALL LINEN TABLE DAMASK bleached, 64 inches wide, beautiful designs, fine quality, value 65c, at...49c yd

ALL LINEN TABLE NAPKINS, large size, pure bleach, in handsome patterns, value $1.25 per dozen, at..............98c doz

ALL LINEN TABLE COVERS, full 2½ yards long, with handsome colored borders, fine quality, value $1.75, at.........$1.19 each

☞ Orders by mail and requests for samples receive prompt attention.

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,
147 and 149 Market Street,
Near Broad Street. Newark, N. J.

A TWO ACRE FARM.

On Which a Man Supports a Family of Five.

On the narrow strip of land lying between the river and the track of the Western New York and Pennsylvania Railroad, at the northern extremity of Eldred, Pa., is to be found the banner farm of McKean county. Here, in a neat little cottage, lives F. Segling, wife and five children—three boys and two girls—all of whom derive their means of livelihood from their two acre farm. Queer, is it not, when we hear so much of inability to make a living for smaller families on much larger farms?

The gentleman purchased the land and built the cottage while working as a carpenter. Three years ago his physical condition necessitated a change of occupation. Then, with that faith in mother earth which we believe is more fully developed in the better class of Germans than any other people, he turned to his farm and promptly decided that, on a plantation of this size, quality, not quantity, must be the maxim, and that in no other line could he reach his ideal so nearly as in the cultivation of celery.

Spurred by his necessities and supported by any amount of quiet determination, he proceeded on this theory. From the beginning his success has been flattering, and to-day he stands ready to market 30,000 stalks of celery, one third blanched and two thirds of the self-blanching varieties.

Mr. Segling finds work the year round, and nine tenths of his time is spent on half an acre, for although the farm comprises two acres, but one fourth of it is in celery, the remainder being garden and meadow.

Upon this half acre there has been deposited this year 150 one-horse loads of manure. You will observe that in three particulars—i. e., the amount of work, the quantity of manure and the value of the crop—it compares favorably with most farms. Mr. Segling says the last two years have been disastrous to celery, this year especially so, on account of the drought.

To offset this he has purchased a fifteen horse power boiler and a steam pump, and as a creater of rain storms he can give the Government experts in this line cards and spades and then drown them.

He has the entire Alleghany River at his command, and it is a clear case of disaster to drouth on this farm. In answer to further questions Mr. Segling said that, while he was not getting rich, he was making a living for himself and family and was independent. Think of independence for a family of seven, maintained on two acres!

What a surplus of kingdoms hath McKean County, but Lord, what a dearth of kings!—Mount Jewett Herald.

Mose Will Read His Title Clear.

There is a promising candidate for future greatness down in Broome street, New York City.

Little Mose Meyer had felt for some time that the duty of providing for the family rested upon himself. A few days ago he chanced to see a man put the sign "Boy Wanted" in front of his store. Mose immediately walked in and applied for the position. The groceryman looked critically at the little chap, in seedy clothes, and growled out:

"Humph! You won't do; you're too small."

Mose reflected that Kosher dies was getting mighty scarce at their house and remembered that he had an older brother who would just about suit. But there were dozens of boys who would swarm in, and the place would be filled before he could go home and bring back his brother. This catastrophe must be averted at all hazards. As he left the store he quickly hid the sign behind some barrels and "spud" home. In a few minutes he came back, breathless but triumphant, dragging his brother Solomon. No objection was made to the size of the latter, and he was engaged at $3 a week. The first task given him was to "take down the sign," which made little Mose smile. He also smiles broadly, time and again, as he feasts on goose and onion, and thinks how he won the victory for the Meyer family.

Notice of Order to Limit Creditors.

Somerset County Surrogate's Office.
Estate of John Jacob Lang, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that on the sixth day of February, A. D. 1895, on the application of the undersigned, executrix of John Jacob Lang, deceased, an order was made by the Surrogate requiring the creditors of John Jacob Lang, deceased, to bring in their debts, demands and claims against the said decedent, under oath or affirmation and present the same to the subscriber within nine months from the date of said order; and in default thereof any such creditor shall be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the subscriber.

ANNA ELIZABETH LANG,
Executrix.

2149

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. Henry McGee will give a tea Saturday, Feb. 23, from 4 to 7.

John Rafferty's son Thomas is suffering from inflammatory rheumatism.

Jack Fillmore of North avenue, Netherwood, is suffering from a bone felon on his right hand.

Rev. J. A. Craig of LaFayette, Sussex County, is the guest of Horace Huff of West Fifth street.

Mrs. Hall, mother of Wallace Hall of Rockview avenue, is recovering from her recent severe illness.

Hugo Fisher of Liberty street has been appointed a collector by the Prudential Life Insurance Company of Newark, for this city, in place of J. W. VanHorn, resigned.

Miss Florence Henneger of New Brighton, S. I., who has been visiting Mrs. J. R. Hill of Belvidere avenue, is now making a short visit to Mrs. F. J. Miller of Carleton avenue, after which she will return to her home.

W. Montgomery Smith of Plainfield, who excels in artistic decorative work, has issued a sumptuous calendar for The Gill Engraving Company of 104 Chambers street, New York. The sheets of enameled cardboard reproduce famous paintings, set in frames whose dainty sumptuousness of decoration and whose exquisite colorings are characteristic of Mr. Smith's masterhand.

The Monthly Illustrator.

In only one way was it possible for Harry C. Jones of 92 Fifth avenue, New York, to improve his magazine of the choicest in art, The Quarterly Illustrator, and that was to issue it oftener. That improvement he has now accomplished, and in its new guise of The Monthly Illustrator it is just four times as good as it was before.

The Monthly Illustrator is artistic excellence. The February number contains 272 superb illustrations by 74 well-known artists, and a wealth of letter-text besides. No home of culture should be without The Monthly Illustrator.

—The Young Men's League of Hope Chapel will give an oyster supper in the near future.

DEATHS.

BURR—In this city Tuesday, Feb. 11, 1895, Mrs. Margaret Conrad Burr, wife of the late Frederick A. Burr.

Relatives and friends are respectfully invited to attend the funeral from her late residence, 417 Kensington avenue, Thursday, Feb. 14, at 3 p. m. Train leaves foot of Liberty street at 1:30 p. m.

SCHNEIDER—Tuesday, Feb. 12, 1895, at the residence of her son, John Ammon, 305 East 4th st., Elizabeth Schneider in the [illegible] year of her age. Notice of funeral hereafter.

TERRY—In this city Saturday, Feb. 9, 1895, Matilda L., daughter of Samuel C. and the late Matilda W. Terry, in her 18th year.

Funeral services from her late residence 221 Richmond st., Tuesday, Feb. 12, at 2:30 p. m.

HOYT—In this city, on 8th inst., J. K. Hoyt of Newark, N. J.

Funeral services Monday, Feb. 11, at the residence of Mrs. Matilda Rushmore, 113 East Fifth street, at 2:45 p. m.

ELY'S
Cream Balm
CATARRH
Is quickly absorbed.
Cleanses the Nasal Passages,
Allays Pain and Inflammation.
Heals the Sores,
Protects the Membrane from Additional Cold.
Restores the Senses of Taste and Smell.
COLD IN HEAD
IT WILL CURE. A particle is applied into each nostril and is agreeable. Price 50c. at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren st., New York.

ELECTRIC TELEPHONE
Sold outright, no rent, no royalty. Adapted to City, Village or Country. Needed in every home, shop, store and office. Greatest convenience and best seller on earth. Agents make from $5 to $50 per day. One in a residence means a sale to all the neighbors. Fine instruments, no toys, works anywhere, any distance. Complete, ready for use when shipped. Can be put up by any one, never out of order, no repairing, lasts a lifetime. Warranted. A money maker. Write W. P. Harrison & Co., Clerk 10, Columbus, O.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 21, 1895. No 8

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

VICTORY FOR GRANT.

Police Board Unanimously Reappoint Him Captain.

'TWAS DONE SATURDAY NIGHT.

Captain Grant Hadn't Been Told Till a Daily Press Reporter Congratulated Him—Council Not Yet Notified.

In spite of the repeated malicious and venomous attacks of the so-called Republican organ, George W. Grant was on Saturday night reappointed Captain of Police for the year, at a salary as before of $90 a month.

The reappointment was unanimous.

When a reporter of The Daily Press talked with Mayor Gilbert this morning about the matter the Mayor expressed surprise that the reappointment had not been reported to the Council at the meeting of last night.

Captain Grant had not heard of the news till The Press told and congratulated him. He was appreciative of the victory he has won over his enemies, and said he would devote all his energies to the protection of property and the enforcement of the city ordinances, as heretofore. He will be heartily supported by a most efficient corps of experienced officers.

TO FLORIDA.

Personally-Conducted Tours via Pennsylvania Railroad.

To the large number of people who feel the need of a midwinter as well as a midsummer holiday, the Pennsylvania Railroad Company's personally-conducted tours to Florida especially commend themselves; the excursion rates being most liberal and the style of travel first-class in every particular.

The next of the series of Jacksonville tours, allowing two-weeks stay in Florida, will leave New York and Philadelphia Feb. 2[illegible], and others will leave March 12 and [illegible]. The rate, including transportation, meals en route, and Pullman berth on special train, is $50 from New York, and $48 from Philadelphia; proportionate rates from other points.

For further information apply to Ticket Agent, or address Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, to whom application for space should also be made.

Lenten Services, Church of the Redeemer.

Rector Johnstone of the Church of the Redeemer announces the following services during Lent:

Feb. 27, Ash Wednesday—Celebration of Holy Communion and sermon, 11:15 a. m. Kalendar for every week with the exception of Holy Week: Sunday—Celebration of Holy Communion, 7:30 a. m.; second celebration, on the first Sunday of the month, 11.15 a. m.; morning service and sermon, 11:15 a. m.; Sunday-school, 3 p. m.; children's service, 3:45 p. m.; evening prayer with address, 4:30. Monday—Evening prayer, 4:30. Tuesday—Evening prayer, 4:30. Wednesday—Celebration of Holy Communion, 10 a. m.; evening prayer, 4:30; confirmation class, 5 p. m. Thursday—evening prayer, 4:30. Friday—evening prayer with sermon, 8. Saturday—Evening prayer, 4:30.

March 25, Feast of the Annunciation—Celebration of Holy Communion, 10 a. m.

Services during Holy Week: April 8, Monday before Easter, 10 a. m.; April 9, Tuesday before Easter, 10 a. m.; April 10, Wednesday before Easter, 10 a. m.. April 11, Maundy Thursday, 10 a. m.; April 12, Good Friday, 11:15 a. m.; 8 p. m.; April 13, Easter Even, 10 a. m.

To Make Boys Better.

The boys department of the Y. M. C. A. is planning for an active year. Meetings for boys will be held Sunday afternoons, and it is planned to have practical talks on subjects of interest every two weeks. The impetus given the work by the Convention will aid greatly. A conference was held yesterday afternoon by Mr. Manning, Mr. Clemens, and some of the younger members, at which plans were thoroughly discussed.

Gun Club to Build.

The Independent Gun Club of this city and North Plainfield held a special meeting in the Crescent Hotel last evening and decided to erect a club-house on their grounds near Hyde's woods. The plans and specifications are now out, and the club will soon commence the construction. The building will be 18x24. It will be a fireproof building. There will also be a large platform surrounding the structure.

Plainfield Well Represented.

Stevens Institute of Technology of Hoboken has just issued a new catalogue. Plainfield is represented at the Institute proper by W. B. Rittenhouse and Warren Church. The boys from this city on the list of students in the Stevens Preparatory school are W. E. Frobisco, Alfred Loizeaux and J. W. Everidge. The various courses have been greatly changed, and a number of improvements were made.

—Seaman Williams is engaged in constructing the chimney improvement for the furnace in Trinity Reformed Church.

DR. LEWIS BRINGS TEARS

His Speech Made Senator Bradley Cry.

'TWAS A COLD-WATER ORATION.

The Plainfield Pastor Presents the Most Impressive of the Local-Option Addresses Before the Legislative Committee.

From The Press of Feb. 20.

Including Revs. Honeyman, Lewis, Richards, McKelvie, Yerkes, Herring, Schenck, Newell and Goodrich, all of Plainfield, over two hundred ministers and representatives of church and temperance organizations appeared before the Senate Committee on Boroughs yesterday in favor of Senator Rogers's local-option bills.

Rev. Albert Lawson, president of the New Jersey Anti-Liquor League, made an address and introduced other speakers, among whom was Dr. Handley of Trenton. The trend of the whole talk was that the bills only gave to boroughs the right of local self-government, and many were the threats, some open and some indirect, that if the bills were not passed the Republican party would be wiped out of power as the Democratic party had been because it had not heeded the voice of the people when they opposed the passage of the race-track laws.

Not a single saloon keeper appeared before the committee at the public hearing on the bills today, but in answer to Senator Bradley's curiously worded invitation the Senate chamber was filled with ministers and temperance men from all over the State. Senator Daly, who was called for by one of the ministers, spoke in opposition to the bill, declaring his confidence in the Judges of the courts, who at present pass upon licenses.

The Rev. Dr. Lewis of Plainfield made the speech of the day. "We know", he said, "that the word has gone forth from the bosses that these bills are to be killed. We have been told there is no use in our protesting, as the Republicans are not willing to do anything to injure their prospects of electing a Republican Governor."

He had voted for every Republican candidate, he said, since the martyred Lincoln, but he warned the Republicans that the people were watching them this year as never before, and if they were denied their rights the party would pay dearly for it.

Dr. Lewis's words so impressed Chairman Bradley as to draw tears from the Senator's eyes.

The Trenton Times refers as follows to the matter:

"One of the most impressive speakers was Rev. Dr. Lewis, pastor of a Plainfield Baptist Church. He was tall, with white hair and flowing white whiskers which gave him a patriarchal appearance. He spoke with much emotion and said this was a fight for American liberty and was the echo of the fight the people made seven hundred years ago when they wrung Magna Charta from King John. He said that he had been advised by one of the ring that the bill would never pass. Bradley had no following and the Republicans were not going to do anything that would hurt their chances of electing a Governor. He said he had voted for every Republican President since the martyred Lincoln, but he warned the Republicans that the people of New Jersey were watching them, and if they denied them that liberty for which our fathers fought they would pay dearly for it. Senator Bradley was so affected by the address of Dr. Lewis that tears coursed down his cheek, causing him to freely use his white silk handkerchief. When he got up to introduce the next speaker he was so choked up that his voice was hardly audible.

"Senator Daly spoke against the bills. He thought the courts were the proper places for granting licenses, and he said he was opposed to the principle of local option, and believed that the minority had some rights."

Husband and Wife in the Same Grave.

Monday afternoon a double funeral occurred at Locust Grove, in which Randolph Pack and wife were interred in the same grave. Mr. Pack died on Wednesday, and his wife was so prostrated by the shock of his demise that she failed rapidly in health, and died on Friday. They were cousins of Gerome Pack of this city, whose son, Edwin W., attended the funeral.

A False Diagnosis.

La grippe is confounded by many persons with a severe attack of catarrh, which in some respects resembles the former. These individuals suffer severely with pain about the forehead, eyes and ears, with soreness in throat and stoppage of the nasal passages and in fact, are incapacitated for work of any kind for days at a time. These are catarrhal sufferers. Ely's Cream Balm has been used with the best results in such cases. The remedy will give instant relief.

OFF THE TRACK.

Obstacles Heaped Before the Local Trolley Traction.

CITIZENS WITHHOLD CONSENTS.

Company Working Hard to Get Rights of Way for the Extensions To the Central Station—Another Council Meeting Next Week—Policemen Confirmed—License Ordinance Amended—Other Business.

The rapid-transit train was switched off the track by the fine Italian band of the oldtime obstructionists last Monday, and the Common Council had to wait the arrival of the wrecking-train Chandler W. Riker. Mr. Riker was expected to be on hand to superintend the progress of the street-railway-extension franchise through the Council; but before the session Chairman Fisk of the Committee on Streets received a telegram, which he read to the Council when that body had convened, stating that because of obstinate property-owners near the North Avenue station it would be impossible to present the matter before the Council that night.

"We expected"—said Mr. Fisk—"to be able to offer the ordinance granting the extensions for which the company and the committee have been working; but we are of course prevented from proceeding on account of the trouble in getting consents."

On motion of Mr. Fisk it was decided to meet again Monday night, Feb. 25, at 8, when, he said, not only the street-railway but also several other matters would be ready for consideration.

To a reporter of The Daily Press, after the meeting Mr. Fisk said that the trouble on the eastern extension was chiefly from Fifth street people, and partly from those on Sixth street as well. Of course, he added, the company can get from Netherwood to the North Avenue station by way of Richmond street, but it wants to avoid going around Robin Hood's barn, and will make every effort to get through Fifth street. The obstruction to the West End extension is that it has thus far been impossible to get consents enabling the line to get a clear way to the North Avenue station. The company wants to complete the extensions at the start, bringing all cars to the central station, and it is now at work to overcome the obstacles which have been cast up before it. I hope that all will be ready next week Monday."

THE LICENSE QUESTION.

An important ordinance was introduced by Mr. Moore. It provided for the amendment of the liquor-license ordinance so that an applicant for license would not have to get the signature of the owner of the building in a case where the applicant was a tenant under a 10-years lease, if said lease had been secured with the owner's having full knowledge that the tenant was to conduct a liquor business on the premises.

The ordinance was as petitioned for at a previous session by Alexander D. Findlay, who represented that his landlord, Chas. Bock, had declined to sign his application this year although Bock had agreed at the signing of his 10-years lease a few seasons before that he might conduct a liquor business on the property during the life of the lease.

Mr. Dumont thought that it was unwise to attempt to amend the liquor ordinance while several other applications for license were pending.

"This"—he said—"is an effort to assist a man to carry out a contract—which I do n't approve."

On motion of Mr. Fisk the ordinance was tabled. Mr. Findlay's application has been advertised with Mr. Bock's signature attached, since his petition to the Council for the amendment.

POLICEMEN CONFIRMED.

The Police Board reported that the nominations by the Mayor of Nicholas Meyers and John Hartpence for regular policemen and Martin Vanderweg for special policeman had been investigated and approved. They therefore moved that the nominations be confirmed, and this was unanimously done.

Henry Haurand applied for a license to sell liquor at 115 East Front street. The application was referred to the Committee on License.

An application for an electric light on Arlington avenue between 300 and 400 feet beyond Ninth street, was referred to the Committee on Police and Public Lights, with power.

Mr. Erickson said that a number of reports and papers had been committed by the Council of '94 to the City Clerk for transfer to the Council of '95, and added "I 'd like to know where they are!" "Down stairs!" said Clerk MacMurray, and went down to get them. When he came back he had packages for several of the committees, and they were distributed.

AGAINST THE TROLLEY.

The memorial of the School Board against the passage of the electric railway through Arlington avenue between Fourth and Fifth streets, past the Stillman and the Franklin schools, of which these columns have already spoken, was read and referred to the Committee on Streets. The document urged that the noise of the cars would interfere with the studies in the schools, and that there would be danger to the children attending the schools and using the avenue where the cars passed.

Accounts were ordered settled, minutes of the previous session were approved, and all the Councilmen went home except Messrs. Bird, Frost and Stockton, who were n't at the meeting.

HOMES OF ALL NATIONS.

The World's Tribes Visit America in the Seventh-Day Baptist Church.

The sociable of the Mission Band of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church was held yesterday afternoon at 4. A very pleasing programme, "Homes of Other Nations", was provided by Miss Minnola Tomlinson, ably assisted by Miss Evelyn Lewis.

The first selection on the programme was a piano duet, ably rendered by Miss Violet Truell and Miss Evelyn Lewis. Next there was a series of tableaux showing the different modes of homelife in other nations.

Esquimaux life was first, represented by Misses Bessie Randolph, Violet Truell, May Rose and Clara Scriven, who were dressed in robes and grouped in and about the door of a small hut.

China was well represented by Misses Mattie Maitland, Nellie Miller and Grace VanSickle, who were seated at a tea party.

Holland was a scene of industry. Miss Ruth Maxson, Miss Ethel Titsworth, Jitpha Williams and Miss Bessie Randolph were represented as being at a dairy.

Misses Effie Randolph, Mertie Randolph and Louise VanSickle represented Mexico. Miss May Rose beautifully rendered a piano solo.

Arabia and India were represented by Misses Kizzie Nagle, Edith Titsworth, Mertie Randolph, Bessie Randolph, May Rose and Effie Randolph.

The next tableau represented all the different nations as having come to America and joined hands with her. Miss Violet Truell represented Liberty, and in the scene sang "My Country 'Tis of Thee". This ended the programme, and tea and lemonade were served to the guests by those who had taken part. The table was under the supervision of Mrs. J. G. Miller.

There was a large attendance, and all expressed themselves much pleased.

TO SELL MUSIC HALL.

Stockholders Vote to Dissolve the Corporation.

A meeting of the stockholders of Music Hall Association was held Monday afternoon at which 570 out of 800 shares were represented. For years the hall has been what might be termed a white elephant on the hands of its owners, and at this meeting it was decided to dispose of the property and dissolve the Association. The vote on this proposition was unanimous. It will be some weeks, however, before this can be consummated, owing to the necessity of complying with corporation laws relative thereto. The Board of Directors will under the law have charge as trustees of the matter of arranging the details to dispose of the property. It is understood that several persons are inclined to purchase the hall, if they can get it at their price.

A Popular Ticket.

Old Dominion Steamer to Old Point Comfort and Norfolk or to Richmond. Thence via Norfolk & Western R. R. to Petersburgh, Lynchburg, Roanoke, Natural Bridge, Luray, Harper's Ferry, Washington and New York, stop overs at all points. This is a delightful trip to take at any season of the year; no pleasanter trip for a wedding party. Trip can be reversed going all rail returning via steamer. Address for information as to this and any other trip to the South or Southwest, California or Mexico. L. J. Ellis, Agent, 317 A Broadway, N. Y.

—The Stars and Stripes float over the Y. M. C. A. Building every fair day.

—F. O. Smith has commenced excavation preparatory to erecting a dwelling-house on lower West Front street.

O. W. O. Hardman, sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

HOME FOR HOMELESS.

Noble Work of the Woman's Temperance Aid.

EFFORTS TO BROADEN THE WORK.

President Mrs. Opdyke Reviews the Splendid Career of the Society and Points Out Future Needs.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: Recent letters in The Daily Press relative to opening the game and reading rooms in Reform Hall indicate a renewed local need, so that a statement of recent results may interest the people.

Last Summer, when it became evident that the doors of the building we had helped to buy and keep open for ten years were likely to close, our Aid Society faced a serious problem.

Those that have labored with us know that we have proved an aid in many homes during seasons of trial and discouragement. We have done what we could always, quietly and patiently, confident that the time must come when temperance work would quicken and revive. We have kept our credit unimpaired, by prompt payment of our moderate bills, while we have carefully avoided soliciting from the public for our current expenses, although we have received occasional small donations from personal friends for some special need. Our annual dues are thirty cents, and from the regular collections at the meetings we had thirty odd dollars in the hands of the treasurer when the Fall opened. It needed both faith and courage to meet a new venture of such magnitude with our slim resources, but after deliberate and full conference, we agreed to take the entire building for one year from Nov. 1, at a moderate rental. The club are to have their regular meetings free of any expense whatever. We are to make all repairs, provide heat, light and janitor, besides supplying a new steam boiler to supply the old one now lying upside down in the boiler pit.

We have paid six months rent in advance, although it was not stipulated or required, and the entire building has had a thorough cleaning. The dressing room has had two coats of white paint, the stairs stained. Neat scrim curtains have been made and hung at doors and windows.

Locks and catches have been added. Rusty stovepipes have been replaced, and one new stove bought. Double doors have been made and placed in the formerly narrow entrance to the boiler room so that the wornout boiler can sometime be removed, just as soon as we see our way clear to pay for it in full and not one moment sooner. We find that stoves are both comfortable and economical this season.

Two new steel gutters have been put up, and the roof, chimneys and leaders have been repaired or replaced. Windows and plank walks have been renewed, and other details have received necessary attention.

Our meetings have grown in numbers and interests. Visits have been paid the sick, while our own households have not been neglected.

Our bills are all paid in full up to date, and like the cruse of oil we still have $15 in the bank while we have not solicited one cent from the people towards these heavy repairs.

How has it been done? By renting the halls, upper and lower, helping each other and keeping our powder dry. Some mason work was generously donated and rebates have been made on some bills for spot cash. Our members and friends have worked as they always do work, patiently and efficiently, without friction or discord, and our ten years experience counts over against a small deposit.

Mr. Rockfellow, our janitor, as well as members of his family, have rendered every assistance possible to help us through our endeavor and we appreciate their unselfish interest, without which it would not have been possible to achieve such satisfactory results.

We shall be glad to show our vouchers to any who desire to see the record on our books, and we feel very grateful to God for this latest proof of His unfailing care.

Now a few words in relation to the future. Many cannot afford the expense of membership in societies, while they need a warm, cheerful place of assembly beyond all doubt. Not long ago a friend returning from prayer meeting counted 72 young men enter a Front street saloon from Music Hall after one act only, then he passed on with a heavy heart. We feel that the building belongs to the people without regard to race, creed, color or condition. We believe that free lectures and musicals should be provided for the enjoyment of young and old at intervals throughout the Winter, and we propose to co-operate with all our religious and temperance societies whenever they desire our aid. We believe that the many generous citizens who donated towards the purchase of our fine property never expected to have it sustained through its own rental, which at best is fluctuating, uncertain, and must tend to direct injury of the work for which the building was dedicated, not to mention added wear and tear.

We can provide music and serve hot beverages, replace the ten-year-old games, and meet the extra expense just as far as our money holds out.

A few lamps would give a homelike glow. Many have papers and periodicals that could be used on our tables and afterwards sent to the prisons, life-saving stations or as otherwise directed by the donors. Our faith and our zeal were never stronger than they are today, and at the same time, while anxious to win the young from the allurements of the fatal saloon, we cannot broaden this work alone nor run into debt.

We have met the situation as sensibly as we knew how, and we are ready to act with and for our people as far and as fully as we have the strength, ability and power.

If our ministers and people think well of this plan will they advise us how and where we can develop and broaden this most vital work.

MRS. GEORGE F. OPDYKE,
President Woman's Temperance Aid Society.
210 West Eighth St., Feb. 20, 1895.

A MINE OF KNOWLEDGE.

Plainfield Supplying the Country with the Latest Points in Law.

The office of Honeyman & Company on North avenue has been a busy place for a few days because of the publication of the third annual volume of the American Corporation Legal Manual. This volume was begun in 1893 and was an issue of 717 pages. This year it is an immense volume of 1230 pages, bound in law sheep, and contains a mine of information concerning corporation law and collateral matters.

An examination of the work shows that almost 800 pages are taken up solely with a digest of the corporation laws of every State in the Union; about 60 pages with a synopsis of laws of other countries, including such faraway ones as Egypt, Siam, Japan, Hawaiian Islands, etc.; 80 pages of corporation forms; 100 pages are on the patent laws of the United States and foreign countries; nearly 50 pages are on the trade-mark and copyright laws of the world; over 40 pages give the street railway laws of the different States; and there is an article on receivers of insolvent corporations, etc.

Thousands of legal cases are cited in the volume. The book is handsomely printed on elegant paper and, all in all, it makes one of the most handsome volumes ever sent forth from a publishing house in this section.

An inspection of the list of advance subscribers to the work shows that almost every copy of the large edition has been sold prior to the date of publication, and they represent every State and Territory in the Union. Besides this, copies have been subscribed for and are being sent to Austro-Hungary, Belgium, England, France, Germany, Ireland and Scotland.

The actual amount of labor connected with getting out the work at the home-office is said to have occupied five months, and the number of different writers employed has been eighty-four.

Bible Study by W. D. Murray.

Thursday afternoon at 4:30 W. D. Murray will deliver in the Assembly Hall of the Y. M. C. A. Building the same talk on Bible study that he made at the convention Saturday afternoon. The subject is "Study of the Bible as literature"; illustrated by the song of songs. The meeting will be open to woman and the Parks sisters will assist in furnishing music.

Coming Camera Club Events.

The Camera Club expects to hold a special meeting in a few nights, at which a set of interchangeable slides from the Delaware Camera Club of Wilmington will be displayed. On Saturday evening the club will illustrate the lecture of Rev. T. Logan Murphy on "Ireland" in Holy Cross Church.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

AN EGG ROMANCE.

A Youngstown Girl and Her Brittle Love Letter.

A young man of Woonsocket, who is employed in a grocery, in filling an order for eggs about four months ago saw that one of the number had something written on the shell in pencil. This one he laid aside until the customer had gone, and then proceeded to examine it more closely.

The following lines were written plainly on the shell:

If this egg in course of time
A young unmarried man may see,
Who is to married life inclined,
I ask that he will write to me.
Direct to Jane Eliza Blair,
Youngstown, Ohio, and depend
Such letters sent will find me there,
An answer I will quickly send.

The young man, who is unmarried, and who is an admirer of poets and poetry, and who writes very fair verses himself, lost no time in an endeavor to find out the writer of the lines on that egg.

His zeal was rewarded, as in due time after sending a letter he received a reply from Miss Blair, in which she explained that her father raised poultry, and she was sometimes engaged in helping him pack and ship eggs.

Being of a romantic turn of mind, she one day wrote on the egg, and was glad to find that it reached a person who was kind enough to comply with her request.

The answer of the young lady brought about a constant correspondence, each of the interested parties sending a letter each week. Photographs have been exchanged, and each has expressed more than common admiration for the other.

"In fact, it looks like a romantic marriage, particularly so as the father of the young woman seems well satisfied, as he has written the young man and extended an invitation to visit him next summer.

To This Are We Coming.

Twenty-five years more of development in our houses, hotels and restaurants, if conducted on present lines, will produce an enormous ducking and scraping, fee seeking, livery wearing servant class, which will go far to establish the claim, put forth by some of our critics, that equality on this side of the water means only political equality, and that our class distinctions, though not so obvious, are no less genuine than elsewhere. In this event the only logical note of explanation to send to the Powers will be that social equality was never contemplated by the signers of the Declaration of Independence; and that, though it is true that any man may become President of the United States, there are as great inequalities in morals, intellect and manners among sons of liberty as among the subjects of the Czar. To this the Powers will be justified in uttering a disappointed and slightly ironical "Oh!"—Robert Grant, in Scribner.

Retributive Fate.

Twenty years ago a young man married one of the smartest young ladies anywhere round, and the young couple seemed to start in life with every prospect of happiness. But the girl was ambitious to be rich, and because she was not was very much dissatisfied. After keeping her husband in a peck of trouble for a time, she left him and got a divorce. He went into bankruptcy and she very soon married a wealthy man and rode behind a span in an elegant carriage. To-day the former bankrupt is wealthy and prosperous, has a new wife and a happy home. Every comfort surrounds them. His wife of other days now lives in poverty and has to scrub for the bread she eats. Her husband's wealth under poor management shrank to worse than nothing. The roses have gone from her cheeks and the light from her eyes. It's as complete a turn around as one ever saw.—Lewiston Journal.

Skated In Her Bare Feet.

A pretty eighteen-year-old girl created quite a sensation in the east end lately; and for an hour a score of men watched her as she glided about on the ice. She was a graceful skater, and every movement was Delsartean in its perfection. It was not her grace and beauty that attracted the men. It was her bare feet which gleamed in and out beneath her skirt as each foot was thrust gracefully forward. The foot was such a one as described by Du Maurier in his "Trilby." The coloring was perfect, and now and then as the wind switched her skirts the glimpse of a perfect ankle and sometimes even the swell of a shapely calf was seen. It was this that attracted the men. They wondered that the cold did not make her suffer, but it seemed unnoticed. Her mother finally appeared, and, after much cheerful persuasion and a little force, the girl was induced to remove her skates, don her shoes and stockings, and leave. With her departure the crowd rapidly dwindled away.—Louisville Post.

A Hint to Would-be Orators.

Apropos of Lord Randolph Churchill, an incident may be related which is interesting as showing his pluck and vigor. It relates to the noble lord's early parliamentary life. He was determined to make an impression upon the House of Commons, but some of his friends doubted the wisdom of his resolution. He said little, but he left London and took up his quarters at an inn in Rutlandshire. Here he spent his days and nights for a period of six weeks, with only an occasional trip to town for a day, in writing and delivering speeches. He practically went into training upon every possible subject of debate. The landlady could hear her lodger hour after hour, day after day, walking about his room delivering speeches, now loud and angry, now soft and persuasive. Perfected by practice, Lord Randolph Churchill left for town, seized his opportunity, made a big speech, and henceforth became a man to be reckoned with. Only to his intimate friends did he ever refer to his rural training in parliamentary oratory, which has been of such splendid service to him.—Tit-Bits.

A Kaiser's Uniforms.

The task of looking after the uniforms and other costumes of the Emperor William is by no means a sinecure. All these different and greatly varying articles of attire, as diversified as those at the disposal of a star actor, are carefully kept, systematically arranged and in large wardrobes, and at the head of the department is an official entitled the Obergarderobier, who has under his command two valets de chambres. The nautical uniforms are placed under the charge of an ex-sub-officer of the German navy. Before the Emperor undertakes any one of his many expeditions the Obergarderobier is provided with an exhaustive list of all the dress and other paraphernalia then will be required.—Tit-Bits.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

THE REPUBLICAN PLAN FOR MAKING TREASURY DEFICIENCY GOOD.

Ex-Speaker Reed Introduces a Bill Providing For a Popular Loan Subject to Recall At Any Time—Lafe Pence to Be a Monopolistic Vice-President.

Congressman Lafe Pence, of Colorado, who is one of the most prominent young members of the House, and who has been conspicuous during the present Congress as one of the leading lights among the Populists, has been elected vice-president of the Port Jervis, Monticello and New York Railroad, which runs from Port Jervis to Monticello, including a branch from Hugenot Junction to Summitville. It is understood that he will be also elected vice-president of several other roads belonging to the Haines system at the annual meeting of the directory to be held soon. Under this new arrangement Mr. Pence will make his home in the East, and he will probably be located at Kinderhook, N. Y., which is the home of the Haines brothers. Congressman Pence has been selected for the vice-presidency of these different railways through the influence mainly of Congressman Haines, of New York, who regards him as one of the brightest young men of his acquaintance.

Senator Don Cameron has long enjoyed the reputation of being the most successful log roller in Congress, and his abilities in that line are now being put to a severe test. When Mrs. James G. Blaine a few weeks ago made a ninety-nine years' lease of the property on which stood the historic old house in which her husband died, to a party of Chicago capitalists as a site for a new theater building, Mr. Cameron was much annoyed. The Blaine property adjoins his charming old residence on Madison place, and, although he had not opposed Mrs. Blaine in her desires to dispose of her property, he was none the less indignant. The Senator layed low as usual, however, and only lately his plan for preventing the erection of a theater has become known. An amendment has been offered to the sundry civil appropriation bill by Senator Gray, providing for the purchase of the site of the old Blaine house by the government, as it adjoins the vacant lot next to the Department of Justice building. The argument for the passage of the amendment is that the government needs another vacant lot for some future purpose, and that therefore it should be secured before the theater building is erected. The friends of the lessees of the Blaine property are making a strong fight against Senator Gray's amendment, which has been referred to the committee on public buildings and grounds, of which Senator Cameron's chum, Mr. Vest, is chairman, and his colleague, Mr. Quay, a member.

Ex-Speaker Reed's financial scheme was made public by the introduction of a bill in the House. In support of it Mr. Reed said it was possible that the science of statesmanship might be exhibited in the administration bill, but the art of statesmanship certainly was not. What was needed was a measure that would meet the crisis, if there was a crisis, in national affairs. Legislation to provide the necessary amount of revenue to meet expenses would have prevented the present difficulties. The cause of the trouble was not the existence of $500,000,000 of demand notes; they were a mere bagatelle as compared with the ability of the country to pay. The first cause of the trouble was the passage of the tariff bill, which has so far resulted in a deficiency of $107,000,000 in revenues. The next and other cause was the management of the treasury, by which the business department, in the absence of revenues, drew upon the reserve of the banking department, instead of borrowing money on its own account to meet the demands upon it. "The President in this exigency," said Mr. Reed, "has appealed to Congress, and we are face to face with the situation. We are willing to help our country, irrespective of party advantage, but it must be done in accordance with what we believe to be right, proper and honest." The trouble, Mr. Reed said, was due to the reissuance of greenbacks after being redeemed, together with a failure of receipts to meet expenditures. The remedy for the trouble was, in his opinion, to separate the two departments of the treasury, and give to the business department sufficient receipts to meet the expenditures. The proposition which he had to make was, that to meet the deficiency in receipts, the Secretary of the Treasury should be authorized to issue 3 per cent. certificates of indebtedness in sums of $50 or $100, and multiples thereof, leaving the gold in the banking department untouched for the redemption of the greenbacks. This would enable the people to determine whether or not they really wanted gold in exchange for greenbacks, and their possession in the treasury might be a guide to know what to do with them in the future. The surplus which Secretary Carlisle predicted, if it should come to exist, could be used to take up the certificates of indebtedness, which might be of two years' duration, or even less if desired. The advantage this plan presented over the present plan of procedure—popular rumor crediting the issue of $100,000,000 within a few days—was, said Mr. Reed, that these certificates would take the place of long-time gold bonds. Should the government desire to redeem them that would be just the time when they would go up, and a premium would have to be paid for them. The bill proposed by Mr. Reed contains the following: "To enable the secretary to pay the current expenses of the government, so long as the current revenues shall be deficient, he is authorized and required, from time to time, in his discretion, to issue, sell and dispose of, at not less than par, such an amount of certificates of indebtedness of the denomination of $25, $50, and $100, or any multiple thereof, as may be needed for that purpose, bearing not to exceed 3 per cent. interest per annum, payable semi-annually, and redeemable at the pleasure of the government, in coin, after two years from their date, with like qualities, privileges and exemptions provided in the act approved Jan. 14, 1875. The secretary may, at his discretion, sell and dispose of the same for not less than an equal amount of lawful money of the United States, and at such postoffices as he may select, and the secretary shall use the proceeds thereof for the purpose provided for in this section, and for none other."

ROGER LEWIS.

Overgroomed.

A Chicago paper rudely remarks that a lady there who has been married three times in a single year is overgroomed.

A VETERAN OF THE WAR.

The Reason of His Refusal to Draw a Pension From Uncle Sam.

He entered the ranks of a volunteer regiment in 1861, became a captain before the close of the first year of his service, fought in many battles, was wounded time and again, was twice promoted for gallantry on the field, and was the colonel of his regiment when it was disbanded at the end of the war. Soon afterward he went into business, made an unexpected success in it through his energy and perseverance, raised and trained a family, enjoyed life as the years passed, accumulated a fortune before he was 60, and has at last come to the conclusion that he will take things easy as the nurse of three fads so long as he lives.

"Do you draw a pension colonel?" he was asked by one of the friends of his boyhood.

"A pension!" he replied, promptly. "No, sir, I wouldn't take it. The pension ought to be on the other side in my case, and I'd like to give a pension to the government to which I owe everything, from my health to my bank account, from my scars to my self assertion. You know what a raw, timid, shambling, careless, useless weakling I was when I was a youngster, forty years ago, up in the Green Mountain State. I was good for nothing, couldn't learn the trade at which I was put, got only $2 a week with board, which was mostly mush and maple molasses, and would have kept on in that way all my life. At Lincoln's first call for troops I got excited and joined the regiment, which was made up of Green Mountaineers. We wore the uniform and drilled and shouldered arms and fired our guns and waited for the rebels. I had to straighten up and keep step, and keep my eyes and ears open, and go through the drill, and obey orders, and live on rations, and sleep in a wooden barrack, and salute the colonel, beside lots of other things. In three months I had become a different Vermonter. I was quick as a flash and orderly as a martinet; I could shoot at a mark and hit it; our company was better drilled than any other in the regiment, and I was one of the best men in it. I had become a soldier, eager to fight for Vermont and the American Union. We were sent to the front. I marched like Napoleon Bonaparte or Ethan Allen, and was not afraid of old Jeff Davis or any other rebel in Dixie. We were sent to the front; we soon had a skirmish, in which I got that scar on my face, but I was out of the hospital in three days fuller of fight than ever. That made me a corporal, and I can tell you that I knew I was one. We had bigger battles after a while, and I had a hand in two of them. I had found out what war was. Before the end of the first year of service I was made the captain of a company in place of a captain who had been shot. There was one scrap after another in one State or the other. There were hard duties, rough fare, long tramps, short encounters, dangerous raids, grewsome scenes, and all kinds of experiences in camp and field. I began to feel like a veteran of the Moscow campaign. I was hardened and bronzed, and held several bullets under the skin, two of which I carry in my pocket. It would be a long story, but I became colonel of the regiment, and you wouldn't have known the trifling, shambling youngster who was your friend up in Vermont when we were there together. After four years, when the enemy had been laid low, we were all mustered out of service, and I took hold of the first business that came to hand and had good luck in it, with vicissitudes.

"Take a pension from Uncle Sam for making a man of me! I wouldn't draw it. I owe our uncle of the starry flag everything I have in the world, and I'd like to pay him a pension. He drilled me and trained me, and put me in the way of evolution, and made me practical, and taught me the need of order, and gave me vigor, and he gave me my keep while he was doing it, beside fair pay after I got up. If it hadn't been for him, I might have been getting $6 a week by this time, in Vermont, with milk and maple molasses; but our old friend Tom, who didn't enter the army, is still scratching gravel or less than that. As for the disabled men of our regiment who need a pension from Uncle Sam, I am glad they get it."

SPECULATING ON TIME.

Cycling Authorities Look for a Mile to Be Ridden in 1:25 This Year.

Bicycle racers, after reviewing the records created during last season, are speculating as to where the one mile figures will be placed this year. Racing authorities in this country predict that, with such men as Johnson, Bald, Tyler, Sanger, Titus, and L. Callahan in harness the one mile track record will be lowered to 1 minute 25 seconds. When Willie Windle reduced the mile record to 2:25 in 1890, and in the following year lowered it to 2:21, the performance was regarded as marvelous.

In England early in 1892, when F. J. Osmond, the English champion, rode a mile in 2:16, it was not deemed possible to put the record under two minutes. Now the system of record breaking has been improved, and while some remarkable one mile records may be made upon special straightaway courses this year, it is the track record that is interesting the majority of riders.

The Pope's Health.

Pope Leo XIII. has authorized his physician, Dr. Lapponi, to communicate to the medical faculty such information about himself as may be of interest to them. Dr. Lapponi says that the Pope's health at the present time is perfect, as it has been for nearly the whole of his long life; his eyesight is so good that he can read without glasses; he looks fragile, but is stronger than might be imagined; he needs but little sleep, not more than three or four hours a night; his mind and memory are in the best condition; he is an indefatigable worker, attending to the details of his world wide duties every day of the year.

What Dr. Lapponi says about the Pope's habits of living is very interesting. He is exceedingly abstemious in his diet. For breakfast a cup of coffee with bread; for dinner, soup, a modicum of meat, and a vegetable, with a small glassful of Bordeaux wine; for supper, soup with bread, and the same quantity of wine. For a man 85 years old, or, indeed, for an intellectual man at any time of life, there could not be a better dietary.

Past and Present.

There was a time when every maid
Around the fire-place blocking,
In childish innocence essayed
To hang thereby her stocking.
But now this fashion has gone by,
And there are sundry rumors
This year that every girl so high
Will [illegible] her bloomers. —[illegible]

REMODELING THE BANK

Elegant New Home Planned for the First National.

GETTING DOWN TO STREET LEVEL.

New Front to Be of Limestone, Light Brick and Terra Cotta, in Italian Renaissance Style—Upper Stories to Contain Fine Offices.

The improvement in the First National Bank Building, which has so long been talked of, and championed continually by The Daily Press, is at last to be accomplished, for now it has been definitely decided to make the long contemplated alterations.

At the latest meeting of the Board of Directors, Architect A. L. C. Marsh, of the firm of Marsh, Israels & Harder of New York city, submitted complete plans and estimates, prepared in accordance with the previous directions of the Board.

Chief of the alterations proposed are an entirely new front, and changes of the first and second story beam levels so as to bring the banking floor down to the street. Above the banking floor the building will have all the appointments of a first-class office building, and it will be one of the finest in town.

The style of the Italian renaissance will be followed in the design for the new front. The first story will be of limestone, and the upper portion of light brick and terra cotta, altogether making a decided novelty in the commercial architecture of Plainfield.

It is expected that within a few days contracts for the execution of the work will be signed.

ACQUITTED.

The Plainfield Boys Had No Intent to Kill Evans.

The jury on the Kane-Welsh trial at Elizabeth court yesterday went out at 11:30 a. m. as stated exclusively in The Press, and did not return until 6:30 p. m. when the foreman rendered for the jury a verdict for acquittal on the charge of manslaughter, basing their opinion, as was stated afterward in conversation with a party of newspaper men on the facts set forth by Judge Coddington in his eloquent plea to the effect, first, that the bullet descended at sharp angle instead of ascending as it would have done, (as conclusively proved by Surveyor Quinn's diagrams and charts), had it been fired by the boys, second, that testimony of Hospital surgeons that probes were introduced into Evans's head in various directions other than that taken by the bullet, which fact doubtless hastened death; and third, that the State had either lost or would not produce the bullet extracted, so that the jury might compare it with a 22-calibre cartridge bullet which fitted the gun used. Great rejoicing is felt by the boys' friends in this city over the verdict, and congratulations are pouring in on Judge Coddington from all sides for his masterful handling of the case.

NOTHING LIKE IT.

Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy Makes Another Remarkable Cure.

(From the Times Union, Albany, N. Y.)

Four years ago, Mrs. Markham, who resides on First street, corner of North Swan, noticed a sensitive spot on her left limb. It was apparently nothing serious, but soon developed into a sore, and before long the limb was a mass of ulcers. Mrs. Markham employed some of our best physicians a dozen or more in all, but she obtained no relief. In fact, was told that nothing could be done for her, so for four years she suffered with these dreadful ulcers, which has eaten their way to the bone.

A little less than a year ago, an acquaintance told her about Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and that he believed she would find relief in using it. Mrs. Markham's four years of suffering had made her skeptical, the more so, as she had obtained no relief from any of the numerous physicians who had attended her during these years of suffering.

The friend offered to send her a bottle of year after taking the first dose, the ulcers have disappeared, all that is left to show what she has suffered is a swelling on the ankle of the left limb which is fast disappearing.

Mrs. Markham is naturally strong in her praises of Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy, and feels that but for it she would now be a helpless cripple, if not a corpse.

Such a straightforward endorsement needs no comment. Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy cures diseases when taken according to directions, its acts directly upon the kidneys, liver and blood. In cases of nervousness, dyspepsia, rheumatism, ulcers old sores blood poisoning and Bright's disease it has made pronounced cures after all other treatments have failed.

A Servant's Carelessness.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. D. Snediker on Grove street, came near being destroyed by fire on Friday night of last week during the blizzard. A servant girl who only had five quilts on her bed, to keep her warm, thought a hot iron would be a nice bedfellow and heated one to a high heat and put it into her bed while the family were at their evening meal. The fumes of burning wool alarmed the family and a search was commenced at the furnace. The cellar and every room was searched for the cause.

When the servant's room was reached her bed was found to be in a blaze. Mr. Snediker and son George set to work in a practical manner and the fire was put out without the department or the neighborhood being alarmed, although the bedding was almost entirely destroyed.

Mrs. A. D. Phillips of Central avenue is entertaining her niece Miss Ella Phillips of Jersey City.

BRIAR PIPE
GIVEN AWAY
WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF
DUKES MIXTURE
for 35 cents
Every pipe stamped
DUKES MIXTURE OF ATC
2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Rates of Advertising

Space	Weeks 1	Weeks 2	Weeks 3	Months 1	Months 2	Months 3	Months 6	Months 12
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50	$15.00
2 in.	1.50	2.00	3.00	4.00	4.50	8.00	12.00	20.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	25.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	32.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	37.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	40.00
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	38.00	54.00	80.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00	140.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings.
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation.
Everything,

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 8 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
B EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR,
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos, always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.

L. B. WOOLSTON. J. P. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS' SUPPLIES, [illegible] NORTH AV

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1894, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer

FOR MALARIA,
GENERAL DEBILITY,
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. CO.
RAHWAY, N. J.

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanly manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S
INDIAN VEGETABLE
PILLS
Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood!
Cure Diarrhœa, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE
NEVERSLIP
THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE.

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.

Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,
Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.

On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dealers in hardware, blacksmiths' supplies, etc.
sole agents for Union county.

$6.00
........TO........
CALIFORNIA

is our Sleeping Car Rate on the Phillips-Rock Island Tourist Excursion, from Boston and kindred distant cities on the route of this car, to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The cars have upholstered spring seats, are Pullman build, and appointments perfect.

You have a special manager on the car all the way, and excursions run once a week, leaving Boston every Tuesday. Save money by taking this popular mode of travel.

Address for full particulars,

A. PHILLIPS & CO.
296 Washington st., Boston, Mass.

JNO. SEBASTIAN,
Gen. Passenger Agent, Chicago

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

THE CUT OF THE SKIRT WILL BE THE CAUSE FOR UNREST.

Some of the Things Decreed in Paris. Popularity of Crepon Over Silk. Spring Fashions and Fabrics Assert Themselves.

One of the leading features of the season's fashions is the black crepon skirt, which appears on all occasions, at all hours, and has completely usurped the place of the black moire so popular last year. It is an elaborate example of crinkling in patterns and a work of art in the way it is cut and hung; but it is usually devoid of all trimming and always the smart thing to wear for a morning call or a swell reception, being equally suitable for maid or matron. She has only to live up to fashion's privileges in the way of variations in the bodice, which has become such a continual experiment in unique and striking combinations, and an apparently extensive wardrobe is accomplished with one skirt. This fashion for waists different from the skirt promises an indefinite extension, and will blossom out in fresh varieties with the spring flowers. It is too full of possibilities to be quickly discarded. One advantage which crepon has over silk is that it wears wonderfully well, and besides this, it is equally suitable for morning, afternoon and evening wear, where full dress is not required, and quite as good style with a simple plain waist as with the most resplendent confection of satin, chiffon, and spangles. The new silk crepons for spring are in greater varieties than ever. There are chine effects in flowers of natural colors and Oriental patterns which are very soft, in prettily blended tints. Tiny flowered stripes are seen in light grounds, and crepons, with the wide uneven marking are spotted in contrasting colors with great effect. Another charming variety seems to have an upper surface quite distinct and very thin and yet is all woven together. Crepons bids fair to take the place of foulards, so long and serviceably worn, and one which will be especially useful as a substitute is navy blue with small white dots. French glace silk, very soft and glossy, are among the new spring goods, and these come in brilliant plaids beautiful to look upon and pretty pompadour effects. The man behind the counter will tell you that entire skirts are to be made of these gorgeous plaids, and worn with plain silk bodices and blouse waists. However, it is difficult to imagine that any woman's fancy could lead her into wearing one of the wide full skirts made of such a mixture of bright colors; but there is the seashore, where anything, no matter how bizarre, is permissible.

The skill of the dressmaker seems likely to be taxed to the utmost in the varied phases of the modern skirt. The latest decree in Paris is that the skirts of morning dresses shall be short enough to clear the ground, and made with no fulness at the waist, either at the back or sides. They must be fitted very carefully around the hips and stand out in folds at the feet in front as well as at the back. Another variety of skirt originating in Paris has three box plaits in the back, which meet, and three in front which are separated. Three bands of guipure embroidery ending in rosettes of velvet trim this skirt. The gown is of gray figured taffeta, and the bodice, quite plain at the back has a jacket effect, wide epaulettes, and collar of the embroidery.

It is too early for spring millinery and too late to invest in winter hats, but one or two specimens are interesting as a possible hint of things to come. The round, dented crown, with a band of velvet in front and clusters of ostrich feathers at the side, is a Parisian fancy called the Henri III. hat. It is a glace felt, while the other shape is of petunia velvet, with ostrich tips curling down on either side. A charming little bonnet for evening or day wear is simply a round visor-shaped piece, possibly four or five inches deep in the widest place, covered with black velvet and trimmed on the edge with four rows of small rhinestones set a little distance apart. This fits close to the head and well back, where there are tiny black ostrich tips standing out at either side with a wing effect and bows of black velvet for a finish.—New York Sun.

A Revised Version.

They used to sing some time ago
A rather plaintive song,
"Man wants but little here below,
Nor wants that little long."
But nowadays the thing is set
With music to the rhyme.
"Man wants as much as he can get,
And wants it all the time."
—Philadelphia Record

MUSIC TRIED ON BEASTS.

Curious Effects of a Violin Upon Various Animals.

It is a well-known fact that many animals are susceptible to music. Many dogs will bark or howl at the strains of a mouth organ or melodeon; while others protest vocally against piano playing, and few dogs can endure in silence the playing of minor chords. On the other hand, almost every woodsman will tell you that he can charm a chipmunk into appreciative attention by whistling a lively tune. Cats, too, are influenced by music, and many cases are on record of their fondness for piano playing, while violin music often stirs them to emulation, a fact which New England housewives ascribed to the sympathy existing between pussy alive and the parts of pussy dead that were fabled to furnish the fiddle strings. Experiment has shown that individual animals are peculiarly influenced to joy or sorrow by some one particular note, chord, or tone, while other music may have no effect upon them.

An Englishman, C. J. Cornish, has been making musical experiments on various kinds of animals at the Zoological Society's Gardens in London, and he writes most interestingly of them. With his violinist he went to the abode of the snakes, and the musician, hidden from the sight of his animal audience, began to play. Mr. Cornish writes of this:

"The dweller on the threshold of the snake's home is the monitor lizard, an active and formidable saurian, some five feet in length, whose watchful habits were said to give notice of the approach of the crocodile. It did not belie its reputation for watchfulness, for the instant it heard the sounds of the violin through its opened door it raised its head and stood alert and listening. Then the forked tongue came out and played incessantly round its lips; soft, slow music followed, and the lizard became quite still, except for a gentle swaying of the head from side to side."

Some blacksnakes in the same cage were similarly affected, although they were slower to show their appreciation. At first they raised their heads, waving them from side to side in an apparent endeavor to ascertain whence the sounds came. Having made up their minds, they set out one after another for the source, and nosed up and down the wall in the manner peculiar to serpents. A big boa constrictor, who had been asleep for some few days, uncurled himself preparatory to taking a glide all around the cage.

Suddenly the violinist swept his bow across the strings in a harsh and loud discord. The blacksnakes dropped their heads and hustled for the further corner. The boa stopped short and evinced an inclination to hurt somebody. As for the monitor lizard, he executed a startled flop and scuttled off with an air of disgust and alarm, declining thereafter to be coaxed back by the most alluring airs. His trust had been basely betrayed and he evidently didn't propose to put himself again in a position where he would be made a subject for practical jokes.

Selections from William Tell were tried upon the sheep and goats, and they were immensely pleased with the opera. At the Shepherd's Call they sniffed the air inquiringly and crowded up to the bars in a compact bunch. When the music stopped they voiced a unanimous request for more with a great acclaim of bleating and baaing. A lively measure brought them all back to the bars again except a few goats, who frisked about in the liveliest fashion, only to stop short with the cessation of the music.

HOW THEY HUSTLE IN THE WEST.

A Savings Bank Looks Around Variously for Customers.

The West in general considers itself to be a hustler, and the East is willing to admit that it is.

Western people explain their hustling propensities by saying that the East has two or three hours' start of them every day, so they must move lively if they want to keep up with the procession.

An example of Western hustling is a bank safe which the savings bank distributes among its customers and friends. It is described as a nickel-plated brass bank, with combination lock, and highly ornamental and convenient. It is lent to any one who will deposit or has a deposit of $2 in the savings bank, who must agree to save his spare money in the bank and bring it to the savings bank at least every three months. If the bank is lost the savings bank charges $2. Says the savings bank with winged words of wisdom:

You must hesitate to bring small amounts to a bank, but these bank safes you can have at your home, where you can deposit any amount and at any time when convenient.

Money deposited in the bank safe can only be taken out at our bank, as we keep the key, and when brought to us the money is counted in your presence and is placed to your credit on your pass book, where it draws interest.

Call and get one or more of these bank safes or boxes for yourself and children. They will help you save money and they will cost you nothing for their use.

NOT HIS STOVE.

One Experience of the Kind Years Ago Had Taught Him a Lesson.

A policeman who was patrolling his beat on Grove street the other evening came along to an old colored man who was leaning over his gate, and queried:

"Uncle, did you hear that explosion on this street last night?"

"'Sploshun, sah—'sploshun? No, sah, I didn't h'ar 'bout no 'sploshun."

"A colored man's stove blew up."

"Stove blowed up! Whoo! Jist blowed right up, eh?"

"Yes; he got a stick of wood with powder in it, and it blew up his stove and almost ruined the house."

"Powder in de wood, eh? Got dat stick from some udder man's woodpile, did he? Who was de pusson, sah?"

"I don't know, but thought you could perhaps tell me."

"No, sah; I can't tell ye, kase I hain't heard o' no such case. Mebbe yo' dun reckoned it was me?"

"Well, I didn't know."

"But I knows, sah. Nuffin' like dat has happened to me fur de last twenty y'ars. When I libed down in Toledo I dun got blowed up with powder in a stick o' wood, jist like yo' bin tellin' 'bout, an' it l'arned me a lesson. Eber since dat I split de stick in two an' look for de powder. Shoo! Dat mus' hev been a fule nigger who got hold o' dat woodpile an' blowed hisself up.—Detroit Free Press.

You can tell by the flavor of the honey where the bees have been.

Nine troubles out of ten will run when you look them squarely in the face.

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTION WITH OVER 12,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175 North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J H Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depo
Horsley Barker Grove and Front sts
G W V Moy 4th and Park avenue
Frank Rowley Somerset and Craig place
J O Field, Somerville.
J B Gutteridge, Netherwood
Hotel Albion, Park ave and 8th street

Subscriber's Name	Address.
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H.	318 West 7th st
Adams, Dr D C	46 Grove st
Adams H C	115 E 6th st
Addis & Son	132 North av
Andrews F H	318 Central av
Albion Hotel, The	Park av and 8th st
Alert Hose Co., No 1	W 2d st
Babcock, Geo H	8th and Union sts
Barnaby F A	Plainfield
Brakeley, P W Dr	Dunellen
Boone C W Dr	7th and Liberty sts
Bushnell, John	Central ave, and 9th st
Beerbower, J H	Park av and 2d st
Berg, Joe F, M D	122 E 5th st
Blair A C	149 North av
Boice, Runyon & Co	246 Park av
Board of Education	8th st and Arlington av
Booth, E H	Central av
Brookside Sanitarium	Somerset st
Brown J M	612 Central av
Central Times	108 E Front st
Clark, E B	131 Crescent av
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Chase Fred F	656 North av
Closson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
Constitutionalist Office	105 North av
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	310 W Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs F A	16 LaGrande av
Cruikshank, S. A	Belvidere av
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, B F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy	Park av & Front st
Daily Press	105 North ave
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Decker, F—pay station	Westfield, N J
Doane, T O—Chief P F D	438 W 5th st
Dunn Fred W	Park and North av
Dumont, John B	151 E 7th st
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave. and 7th st
Hose No 1	West 2d st
Engine No 2	2d st near Park av
Engine No 3	Somerset st
Evans, Geo C	37 Washington ave
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Force A L	82 Duer st
Fisk, Chas. J	211 West 7th st
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
Freight House	C. RR, Depot
French Bros	Somerset st
Fritts, Dr J T	428 Park av
Fleming, Howard	1012 Park av
French, C Frank	69 Somerset st
do do	327 Park av
Gaston, M. D., W F	5th and New st
Grant, Geo W Chief of Police	418 W 6th st
Griffen, A M	119 E Front st
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 8th st
Hegeman, B. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	703 Watchung av
Hedden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Hoagland's City Express	161 North av
Howell E O	191 North av
Holmes E H	206 Madison av
Hogan Chas W	20 Rockview av
Hummer & Mulford	220 Park av
Ivins D C	311 Watchung av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	212 W Front st
Kaufman W T	521 W 7th st
Keely & Son	LaGrande av and Scott pl
Kirkner, J	8th and Division sts
Leggett Pharmacy	Park av and Front st
Linnett W E	110 Jackson av
Lowrie E H, Dr	512 Park av
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L N	Crescent ave
Linke, Frank	227 W Front st
Lounsbury, F C	Plainfield av
Mallinson A D	205 North av
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
MacDonald, J F	186 E Front st
Marsh Craig A	108 E Front st
Mathewson W B Dr	Babcock Bldg
do do	97 Rockview av
McQuaide James R	731 W 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
Moy G W V	Park av and 8th st
Muhlenberg Hospital	638 W 3rd st
Murray, Dr. W H	737 Watchung av
Murray J W	313 W 4th st
Music Hall	49B
Myers, J K	139 E 7th st
Newhall, Henry B	144 E 7th st
N Y & N J Telephone Co	175 North av
Park Club The	Washington av
Fenton T B jr	Rockview av
Perkins Ed C	Central av
Plainfield Beef Co	254 E 3rd st
do Electric Light Co	Madison av
do Gas Light Co	E 4th st
do Street Railway Co	Grant av
do Water Supply Co	Netherwood
Police Station	Park av and Railroad
do Chief Office	Park av
Pond Machine Tool Co	S 2nd st
Pope J C & Co	E Front st
Postal Telegraph & Cable Co	104 Park av
Potter, C jr	427 W 7th st
Potter Printing Press Co	688 South av
Probasco J S Dr	E Front st
Randolph, L W	140 Front st
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Reed Chas A	27 Myrtle av
Reed & Coddington	Babcock Bldg
Reinhart J W	69 Belvidere av
Rheaume L A	Watchung av and 4th st
Rogers W H	408 W 5th st
Rowley Frank	45 Somerset st
Roberts, D S	127 North av
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and 4th st
Rogers, D W	232 W 2d st
Roome, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves
Runyon, A M & Son	402 Park av
Runyon, A M & Son	416 Madison av
Rushmore, Dr Edward	429 Park av near Fifth st
Runkle, H. G	531 8th st
Runyon, Chas W	169 North av
Rice, R. W. & Co	cor. Emily and Duer sts
Rushmore Robert	3rd st and Grant av
Saunders W L	95 Mercer av
Serrell, Lemuel W	625 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Shaw, E J	Front st. opp. Park ave
Shepard A D	Fanwood
Slater F M	27 Jackson av
Smalley Bros	North av
Smith, W P	Belvidere av., Netherwood
Smith, Jas A	125 W Front st
Streall, H A	1306 Hillside av
Stevens F R	783 South av
Stevens Geo O	Grant av and W Front st
Stephenson W J	148 North av
Sykes T F	Front st Fanwood
Talmadge, Henry P	Netherwood
Taylor Mrs M S	10 Rockview Terrace
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Terrill & Cole	200 W 2d st
Thompson, A D	147-149 North av
Thompson, A D	Farragut road
Thickstun, Jno A	223 Madison av
Titsworth, Jos M	418 W 7th st
Tomlinson, Dr T H	212 La Grande av
Tobin Geo J	137 North av
Tracy, J Evarts	440 8th st
Tunison W J	342 Watchung av
Tweedy, O. B.	125 Crescent av
Ulrich & Blatz	160 W Front st
Union Beef Co	265 E 3rd st
United States Express Co	133 North av
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle J W	122 North av
Wadsworth, W B	452 6th st
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Wharton, Clifton jr	816 3rd Place
Woltman, E	609 West Seventh st
Wiechers, J F	W 6th st., near Grant ave
Wiertz Max	544 W Front st

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD. NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	60c	Hempstead N Y	45c
Astoria, N Y	50c	Hoboken N J	35c
Babylon, N Y	60c	Hunter's Point N Y	45c
Bath, N Y	60c	Irvington N J	40c
Bayonne N J	45c	Islip N Y	60c
Bergen Point N J	35c	Jamaica N Y	45c
Bayside N Y	50c	Jersey City N J	35c
Bay Shore N Y	75c	Keyport N J	50c
Sayville N Y	60c	Kingston N J	35c
Belleville N J	40c	Laurel Hill N Y	45c
Blissville N Y	45c	Leonia N J	45c
Bloomfield N J	35c	Little Neck N Y	50c
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	60c
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	50c
Brooklyn N Y	35c	Madison N J	40c
Caldwell N J	45c	Matawan N J	60c
Carlstadt N J	45c	Millburn N J	35c
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	30c
Chatham N J	50c	Morristown N J	45c
Closter N J	45c	Newark N J	25c
Colt's Neck N J	75c	New Brunswick N J	25c
Coney Island N Y	45c	Newton N Y	45c
Cresskill N J	45c	New York N Y	35c
Dover N J	40c	Orange N J	35c
East Norwich N Y	60c	Pamrapo N J	45c
Eatontown N J	60c	Passaic N J	35c
Elizabeth N J	25c	Paterson N J	35c
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	25c
Fairview N J	45c	Rahway N J	25c
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	60c
Far Rockaway N Y	45c	Seabright N J	60c
Flatbush N Y	35c	Short Hills N J	35c
Flushing N Y	40c	South Amboy N J	35c
Fort Lee N J	45c	South River N J	35c
Franklin Park N J	35c	Staten Island N Y	35c
Freehold N J	50c	Westfield N J	15c
German Settlem't N Y	60c	Woodbridge N J	25c
Glen Cove N Y	50c	Yonkers N Y	60c
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton, N J	60c
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	60c

THE TARANTULA KILLER.

A Giant Wasp that Stings the Big Spider to Death.

The tarantula is a large burrowing spider which dwells in a shaft-like hole it sinks in the earth. Its appearance is most repulsive, and inspires any one who examines it with a feeling of profound disgust. As it stands, it frequently covers an area as large as the palm of a man's hand, and over its body and legs there bristles a thick covering of red-brown hair. It may be said that its home is in many lands, but its greatest size is attained in tropical and semi-tropical countries. In the south of Europe, along the Mediterranean coast, it has been known for centuries as the "mad spider," because the symptoms following its bite are similar to those of hydrophobia. Then the peasantry, especially those of Sicily, regard it with mingled feelings of hate and superstitious dread.

Yet, notwithstanding all its great courage and pugnacity, there is one enemy the sound of whose coming throws it into paroxysms of fear. This enemy, of which it has an instructive dread, is a large wasp, known as "the tarantula killer." It has a bright blue body, nearly two inches long, and wings of a golden hue. As it flies here and there in the sunlight, glittering like a flash of fire, one moment resting on a leaf, the next on a granite boulder, it keeps up an incessant buzzing, which is caused by the vibration of its wings. No sooner does the tarantula hear this than he trembles with fear, for well he knows the fate in store for him when once his mortal foe perceives his whereabouts. This it soon does, and hastens to the attack. At first it is content with flying in circles over its intended victim. Gradually it approaches nearer and nearer. At last, when it is within a few inches, the tarantula rises upon his hind legs and attempts to grapple with his foe, but without success. Like a flash the giant wasp is on its back. The deadly fangs have been avoided. The next instant a fearful sting penetrates deep into the spider's body.

Its struggles almost cease. A sudden paralysis creeps over it and it staggers, helpless like a drunken man, first to one side then to the other. These symptoms, however, are only of short duration. While they last the wasp, but a few inches away, awaits the result; nor does it have to wait long. A few seconds and all sign of life has disappeared from the tarantula; the once powerful legs curl up beneath its body, and it rolls over dead.

Then takes place one of the most strange incidents which illustrate the perfect adaptation to circumstances, everywhere so remarkable in the economy of the insect world. The wasp seizes hold of the now prostrate spider, and with little apparent effort drags it to a hole in the ground. Therein it completely buries it with earth, after having first deposited in its back an egg, which in course of time changes into a grub, and lives upon the carcass in which it was born. This grub in a short time becomes another tarantula wasp, thus adding one more to the ranks of the enemy of the spider race.

The amount of slaughter which these large wasps inflict upon the tarantulas is almost incredible, and it is noticed that those to which the greatest destruction is due are the females. It can only be realized when we know that though the female deposits but one egg in each spider, she has a large number to get rid of, each one of which she provides with a home, and its grub with future sustenance at the expense of the life of a spider.

Wild Horses of Wyoming.

A gentleman from Wyoming tells me there are, at least 20,000 horses running wild in that state and in Idaho and Nevada, this winter, many of them without a brand.

They have been turned out to take care of themselves because there is no sale for them at any price out there, and they will not bring enough in the Eastern States to cover the expense of transportation.

The estimated cost of keeping horses over winter, including forage and attendance, is only two dollar a head, but their owners will not even invest that amount in them, for it would be money wasted. They will not bring one dollar a head in the spring.

The legislature of Nevada has passed a law authorizing the shooting of stallions running at large, which is considered necessary to restrict the natural increase.—Chicago Record.

Miss Lee of Central avenue is visiting relatives in New York.

George A. Newman of Orange is visiting his brother, H. O. Newman.

P.P. VanArsdale,
PIANO TUNER.
Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 189, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 109 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 301 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 8y19t

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROVI
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.
OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.
Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Office cor. Front St. and Park Ave.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security. Mar30tf

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 21 SOMERSET ST. 3-18-tf

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE. CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
30 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J. mch30tf

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 308 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to. 4p4y

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at their residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. satisfactorily performed. f1y1

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.
TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.
Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stoves can be found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the best Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in this section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.
Kes of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and
Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery Notary Public. Offices corner of Park avenue and Second street.—Jestf

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 183, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of CONSTITUTIONALIST. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES R. THIERS,
Dentist,
48 Somerset street. A new local anesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.—Jestf

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
[Successor to T. J. Carey,]
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—34 W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1
No moving a specialty.

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 23½ W. Front street, to 303 West Front, one door east of Madison avenue and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

TWENTY
Yeas experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 3 doors above Peacestree
Mr. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to Shoeing, Forging, Gumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Liver and Boarding Stables.
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park Avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No, 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
Piping, Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning,
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL. 6. 11 11-M

Estey
Pianos
Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Installments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.
CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. [illegible]
MUNN & CO., NEW YORK, 361 BROADWAY.

The Constitutionalist
A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.
PUBLISHED AT
Plainfield, New Jersey.
TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.
A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor
Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

PARTICULAR MENTION.

David Gray of Grant avenue is suffering with the grip.

Mrs. McDonald of Newark is a guest of Mrs. Fred Slater.

S. Hoffman has just recovered from an attack of the grip.

Mrs. Chas. Delishunt of Warren street is ill with bronchitis.

Walt. C. Williams of East Front street is on a business trip to Stelton.

Craig Waldron has concluded 13 years of service with Grocer J. A. Smith.

Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., will give a dinner to ten feminine friends, Thursday.

Miss Lizzie DeCamp of Chester is visiting Miss Lillian A. Force of 82 Duer street.

George Squires of North Plainfield entertained a party of friends at dinner yesterday.

Mrs. George Thatcher of West Seventh street, has recovered from an attack of the grip.

Raymond Gould of New York is here looking after religious interests which he represents.

Mrs. John C. Smalley of Newark is visiting at the home of William Smalley on Craig place.

Theodore Smith of Fairview avenue is again confined to the house with an attack of rheumatism.

Thanks to the skill of Dr. T. S. Davis, Mrs. Warren Townley is steadily improving from her serious illness.

James Conroy of Somerset street wears a broad smile, as he is the happy father of a little girl who arrived Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. O. N. Mundy have returned from their wedding tour. They visited Philadelphia and Washington.

Mrs. John H. Higgins, who has been visiting her parents in Weston, returned to her home on Stone street yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Smith started Monday morning for Cincinnati to attend the annual convention of electricians in that city.

David Adelman, only son of Superintendent John Adelman of the Street Railway, has recovered from that dangerous illness, scarlet fever.

Geo. O. Stevens, one of the endmen of the amateur minstrels, has a song, "If Barnum Was Only Alive", written expressly by Wade Whipple for the occasion.

W. U. Masters of Pasadena, Cal., who has traveled extensively all over the country, is spending several days in this city, which he avers is one of the finest he has ever visited.

Miss Katie Watson and Miss Lena Redner, charming young women who have been enjoying the rural pleasures of Winter festivities in the Washington Valley section, have returned to New York.

Mrs. Michael Wunderlick and her three children, who have been seriously ill with scarlet fever at their home on Leland avenue, have so far recovered that the quarantine will be removed in a few days.

Mrs. Bernard Brady and daughter of Central avenue have returned after a visit of one week with her sister in Jersey City, but will leave again in a few days for the South to spend the balance of the Winter.

F. M. Hoagland, who is conducting the meetings in the Y. M. C. A. Assembly Hall this week, is well known as having successfully conducted a series of meetings for young people at Ocean Grove for a number of seasons.

Mrs. Willis B. Moore, daughter-in-law of William B. Moore of 612 New street, is dangerously ill at Newark. She was Miss Amy Weiss who resided in Plainfield before her marriage. She has many friends here who are anxiously interested in her condition.

Charles Houseman, who for years piloted Locomotive 385 through this city in her flight against the wind, who is one of the oldest engineers in the Central's employ, and who now pulls the famous 385 against time, stole away from Somerville yesterday to visit a few warm friends in this city. He was royally entertained.

John Y. Barrett the milkman, whose home is near Evona, is particularly happy, and wears an unusually broad smile as he serves his customers these frosty mornings. He thought he would keep the cause a secret, but The Press has discovered the cause of all his happiness—it's a little boy, the first child, and was born on Blizzard Friday, Feb. 8.

The experience of Geo. A. Apgar, of German Valley, N. J., is well worth remembering. He was troubled with chronic diarrhoea and doctored for five months and was treated by four different doctors without benefit. He then began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, of which one small bottle effected a complete cure. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

THE LIBRARY GETS IT.

Schoonmaker Collection to Stay as Public Property.

COUNSELOR C. A. MARSH WINS AGAIN.

The Prerogative Court Decides as He Claimed in the Dispute Over the Cloisonne Portion of the Job Male Estate.

Craig A. Marsh appeared before the Prerogative Court in Trenton Tuesday in reference to the matter of the Schoonmaker collection of Japanese pottery and cloisonne ware being turned over to the Public Library in accordance with expressed desire of the deceased owner, Job Male.

The delay of the Public Library in receiving the collection was occasioned by several half-blood relatives of Mr. Male interposing a claim as heirs, to a share of the collection, the personal estate having been exhausted in liquidating his indebtedness.

The administrators, Messrs. Pope and Harrison, were notified by the counsel of these heirs, not to turn the collection over to the library, and they awaited the decision of the Perogative Court.

Yesterday the administrators furnished an accounting of the estate, which was approved by the Court. This virtually abrogates any claim on the collection, and today the Public Library officers were notified that the collection was at their disposal.

Mr. Marsh is entitled to high credit for the successful manner in which he conducted the case for the administrators.

26TH ANNUAL STATE CONVENTION.

The first session of the twenty-sixth annual State convention of the Young Men's Christian Association was held in the First Baptist Church last Thursday.

The following officers were elected:

President—W. D. Murray of Plainfield.
Vice Presidents—W. D. Porter of Summit, and B. A. Hegeman of Plainfield, General Traffic Manager the D. L. & W. R.R.
Secretaries—G. T. Lambert of the Somerville School, and G. Davis of Madison.

The last act of the convention was for the delegates to join hands and sing "Blest be the tie that binds", which was rendered with much feeling. It was a most impressive and affecting scene.

President Murray then declared the 25th annual State Convention of the New Jersey Y. M. C. A. adjourned sine die.

Dr. Richards pronounced the benediction, after which the delegates had a general handshaking and departed greatly benefited by their attendance.

W. H. WILLIAMS WEDS.

The Veteran Plainfield Newsdealer Married to Mrs. Montross of New York.

Rev. J. C. Hoyt on Wednesday at 4 united in marriage W. H. Williams, the veteran Plainfield newsdealer, and Mrs. A. Montross of Monroe, N. Y.

Mr. Williams came to Plainfield quite a boy, April 1, 1850, and has only lived away from town five years. He married Wm. Betil's daughter Aug. 24. 1861; enlisted with twelve other young men at Trenton, Aug. 28, 1861; was discharged in front of Petersburgh as Quartermaster-Sergeant of Sixth N. J. Vols., Oct. 11, 1864.

He completed his thirtieth year as Plainfield's newsdealer Dec. 1, 1894. His first wife died six years ago last month.

The Bank's New Move.

The officials of the First National Bank are contemplating removing temporarily to the building now occupied by the postoffice, during the remodeling of their own building. A ten-days refusal has been secured from A. Vanderbeek, who has charge of the renting, with the privilege of leasing it for one year. If the deal is consummated the whole lower floor will be remodeled.

Good
at all times.
Better than anything else.
Best of all external remedies
Allcock's
Porous Plaster
For lame back, stiff joints, sore muscles, soreness in the back, chest or side.
The Only Safe Way, when suffering, is to insist on having "ALLCOCK'S."
Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills
are purely vegetable; a safe and effective remedy for young and old.

Known Here.

Madge Yorke, the actress, who was killed in Philadelphia a few days ago by a jealous lover, was here this season with a "Baggage Check" company, which appeared in Music Hall. She is remembered by several Plainfielders who take an interest in the histrionic art.

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm and that she has also used it for lame back with great success. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

Scott's Emulsion
will cure a stubborn cough when all the ordinary cough remedies have failed. Try it for yourself. We are putting up a fifty-cent size chiefly for that purpose. A cough is usually the telltale of a weakened physical condition. Correct that condition by the use of a proper remedy and the cough will soon disappear.
Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil and Hypophosphites acts in two ways. It nourishes, strengthens and builds up the system, at the same time allays the irritation and heals the inflammation. It gives immediate relief at night from the choking sensation so often accompanying a cold.
Don't be persuaded to take a substitute!
Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

FEAST FOR EYES AND PALATE.

Methodist Women Arrange a Delightful Bazar.

Pretty decorations, charming costumes and bright faces all contributed to make the bazar and supper in Vincent Chapel last evening a success. The walls and gallery were artistically draped in American flags, and each table was a perfect harmony of color.

The chocolate table was the first to the left on entering, and there in one of the smaller classrooms the pale light from the candelabra shone on a most artistic arrangement of china and silver. Pale green and white were the prevailing colors in the decorations. Here dainty cups of chocolate were served to the many customers by Mrs J B Joy, Miss Harriet French, Mrs. James Hallock and Miss Minnie French.

The next table in order was the fancy table on which were a variety of dainty articles large and small, the uses of many of which are only known to the gentler sex. Mrs C C Cokefair was chairman of the committee in charge of this table. She was assisted by Mrs Geo D Rogers, Mrs Geo R Cornwell, Mrs O L Jenkins, Mrs Samuel Clark and Mrs Hervey Doane.

Stationery was for sale at the next table and attracted many to buy by its artistic arrangements. The numerous customers at this table were waited upon by Mrs J N McNaughton, Miss Ida Angleman, Miss M Cory, Miss Gertrude Trenham, Miss Stackhouse, Miss Fulmer and Miss J. Schafer.

At the right of the entrance was the lemonade booth where draughts of that cooling beverage were passed out to the crowd of thirsty young people who surrounded it. This booth was under the direction of Miss Mattie Humble, the Misses Langer, Miss Fanny Chandler and Miss Etta Raybert.

In the centre of the room was the candy booth, prettily draped in the National colors, while dishes of choice home-made candies tempted the palates of the passersby. The good things attracted many, but the charming faces inside the booth made the number much greater and induced many to invest their change in the goodly display of the candies. Miss Louise Pangborn was the efficient chairman of the committee in charge and her assistants were Misses Elsie Horne, Barnes, Madge Barnes, Sadie Douglass, Elizabeth Cornwell, Florence Smith, Smith, Chandler and Mrs. Charles Lyman

In the smaller class rooms at the back and side, tables were arranged and here was served the supper. Quite a number enjoyed the good things provided, and later in the evening the tables were again crowded with the lovers of the delicacies.

Mrs. L. M. French was in charge of this department and very successful were the results of her labors. She was ably assisted by Mrs D E Davis, Mrs I W Pangborn, Mrs Homan, Mrs G Q Packer, Mrs C H Rugg, Mrs J C Peck, Miss Sharp, Mrs N Y Hull, Mrs N W Pike, Mrs S Baker, Mrs Bond, and Miss Laura Mulford. The waitresses were Miss May Mulford, Miss Alice Jenkins, Miss Eva Jenkins, Miss Anna Stafford, Miss Edna French, Miss Lillian Thorn and Miss Cora Shepherd.

The committee, under whose charge the sale was conducted, consisted of Mrs. L. M. French, chairman, Mrs. C. C. Cokefair, and Mrs. O. L. Jenkins.

They certainly deserve a great deal of credit for the successful manner in which everything was arranged, not one mistake or accident spoiling the evening.

Robert Douglass collected tickets at the door.

During the evening there were piano solos by Miss Maude French, Mrs. Charles Lyman, and Miss Louise Pangborn.

Although there was a fair attendance last evening, it is hoped that it will be greatly increased tonight; there will be several selections rendered by Conde's orchestra, and a number of other special features.

$100 Reward $100.
The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surface of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure.
Send for list of testimonials.
F. J. Cheney & Co., Props. Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, 75c.

A Society With High Morals.

The Sour Bed Debating Club, having for its object the elevation of passing [illegible] to a conception of the day, held a very interesting session in their quarters on North avenue last night. The theme considered was "Is". The logic and convincing argument expounded by Col. Williams made the meeting one of practical benefit to its members. To-night the subject will be: "Is the dictionary right or wrong?"

For Morals and Physique.

General Secretary Manning of the Y. M. C. A. desires it stated that the Gymnasium will be open nights of this week, notwithstanding the religious meetings in the Assembly Hall. However, it is desired that as many as possible may attend the meetings.

Wanted—Street-Car Ferry-Boats.

At nearly every crossing on Somerset street the electric railroad tracks are submerged with gutter water, the cars leaving a wake like a steamboat as they pass through it. Getting on and off cars the passengers feel the need of rubber boots Holding His Congregation.

To succeed in this is one of the tests of the modern preacher. There is so much preaching, so many churches and such a multitude of lecturers and other speakers, that people leave the preacher who is dry and uninteresting. It is often a sore trial to a worthy man who is doing his very best. Sometimes congregations are heedless and blameworthy in that they desert a man they ought to stand by. A Scotch preacher was fortunate in this matter in his congregation according to the following story:

A prison chaplain was recently appointed in a certain town. He was a man who greatly magnified his office, and, entering one of the cells on his first round of inspection, he with much pomposity thus addressed the prisoner who occupied it:

"Well, sir, do you know who I am?"

"No, nor I dinna care," was the curt reply.

"Well, I am your prison chaplain."

"Oh! ye are; weel, I hae heard o' ye before."

"And what did ye hear?" returned the chaplain, his curiosity getting the better of his dignity.

"Weel," replied the prisoner, "I heard the last two kirks ye were in ye preached them both empty, but I'll be hanged if ye'll find it sic' an easy matter tae dae the same wi' this ane."

Pool and Billiards in a Church.

The Adams, Mass., Congregational church recently dedicated a congregation house and parsonage containing some radical modern features. The house, besides containing more completely the features found in parish houses, has a bowling alley, a well equipped gymnasium, and a billiard and pool room, the most radical feature of all. The auditorium has a platform with footlights, as near an approach to a stage as could well be built in connection with a church, even in the midst of liberal Adams folk. The church has a well fitted kitchen, many tables, lots of table linen, silverware, and dishes. It has reading rooms, class rooms, and a study for the pastor.

The bowling alley is in the basement, and is always full of merry youths at accessible hours. The gymnasium in the attic is constantly patronized. Last week a class of young men were organized and Professor Seely of Williams College was engaged for instructor. The young women have become jealous, and it has been decided to prohibit the use of the gymnasium by the boys for several hours each day and turn it over to the girls, who are determined to form an athletic association, too.

The church is not selfish. It has thrown open the doors of its fine congregation house to the whole community, believing that a bettering of social conditions is a step toward purification.

There are one or two of the old conservative element who look unfavorably upon the congregation house, and its well patronized pool and billiard tables. One says:

"By and by there will be a saloon connected with every church. If you put in billiard tables, bowling alleys, and gymnasiums, and say as long as the boys will play they had better play at church, why not put in a bar, for as long as men will drink, why not let them drink at church?"—Boston Journal.

Dismissed.

Miss Backbay (of Boston, at the telephone)—Who is it?

Mr. Southchurch—It's me—your fiance.

Miss Backbay (coldly)—You are my fiance no longer. I cannot trust my life's happiness to a man who says, "It's me." Farewell forever!

WE TAKE THE RISK, and don't ask any one to take our word for it that
Dr. Deane's
Dyspepsia Pills
cure dyspepsia, indigestion, habitual constipation, and sick headache. We want to send you a free sample. Then you can tell whether you want to buy them or not. Address
DR. J. A. DEANE CO.,
Kingston, New York.
They are for sale at all druggists 25 cents.

—Attention is called to the advertisement of the Auction sale at the farm of Israel J. Coon, Smalleytown, on Wednesday March 6. Mr. Coon has sold his farm and will have a large auction sale of everything usually used in conducting a well regulated farm.

Newark women have organized under the name Phylitsclspoma. The society has an important mission from the start—educating the dear public how to say its name.

The neighboring town of Madison had a housecleaning time yesterday, and scrubbed James Stout, a hermit who had not had a bath in 14 years. James was a graduate of Bowdoin College, and as a prize pupil in mental philosophy boycotted soap because B. T. Babbitt refused to advertise in the Bowdoin College paper.

What is
CASTORIA
Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhoea and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.
Castoria.
"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."
Dr. G. C. Osgood,
Lowell, Mass.
"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."
Dr. J. F. Kinchelor,
Conway, Ark.
Castoria.
"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."
H. A. Archer, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.
"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, yet we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."
United Hospital and Dispensary,
Boston, Mass.
Allen C. Smith, Pres.,
The Centaur Company, 77 Murray Street, New York City.

E. P. THORN,
No. 125 Park Avenue,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Pure Wines and Liquors,
For Family and Medicinal Use,
A SPECIALTY.
3-26-y

FEBRUARY PRICES.
Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,
73 Market Street, Near Plane Street.
Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.
PRICES DURING FEBRUARY.

Tapestry Brussels carpet per yard, only	50c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$10
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, only	$20
Velvet carpet per yard, only	75c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$15
Antique oak sideboards, only	$13 50
Extra super all-wool ingrain carpet per yard, only	50c
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, in rug covering, only	$30
Fancy couches and lounges, only	$5
Low priced ingrain carpet per yard, only	25c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$20
Body Brussels carpet per yard, only	[illegible]
Antique oak chiffoniers with mirrors, only	$8.75
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, in silk covering, only	$40
Dining-room chairs, high back, antique oak, per set only	$7.50
Antique oak extension tables, only	$8.50
Oilcloth per yard, only	20c
Hall stands, only	$5.50
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$25
Three ply carpet per yard, only	75c

PORTLAND RANGES—The prices on these Ranges are not reduced, as we are not allowed to do so by the manufacturers. We have made reductions in all other departments not mentioned above at the same rate as in this ad. Easy terms. Goods delivered free to all parts of the State.
STORING FURNITURE—Having just erected a new building at 88, 90 and 92 Bank st., we can safely say that we have the most complete Storage Building in the State, and at such low rates. All locked rooms. Furniture moved with vans by careful men in city or country. Telephone 580.
AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,
73 Market st., near Plane st., Newark, N. J.

Ready, There
Yes! All ready at Randolph's for your patronage—A first-class pharmacy to anchor by.
Reasonable prices, courteous clerks, pure drugs and chemicals await you.
L. W. Randolph,
Prescription Druggist,
143 West Front st., Plainfield, N. J.

"AN UNQUALIFIED PILOT"
RUDYARD KIPLING.

"AN UNQUALIFIED PILOT"

RUDYARD KIPLING.

[Copyright by Bacheller, Johnson & Bacheller.]

Almost any pilot will tell you that his work is much more difficult than you imagine; but the pilots of the Hugli know that they have one hundred miles of the most dangerous river on earth running through their hands—the Hugli between Calcutta and the Bay of Bengal—and say nothing. Their service is picked and sifted as carefully as the bench of the supreme court, for a judge can only hang the wrong man, but a careless pilot can lose a four thousand ton ship with crew and cargo in less time than it takes to reverse the engines.

There is very little chance of getting off again when once you touch in the furious current of this river loaded with all the fat silt of the fields of Bengal, where soundings change two feet between tides and new channels make or efface themselves in a season. Men have fought the Hugli for two hundred years till, now, the river owns a huge building with drawing, survey and telegraph departments devoted to its exclusive service, as well as a body of wardens who are called the port commissioners.

They and their officers govern absolutely from the Hugli bridge to the last buoy at Pilot's Ridge, one hundred and forty miles away, and out in the Bay of Bengal, where the steamers first pick up the pilots from the brig.

A Hugli pilot does not bring papers aboard or scramble up rope ladders. He arrives in his best clothes with a native servant or assistant to wait on him, and he behaves as a man should who can earn ten thousand dollars a year after twenty years' apprenticeship. He has beautiful rooms in the port office at Calcutta, and generally keeps himself to the society of his own profession, for though the telegraph reports the more important soundings of the river daily there is much to be learned between trip and trip.

Some millions of tons of shipping must find their way to and from Calcutta each twelve-month, and unless the Hugli were watched as closely as men watch the Atlantic cables there is a fear that it might silt up as it has silted up round the old Dutch and Portugese ports twenty and thirty miles behind Calcutta. So the port office sounds and scours and dredges and builds spurs and devices for coaxing currents and labels all the buoys with their proper letters and attends to the semaphores and the lights and the drum, ball and cone storm signals, and the pilots of the Hugli do the rest, but in spite of all the care the Hugli swallows a ship or two every year.

When Martin Trevor had followed this life from his boyhood; when he had risen to be a senior pilot entitled to bring up to Calcutta the big ships drawing over twenty-four feet that can (or could till a few years ago) only pass by special arrangement; when he had talked nothing but Hugli and pilotage all his life, he was exceedingly indignant that his only son should decide upon following his father's profession. Mrs. Trevor had died when the boy was a child, and as he grew older Trevor, in the intervals of his business, noticed that the lad was very often by the river side—no nice place for a boy. Once, when he asked him if he could make anything out of the shipping, little Trevor replied by reeling off the list of all the house-flags in sight at the moorings.

"You'll come to a bad end, Jim," said Trevor. "Little boys haven't any business to know house-flags."

"Oh, Pedro at the Sailors' home taught me. He says you can't begin too early."

"At what, please?"

"Piloting. I'm nearly fourteen now and—and I know where all the shipping in the river is, and I know what there was yesterday over the Mayapur bar, and I've been down to Diamond harbor—oh, a hundred times—and I've—"

"You'll go to school, son, and learn what they'll teach you, and you'll turn out better than a pilot," said his father, but he might just as well have told a shovel-nosed porpoise of the river to come ashore and begin life as a hen. Jim held his tongue—he noticed that all the best pilots in the port office did that—and devoted his young attention and all his spare time and money to the river he loved.

Trevor's son became as well known as the Bankshall itself, and the port police let him inspect their launches, and the tug boat captains had always a place for him at table, and the mates of the big steam dredgers used to show him how the machinery worked, and there were certain native rowboats that Jim practically owned; and he extended his patronage to the rail that runs to Diamond Harbor, forty miles down the river. In the old days nearly all the East India company's ships used to discharge at Diamond harbor on account of the shoals above, but now ships go straight up to Calcutta, and they have only some moorings for vessels in distress there, and a telegraph service and a harbor master, who was Jim's intimate friend. He would sit in the office and listen to the soundings of the shoals as they were reported every day, and attend to the movements of the steamers up and down (Jim always felt he had lost something if a boat got in or out of the river without his knowing it), and when the big liners, with their rows of burning port holes, tied up in Diamond harbor for the night Jim would row from one ship to the other through the sticky hot air and the buzzing mosquitoes and listen respectfully as the pilots conferred together. Once, for a treat, his father took him down clear out to the sand heads and the pilot brig, and Jim was woefully sea sick as she towed and pitched in the bay. So he had to go down three or four times more with friendly pilots till he had cured his weakness. The cream of life, though, was coming up in a tug or a police boat from Diamond harbor to Calcutta over the James and Mary—the terrible sands christened after a royal ship they sunk two hundred years ago. They are made by two rivers that enter the Hugli six miles apart and throw their own silt across the silt of the main stream so that with each turn of weather and tide the sands shift and change like a cloud. It was here, (the tales sound much worse, when they are told in the rush and growl of the muddy waters) that the Countess of Stirling, fifteen hundred tons, touched and capsized in ten minutes; and a two thousand ton steamer in two; and a pilgrim ship in five; and another steamer literally in an instant, holding down her men with the masts and shrouds as she lashed over. When a ship touches on the James and Mary the river knocks her down and buries her and the sands quiver all around her and reach out under water and take new shapes.

Young Jim would lie up in the bows of the tug and watch the straining buoys kick and smother in the coffee-colored red current, and the semaphores and flags signal from the bank how much water there was in the channe till he learned that men who deal with men can afford to be careless on the chance of their fellows being like them; but men who deal with things dare not relax for an instant. "And that's the very reason," old McEwen said to him once, "that the James and Mary is the safest part of the river," and he put the big black Bandoorah that draws twenty-five feet through the Eastern Gat, with a turban of white foam wrapped round her foot and her screw beating as steadily as his own heart.

YOUNG JIM WOULD LIE IN THE BOW.

If Jim could not get away to the river there was always the big, cool port office, where the soundings were calculated and the maps were drawn; or the pilot's-room, where he could lie in a long chair and listen to the talk about the Hugli; and there was the library, where if you had money you could buy charts and books of directions against the time that you actually steamed over the places themselves. It was exceedingly hard for Jim to hold the list of Jewish kings in his head, and he was more than uncertain as to the end of the verb "audio" if you followed it far enough down the page, but he could keep the soundings of three channels distinct in his head and, what is more confusing, the changes in the buoys from Garden Reach down to Saugor, as well as the greater part of the Calcutta Telegraph, the only paper he ever read.

Unluckily, you cannot peruse about the Hugli without money, even though you are the son of the best-known pilot on the river, and as soon as Trevor understood how his son was spending his time he cut down his pocket money; and Jim had a very generous allowance. In his extremity he took counsel with Pedro, the plum-colored mulatto at the sailors' home. And Pedro was a bad man. He introduced Jim to a Chinaman in Machuatellah, a nasty place in itself, and the Chinaman, who answered to the name of Erh-Tze, when he was not smoking opium talked pigeon English to Jim for an hour.

"S'pose you take. Can do?" he said, at last.

Jim considered the chances. A junk he knew would draw about eleven feet, and the regular fee for a qualified pilot outward would be two hundred rupees. On the other hand, he was not qualified, so he could not ask more than half. But, on the other hand, he was fully certain of a thrashing from his father for piloting without license. So he asked one hundred and seventy-five rupees, and Erh-Tze beat him down to a hundred and twenty, and that was like a Chinaman all over. The cargo of his junk was worth anything from fifty to a hundred thousand rupees, and Erh-Tze was getting enormous freight on the coffins of thirty or forty dead Chinamen whom he was taking to be buried in their native country. Rich Chinamen will pay fancy prices for their services, and they have a superstition that the iron of steamships is bad for the health of their dead. Erh-Tze's junk had crept up from Singapore, via Penang and Rangoon, to Calcutta, where Erh-Tze had been staggered by the pilot dues. This time he was going out at a reduction with Jim, who, Pedro said, was just as good as a pilot.

ERH TZE BEAT HIM DOWN TO ONE TWENTY.

CHAPTER II.

Jim knew something of the outside of junks, but he was not prepared, when he went down that night with his charts, for the confusion of cargo and coolies and coffins and day-cooking places and other things that littered the decks. Jim had sense enough to haul the rudder up a few feet; he knew that a junk's rudder goes far below the bottom and he allowed a foot extra to Erh-Tze's estimate of the ship's depth. Then they staggered out into midstream very early, and never had the city of his birth looked so beautiful to Jim as when he feared he would not come back to see it. Going down Garden Reach he discovered that the junk would answer to her helm if you put it over enough, and that she had a fair, though Chinese, notion of sailing. He took charge of the tiller by stationing three Chinese on each side of it and standing a little forward gathered their pigtails into his hands, three right and three left, as though they had been the yoke-lines of a rowboat. Erh-Tze almost smiled at this. He felt he was getting good care for his money, and took a neat polished bamboo to keep the men attentive, for he said this was no time to teach the crew pigeon English. The more way they could get on the junk better would she steer, and as soon as he felt a little confidence in her Jim ordered the big rustling mat sails to be hauled up tighter and tighter. He did not know their names—at least any name that would be likely to interest a Chinaman—but Erh-Tze had not banged about the waters of the Malay archipelago for nothing, and as he went, he rolled forward with the bamboo the sails rose like eastern incantations.

Early as they were on the river a big American kerosene ship was ahead of them in tow, and when Jim saw her through the driving morning mist he was thankful. She would draw all of seventeen feet, and if he could steer by her they would be safe. It is one thing to scurry up and down the James and Mary in a police-tug without responsibility, and quite another to cram a hard-mouthed old junk across the same sands alone, with the certainty of a thrashing if you came out alive. Jim glued his eyes to the American and saw that at Fultah she dropped her tug and stood down the river under sail. He all but whooped aloud, for he knew that the number of pilots who preferred to work a ship through the James and Mary without a tug was strictly limited. "If it isn't father it's Dearsley," said Jim, "and Dearsley went down yesterday with the Bancoora. If I'd gone home last night instead of going to Pedro I'd have met father. He must have got his ship quick, but—father is a very quick man." Then Jim reflected that they kept a piece of knotted rope on the pilot brig that stung like a wasp; but this thought he dismissed as beneath the dignity of an officiating pilot who need only nod his head to set Erh-Tze's bamboo at work. As the American came round, just before the Fultah sands, Jim raked her with his spy glass and saw his father on the poop with an unlighted cigar between his teeth. That cigar, Jim knew, would be smoked on the other side of the James and Mary, and Jim felt so entirely safe and happy that he lit a cigar on his own account. This kind of piloting was child's play! His father could not make a mistake if he tried; and Jim with his six faithful pig-tails in his two hands had leisure to admire the perfect style in which the American was handled—how she would point her bowsprit jeeringly at a hidden bank as much as to say: "Not to-day, thank you, dear," and bow down lovingly over a buoy as much as to say: "You're a gentleman at any rate," and come round sharp on her heel with a flutter and a rustle and a slow steady swing something like a woman staring round a theater through opera glasses. It was not hard work to keep the junk near her, though Erh-Tze set everything that was by any means settable and used the bamboo very generously. When they were almost under her counter and a little to the left, Jim would feel warm and happy all over, thinking of the nautical and pilotic things he knew. When they fell more than half a mile behind he was cold and miserable, thinking of all the things that he did not know or was not quite sure of. And so they went down, Jim steering by his father, turn for turn, over the Maepur bar with the semaphores on each bank signalling the depth of water, through the Western Gat and round the Makoaputti Lumps and in and out of twenty places each more exciting than the last, and Jim nearly pulled the six pig-tails out for pure joy when the last of the James and Mary had astern, and they were walking through Diamond harbor. From there to the mouth of the Hugli things are not so bad, at least that was what Jim thought and held on till the swell from the Bay of Bengal made the old junk heave and snort and the river broadened into an inland sea with islands only a foot or two high scattered about it. The American walked away from the junk as soon as they were beyond Kedgeree, and the night came on and the water looked very big and desolate, so Jim promptly anchored somewhere in the gray water with the Saugor light away off toward the east. He had a great respect for the Hugli and no desire whatever to find himself on the Gaspar sand or any other little shoal. Erh-Tze and the crew highly approved of this piece of seamanship. They set no watch, lit no lights and at once went to sleep. Jim lay down between a red and black lacquer coffin and a little live pig in a basket. As soon as it was light he began studying his chart of the Hugli mouth and trying to find out where in the river he might be. He decided to be on the safe side and wait for another sailing ship and follow her out. So he made an enormous breakfast of rice and boiled fish while Erh-Tze lit fire crackers and burned gilt paper with ostentation. Then they heaved up their rough and tumble anchor and made after a big, fat, iron four-masted sailing ship heavy as a hay wain. The junk, which was really a very weatherly boat and might have begun life as a private pirate in Annam thirty years ago, followed under easy sail; and the four-master would run no risks. She was in old McEwen's hands and she waddled about like a broody hen giving each shoal wide allowances. All this happened near the outer Floating Light some hundred and twenty miles from Calcutta and apparently in the open sea. Jim knew old McEwen's appetite and had often heard him pride himself on getting his ship to the pilot brig between meal hours, so he argued that if the pilot brig was get-able (and Jim himself had not the ghost of a notion where she would be) McEwen would find her before 1 o'clock. It was a blazing hot day and McEwen fidgetted the four-master down to Pilots' Ridge with what little wind remained, and sure enough there lay the pilot brig and Jim felt cold up his back, as Erh-Tze paid him his hundred and twenty rupees and he went overside in the junk's crazy dinghee. McEwen was leaving the four-master in a long slashing whale-boat that looked very spruce and pretty, and Jim could see that there was a certain amount of excitement among the pilots on the brig. There was his father too. The ragged Chinese gave way in a ragged fashion and Jim felt very unwashen and disreputable when he heard the click of McEwen's oars alongside, and McEwen saying: "James Trevor, I'll trouble you to come along with me."

JIM RAKED HER WITH HIS SPY GLASS.

Jim obeyed, and from the corner of one eye watched McEwen's angry whiskers stand up all round his face like the frill of a royal Bengal tiger, while his face turned purple and his voice shook.

"An' is this how you break the regulations o' the port o' Calcutta? Are ye aware o' the penalties ye've laid yourself open to?"

Jim said nothing. There was not very much to say, and McEwen roared aloud: "Man, ye've personated a Hugli pilot, an' that's as much to say ye've personated me! What did yon yellow heathen give you for an honorarium?"

"Hundred and twenty," said Jim.

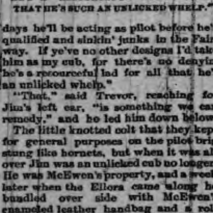
"An' by what manner o' means did ye get through the James an' Mary?"

"Father," was the answer. "He went down the same tide—and I—we steered by him."

McEwen whistled and choked; perhaps it was with anger. "Made a stalkin' horse o' your father. Jim, boy, he'll make an example o' you."

The boat hooked the brig's chains and McEwen said, as he rolled on deck:

"You's an enterprising cub o' yours, Trevor. Ye'd better put him to the regular business or one o' these fine



"HE'S A RESOURCEFUL LAD FOR ALL THAT HE'S SUCH AN UNLICKED WHELP."

days he'll be acting as pilot before he's qualified and sinkin' junks in the Fairway. If ye've no other designs I'd take him as my cub, for there's no denyin' he's a resourceful lad for all that he's an unlicked whelp."

"That," said Trevor, reaching for Jim's left ear, "is something we can remedy," and he led him down below.

The little knotted colt that they kept for general purposes on the pilot brig stung like hornets, but when it was all over Jim was an unlicked cub no longer. He was McEwen's property, and a week later when the Ellora came along he bundled over side with McEwen's enameled leather handbag and a roll of charts and a little bag of his own.

[THE END.]

D O not be deceived. The following brands of White Lead are still made by the "Old Dutch" process of slow corrosion. They are standard, and always

Strictly Pure
White Lead

The recommendation of

"Atlantic," "Jewett,"
"Brooklyn."

to you by your merchant is an evidence of his reliability, as he can sell you cheap ready-mixed paints and bogus White Lead and make a larger profit. Many short-sighted dealers do so.

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a one-pound can to a 25-pound keg of Lead and mix your own paints. Saves time and annoyance in matching shades, and insures the best paint that it is possible to put on wood.

Send us a postal card and get our book on paints and color-card, free; it will probably save you a good many dollars.

NATIONAL LEAD CO., New York

A BOSTON GIRL'S LIFE

Saved from Ruin and Despair by the Timely Aid of a Noted Woman.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

IS there anything more truly pathetic than the cry for help that springs from the anguished heart of a young girl—a beautiful girl who sees ahead only suffering and uncertainty?

But oh, what joy and gladness her young heart pours forth when she realizes that her dreaded enemy, the blasting influence, is gone,—banished forever.

This sunshine and joy is now the happy portion of Miss Florence ——— of Beacon Street, Boston.

She often tells of her suffering from the suppression of the menses. The pain was excruciating. The doctors, instead of removing the cause of her ailment, plied her each month with morphine to prevent convulsions; but the trouble was permitted to exist.

When she could endure no more,—prostration was imminent and future hopeless,—her family procured a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which, surprising to all, rapidly and permanently cured her.

In writing to Mrs. Pinkham, pouring forth her gratitude and happiness, she says: "Oh! that I could make every suffering woman try your valuable medicine! How they would bless you!"

—John T. Meeker the popular tea man from Newark has severed his connection with the former employer and in the future will be identified with the Grand Union Tea Co., of Newark, branch store in this city, 138 West Front street.

The Finderne,

FINDERNE, Somerset Co., N. J.

Open all the year as a resort of the highest order. Driving and sleighing parties will receive every attention.

HIGH-CLASS SUNDAY DINNERS.

(Table d' Hote from 1 to 3:30) Steam heat; inclosed piazzas; everything immaculate. When out driving let us entertain you.

A. E. WHITE, Manager,
Finderne, N. J.

1 9 tf

ARRIVAL AND DEPARTURE OF MAILS.

NEW YORK MAILS.

Arrive—7 [illegible], 8 40, 11 a. m., 3 [illegible], 5, 8 [illegible] p. m.
Close—7 and 9 30 a. m., 1 45, 5 and 7 30 p. m.

SOMERVILLE AND EASTON MAILS.

Arrive—8 40 a. m., 3 40, 6 50 p. m.
Close—7 15 a. m., 4 30 p. m.
Warrenville mail arrives 12 m; closes 9 [illegible] a.m.
Direct mail to Trenton and Philadelphia at 2 30 p. m.

SUNDAY MAILS.

Office open from 9 30 to 10 30 a. m.
Mail closes at 6 15 p. m.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan 20, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 25 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

4.51 P. M.—WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Sunday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

5.34 p.m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8 43 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible] p. m.

Sundays, [illegible] p m.

For Baltimore only 1 37 p. m., week-days.

For Newark and New York—[illegible]

For New York only, 6 30 a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY

(3 25p.m. with through Buffet parlor car) Sundays 6 59 a. m.

Cape May, Sea Isle City and Ocean City 1 37 p. m. week-days.

For Rahway—[illegible]

For New Brunswick—[illegible]

For Woodbridge—[illegible]

For Perth Amboy—[illegible]

For East Millstone—7 10 a. m., [illegible] p. m., week-days.

For Trenton—[illegible]

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible] p. m. Sunday.

For Flemington—[illegible]

For Freehold—[illegible] via Monmouth Junction, week-days.

For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—[illegible] week days.

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible] p. m.; do not stop at Asbury Park on Sundays.

For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—12 [illegible] p. m.

For Boston—[illegible] p. m., daily.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton Street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]

S. M. PREVOST, General Manager.
J. R. WOOD, Gen. Pass. Agent.

New Officers for the Year.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield branch of the New Jersey Building Loan and Investment Company was held last night, and the following directors were unanimously elected for the ensuing year: Messrs. John D Runyon, Francis S Runyon, L E Woolston, J D Spicer, W E Codington, J A Hubbard, T S Davis, W W Coriell, W H Sebring, H E Rider, A L Force, and H O Newman.

Freshening Up.

Yesterday afternoon two painters retouched the large sign on the hardware store of A. M. Griffin. They worked on a narrow ladder at the height of the third story, but were as unconcerned as though employed on terra firma. The entire front of the building, 119-123 East Front street, is being repainted by the decorative experts, E. E. Marshall & Co.

Asbury Park gave the Hub a bad scrape yesterday, and is entitled to be called the Hub of Summer conventions. Plainfield wheelmen are glad Jersey got the L. A. W. convention, and Plainfield will be there.

—Hamburg string beans are sold at 10 cents a can by Neuman Bros., the Watchung avenue grocers.

Auction Sale!

H. HAND, AUCTIONEER.

The subscriber, Israel J. Coon, having sold his farm, will sell at public vendue at 10 a. m., on Wednesday,

March 6, 1895,

AT SMALLEYTOWN, N. J.

on the road leading from the Old Stone School House to Union Village, all the personal property as follows: 4 good work horses or roadsters, Colt, sired by Black Tom, successor Black Hawk, or Messenger, 13 Cows, some fresh and some coming in profit, 1 Bull, 2 Reapers, Buckeye mowing machine, hay tedder, hay rake, Champion Grain drill, plow attachment, Eagle cultivator, 2 hand cultivators, spring tooth harrow, double harrow, roller, pair bob sleds, furrowing sled, corn dropper, cornsheller, 2 Oliver plows, grain cradle, cutting box, 2 farm wagons, spring wagon, platform wagon, 2 side-bar buggies, phaeton, 2 horse cart, road cart, sleigh, 3 sets single harness, 2 sets heavy double harness, hay and straw, feed bins, grindstone, hoes, forks, shovels, spades, potato hooks, milk cans, 70 head of poultry, other articles too numerous to mention. Also a quantity of household and kitchen furniture. Conditions made known on day of sale by

2 20 2 ISRAEL J. COON.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracite coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Newark [illegible]

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Somerville, [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Easton [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield 9 54, a. m., 5 08 p.m.

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

5 45 A. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport and Tamaqua.

7 10 a. m. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge Branch.

[illegible] A. M. for Flemington, D. L. & W. R. R., Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.

9 54 A. M. for Flemington, High Bridge Branch, D L & W R R, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Nanticoke, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.

12 [illegible] p. m. way for Easton, connecting at Junction for stations on D. L. & W. R. R.

2 08 P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Sunbury and Williamsport, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton, Buffet parlor car to Mauch Chunk.

5 08 p. m., way for Easton, connecting at High Bridge for stations on High Bridge branch.

5 14 P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Bethlehem, Bangor, Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Mauch Chunk, Shamokin and Tamaqua. Buffet parlor car to Scranton.

6 19 P. M. for Flemington.

6 38 P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading and Harrisburg.

8 21 P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.

5 45 A. M. Sunday for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton. [illegible] Sundays for [illegible] p. m. Sundays for Easton, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Reading and Harrisburg, [illegible] p. m. Sundays for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading, Harrisburg, &c. and at Junction for D. L. & W. R. R.

For Atlantic City, [illegible] p. m.

Long Branch, Ocean Grove, &c

Leave Plainfield [illegible] p. m. Sundays—except Ocean Grove [illegible] p. m.

For Perth Amboy, [illegible] p.m. Sundays—[illegible]

For Freehold, [illegible]

ROYAL BLUE LINE.

Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia, [illegible]

For Trenton [illegible]

For Baltimore and Washington at [illegible]

For Chattanooga, New Orleans and all points south with through vestibule sleeper, via Shenandoah Valley Route at 5 [illegible] p. m. Sundays [illegible] p. m.

For Buffalo, Chicago and all points west, week-days at [illegible] Sundays [illegible]

RETURNING—LEAVE PHILADELPHIA,

Reading terminal, [illegible]

From 24th and Chestnut—[illegible]

Leave Trenton, Warren and Tucker sts., [illegible]

Plainfield passengers by trains marked * change cars at Bound Brook.

Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket Agent at the station.

J. H. OLHAUSEN, General Sup't.
H. P. BALDWIN, Gen. Pass. Agt.

Y. M. C. A. CONVENTION

Delegates Instructed on the Best Methods of Work.

CONFERENCES ON CHRISTIAN PROGRESS.

Addresses by Eminent Divines on Bible Study and Practical Religion—Announcement of Sunday Preachings.

From The Press of Feb. 16.

From 2 to 3 yesterday afternoon the time of the Y. M. C. A. convention was taken up with sectional conferences, which occurred simultaneously in the various apartments of the building. Delegates attended those conferences, which were to discuss the subject in which they were most engaged at their home association.

Room one—the reading room—was filled with a display of the results of educational work. The exhibit had specimens of courses in free hand, mechanical and architectural drawing and industrial design, leading toward such technical lines as machine construction, boiler making, carriage draughting, wood and metal working, civil, mechanical, architectural and electrical engineering. During the conference hour George B. Hodge of New York, who was in charge of the exhibit, offered many suggestions and instruction to those taking an interest in this subject.

The hour of Bible study, conducted by Rev. J. H. Elliott in the Assembly hall, was conducive of much practical information in this line of work. The subject under consideration was "Methods of Bible Study in Association". In opening Mr. Elliott spoke particularly of getting men interested in the study and actively so. This could only be accomplished by going out among them and by a personal effort on the part of the worker. The best way to teach was collectively. It could be made a success but it meant plenty of perseverance and work.

Such delegates as were interested in the department of men's meetings gathered in room 3, where W. A. Venter of Trenton spoke substantially as follows:

"This question is one which all of us have confronted, one which has been much written and spoken of. There are a number of fundamental principles which should be laid down and followed out before a Gospel meeting can be made a success. First, a great deal of time should be given to the preparation for the service, and second the preparation should be thorough and every detail carefully considered, so that there will be no clashing. Months of preparation are necessary for every service, and the idea that a few moments on Saturday or Sunday is sufficient to arrange the details is a false one. No one with a hobby should be allowed on the platform. A plain, straightforward talk from a business man as to the value of Jesus Christ to the young man is as effective as a more elaborate address given by eminent divines. The speaker should not be asked to occupy more than 25 minutes at the most, for long addresses are tiresome and not productive of the most good. He should be filled with love for man and he should try to impress those out of Christ with the need of Him in their everyday life. The music should be catchy and pleasing. If the meeting is successful pastors and church members will always be found in the audience. The advertising of the service is an important part of the preparation. Printers ink costs money but it pays. Regarding the hall or church in which the service is held, too much emphasis cannot be laid upon the fact that it should be easy of access, and that it be bright and cheerful. The men should be made to feel that they are at home. The man with the ragged coat, wornout shoes and battered hat should be given as good a seat as those who enter in broadcloth and fine linen. Last, but not least, fervent prayer should be offered to God before the meeting, that it be made a success. Have faith in prayer, have faith in God, have faith in man, and believe that if you do your work well the results will surely come. The work of the Y. M. C. A. had its origin in meetings for men. At first nothing was attempted but religious work, and gradually as their association grew in strength, their lines of work increased, until after a time the religious work seemed crowded to the rear, and the social, intellectual and physical departments seemed to take the first place. The pendulum has swung back again, and today more time and effort is being put into the religious work for men than ever before."

It was a gathering of bright-faced lads that surrounded S. F. Dudley of Orange, in room 4, where he talked in a confidential way to the youngsters, and impressed them with the idea that their work in the association was one of importance. The principal ideas talked about were where and when boys department work should be undertaken and the essential points in preparation and organization.

A healthy looking lot of fellows were in room 5 conferring as to physical work. D. A. MacPhie of Plainfield led the discussion and said that the athletic department was a great feature of the association work, but it was only a department—contributing its quota to the success of the organization. A man could be a Christian and at the same time an athlete; he could do his work with body as well as mind, and it was a duty to care for the body. Athletics should have a place in every man's heart, but a continual drain on any one portion of his being physically bankrupted him. However, there were other things paramount to athletics in association work. He greatly deplored that athletics had been made a business by exponents of different sports—notably base-ball—for they had led to gambling. Athletics should be admired and enjoyed for the beneficial exercise, rather than for excitement attendant to participation. An informal discussion followed Mr. MacPhie's talk as to what had been accomplished and what had been planned for the coming season.

Owing to the absence of John F. Moore of Albany, who was unable to be present, Arthur Lucas was assigned to look after the conference on "Delegates from small towns and unorganized places". Notwithstanding that Mr. Lucas had no time to prepare or acquaint himself with the theme, he succeeded admirably in making the session an interesting one.

The men who look after the welfare of the begrimed but faithful brakeman, fireman and conductor of the steel roads, were in room 7 discussing with avidity problems that will make their work still more effective. H. G. Peabody, of Trenton, said the object of the Association is to open the eyes of young men to a higher and brighter life, and it was continually holding men back from the clutches of the evil one. Members should not hide their light of inspiration and activity under a basket, but bring it forth at all times, thus setting splendid examples. Each one can do something that no one else is able to do. A wide field of influence and power is open and inviting laborers in their direction. Improvement morally, mentally and physically can be attained through the Association, but not without effort on the part of the individual. H. A. Lessee, of Elmira, N. Y., also gave an interesting paper on "Emergency Work". From 3 to 3:15 a recess was taken, after which all repaired to the hall. The meeting was presided over by Delegate Porter, who had the pleasure of introducing Rev. W. H. Sutton of Montclair, who spoke on "Why Believe the Bible is the Word of God?"

At the conclusion of this address the Business Committee announced that a young men's meeting, conducted by Rev. J. H. Elliott, would be held in Music Hall Sunday afternoon. A report from the Nominating Committee stated that B. A. Hegeman had declined election as one of the vice-presidents, and they nominated E. S. Campbell of New Brunswick to fill the vacancy, and also T. S. Evans of Princeton College to act as third vice-president. The report was accepted and the gentlemen were duly elected.

President Murray announced the following committees:

On Resolutions—Henry Weed, of Somerville; A. S. Frost, of Trenton; John H. Houghton, of Long Branch.

State Committee — J. W. Cleveland, Paterson; H. O. Baker, Hoboken; F. H. Andrews, Plainfield; C. H. Harrington, Camden; C. H. Harris, Hackensack.

EVENING SESSION.

The evening session was called to order by President Murray in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian Church. After a few verses of Scripture were read and prayer offered, Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D. D., of Brooklyn was introduced and delivered an address that was attentively listened to by a large audience. He has an extremely earnest manner of delivery, and gave his talk with a vigor that was remarkable for one of his age. He had traveled all the way from Saratoga Springs to be present and fulfil his engagement, though he was afflicted with a troublesome cold. In referring to this fact at the opening of his address, he said it was not in his heart to go back on his brother Jerseymen, for he owed a debt of gratitude to this State. Here it was that his mother had been reared, and here it was that he found a woman who had made one of the best wives that it was the fortune of any man ever to possess. He had received his educational training in the institutions of New Jersey, which had made his course through life far easier than it might otherwise have been. To the delegates he saluted all hail to the Jersey boys of the Lord's army. There was no division here—all were working in common cause to attain the fruits of life and death. The Young Men's Christian Association was a magnificent organization, of which he had been a member for 22 years. It was founded by Christianity and common sense, and was a realization of Christian unity with one purpose to bring young men to Christ by the aid of one book for a teacher and one power for a guide. He related his experiences at the international convention of the Y. M. C. A. held in London last year, as a means of demonstrating to what extent the Association had become recognized as one of the foremost working bodies of the religious world. Even the Church of England—exclusive as it is—extended a warm welcome to this convention of young men, and threw open its doors that they might have every convenience and opportunity for a successful session. All the great royalties attended the session.

The London Common Council voted $10,000 to them for an evening's entertainment. The good Mayor visited the convention, sounding his trumpets before him—as our public men ofttimes do. Queen Victoria extended to them every liberty of inspection of the palace and surroundings—a thing that had seldom occurred before or after. He liked that woman. When at home he is a Republican or Democrat, but when he is in England, he joins with her subjects in singing "God Save the Queen". She is a grand old Christian woman, and he had received many favors from her. It was his great fortune and pleasure of having the personal acquaintance with Sir George Williams, the founder of the Y. M. C. A. He was a man of broad character, and whose life every young man could follow with credit and success. The nucleus of their present Association was formed as the Dry Goods Clerks Association of London. People had ventured the opinion that it would not exist for more than a year, but it had survived for half a century, and was growing in numbers and results every day. Millions of dollars was invested in buildings for their use, and he was glad to hear that Plainfield had added its quota to the great aggregate. Every member realized what a great trust had been reposed in them to carry out the work that had been planned, and it was a late day to speak for the associations—its work evinced what it could accomplish. He believed in denominations, provided they were not sectarian. Since he had left the active service of the ministry in Brooklyn, he had come to see how much good there was in them all. There are some narrow guage ministers, who think that work like the Y. M. C. A. detracts from efforts for the church; and claimed there were those who had too many irons in the fire. This was not so.

The great trouble was that there was too little fire to put the irons in. He had noticed the young man who worked the hardest in the Association, also worked the hardest in his church. The devil never sleeps; all his haunts are illuminated every night, but the Association rooms stand open as antidotes. It is not what a young man may work at during the day, but where he spends his evening. Tell him where the boy is after supper, and he will tell you his character. Go among your wayward friends, mingle with them and get them into the Association rooms. That's the work that tells. Next to the churches the Y. M. C. A. is the greatest factor in the army of the Lord. Citizens should prove their interest in the work by looking in on them once in a while, for they are training schools for the churches along the lines of personal effort and endeavor. If you look at life as I do the greatest ecstacy to be experienced in Christian work is to bring a wretched sinner to Christ. Also look after your own soul and character, and don't let business cheat you out of a little time with Jesus in the morning. Personality is but character in both. It is not what you say but what you do that gives you standing and influence in your own community. Never argue with an infidel. It is time wasted. Sing out the word of Christ and tell him to try it for himself. Ask him to take the Bible and practice it with humbleness for one week—that is the best kind of advice toward such as he. If you can't pray you can't teach or minister to those in need of His word. Even good men some times think what excellent work they are doing. Pray that self be taken out of your character and then let the baptism of the Holy Spirit go over you. You can't create power, but you can receive it. He believed in athletics, but with limitations. At present the devil has a finger in athletics, which has resulted in making some gymnasiums a resort for bottles and bets, but the parent can send the son to the association gymnasium without fear of his character becoming contaminated.

The social, intellectual and physical departments are all features that contribute to attain successful results, but it should be kept in mind that the prime matter of the work is to save young men—that was Williams's idea when the organization was conceived in his mind. The moment the association seeks any other point it becomes an importance. Carry home the motto "Union in Christ for young men without Christ". Hang it up over your door, and under this place "March on to Victory". Good night!

As the venerable divine closed, the vast auditorium resounded with applause—the greatest enthusiasm that has been evinced during any session. As he stepped from the pulpit the cheering continued with renewed vigor, until the hall fairly thundered with enthusiasm. A delegate stepped up and placed a convention button in his lapel, while the old man's face beamed and with a wave of his hand the audience quieted down and as a fitting culmination to his already aggressive address, he remarked in soft and subdued tones:

"This is a time when we speak not for money or fame, but it's a time when we love to be loved."

As Dr. Cuyler retired, the audience once more showed their appreciation of the man by an outburst of cheering, interspersed with remarks such as "grand", "splendid", "would n't have missed it for anything", etc.

This was followed by a solo by B. Frank Butts, which was artistically rendered.

Recording Secretary B. P. Holden of Madison read the annual report of the State Executive Committee, which was distributed in pamphlet form.

The following annual report of the condition of finances was read by State Treasurer G. W. Gear of Orange:

TREASURER'S REPORT, FEB 14. 1895.

RECEIPTS.

Balance, Feb. 5, 1894		$ 167.22
Subscriptions		[illegible]
Reports		[illegible]
Collections		[illegible]
Advertising		108.50
Notes discounted		2,148.24
Amount advanced acct. Wannamassa camp		237.14
		$4,[illegible]

EXPENDITURES.

Salaries		[illegible]
Travelling expenses		[illegible]
Postage		[illegible]
Stationery		[illegible]
Printing		[illegible]
Convention		[illegible]
District Conferences		[illegible]
Committees		[illegible]
Literary		[illegible]
Notes		2,[illegible]
Interest		54.97
Rent		225.00
Incidentals		[illegible]
Cash balance on hand		$[illegible]
		$ 209.04
Subscriptions unpaid		485.00

LIABILITIES.

Note due March 27		$ 600.00

ASSETS.

Cash on hand	$209.04
Subscriptions	485.00	694.04
Balance		94.04

FRED M. GEAR,
Treasurer.

A verbal explanation of the finances was made a little more clearly and concisely by S. F. Dudley of Orange, during which time the State Committeemen took up the State offering. Secretary Lucas call the roll by associations and delegates answered separately to the amount given by the association and by individuals. The total amount received was $1,622.

The Business Committee announced that Rev. J. F. Elliott would preach in the Seventh Day Baptist Church this morning.

The meeting then adjourned to 9:15 this morning.

TODAY'S SESSIONS.

The first number on the programme this morning was a Bible hour, held in the Association hall and led by J. H. Elliott, with the subject of "The power of the Holy Spirit". These studies of the Bible, and the means of teaching, are producing much benefit to the delegates, and the increased attendance at each successive session gives evidence of this fact. The personality of the Holy Spirit, not the influence, he said, is what the prospective teacher should firmly fix in his mind. Constantly worrying and nagging a young man will never bring him into the fold if he is somewhat averse to taking the step.

O. C. Morse of the Springfield, Mass., Training School, was the next speaker. He said there is a growing number of young men in the school fitting themselves for this work of making efficient instructors in the work. A number of graduates of the school were present and spoke of the efficiency of the training secured there.

The subject of "Our responsibility to young men who confess Christ in our meetings" was talked of by Walter G. Douglass of Philadelphia. The work of securing converts should be carried on at all times in all parts of the building, and not wait until the regular Sunday or weekday meetings where religious inspiration was sought for.

The question was whether or not the work was carried up to a certain point, and then relaxed, thus losing the desired result. The duty of secretaries should be to see that this gathering in of young men to circles of religion was successfully prosecuted to the end. Conversions should be the most important point sought for. When a man professes an interest in Christ, he should be advised and looked after, and when you interest a soul you don't know what a great prize you may get for the church and Christ. The board of directors should look after the spiritual department as well as the finances and others.

W. B. Millar, of New York, spoke on educational department in the association. This work is important in the unlimited opportunities it affords for reaching young men. The object is to develop the power to think wisely and seek out some vocation. The work appeals to the moneyed and business men, for they may be suffering from incompetent employes, and thus appreciate the advantages to be derived from the sources. The needs of the young men should be studied, and the classes organized accordingly.

George B. Hodge of New York followed with a supplementary talk on the same subject. The study of the Bible for educational purposes is being taken up all over the country. New Jersey is greatly interested in educational work, and gives more to that end than most other States. A series of charts was used, which fully illustrated the need of increase in this line of work, explaining them as he progressed with his talk. The fact was exhibited that New Jersey was materially increasing along this line.

The following appointments for filling the city pulpits Sunday morning were announced:

First Baptist Church, J H Elliott; Crescent avenue, Robert E Speer; Congregational, S F Dudley; Grace M E, State Secretary Arthur Lucas; Warren Chapel, C S Cooper.

The report of the Committee on the State Committee's report was read by Delegate Harrington of Camden. They had found the year had been a prosperous one in all parts of the State. Six new Associations had been established, viz: Atlantic Highlands, Hackensack, Mendham, Pompton, Somerville, and Westfield.

Three new buildings had also been erected, and there was an increase of 57 in college associations. There was an apparent lack of study in Bible classes. It was recommended that more aggressive work be pursued on educational lines and also the employment of an assistant State secretary. The sum of $4,200 was needed to carry the State work through the year. The following were recommended to constitute the State executive committee for the term expiring May, 1898:

E. S. Cowles, Jersey City.
W. D. Murray, Plainfield.
F. M. Gear, Orange.
C. W. Alling, Newark.
Wilson Farrand, Newark.
S. F. Dudley, Orange.
J. H. McGray, Madison.
A. S. Bagley, Montclair.
E. J. Wescott, Westfield.
W. H. Bradshaw, Orange Valley.
F. W. Longstreth, Rahway.
E. J. Ross, Dover.

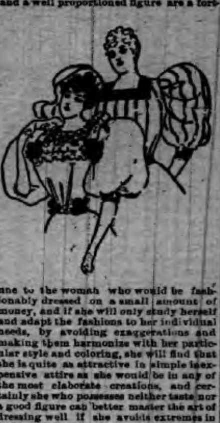
On motion the report was adopted, thus carrying into effect the recommendations and nominations.

THE SUN'S FASHIONS.

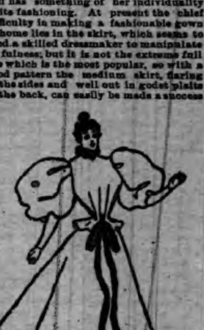
HINTS FOR THE FRUGAL WOMAN WHO MAKES HER OWN ATTIRE.

The Skirt is the Most Troublesome Member of the Modern Wardrobe. Some Examples of Pretty and Becoming Bodices.

In this dull period between winter and summer fashions, when all the new ideas have become old and novelties rare, there is time to consider the possibilities of the home-made gown and some individuality in dress in connection with simplicity and that economy so needful to the woman with a limited allowance and extravagant tastes. It is somewhat difficult to reconcile the growing tendency to extravagance in fashion with the dwindling incomes of the past year, yet there never was a time when a last season's gown could be made over with any greater degree of success, from a fashionable point of view, and all because of the variety of materials admissible in one dress. In the midst of a season of so much magnificence in attire, such rich velvets and brocades, satins, furs, and gorgeous trimmings, a simple gown well made, and worn with a stylish grace, has some chance to gain distinction. It is a novelty because of its plainness. Good taste and a well proportioned figure are a fortune to the woman who would be fashionably dressed on a small amount of money, and if she will only study herself and adapt the fashions to her individual needs, by avoiding exaggerations and making them harmonize with her particular style and coloring, she will find that she is quite as attractive in simple inexpensive attire as she would be in any of the most elaborate creations, and certainly she who possesses neither taste nor a good figure can better master the art of dressing well if she avoids extremes in fashion and keeps to the simpler modes of dress.



The most successful gown, like the most attractive home, is the one which is exactly suited to the woman inside of it, and has something of her individuality in its fashioning. At present the chief difficulty in making a fashionable gown at home lies in the skirt, which seems to need a skilled dressmaker to manipulate its fulness; but it is not the extreme full one which is the most popular, so with a good pattern the medium skirt, flaring at the sides and well out in godet plaits at the back, can easily be made a success while the full bodices, so youthful and becoming, cover no end of deficiencies in the shape of lining underneath. The fancy for spangled materials and ribbons for dress trimmings can be indulged with very little expense by sewing the spangles on at home, which is very easily done. Ribbons spangled a very little on the edge or in vertical lines at intervals make a very effective, inexpensive trimming, which can be arranged for neckbands, belts, and braces over the shoulders.



A simple home dress for morning wear is made of serge or a fine mixed tweed. The fulness in the bodice is brought over to form two box plaits in front at the belt of black satin ribbon, which starts from beneath the arm, passes beneath the plaits, and ties in a bow in front. The circular basque is sewed on instead of being cut in one with the waist. Seven yards of double width goods will make this gown. Another model is carried out in a mixed black and gray wool goods, which can be bought at greatly reduced prices just now. The wide cape revers, which form a collar in the back, open over a black satin vest and cross at the waist, where they fasten with two handsome buttons.—N. Y. Sun.

A Sad Mistake.

She was ordering a pair of bicycle bloomers from a man dressmaker who had formerly catered exclusively to the male trade.

"You will want two hip pockets, I suppose?" he said.

"Yes," replied the emancipated one.

"Er—pint or quart size?" asked the man milliner with a faraway look in his eye.

She glared at him for a moment, and then for the first time he noticed that she wore a W. C. T. U. badge!

As she flounced out of the door he kicked himself several times in the same place.

Happy Thought.

An elderly woman, being jealous of her husband, determined to commit suicide, and was about to throw herself into the river, when she suddenly exclaimed:

"Good gracious! I have left the pantry door open and the cat will get in."

So saying, she hurried off home, and since then she has made no further attempt to do away with herself.—Berliner [illegible].

DRAMA AND OPERA

PLAYS THAT ARE OCCUPYING THE BEST THEATERS IN NEW YORK.

Most of Those Named Will Have Long Runs and be Heard of Later On the Road. The Old Homestead Leads All. One Case of Comic Opera.

Of actors whose names are printed as big in the bills as the titles of the plays in which they appear, we have a good variety on the New York stage, and the entertainments they offer are uncommonly attractive. H. Beerbohm Tree and several members of his company have done so well with "A Bunch of Violets" at Abbey's that no change will be made for some time. Mr. Tree and some of his actors took a flying trip to Washington and took part in a charity matinee, returning in time for the evening at Abbey's.

William Gillette still fools the mother-in-law in "Too Much Johnson" at the Standard. That jolly farce has been put into German for use in Berlin, and now it is said that it is to be brought out at the Paris Cluny in French. The Parisians will then have an opportunity to judge of Mr. Gillette's alterations of the original piece, which was acted in Paris several years ago.

Fanny Davenport will continue the highly dramatic and pictorial representations of "Gismonda" four weeks longer at the Fifth Avenue. Her artistic taste and business enterprise are being well rewarded. William H. Crane will later come to this theater for a month with "His Wife's Father," a comedy thoroughly Americanized by Martha Morton from a German piece that has been successful in Berlin.

Kathryn Kidder is still enacting at the Broadway, in "Madame Sans-Gene," the semi-histrionic woman who rose from laundress to countess, and figured at the court of Napoleon Bonaparte. This comedy is fortunate to be here at a time of revived interest in Napoleonic subjects. It is a good illustration of people and scenes in the period of the first empire, and so is a lesson as well as an entertainment.

Ada Rehan is dividing honors with Henry E. Dixey at Daly's, where she is the principal comedian in "The Orient Express," and he is the chief burlesquer in "A Tragedy Rehearsed." Mr. Daly has written his version of "The Critic" up to date, putting in some jokes of what he would probably style "contemporaneous human interest," and providing pretexts to travesty "Trilby" and other current things.

Denman Thompson is on his legs again and they are not lame enough to hurt his performance of the New Hampshire farmer in "The Old Homestead," at the Star. The long life of that drama is marvelous, but it can be accounted for because the homely, honest humor and sentiment appeal again and again to audiences with small loss of effect through repetition. The expectation is that no other play will be needed at this house until late in the spring, if, at all this season.

Of the plays that depend upon their own merits aided only by a general excellence of a company in which no one member is dominant, "The Masqueraders" is the oldest in the length of its stay here. Its hundredth performance at the Empire is not far off, and tokens to be distributed then are being made.

"The Fatal Card" was a bold melodramatic experiment, considering that no such work of harsh sensationalism has ever been presented at Palmers; but our fashionable public, ever ready to be pleased with a novelty, has joined with other sorts of people in going to see this play of crime and explosion. Its term has been extended to March 11, and then Mrs. Langtry will follow with "Gossip," an English adaptation of a German piece, the original of which is Italian.

"The Case of Rebellious Susan" remains on trial at the Lyceum, and the wife's plea of innocence, only filed recently, seems to incline people to hear the evidence over again. This play with a purpose teaches its lesson indefinitely, perhaps, but with much merriment, and no comedy at the Lyceum has been better treated in the acting.

"The District Attorney" is extremely well acted at the American, where it is retained indefinitely. The Americanism of the Klein-Fiske drama is thorough and complete without being rampant, the theme and characters belong to New York, and the work is excellent stage craft. The timeliness of the subject, the authors explain, is entirely accidental. The work was completed before the Lexow disclosures had been made, and the play's illustration of political methods was planned without any thought of Parkhurst.

"A Milk White Flag" at Hoyt's will have an actor new in the role of the Colonel who boasts that Napoleon looked like him. This successor to Mr. Stanley is Harry Conor, who has been the hypochondriac in "A Trip to Chinatown" ever since that farce began. The season of the present play at Hoyt's will end in three weeks, and then will come the Frohman production of "The Foundling," with Cissy Fitzgerald dancing and Annie Russell in a short piece to precede it.

"The Twentieth Century Girl" has been submitted at the Bijou to the process common to travesties, that of eliminating poor matter and putting in that which is amusing. A batch of songs were sung for the first time last week, and Bettina Girard joined the company. Mr. Lederer says he is looking for another theater in which to produce "The Mimic World," in order not to disturb the present entertainment, which will be good for months.

"Rob Roy" is sure to reach a 150th performance, as mementos are already promised for that occasion. Dave Warfield is now the town crier, but the cast remains unchanged in other respects. This is the only comic opera now in the city, and it is getting the reward of monopoly. By and by "The Vale of Avoca," which has been produced out of town, will be brought to the Herald Square.

"Little Christopher" holds its place tenaciously at the Garden, and its 150th performance is only a week off. Souvenirs then, of course. The variety show imbedded in the burlesque is a good one, containing a judicious selection of original and other specialties.

LINWARD.

Grammatical Discussion.

Young Ardupp—Is it right to say "deem" or "consider," Miss Arress?

Miss Arress—Oh, both are allowable. For instance, I deem you a nice young man; but I cannot consider you at all.—Indianapolis Journal.

ROYAL BAKING POWDER
Absolutely Pure.

A cream of tartar baking powder. Highest of all in leavening strength.—Latest U. S. Government Food Report.

THEIR SECOND RECEPTION.

Delightful Continuation of the Groendyke-Foster Entertaining.

The second reception given yesterday by Mrs. D. N. Groendyke and Mrs. John Gray Foster at their delightful home on Mercer avenue, was a brilliant continuation of the beauty, fashion and gracious hospitality described in the reports of the reception given Feb. 13. In the parlors, Mrs. Groendyke and Mrs. Foster were assisted in receiving by Mrs D N Vanvliet, Mrs Scott Foster, Mrs John Hegeman, Mrs Walter M McGee, Mrs John Clark, Mrs B J Shreve, Mrs Irving Brown and Mrs A W Haviland. In the dining room, Mrs A C Baldwin and Miss Bessie Day presided at the table, assisted by Misses Emily Tracy, Evelyn Graham, Laura Vanderbeek, May Stockton Shreve, Emma Haviland and Mary Bushnell.

Memorizing the Bible.

The Junior Christian Endeavorers of Washingtonville during the past year have been memorizing Bible verses, dates and other items of general information.

In connection with the usual exercises each week, ten questions on memory work are given by one of the members previously appointed by the Superintendent. A few weeks ago the Superintendent suggested that they have a Memory contest reviewing all the work. Hattie Willis and Minnie Diehl were chosen leaders, sides were chosen, and questions asked from one to the other. Much interest was manifested and all did well. Four of the members were able to answer every question of the list given below:

Who eat grass as an ox, Dan. 4.33.
The alphabet verse, Ezra, 7,21.
The Lord's Prayer, Matt. 6.
Ten Commandments, Ex. 20.
Creation, 4004 B. C.
Deluge, 2348 B. C.
Descent into Egypt, 1706.
Exodus from Egypt. 1491 B. C.
Sun, moon and stars stand still, Josh, 10,12.
Longest verse in Old Testament, Est., 8.9.
Gideon's army tested, Jude 7.
Who made an iron axe-head swim? 2 Kings, 6.6.
What prophet's bones restored life? 2 Kings, 13.21.
A riddle at the marriage feast, Jude 14.14.
Bears eat little children, 2 Kings, 2.24.
Name the twelve tribes of Israel.
Name the fifteen Judges of Israel.
Woman eating her son, 2 Kings, 6.29.
Jeptha's rash vow, Jude 11.
Jael killeth Sisera, Jude 4.21.
Who killed a giant? 1 Sam. 17.49.
Where did Jesus send the disciples to find money? Matt. 17.27.
Is there any taste in the white of an egg? Job 6.6.
A spider's web, Job 8.14.
A shock of corn, Job 5.26.
Collar of my coat, Job 30.18.
Name books of Old Testament.
Name books of New Testament.
Divisions of Bible.
Number of books.
Gideon's signs, Jude 6.36.

Verses:

John 3.16, 1 Peter 5.7, Josh 1.9, John 3.36, 1 Timothy 1.15, John 4.14, John 14.27, Eccle., 12.1, Rev. 3.20, John 17.3, Gal. 6.2, 1 John 4.19, John 10.7, 2 Tim. 2.15 Acts 16.31, Matt 11.28, Luke 18. 16, Prov 22. 1, Eph 4.32, Isa 1.18, 1 John 2.15, Gen 31.49, 1 John 3.2, Col 3.23, Prov 8.17, Prov 14.32, Prov 15.1, Psalms 23.

The Superintendent, Miss Beeching, was so pleased with the success of the Juniors that she gave to the successful four, Hattie Willis, Minnie Diehl, Etta Ackor and Bessie Bullman, very pretty Christian Endeavor booklets.

Westfield Athletes on the Stage.

The Westfield Athletic Club will celebrate Washington's Birthday with a dramatic entertainment in their cosy club-house. Charles Townsend's farcical comedy "Vacation" will be done by local players, singers and dancers, and the following will be the all-star cast:

President of the Empire Bank,
Albert A. Drake
Herbert Willis, alias Jim Parr, a guide, formerly a bank cashier............Leonard G. Venn
Curtis Dunbar, a truly good young man,
Charles H. Bent
G. Elliott Brayton, a sweet member of Westfield society..................Oscar Richardson
Old Obadiah Siggins, farmer...Gideon Ludlow
Obadiah Siggins, Jr., a chip off the old block,
Robert Carberry
Jack Ashton of The Daily Cyclone,
E. B. Hoadley
Bagsley, a tramp..............Andrew A. Smith
Dick Percival, an actor....George Richardson
Dennis Clancy, an all-round man,
Charles H. Denman
Toots, a negro cook...............Wm. H. Earle

Live Stock Insurance Company.

The New Jersey Mutual Live Stock Insurance Company has filed articles of incorporation with the Clerk of Union County. The company will begin business with a paidup capital of $10,000, and its headquarters will be in Plainfield.

The incorporators are Peter J. Cortelyou, Wm. J. Nelson, Henry S. Garretson, Samuel Lindsey, George Huff, Peter Huff, Geo. W. DeMeza, Chas. Johnston, Chas. A. Coriell and Clarence VanDeventer.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

OUR LOCAL CANADA.

The March of Improvement Over the Brook.

BOROUGH COUNCIL REVIEWS ITS YEAR.

Departments Better Equipped, and General Improvements Noted—Chief Pangborn Wants More Police—Too Much Pressure on Somerset Street—Mr. Neal Pleads the Worth of the Home Newspaper.

Councilman Neal was welcomed out again after illness, at the meeting of the North Plainfield Borough Council Friday night, and he participated with vigor in the business of the session. Little was done besides the reception of reports.

The accounting of the Clerk and the Collector having been received and filed, the Auditing Committee gave official endorsement of the fiscal statement, declaring over their signatures that the balances were correct as reported, and the accounts straightforward and accurate.

Chief Marshal Pangborn stated the number of arrests for the year to be 162. Fifteen of these were females. The drunk and disorderly patients were 104. The police station was in good order, and there were no suits pending against the Borough for arrests. Two marshals patrolled the streets at night, but this number was too small to cover the territory properly, and he recommended the appointment of two additional marshals.

The Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps reported that the efficiency of the fire department had been greatly increased during the year by the addition of improved equipment. The system of twelve automatic alarm boxes had cost $2,400, payment being spread over 2½ years. The new wagon, holding 1,500 feet of hose, cost $440. Fourteen hydrants had been added, and twenty-two more street lights.

The Committee on Streets reviewed the macadamising and other improvements made, and regretted the lack of means to enforce the sidewalk ordinance. Grove street extension, they held, should be speedily made a substantial and permanent roadway, affording another artery to Washington Valley, Somerset street being inconvenient to many whose horses were not accustomed to the trolley cars. The committee dwelt with emphasis on the urgent need of more durable paving of Somerset street throughout its length, macadam being regarded as too light, too transient, and too costly, for the heavy traffic which wears the street. In informal discussion of this previous to the meeting, the Councilmen seemed to favor vitrified brick, which has been recommended for Park avenue and Front street, Plainfield. It was hoped by the committee that the matter of sewerage would take definite shape during the next year, and meanwhile it was unwise to attempt any work on the streets except to keep in repair those portions already macadamized.

These reports were received and filed, and it was ordered that they be printed with the list of delinquent taxpayers as usual each year. The work hitherto has been done in pamphlet form, and the original motion was to print 1,000 pamphlets. Mr. Neal, however, urged the justice of the newspapers' claim that such matters received better circulation through the newspapers than if printed in pamphlet. He said there were two newspapers in the community, and between them they reached every home where these reports were of interest and value. He moved to amend by giving the Committee on Printing the authority to print them in pamphlet form or in the papers, as was in their judgment best. Mr. Valiant argued for the pamphlets as the most convenient form, but the amendment of Mr. Neal was adopted, Mr. Valiant alone voting No. Messrs. Howell, Peck and Lounsbury constitute the Committee on Printing.

The Council adjourned early, without transacting any other business.

David Bodine is visiting his parents on Grandview avenue.

Miss Onderdonk of Philadelphia is a guest of the Misses Marsh of Madison avenue.

Mrs. Hiram D. Woodland of Duer street left yesterday for a short visit with friends in Brooklyn.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Walker of Chatham street, who was so seriously ill, is now improving.

John M. Duck of Jackson avenue has leased the house of Howard Randolph on Netherwood avenue, where he will move April 1.

The many friends of Miss Tessie Keeley of LaGrande avenue will be glad to learn that she has nearly recovered from her severe illness of the past two weeks.

Dr. Chas. R. Thiers has moved his family from Somerset street to 13 Grove street. His dentistry office will be on Somerset street for a few days longer.

Baggage business at the North avenue station of the Jersey Central resumed its accustomed serenity and systematic enterprise this morning, for Baggage Master Garretson was once more on duty, after a few-days illness.

John W. Murray, accompanied by Mrs. Murray, who is at Rockledge, Fla., is reported as improved in health by the quiet rest he is having at that place. Fishing in the Indian river is his favorite pastime and he keeps the hotel table well supplied

METROPOLITAN NOTES.

Interesting Facts and Opinions Chronicled by the Daily Press of New York.

Since the introduction of the use of anti-toxine in diphtheria and croup cases a marked decrease in the mortality of children suffering from the two diseases has been noticed by the board of health. From Dec. 15, 1894, to Jan. 12, 1895, the total number of cases reported was 925, with the number of deaths as 273, or 29 per cent.

From Jan. 12 to Jan. 26 540 cases were reported, of which 119 proved fatal. The death rate, however, was reduced to 21 per cent.

For the manufacture of anti-toxine guinea pigs are needed. Fanciers, who dealt in pigs, have supplied the market, but the supply is not equal to the demand.

Fame and fortune, the health authorities say, await the boy who will raise guinea pigs for use in the laboratory. Seventy-five cents is paid for a healthy pig two months old. A pair for breeding purposes cost $1.50.

The female litters four times a year, with four in a litter, but one of the number dies shortly after birth. It is almost impossible to get a guinea pig for use in the laboratory at present.

Fanciers have been compelled to send to other cities in order to meet the demand made upon them by the makers of anti-toxine.—N. Y. Sun.

Mr. George Gould is the only member of his family who has ever displayed any decided liking for the more cheerful side of life. Ever since his return from Europe he has been moving continually from one sport or entertainment to another. Recently he has been taking a party of society people through Canada in a private car, having just finished a season of stag and fox hunting. There is a well-grounded rumor abroad that he will not only be as prominent as ever in the yachting world next season, but that he is going into horse racing on a lavish scale. Neither of his brothers displays any particular interest in sports, but the head of the Gould family has grown to be a decided enthusiast. Long before his father's death he was a daily visitor at the New York Athletic club. He is something of an authority on boxing and on the finer points of track athletics. Toward the close of the elder Gould's life, however, his oldest son devoted himself almost exclusively to business. It was not until he purchased the Vigilant that Mr. George Gould developed to the fullest extent a love of sports.

Many women have visited Trinity cemetery, 155th street and Amsterdam avenue, in the past few days to see the marvelous "blanket of flowers," which was said to "cover the casket" of Mrs. Wm. Waldorf Astor, and which was to be "renewed every morning for a year" by Mr. Astor's order. Mrs. Astor was buried on Jan. 9, not in a vault but in a grave, in the northwestern corner of the Astor plot. On the day of the funeral the mound of earth was covered with pine boughs. The evergreens have not been removed, and except at one corner, which has been uncovered by inquisitive visitors, the grass is covered with snow. The laborers in the cemetery have swept a path through the burial plot, and about the grave a path has been trodden by men and women. All this annoyance and disappointment is due to Joseph Fleischman, a florist. On the morning of the funeral he told the reporters that he had the contract to supply fresh flowers every day for a year for the grave. For this he was to receive $100 a day, he said, and in all he would receive $40,000 from Mr. Astor. On the day after the funeral Mr. Fleischman sent to the newspaper offices a typewritten story of the alleged contract given to him by Mr. Astor. He was, he said, to furnish 4,000 fresh lilies of the valley and 4,000 violets each day. He repeated this statement, and then, being confronted with the facts, admitted that he had invented the whole story.

LEBANON COUNTY ENGLISH.

The One Defect of a Pennsylvania Dutch Beauty Who Was an Heiress Also.

"The most beautiful girl I ever saw, either in face or form," said the bachelor doctor, "was over in the good old Pennsylvania Dutch county of Lebanon. I met her at a party, and fell in love with her even before I knew that she was worth $100,000 in her own right and before I had been introduced to her. The moment I saw her I was resolved to try and win her. I was dead gone. I couldn't rest until I was introduced.

"An embarrassing silence followed the introduction. I had expected a friend at the party, and hadn't seen him. I broke the embarrassing silence by asking my enslaver if she had noticed whether he was present. A flush deepened her cheeks. Her beautiful eyes grew brighter. Teeth of matchless white gleamed between her red lips as she opened them to reply. And this was what she said:

"I haven't saw him, yit. I guess he hasn't come already."

"That was good Lebanon county English, but somehow I didn't try to win the girl."

Those Irrepressibles.

It was at a large party. A gentleman had the misfortune to break a glass. Little Lena, who was standing near her mamma, raised herself on tiptoe and whispered, loud enough for all the company to hear:

"And one of the borrowed ones, too!"

Later in the evening the hostess gave one of her little daughters a nice apple.

"Now, give your mamma a kiss, there's a dear," said the child's uncle.

"I'm not allowed to when she's painted her face."

Little Paul was sent with a bunch of flowers to the manager's wife on her birthday, and waited in silence after he had been dismissed.

Lady—Well, my young man, what are you waiting for now?

Paul—Mamma said I was not to ask for a piece of birthday cake, but wait till I got it.—Tagliche Rundschau.

Almost an Accident.

"Speaking of narrow escapes," observed Mr. Chugwater, reaching for his second cup of coffee, "did I tell you I was on a train the other day that came within three feet of being run into by another train going full speed?"

"For mercy's sake, no!" exclaimed Mrs. Chugwater. "How did it happen?"

"The train that came so near running into ours," he rejoined, buttering a biscuit, "was on the other track and going the other way."

It was several minutes before Mrs. Chugwater broke loose, but when she did she made up for lost time.—Chicago

PARKHURST'S BOOK.

HIS TREATISE ON THE GREAT FIGHT WITH THE TIGER.

His Motto: No Alliance With Police, and No Quarter to Be Shown. Why the Divine Made His Tours of Observation Into the Realms of Vice.

Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst's new book, entitled "Our Fight with Tammany," published by Charles Scribner's Sons, treats of various subjects of public interest. At the outset the distinguished author says:

"Intimation had been given that the gauntlet thrown down by the February grand jury would be taken up by us in my pulpit of March 13. The ordinary furniture of the pulpit, in the shape of Bible and hymn books, was on that occasion supplemented by a copious package of affidavits."

He quotes his text of that day, "The wicked walk on every side when the vilest men are exhalted." (Psalms xii).

Of the powers of the pulpit fulminations against corruption, the author maintains that they are honest, intelligent and untrammeled. He adds:

"And I am saying what I know. I uttered only thirty minutes of indictment against the blood sucking scoundrels that are drawing the veins of our body municipal, and they were all set wriggling like a lot of muck worms in a hot shovel. I am not such a fool as to suppose that it was the man that said it that did the work, nor that it was what was said that did the work; for it has been said a hundred times before with more thoroughness and detail.

"It was the pulpit that did the work. Journalistic roasting these vagabonds will enjoy and grow cool over. But when it is clear that the man who speaks it is speaking it, not for the purpose of putting money into his pocket or power into his party, but is speaking it because it is true, and, in speaking it, appreciates its oracular authority as one commissioned of God to speak it, there is a suggestion of the judgement idea about it, there is a presentiment of the invisible God back of it, that knots the stringy conscience of these fellows into contortions of terror."

Dr. Parkhurst next describes how his policy of hostility to the police first took shape. He said that a short time before he became familiar with certain facts which make out a large feature in the life of the city, and having a special concern for the welfare of the young men of his congregation, he was interested in any means by which he could operate to reduce the strain of current temptation, and make it a little easier for a city young man to maintain himself in his best. Dr. Parkhurst moved in the direction of gambling and social evil. The first obstruction encountered was the police. He discovered that their principal object was to protect and foster crime for gain.

Dr. Parkhurst admits that it took the members of his society some months to learn that a raid was not to be taken seriously. He says:

"If there are two notorious gambling houses or disorderly houses side by side and one of them is raided, and the other not, only a fool will imagine that there was any more honesty in raiding one of the two than in leaving the other unraided. That course of procedure has obtained in this city and obtains to-day.

"Nothwithstanding all this spasmodic activity that prevailed during the months of April and May, the Society for the Prevention of Crime knew, and to some extent the people of the town suspected that there was no change of sentiment or of intention on the part of the Police Department, and if there were to be any improved municipal condition it would have to come from a grand movement and concerted protest on the part of the people at large."

Referring to the excursions he made into the realms of infamy, he has this to say by way of excuse or defense:

"The necessity for such a tour of observation was, to my mind, so transparently necessary that it did not seem advisable to seek any considerable amount of counsel on the matter. I conferred repeatedly with Mr. David J. Whitney, who was one of the most aggressive members of the society, and who, through long warfare with the evil geniuses of our city, had made himself an expert in all that concerned the society's work. He was a man who was very quick in his judgments, but exceedingly liable to be right. He agreed with me that there would be tremendous advantage in being able to speak of the city from out of my own personal acquaintance with it, but omitted no pains to convince me of the poisoned arrows of malignity to which I should be exposed if I made the venture.

"Having decided that destiny was a thing from which there is no escape, it remained to find a safe and congenial spirit whom I could take as my companion. More hinged upon this matter than I could then distinctly foresee. It was necessary that such companion should be a man of unimpeachable personal character, and of an established position in the community. Of course it was necessary, also, that he should undertake the work, not out of any hasty or uncertain impulse, but purely out of devotion to the cause which the work represented.

"Nevertheless, in full view of all that has passed, and in spite of all in the way of vicious criticism and honest misunderstanding that has ensued, I am still obliged to say that the course I took was the only course that could have been taken; and that, under like circumstances, I would repeat precisely the same policy. No rhetoric that I might have availed of, and no theories of the situation that I might have promulgated, would ever have begun to take the place of my being able to say: 'I know.'

"I may be permitted to say that when I stood in my pulpit shortly after, and, on the strength of my own personal knowledge, repeated in more detail the charges for which I had just been 'presented,' I felt clear to the center of my being that I was in a position from which no District Attorney, no Grand Jury, and no Justice Martine, or any of his ilk, could ever shake me."

Sweet Alice Up to Date.

Oh, do you remember sweet Alice, Ben Bolt,
Sweet Alice, whose hair was so brown?
It has changed to a hydrogen blonde, I am told,
Since sweet Alice moved into town.
—Indianapolis Journal.

Always There.

She—I suppose there are some refining influences at work in Washington?

He—Oh, yes; you know the agents of the sugar trust are still there.—Yonkers

METROPOLITAN NOTES.

Interesting Facts and Opinions Chronicled by the Daily Press of New York.

New York's streets are a perpetual flower show. Any one that has known the city a dozen years must have noted the progressive growth of the retail flower trade. Not only does the business flourish on fashionable thoroughfares, but it has found its way to every quarter save the poorest. There are between 200 and 300 florists with shops, to say nothing of the myriad of street stand keepers and peripathetic men, women and girls. Wherever streams of home-going persons converge there is a flower stand wooing them to amiable extravagance. There are astonishing displays at a dozen elevated railway stations. All the new quarters far uptown have their florists, with all the luxuries, seasonable or unseasonable. There are plenty of second-hand dealers offering flowers that have already adorned the windows of the large florists, and in late spring and summer these flowers are so cheap that they come within the means of even the poorest.

Albert Bierstadt, the famous painter, has failed financially with liabilities $40,000 and nominal assets $100,000. He has long been in the front rank of American landscape painters. He was born in Dusseldorf, Germany, Jan. 7, 1830. He came to this country with his parents in 1831, and settled in New Bedford, Mass. He early developed a taste for art, and in 1851 began to paint in oils. In 1853 he went abroad to study at Dusseldorf and in Rome, making sketching tours during the summers in Germany and Switzerland. Returning to the United States in 1857, he made an extended tour through the West, and it was he who first put upon canvas the scenery in the Rocky Mountains, the Yosemit Valley and the Yellowstone.

Among his best know paintings are "Laramie Peak," (1861), now in the Buffalo Academy of Fine Arts; "Lander's Peak in the Rocky Mountains," (1863), for which James McHenry of London paid $25,000, "Looking Down the Yosemit," (1866), in the Lenox Library; "Settlement of California" and "Discovery of the Hudson," both in the Capitol at Washington; "In the Rocky Mountains, (1871), bought by Marshall O. Roberts for $40,000, and "Mountain Lake," and "Mount Cocoran in Sierra Nevada," (1878), now in the Corcoran Gallery, Washington.

In speaking of Mr. Bierstadt's work, a well-known artist said to a reporter: "There was a time when Bierstadt's paintings brought the highest of any American painter, and in London he was as popular as he was here. He was a great chap for courting royalty, and many of the English nobility were his friends. He was a particular favorite of the Marquis of Lorne and the Princess Louise. But painters, like women's gowns, get out of fashion. Since Bierstadt made a name for himself, other painters in landscape have came to the front, and I fancy Bierstadt's paintings would not sell for nearly as much now as they did ten or fifteen years ago. At any rate, they would not bring anything near their value at a forced sale."

Mr. Bierstadt was married about a year ago, for the second time, to Mrs. David Stewart, who, before she married the late millionaire banker, David Stewart, was Miss Mary E. Hicks. Mrs. Bierstadt is said to be very wealthy, having inherited the greater part of her first husband's large estate.

The field of charity has no fences. It is boundless, and will admit all the money that can be thrown into it. Charity tries the thoughts and the ingenuity of a great many rich people, who seek to help human failures and misfortunes. If people had more to give, there would still be ample opportunity for greater expenditure than marks the present time, so actively and energetically charitable. It is upon this humane and generous spirit that the Knights of Labor in Brooklyn, who are running the trolley strike, have sought to impose through an appeal that is fairly soaked with falsehoods.

"We have not appealed to force; we have acted as law-abiding citizens; we have refrained from violence," says this shameless wheedle. Yet at that very moment the streets of Brooklyn were lined with the entire police force and with militia of the State to protect the street cars, their passengers and operators, from being stopped and assaulted. Then the strikers go on to insult other citizens not engaged in the strike. They call the men "imported from other cities of the Union" to run the Brooklyn cars in the place of the strikers who have refused to run them, "the scum and driftwood of humanity." Members of District Assembly 75 are honest citizens whom the railroad companies have "contaminated with the tramps and outcasts."

What self-respecting American joins District Assembly 75 of Brooklyn in calling men out of work "the outcasts of society?" What are Martin J. Connelly, the Master Workman, and his four associates in signing this request for money, that they can thus spit in the face of every man who comes seeking work which they have refused to do?

When the trolley men deliberately put themselves into the condition of asking charity, they were their own masters. An appeal for money to help carry on their devilish determination to keep other men from working in their places, and to maintain a situation in which the people of Brooklyn have their street cars stopped, and the men and money of Brooklyn and of the State of New York are called on to preserve the elementary rules of order and public convenience, is a gross abuse of the charitable impulse. The denunciation of non-strikers seeking work as "outcasts" is an inadmissible outrage.—N.Y. Sun.

Did Not Blame the Japanese.

The child often set the passengers laughing at her droll and ingenious remarks. Presently a remarkable fat Chinaman, in full Chinese costume, entered and sat opposite the child.

She looked at him in apparent amazement, and then, turning to her mother, with an air that showed she had given it up, asked:

"Mamma, what's that opposite?"

"Sh—. That's a Chinaman, my dear," answered the mother in a low tone of voice.

"The same kind of Chinaman papa says the Japanese are killing?"

"Yes, my dear. Don't talk so loud."

The child meditated a moment, and then said:

"Well—I don't blame 'em."

Many a man sets up for a public benefactor who never thinks it worth while to give his wife a word of encouragement.—Ram's Horn.

MEDICINE IN TABLETS.

From the New York Sun of February 3, 1895.

Increasing Use of Drugs in This Form Instead of Compounding by Prescription.

A comparatively recent invention, vastly extended in its application within three or four years, has wrought a curious change in the practice of medicine. Country physicians 100 years ago, when there were few druggists outside of considerable towns, carried in their saddle bags or medicine chests a variety of drugs, pills, powders, potions, lotions and what not. Such physicians made up their own prescriptions and furnished their patients with medicines. The use of medicines in the form of tablets tends more and more toward a return of modern physicians to the methods of their predecessors. Physicians everywhere now write fewer prescriptions than they wrote ten years ago, or even two years ago, and the use of medicine in the form of tablets is extending every day.

It is only ten or fifteen years since compressed tablets of chlorate of potash began to be used. Other simple drugs were then put up in tablet form, and gradually the variety of drugs and prescriptions thus prepared was extended until now it includes thousands of compounds. Any physician may now have almost any prescription of his own made up into tablets. The usual requirement is that at least 5,000 tablets shall be ordered. Many well-known prescriptions of famous physicians have already attained a wide celebrity in the medical world through their use in tablet form. Hundreds of liquid prescriptions are thus used by saturating inert material with the mixture, just as homœopathic remedies are prepared in the form of sugar pellets. The tablet factories are constantly experimenting with a view to reducing further drugs and prescriptions to tablet form. They are ready to vary known prescriptions in accordance with the fancy of individual physicians, and to combine one or more prescriptions in a single tablet. The general use of tablets instead of prescriptions has greatly simplified the practice of medicine. The physician, instead of writing a prescription and instructing his patient to have it compounded by a druggist, leaves the necessary number of tablets, with instructions as to the time and manner of taking. Nearly every physician is provided with some such tablets, and many use them in great quantities. Tons of drugs are now put up in this form. It is the wholesale method of modern life applied to the preparation of medicines. Apothecaries have felt the effects of the change in practice through the lessening in the number of prescriptions to be compounded. For the patient it has cheapened the cost of doctoring, for the physician obtains the tablets at so low a rate that he usually makes no charge for those supplied to his patients. New as the use of tablets is, the form of the tablet has been greatly improved since their introduction into medical practice. Tablets are smaller and more compressed than they were a few years ago. The machinery for making them originally was, and perhaps still is, controlled by a single wholesale drug house of this city, but there are many manufacturers of tablets here and elsewhere. When the patentees first began to call their products to the attention of physicians, the tablets very slowly made their way, because the patentees were not widely known in the medical profession. Then they associated themselves with a famous drug house, and the tablets soon began to go.

Only the simpler drugs and remedies put up in tablet form are accessible to the general public. The compounds are not even known by name outside the medical profession. As they are not patent medicines they are not advertised in other than medical newspapers. They come to physicians with a label that proclaims the ingredients and their proportions. Physicians have the good repute of the manufacturer as guarantee that tablets are made of pure drugs and carefully compounded. The best tablet manufacturers employ skilled apothecaries and careful and buy their drugs in large quantities directly from manufacturers.

INTERESTING SECRET HISTORY OF AN OLD-TIME REMEDY.

A certain well-known preparation is so largely prescribed by physicians that its use by them may be said to be universal. Conversationally it is spoken of among themselves as the "R. & S. Compo." If you are ill and call the doctor, no matter what else you get, you are moderately certain to get some one of the forms of the "R. & S." prescription. Its use has been growing more general for a hundred years, and has been vastly increased of late by slight improvements found to be important in effects. The prescription, especially in rural districts, is usually prepared in fluid form, sometimes in powders; but of late it has been found possible to prepare it in tablets, the form now so popular with physicians for all standard medicines. So enormous is the demand, from physicians solely, for the various forms of this preparation that a single manufacturing chemist in New York City made and sold 350,000 pounds of these tablets in the year 1893—and this, be it borne in mind, was to physicians alone, or to fill orders from dealers from whom physicians obtain their supplies. Every physician of eminence has his "R. & S." formula, varying more or less from the original, but substantially the same—that is, depending upon the bases indicated by the letters R. & S.

RIPANS TABULES.

The Ripans Tabules represent the latest and most improved form of this preparation. The separate letters composing the word R-I-P-A-N-S are the initials of the six ingredients. Any doctor knows what they are. The A and N represent the principal change, and have been found of vast importance. No person who has occasion to make use of a dyspepsia remedy, and has once experienced the beneficial results of these tabules in a case of biliousness, headache or any disorder of the stomach, liver or bowels, will ever afterward consent to be without a supply near at hand. A single one gives prompt relief. Price 50 cents a box; at druggists, or by mail.

THE RIPANS CHEMICAL CO.,
10 SPRUCE ST., NEW YORK.

MEN WANTED To take orders. No delivering or collecting. [illegible] steady employment, best terms; Write at once and [illegible]

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

Monograph on the Famous "Man of Destiny."

FAMILY OF THE GREAT CONQUEROR.

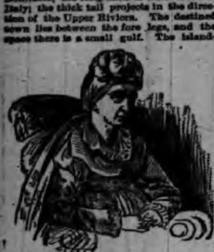
His Mother a Woman of Rare Beauty and Heroic Qualities—A Bit of Family History—Significance of a Piece of Tapestry Inwrought With an Effigy.

[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

I.—ORIGIN.

The meridian of Discovery and the parallel of Conquest intersect at the birthplace of Bonaparte. The birthlines of Cæsar and Columbus, drawn—the one due west from Rome, and the other due south from Genoa—cross each other within a few miles of Ajaccio! It is odd.

Corsica is shaped like a megatherium. The bony head is thrust into the strait of Bonifacio; the long back is bent towards Italy; the thick tail projects in the direction of the Upper Riviera. The destined town lies between the fore legs, and the space there is a small gulf. The island-beast, sketched flat on the sea, shows many black spots on the side: they are mountains. There are veins also, and these are swift streams; small circles in a few places—towns. The area of the broadside is 3,376 square miles. It is more than twice as big as Rhode Island—smaller somewhat than Connecticut. And the population exceeds a quarter of a million.



LETITIA BONAPARTE, MOTHER OF NAPOLEON.

Of the towns here marked, we are concerned with only two; Corte and Ajaccio. The former is the old home of the Buonapartes; the latter, the place to which the family removed just at the time when, by the birth of a man-child clad with thunder, it was destined to emerge from mediæval obscurities, starlike, Sirius-like, into the open sky of fame. Otherwise not much need be said of the island, its emplacement in the sea, its general aspects and possibilities.

The genesis of Napoleon touches a remarkable ethnic condition. Nearly all of the West-Aryan races have contributed to the population of the island in which he was born. The substratum was perhaps that old Etruscan life which preceded the Italicans in Italy. The first foreign colonists were Greeks, out of Ionia. These gained supremacy in the island, but were overwhelmed at length by the Carthaginians. The Roman ascendency came next, and lasted for seven or eight centuries. Then followed the Vandals, and after them the Huns of Attila. Ethnic influences had meanwhile reached a second time out of Africa. Many Mauritanians came over and settled in Sardinia and Corsica; and then, in the Dark Ages, there was a Saracenic conquest.

More important than this was the establishment of Norman power in the island. The people and the architecture alike show traces of all these remote but potent influences in determining the final race-character of the Corsicans who, after the fifteenth century, became essentially Italian. The race is thus composite in its derivation to as great a degree as any people in the world. Besides the ethnic origin, the environment—the narrow confines of the island, its mountainous character, its pleasant situation in the pellucid waters of the Mediterranean, its easy distance from the long bending line of one of the most famous coasts of the world—has tended powerfully, by the reactions of nature on the human animal, to establish and confirm the small insular race whose one man was destined to give it a conspicuous place in human annals.

The Buonapartes were true Corsicans. The family reaches back obscurely into the Middle Ages. The name is Italian, and shows linguistically an origin as remote as the Renaissance. There were Italian as well as Corsican Buonapartes. A family of this name lived in the Tuscan city of Sarzana; another perhaps, in Genoa, and another at Florence. Examples are found in which the spelling is given thus—Buona Parte. They of Sarzana were ennobled in the sixteenth century, and continued to write their name with a di, or de, until the epoch when the Great One was born. The noblesse, however, became attenuated, both in Tuscany and in the island, whereto a branch of the family, at some unknown date, removed and established itself at Corte or Ajaccio.

It would appear that the Corsican Buonapartes kept an interest in Italy, whence they originated. They concerned themselves in the affairs of Tuscany, as well as with those of Genoa. Doubtless they regarded their importance and rank as having been derived from the mainland, and would fain share in the faded glories of the Italian cities.

At the middle of the eighteenth century the head of the Corsican Buonapartes was Joseph, grandfather of Napoleon. The family resided at Corte, in the center of the island. Joseph received a patent of nobility from the grand duke of Tuscany, making him a patrician; and this worthless distinction was carried down to his son, Carlo Buonaparte, whose rights were confirmed by the Archbishop of Pisa and the King of France.

The geographical position of Corsica made it a bone of contention among the Powers. From the sixteenth to the eighteenth century the island was under the suzerainty of Genoa. The people were partisans. Some favored the Genoese; some, the French; and some, other Italian States. At the middle of the eighteenth century, there was turbulence. Insurrection came, and rebellion, and attempted independence. The patriots rose against Genoa, and a certain General Von Neuhof was about to be made king, when a French army under General Marbœuf was sent into the island to bring it into subjection. The French had just lost their colonial empire in North America, and were anxious to make a gain in the Mediterranean to counterbalance the growing power of Great Britain.

After the episode of Von Neuhof, the patriot leader Pascal Paoli gained an ascendency in Corsica, and became dictator. He contended valiantly for the independence of his country, and for a while held his powerful enemies at bay. This, however, could not last. The French party among the Corsicans desired the breaking of all connection between their country and the petty state of Genoa, and a union with the powerful kingdom of France. The cause of Paoli fell before overwhelming odds, and in May of 1768, Corsica was formally delivered to the French. The patriots were scattered, and their leader found refuge in England.

It was in the midst of these agitations, civil and military, that the Buonaparte family emerged clearly to view. Carlo Maria Buonaparte was born in Ajaccio, March 29, 1746. At the time of the failure of the revolutionary movement and the loss of his country's independence, he was twenty-two years of age. Meanwhile, in his eighteenth year, he had fallen in love with Letitia Ramolino, daughter of a well-to-do Corsican peasant. With her, nature had been prodigal of all gifts. She was beautiful to a degree; strongly marked in feature and person with the excellencies of the Italian race.

Of the Ramolino family, not much is known. Suffice it that Carlo di Buonaparte—though a noble—recklessly took Letitia in marriage when she was but fifteen years of age. She brought him her beauty and a portion of properties, but no additional rank. She is said to have been a girl of heroic qualities, queenly in her bearing, rather silent in manner, healthy as to her bodily life, and ignorant of sentiment. Her face, preserved in a hundred forms of art, shows unmistakably the origin of that Napoleonic visage with which the whole world will be familiar to the end of human records.

The character of Carlo di Buonaparte, though discoverable only in fragments, shows a mixture of courage and adventure. He was a projector of many things—a visionary. His education was obtained in Italy. He had been a student at Rome, and afterwards at Pisa, where he prepared himself to be an advocate, and obtained a reputation for youthful eloquence. The University of Pisa conferred on him, about the time of the birth of Napoleon, the degree of Doctor of Laws.

The collapse of the patriot cause had induced Carlo Buonaparte, as a measure of prudence, to leave Ajaccio and retire to Corte. The latter, being an inland town and having a mountainous situation, was more deeply pervaded with the patriotic spirit than was the lowland region about Ajaccio. The coast country gave itself up freely to the French domination. During the first five years of the married life of Carlo, he oscillated with his young family back and forth between the two towns, finally—when safety came with peace—fixing himself at Ajaccio. This was in the early part of 1769.

Meanwhile, before this removal, three children had appeared, in rapid succession, at the hearthstone of Carlo Buonaparte. All of these were born at Corte. The first was a daughter, Elisa, whose birth was in 1765. This child died in infancy, as did also the next, Marie Anne, who was born about two years later. Then, on January 7th, 1768, came the first son, and to him the parents gave the name of Joseph Nabulione, or, as a secondary spelling would have it, Joseph Napoleone, or, Napoleon. The latter name, though appearing in the birth-record of the family, was dropped in the case of the oldest son, Joseph only being retained. It was the custom of the age, in the case of the death of children, to repeat their names for those born afterward. Nor was there anything exact, as in the customs of the nineteenth century, in the spelling employed.

The surname, as well as the given names, in the family of Buonaparte fluctuated into many forms, and gave rise to some discussion and confusion afterwards. One story ran to the effect that Napoleon Bonaparte was born January 7th, 1768, and Joseph about nineteen months afterwards, that is, August 15th, 1769. It was believed at one time that the father interchanged the dates of the birth of his two eldest sons, in order to get Napoleon into the military academy before his tenth year—a thing necessary under the law. But it is now known that no such thing occurred. The only ground for the invention of the fiction was the fact that Joseph's middle name was originally Nabulione, and that this name, in a modified form, was afterwards conferred on the younger son. True, the Corsican Jacob was destined from birth to clutch the heel of Esau, and to supplant him in history. The elder was to serve the younger; but this was to be effected, not by a trick of the father, but by the eternal law of the strongest!

The estate of Carlo di Buonaparte, though augmented by his intermarriage with the Ramolino family, was unequal to his tastes and desires. He possessed a property at Corte, and another in Ajaccio. To the latter he came back in the early part of 1769, and established himself in the house where Napoleon was born. The homestead di Buonaparte was favorably situated. The house is still in excellent preservation. It is four stories in height. From the upper windows one may see the ocean. The building is stuccoed, is rectangular, and has a flat roof, with a small cupola, from which the flag of France was flying at the time when the first emperor of the French came into the world.

About the birth of great men cycles of fiction grow. Friends and enemies alike invent significant circumstances. The traducers of Napoleon have said that he was illegitimate—that his father was the French marshal Marbœuf. They also say, on better grounds, that the marriage of Letitia Ramolino to Carlo Buonaparte was not solemnized until 1767—that the first two children were therefore born out of wedlock. On the other hand, the idol worshipers would fain have Napoleon born as a god or Titan. Premature pangs seize the mother at church. She hurries home, barely reaching her apartment when the heroic babe is delivered, without an accoucher, on a piece of tapestry inwrought with an effigy of Achilles! This probably occurred. It was the 15th of August, 1769. As a matter of fact, there was no omen in heaven or earth—no sign that a beautiful peasant had been delivered of a conqueror!

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH.

Two Kinds of Feminine Thumbs.

Women may be ranged into two different classes, the one having a large and the other a small thumb. The first, having more intelligence than feeling, is wise from history; the second, more feeling than intelligence, is wise from romance.

Are you desirous to win the love of a beautiful young woman with square finger ends? Be steady, and with good sense resist all captivating airs, and do not forget that she joins to a respect for the suitable the love of influence and rule; possesses a mind far above singularity and vulgarity.

Woo a woman with a strong palm, conical fingers and small thumb. Three things govern her—indolence, fancy and feeling.—New York Journal.

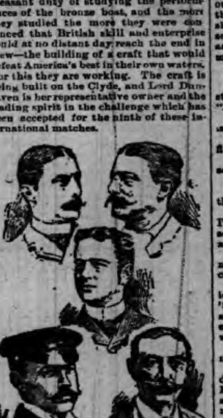
TO DEFEND THE CUP.

SOME OF THE YACHTING EVENTS OF THE PAST QUARTER CENTURY.

Yankee Talent Has So Far Held Supremacy Against British Persistency. Personelle of the Contesting Syndicate of 1895. Lord Dunraven to the Fore Again.

When all minor questions at issue in the matter of the international races are put aside, one thing stands out in the most pronounced manner to the credit of the British yachtsmen—that is, their courage and persistency in the face of continued defeat. It is doubtless a national characteristic to be brave and determined under reverses, but repeated assaults after repeated failures stamp them as foemen worthy the steel of their Yankee victors. It is a long list of disasters when the record is gone over. It begins in the year 1870, when the Cambria, owned by Mr. James Ashbury, was beaten. It finishes in 1893, when the Valkyrie, the property of Lord Dunraven, lowered her colors to the Vigilant. And in the years intervening there is seen that the Livonia, also owned by Mr. James Ashbury; the Countess of Dufferin, represented by Major C. Gifford; the Atalanta, in charge of Mr. Alex. Cuthbert; the Genesta, owned by Sir Richard Sutton; the Galatea, belonging to Lieutenant Henn, and the Thistle, owned by Mr. James Bell, crossed the ocean to be repulsed by the vessels defending the cup. The races which those challengers sailed number eighteen, and the period covered is almost a quarter of a century. Still, the leaders of the sport in England do not seem to be discouraged. They are just as anxious now as in the past to win back the trophy which the American captured more than forty-four years ago. So, courage and persistency must, in truth, be marked against their names and their efforts.

When Lord Dunraven left America, after the failure of the Valkyrie's mission, he intimated to a few friends that he had not given up trying to win the cup, but, on the contrary, was more determined than ever, and within a year or two he should again be heard from by the New York Yacht Club. He has kept his word in the most positive way. Throughout the Vigilant's races abroad last summer he and his yachting friends and private designer were engaged in the pleasant duty of studying the performances of the bronze boat, and the more they studied the more they were convinced that British skill and enterprise could at no distant day reach the end in view—the building of a craft that would defeat America's best in their own waters. For this they are working. The craft is being built on the Clyde, and Lord Dunraven is her representative owner and the leading spirit in the challenge which has been accepted for the ninth of these international matches.



E. D. MORGAN, C. O. ISELIN,
W. K. VANDERBILT,
LORD WOLVERTON, LORD DUNRAVEN.

Lord Wolverton is a member of the Valkyrie syndicate. He is not more than 30 years old, but has long been a yachtsman, and is noted for his extensive travels. He has owned several well known boats and is now cruising in the Mediterranean in the steam yacht Fedora, which he chartered from the Marquis of Waterford. This cruise will not finish until the beginning of May. Lord Wolverton was married recently to Lady Edith Ward, only daughter of Georgina, Countess of Dudley, who is quite a yachtswoman, and for her Lord Wolverton had built, just before their marriage, the two rater Douscha, which they took to the Mediterranean on the deck of the Fedora.

The syndicate owning the cup defender now building at Bristol, and which, in all likelihood, will be the New York Yacht Club's champion in the match for the trophy, are three in number. These gentlemen are Mr. William K. Vanderbilt, Commodore E. D. Morgan and Mr. C. Oliver Iselin. When the question of providing the money to build a proper boat with which to meet the challenging yacht was being agitated, there was much anxiety manifested on the part of the club's officials. Matters did not assume a satisfactory shape until Mr. Chester Griswold, member of the Regatta Committee, called upon Mr. Vanderbilt and explained the situation to him. In less time than it takes to tell the result of the interview Mr. Vanderbilt assured his caller that he would build the boat required. The generous and patriotic offer was hailed with delight by the officers of the club. Subsequently Commodore Morgan and Mr. Iselin signified their desire to co-operate with Mr. Vanderbilt, and the syndicate was thus announced, with Mr. Iselin to be in charge of the craft from now until the races are finished in September next.

It is a model syndicate. Mr. Vanderbilt was one of the number that built the Vigilant, and has always taken the keenest of interest in the yachting affairs of the country and in the club's welfare. His steam yacht Alva was a representative vessel, and his twin screw steamer Valiant, now in the Mediterranean, one of the grandest pleasure craft afloat. He expects to return to America with his steamer in time to witness the cup races, and there isn't a yachtsman in the land but that will wish that he may have the great pleasure of seeing the boat which he so quietly and promptly assured Mr. Griswold he would build defeat her British antagonist.

Wanted.

Give me a girl that I can trust,
And to a home I'll lead her.
I do not want her for myself;
My wife and I both want her.

HAWTHORNE'S SHYNESS.

He Knew that Deer Liked Tobacco, but Wouldn't Talk.

Prof. J. H. Gilmore gave an interesting lecture on Nathaniel Hawthorne, in Rochester recently, in the course of which he related the following: "It was my privilege to meet Hawthorne at the White Mountains. He was there with Pierce and Loring and Spofford, and I saw considerable of him. I shall never forget the whimsical appearance of the man when Pierce was trying to get him to go into the parlor of the hotel. He was quite averse to it. There were clever people there from all over the United States, who had heard of him and were proud of him; but he did not want to mingle with them at all. Pierce insisted upon it, and he complied, and after five minutes he made his escape, and I found him out on the veranda smoking a cigar. He did not want to make friends, apparently, but he made an exception in my favor. I had been spending several summers there, and I knew the woodcraft very thoroughly, and he found out that he could get from me the information that he wanted. He would ask me a question, and my reply would be followed by another question. 'Why?' for instance, he asked me, 'which way would you fish a trout stream?' I said, 'Down stream.' Then he asked me why. I was compelled to answer that a trout, when wounded, runs up the stream, and that if I were fishing down stream he would not disturb the trout below. On one occasion I referred to the fact that the grain of the wood of a certain tree was twisted. At first he questioned the fact, and asked: 'What makes you think so?' I said to him: 'If you will go with me to the woodpile I will show you that it is so.' I thus satisfied him of the fact, but, as to the reason for it, I could only give a theory—that it was caused by the winds. I think that while he was there he found out all that I knew; and I found out very little from him. There was one thing that he knew that I did not find out. One day we were looking at a pet fawn. He said: 'Do you know that every animal of the deer kind is naturally fond of tobacco?' I was taken all aback, because I had been taught that only man and a certain loathsome green worm, the vilest thing the Creator ever made, would touch tobacco. To illustrate the matter to me he put his hand into his pocket, for he not only smoked but chewed, took out a piece of tobacco and handed it to the fawn, and she ate it down as though she liked it, and while I was waiting to see her fall down dead, she was nosing around Hawthorne's pocket for some more tobacco."

Wanted to be Hypnotized.

"Mister," said Meandering Mike, as he stood at the step of the doctor's office, "kin you hypnotize?"

"Can I what?" exclaimed the astonished practitioner.

"Hypnotize. I want somebody dat kin flim-flam my intelleck."

"No, I never made a study of mesmeric science."

"Do yer know anybody dat kin?"

"Y—yes. What do you want with such things?"

"Well, ye see, Doc, it's diss here way. I'm a great reader, I am. I reads every scrap o' paper I gits me hands on, an' it's a cole day when I aint up to de times."

"I suppose you've discovered that hypnotism is being used as a defense for crime?"

"'Course I has. But I ain got no sech idees. Me intentions is t'roughly honor'ble. I jes' been offered a job of snow shovelin' down de street, an' I'm blest ef I ain't so hard up I feels mos' like workin' ter git de money."

"But what has that got to do with hypnotism?"

"Well, I t'ought dat ef you could put a dizzy, hanky-panky spell on me, see? so's I could shovel dat snow wit'out knowin' a t'ing about it, 'twould be a ack of kindness ter a feller man. What I wants is some one dat kin make me 'magine dat shovelin' snow is rushin' de growler, so's I kin earn de quarter before I knows what's happenin'."—Washington Star.

The Wig-Wag Language of Dogs.

It is no doubt a startling conclusion, but Dr. Louis Robinson, who has been investigating the mysteries of canine language, has practically set up the theory that a dog speaks with his tail tip. In the case of all hunting dogs which pack together the tail is carried aloft and is very free in movement. There is no doubt that fox hounds habitually watch the tails of those in front of them when drawing a covert. If a faint drag is detected, suggestive of the presence of a fox, but not sufficient to be sworn to vocally, the tail of the finder is set in motion and the warmer the scent the quicker does it wag. Others seeing the signal instantly join the first, and there is an assemblage of waving tails before even the least whisper is heard. Should the drag prove a doubtful one, the hounds separate again and the waving ceases, but if it grows stronger when followed up the wagging becomes more emphatic, until one after another the hounds begin to whine and give tongue and stream off in Indian file along the line of scent. When the pack is at full cry upon a strong scent the tails cease to wave, but are carried aloft in full view.—London Dispatch.

How She Won Their Votes.

Those who may have imagined that the woman politicians of the country would not prove resourceful in practical electioneering will be interested in Miss Estelle Reel, formerly of Ohio, who carried the State of Wyoming in her canvass for state superintendent of public instruction. Miss Reel is not only young (27), but charming. Being nominated upon the Republican ticket she determined to lead the same, and did so.

In Wyoming the voting places are few and far between, so the woman candidate adopted an original plan of bringing the cowboys to the front. She procured a list of addresses and an immense stock of the daintiest stationery and a corresponding supply of photographs of herself. Inclosing the picture with a graceful personal appeal to every known or unknown friend, she induced the rough riders of the State to travel in many cases as much as fifty miles to vote for the pretty girl who thus honored them.

Miss Reel is said to be the most delightful kind of a woman, and has designs on still higher positions within the gift of the people.

There is now to-day $1,600,000,000 deposited in the savings banks of the United States. There it is—the storehouse of the poor laboring men of the country. Give them the opportunity and they will supply the national deficiency of $50,000,000 in three days, and the thing will be over.—Senator John Sherman.

BAMBERGER'S
THE ALWAYS BUSY STORE
NEWARK, N. J.

--A Great--
ENLARGEMENT SALE

Although but 4 months ago we increased our establishment by over one-third, we are, through the tremendous increase in our trade,

Again Forced to Enlarge,

and shall soon add a space equal in extent to two ordinary retail stores. To reduce our stock to as small a limit as possible, in order to avoid the great labor of moving it, we offer the most

Wonderful Bargains

in all kinds of Dry and Fancy Goods ever given to the people of New Jersey. As the deepest price cuts are on staple articles, of which we carry large reserve stocks, it will pay you handsomely to anticipate your wants for months to come.

L. BAMBERGER & CO.,
147 and 149 Market Street,
Near Broad Street, Newark, N. J.

NO OFFICE FOR HIRAM BROWN.

There Were Some Necessary Preliminaries Not Expected.

He was a polite negro, with a large eye expressive of a natural flow of language, and a face as black as a raven's wing. He wanted to see Congressman John Allen, of Mississippi, and sent in his card at the west lobby door. In due course of time the member came out. He cast a piercing look at the sender of the card, who approached him with an obsequious bow, holding his hat in his hand.

"Sah," said the colored man, with a bland smile, "I is one yah constituents. Brown is my name—Hiram Brown, sah."

"Ah," said the Congressman, bowing stiffly, "what can I do for you?"

"Well, sah," said the darkey, "I wants to git a Government position, sah, if yah will kindly lend me yah valyable ahsistance, and I come all de way to Washington to see yah about it, sah."

"Oh, indeed. Under the civil service or what?"

"I doan't kyah, sah, whether it's under the sahvice or not, just so I get a good and reliable appointment, sah, where I can support myself wid becomin' dignity."

"Do you know anything about physiology, meteorology, conchology, or biology? Can you go back to the paleozoic age and demonstrate in technical terminology the anthropology, fauna or zoology of that epoch? Can you dissect the pterodactyl or the ichthyosaurus or prepare a scientific repast of one of the pachyderms of the glacial period? Can you reconstruct for the edification of a profound professor of buggology the bibacious saurians that were seen by early navigators in the dim dawn of the brazen age?"

The darkey stepped two paces to the rear and stared.

"I say, can you do these things off hand on cross examination, without drawing a breath or stopping to think?" continued Allen. "If not, go back to your district and pray for the return of another era of Democratic sovereignty, with a President pledged to the repeal of the civil service act."

Hiram had been listening with open mouthed astonishment, and a look that settled into an expression of deep awe. The sweat broke upon his ebony countenance. He slowly pulled a red bandanna from his coattail pocket and wiped his reeking brow as the Congressman paused.

"I—I guess, sah," he stammered, with an embarrassed smile creeping back into his face, "I guess, sah, dem queshuns is specially intended foh young cullud pussons dat hab got dar edycashun in a college. I was bawn too soon."

And he walked away with a profound salaam, showing his respect for superior learning, while Allen resumed his Congressional labor with a stern look of duty.—Chicago Record.

Store Improvements.

Extensive improvements are being made on the store owned by Love Bros., at 269 West Front street. A new front is being put in and an addition built on the rear end. The carpenter work is in charge of C. W. Lines.

WANTED—Farm of about 100 acres; good buildings; running water; fruit; good tillable land; near Plainfield. Address S. G., care Press.

MARRIAGES.

HARTPENCE—PAINTER. In this city Feb. 14, 1895 by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Joseph B. Hartpence of Grover, N. J. and Miss Mary B. Painter of Clinton, N. J.

DEATHS.

KRUGER—In this city Feb. 18, 1895, Catherene Kruger, aged 70 years and 7 days.
Funeral services from the residence of her son, Adolph Berre, 147 East 3d street, on Thursday, Feb. 21, at 12 m. Friends and relatives are invited to attend. Interment at Somerville.

SARSON—In this city Monday, Feb. 18, 1895, Harriet E., wife of Samuel T. Sarson, in her 41st year.
Funeral services from her late residence, 750 West Front st., Thursday, Feb. 21, at 2.30 p. m.

AYERS—In this city Feb. 17, 1895, Frederick W. Ayers, aged 2 years, 6 months and 10 days.
Funeral from his parents residence, 437 West 3d st., Tuesday afternoon, Feb. 19, at 2:30.
Friends and relatives are respectfully invited to attend.

BENNER—In this city, Friday, Feb. 15, 1895, Mary Benner, wife of Jacob Benner in the [illegible] year of her age.
Funeral services from her late residence [illegible] Orchard place, Sunday Feb. 17, at 2:30 p. m.
Relatives and friends are invited to attend. Interment in Methodist cemetery.

ADAMS—Miss Susan B. Adams, at the home of her sister, Mrs. Adelbert Vail, 314 East Second street, February 15, 1895, in the 49th year of her age.
Funeral Sunday at 2:30 p. m., at late residence 314 East Second street.

DIRECTIONS for using CREAM BALM.

Apply a particle of the Balm well up into the nostrils. After a moment draw a strong breath through the nose. Use three times a day, after meals preferred, and before retiring.

CATARRH

ELY'S CREAM BALM opens and cleanses the nasal passages, allays pain and inflammation, heals the sores, protects the membrane from colds, restores the senses of taste and smell. The Balm is quickly absorbed and gives relief at once. Price 50c at druggists or by mail. ELY BROTHERS, 56 Warren street, New York.

COLD IN HEAD

Notice of Order to Limit Creditors.

Somerset County Surrogate's Office.
Estate of John Jacob Lang, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that on the sixth day of February, A. D. 1895, on the application of the undersigned, executrix of John Jacob Lang, deceased, an order was made by the Surrogate requiring the creditors of John Jacob Lang, deceased, to bring in their debts, demands and claims against the said decedent, under oath or affirmation, and present the same to the subscriber within nine months from the date of said order; and in default thereof any such creditor should be forever barred of his or her action therefor against the subscriber.

ANNA ELIZABETH LANG,
Executrix.

2 14 9

ELECTRIC TELEPHONE

Sold outright, no rent, no royalty. Adapted to City, Village or Country. Needed in every home, shop, store and office. Greatest convenience and best seller on earth. Agents make from $5 to $50 per day. One in a residence means a sale to all the neighbors. Fine instruments, no toys, works anywhere, any distance. Complete, ready for use when shipped. Can be put up by any one, never out of order, no repairing, lasts a lifetime. Warranted. A money maker. W. P. Harrison & Co., Clerk 10, Columbus, O.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

VOL. XXVII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1895. No 8

"Support the Constitution, which is the cement of the Union, as well in its limitations as in its authorities."—MADISON.

LIQUOR-LICENSE NIGHT.

Every Application Granted by the Council.

EVEN "PADDY DAY'S OLD PLACE".

All Voted for Unanimously Except this Saloon on West Third Street, and that Gets Through by the Vote of Six to Four.

From The Press of Feb. 26.

Once a year the meetings of the Common Council of Plainfield, ordinarily shunned by those citizens who find them too tedious with their routine of real hard work, become a matter of great and absorbing interest to that portion of the people who believe in having public places where the men may congregate to slake their thirst and drink in the town's gossip.

Last night was the date of this annual event for the license element, and it was a large and unusual gathering which assembled in the lobby of the chamber and waited through the business of the session.

Little was done beyond the granting of the liquor licenses.

Chairman Moore of the Committee on License reported the license applications correct in form, and they were granted as follows:

John Rafferty, saloon, 213 Park avenue.
John J Sullivan, saloon, 518 West Third street.
John J. Goff, hotel, West Third and Liberty streets.
Jacob Blimm, hotel, 37-39 Somerset street.
James Day, saloon, 545 West Third street.
John E Beerbower, City Hotel, Park avenue and East Second street.
Alexander D Findlay, saloon, 123 East Second street.
James Conneely, saloon, 214-216 Park avenue.
Charles Smith, saloon, Front and Somerset streets.
Fred Caspar, hotel, 142-144 East Front street.
Wallace V. Miller, Hotel Grenada, 111-119 North avenue.
Frank Linke, wholesale, 227 West Front street.

The vote on all of these was unanimous to grant, except on that of James Day. When that came up, Mr. Dumont asked if it were not a new application. He said he was opposed to increasing the number of saloons. Mr. Westphal stated that the place had been licensed a number of years, though not during the last two or three years.

"Oh, well,"—ejaculated Mr. Dumont—"It's Paddy Day's old place, and we all know what that was!"

The vote was: To grant—Messrs. Bird, Fisk, Frazee, Moore, See, Westphal, 6; not to grant—Messrs. Dumont, Erickson, Ginna, Stockton, 4.

The announcement of the vote aroused applause in the lobby, which was promptly checked by Chief of Police Grant.

Other licenses were granted as follows:

Hackmen — Daniel Hibbitts, Cornelius Guinee, W F Callahen (2), John Kelly, P. T. Keely & Son (2), Patrick Lynch (3), Henry Hassco (2), Peter N. Peterson, Max Newman (2), Thomas Burns.
Truck—J Krewson, S R Coddington, Charles H Parlee, Frank Hickert (2), A B Summers (2), W S Ayers, A. R. Hoagland (2).
Cartman—Robert Randolph.
Peddler, with horse and wagon—Ellis J Dunn.

The only petitions received by the Council were as follows:

From J. P. Mason and others, for three electric lamps on Stelle avenue between Central and Plainfield. Referred to the Committee on Police and Public Lights with power.

From the Ministers Association, requesting that no new application for liquor license be granted, that none be renewed where the applicant had been convicted of disorder or illegal selling, and that the Council consider the propriety of not granting any license whatever. Received and filed, previous to the action on the licenses.

The annual report of the City Clerk was submitted, inspected by the Committee on Finance, and filed.

Mr. Stockton reported the appointment of G. W. Grant Chief of Police, and explained the relations of the Police Board and the Mayor, as quoted in another column of this issue.

The Committee on Streets reported that it had received bids for street work as follows:

Crushed stone—A I & N B Smalley, 85 cents to $1 a ton, according to size; Wahl & Hatfield, 85 cents to $1.
Crosswalks—Double, J T Vail, 97 cents a foot; N Powers, $1 20; John A Thickstun, 98 cents; single, Vail, 55 cents; Powers, 60; Thickstun, 70.
Culverts—Per lineal foot, main, Vail, $2 10; Powers, $1.90; Thickstun, $2; branch, Vail, $1.40; Powers, $1.27; Thickstun, $1.50.

The Committee recommended, and it was adopted, that contracts be made, under bond of $1,000, with the Smalleys for the crushed stone; and under bond of $500 for each contractor, with Thickstun for the single crosswalks, with Vail for the double crosswalks, and with Powers for the main and branch culverts.

No other business was done.

THE W. C. T. U. MEMORIAL.

Here It Is, as Not Read at the Meeting of the Council.

The Press was today supplied with the following for publication, which was said to have been sent to the Common Council last night, but which certainly was not read:

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—The Woman's Christian Temperance Union of this city most earnestly and respectfully petition the Common Council to thoroughly investigate the legality of the signers to the petitions asking for the granting of license. We are informed that in some instances a money consideration has been received. We further pray that you will recognize the fact the legalized liquor traffic is the most fertile soil for the production of suffering, poverty and crime in our midst, by withholding the granting of license. It lies in your authority and power to be the saviours of many souls from drunkards graves. To redeem from the most cruel suffering the lives of innocent and helpless women and children. To remove from our city the stigma of legalized sin against the "Thou shalt not of God", and to heed the expressed protest of the ministers and people from time to time. We wish to recall the words of Mayor Gilbert in his address of 1893, viz: "We must not lose sight of the fact that the influence of our administration of public affairs may last many years after we shall have relinquished our trust." Apply this to the liquor traffic. Again from the address of the past year. "We are living in an age of progress, and to keep our place in the foremost rank we must equip ourselves with everything that is to promote the health, comfort and prosperity of our people." These are words spoken by your Mayor and which give him the endorsement of the best people of the community. We trust that you will endorse and in reality promote "the health, comfort, and prosperity of the people" by refusing to longer grant license to sell liquor in saloon, inn or tavern.

Respectfully submitted,
CARA L. PECK,
President.
MRS. J. H. FRENCH,
Rec. Secretary.
MRS. F. B. KROM,
Asst. Rec. Secretary.
MISS MINEOLA TOMLINSON,
Cor. Secretary.
MRS. RUFUS CASE,
Treasurer.

8 MILES MORE OF TROLLEY TRACK.

That's What the Plainfield Street Railway Company Plan to Build.

Councilman Fisk spent yesterday afternoon with Mr. Riker of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, going over the available routes for street railway extension. The company is anxious to begin work on the extensions, and the only trouble is to get the sufficient rights of way. It is hoped everything will be ready for action at the meeting of the Common Council next Monday night. The extensions are planned to reach Netherwood, Scotch Plains, Hillside Cemetery, the West End, and Dunellen. Altogether the company will ask for franchise for eight miles of track in addition to that already in operation. The people have only themselves to blame if these extensions are not completed this year, as the company is ready to go ahead as fast as the consents can be secured.

A TWOFOLD SUCCESS.

The Rectory Society Gains in Finances as Well as Sociability.

The sale and tea given by the Rectory Society of the Grace P. E. Church at the home of Mrs. D. T. VanBuren on Central avenue from 3 to 7 yesterday afternoon and evening was auspicious in not only increasing the finances of the society but also in affording to its members and patrons a pleasant opportunity for social chat.

The fancy work table was in charge of Mrs. Howard Tracy, Mrs. Evarts Tracy and Mrs. James Hallock; cake, Mrs. Foote and Mrs George Clay; candy, Misses Reinhart, Holly and Rodman. At the dining table tea and cake was served, with Mrs. L. G. Timpson and Mrs. C. Lawson pouring tea, assisted by Misses Catherine and Mary Reinhart, Bogert, Woodruff, Lawson and McClure.

During the course of the sale and tea about 160 guests attended, and all left with the impression that the Rectory Society was a valuable adjunct to the welfare of the church with which it is affiliated.

Their First Masquerade.

The first annual masquerade ball of the A. S. C's was held in Central Hall, Thursday night, but was slimly attended, owing to the many other events of a similar character being in progress at the same time. The hall was trimmed with varied colored festoons and Chinese lanterns. The dancers were attired in costumes ranging from the grotesque to the classic and portraying characters of history and of the passing generation.

Miss Mary Luckey of East Fifth street is suffering from an attack of the grip.

A False Diagnosis.

La grippe is confounded by many persons with a severe attack of catarrh, which in some respects resembles the former. These individuals suffer severely with pain about the forehead, eyes and ears, with soreness in throat and stoppage of the nasal passages and in fact, are incapacitated for work of any kind for days at a time. These are catarrhal sufferers. Ely's Cream Balm has been used with the best results in such cases. The remedy will give instant relief.

FOR AN ALMSHOUSE.

Citizens Preparing for a Needed Reform.

TO CONFER WITH THE COUNCIL.

Col. Tyler, Pastor Newell and H. P. Reynolds Appointed a Committee to Act in the Matter.

The attendance of members at the special meeting of the Citizens Organized Aid Association last evening in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue Church was very large.

Col. Mason W. Tyler presided, and after the roll call by Secretary Ladd, Rev. G. Kennedy Newell was asked to state the object of the meeting, which was to consider the advisability of establishing an almshouse, to be under the supervision of the Citizens Organized Aid Association.

Mr. Newell explained in a very satisfactory manner the advantages of the plan set forth in the report of the District Committee, as follows:

REPORT OF THE DISTRICT COMMITTEE.

January 31, upon invitation of the District Committee, there was a joint meeting of Hon. Alexander Gilbert, Mayor of Plainfield, the gentlemen of the Alms Committee of the Common Council of the City of Plainfield, Col. Tyler, Mrs. Woodruff, and the District Committee of the C. O. A. A.

The purpose of the meeting was to discuss the care of the city poor and to see if some steps could not be taken looking toward the establishment of an institution where the dependent poor could be properly cared for.

The present system of helping the city poor in their own homes is technically known as "outdoor relief". In the course of the discussion the following points were brought up against outdoor relief:

First—The city has no control over the city poor. It cannot restrain its wards from immorality, drunkenness and disorder. In his report of Jan. 2, 1895, the Overseer of the Poor states that this lack of restraint results in pauperism and crime.

Second—Private charity can care for the poor in their own homes more wisely than public charity. It would give the beneficiaries what they need as much as material aid, viz: Counsel, lessons in thrift; by its moral influence and individual touch it would stimulate self respect and encourage self support.

Third—The present system of outdoor relief demoralizes and pauperizes its beneficiaries. Having once begun to receive public relief it is almost impossible to stop. It is but a step from temporary public relief to permanent pauperism.

And it tends to pauperize others. The public money is too easy of access. One person in every 175 in Plainfield receives public aid. The effect of this cannot fail to be harmful to the community.

People who would blush at the mention of a poor house, do not feel it a delicate matter even, to appeal to the Overseer. Furthermore, it has been the case in other places where public outdoor relief has been stopped that the number in the alms houses has not increased, but diminished, showing that public outdoor relief is the stepping stone to the alms house.

Fourth—The present system is not economical. In Plainfield probably not more than 20 or 25 would go to an institution for the poor. With this reduced poor list the present appropriation would more than cover the expense of running an institution.

The highest amount paid by the city for the support of a single individual is $10 a month; for 25 persons that would be $3,000 a year. Last year the appropriation for rent, fuel and provisions was $3,197. Ten dollars a month is a large estimate for the care of 25 persons under one roof.

The Herkimer County (N. Y.) alms house is warmed by steam and lighted by gas, and with these luxuries the inmates were cared for at $6 per month for each individual.

After some further discussion the gentlemen of the Alms Committee of the Common Council asked that the C. O. A. A. make some recommendation to the Common Council which that body could act upon.

Therefore the District Committee offers to the C. O. A. A. the following:

The C. O. A. A., of Plainfield, having the deepest interest in the care of the dependent poor, and desirous of helping the Common Council of Plainfield in every way in this matter, respectfully submit the following proposition to wit:

That the Common Council provide a small farm with buildings upon it suitable for the care of the dependent poor, and make yearly appropriations to cover the running expenses of such institution.

On its part the C. O. A. A. promises to give to the institution such practical care and oversight as to guarantee:

1. That it shall be conducted upon the most economical basis.
2. That the inmates shall have all necessary care.
3. That order and discipline shall be maintained.
4. That no unworthy cases shall be admitted.
5. In the cases of those at present upon the poor list whom it would be wiser to help in their own homes the C. O. A. A. will undertake to relieve the city of responsibility as far as possible by directing them to the proper channels of private charity.
6. The C. O. A. A. suggest that the Common Council appoint a committee of three to be with a committee of three from the C. O. A. A. a joint committee to consider and further this matter.

G. K. NEWELL,
Chairman of District Committee.

L. V. F. Randolph then offered a set of resolutions, which were in substance as follows:

That the Committee's report be accepted and approved with the thanks of the Council.

That the Common Council be invited to appoint a committee of three, they to work with a committee of the same number from this Council. That the Committee from this Council consist of Col. Mason W. Tyler, Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, and H. P. Reynolds, they to seek the adoption of the plans as presented by the Committee.

After considerable discussion, in which the legality of the action was considered, the resolutions were adopted.

The meeting then adjourned.

THE NATION'S CAPITAL.

Personally-Conducted Tours to Washington, D. C., via Pennsylvania Railroad.

There is probably no place that offers so much in the way of sightseeing and other things of general interest as Washington, D. C. Apart from being the Nation's Capital, the magnificent Government Buildings and beautifully-planned streets and public parks make it well worth a visit.

The series of three-day tours arranged by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, under its perfect, personally conducted tourist system, gives every one an opportunity to visit Washington under most favorable circumstances and at a very reasonable cost.

The tours leave New York, Feb. 28, and at intervals of three weeks until May 23, 1895, inclusive. The rates, including accommodations at Washington's best hotels, are $13 50 from New York and $11.50 from Philadelphia; proportionate rates from other points.

Detailed itinerary will be sent on application to Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411, Broad Street Station, Philadelphia.

The experience of Geo. A. Apgar, of German Valley, N. J., is well worth remembering. He was troubled with chronic diarrhoea and doctored for five months and was treated by four different doctors without benefit. He then began using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, of which one small bottle effected a complete cure. It is for sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager

THEY'LL GET THERE!

Plainfield Bowling Club Now Tied for First Place, and on the Climb.

The Plainfield Bowling Club are up where they belong, but the question is whether they will stay there at the pinnacle or be compelled to bite the dust, figuratively speaking, at the hands of the Bound Brookers, with whom they are now tied for first place in the Watchung league by ignominiously defeating the Finderne Club last night in the Board of Trade alleys.

If the Plainfielders put up the game on the play offs that they did last night there is reason to believe that victory will perch on their banners as the finishing leaders of the league.

The game last night was an exciting one, and the bowlers of both teams spat on their paws, wiped their throbbing brows, grated their molars and rolled with a determination to win, while the onlookers and rooters rooted with great vehemence at every good play. This of course made things interesting for both sides.

The Findernes started in at the commencement as though they were going to grab all the high scores to be grabbed, and in the first half of the game things looked a trifle favorable for the accomplishment of these intentions. Especially so every time a ball went bowling down towards the pins from the brawny arm of Terwilliger, who played a star game in the first half for Finderne, but whose score dwindled. This seemed to be the principal trouble with the Finderne's—that of exhausting their best playing at the start.

On the contrary the Plainfield boys kept up a good average all the way through, and finished up winners with 49 points to spare. Vail bowled the best game for Plainfield.

The score:

PLAINFIELD.		FINDERNE.
VanAlystie	160	Brown	167
Barnes	133	White	150
Maltby	174	Price, J	140
Watters	141	Shaw	179
Vail	173	Terwilliger	206
VanAlystine	150	Brown	175
Pope	159	White	122
Maltby	179	Price, J	154
Watters	189	Shaw	143
Vail	185	Terwilliger	141
	1634		1585

Scorers—Saunders and Petrie. Referees—Stevens and Reynolds.

The playoff will be bowled on the Finderne alleys, their club offering a special trophy to the winners.

A Des Moines woman who has been troubled with frequent colds, concluded to try an old remedy in a new way, and accordingly took a tablespoonful (four times the usual dose) of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy just before going to bed. The next morning she found that her cold had almost entirely disappeared. During the day she took a few doses of the remedy (one teaspoonful at a time) and at night again took a tablespoonful before going to bed, and on the following morning awoke free from all symptoms of the cold. Since then she has, on several occasions, used this remedy in like manner with the same good results, and is much elated over her discovery of so quick a way of curing a cold. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

A LINK AT LAST.

City and Borough to be Wedded by a Drive.

WATCHUNG AVE. OPENING REVIVED

Officials from Both Sides of the Brook Agree on Proceeding Simultaneously to Get the Thoroughfare Through, and Hustler Smalley Lends a Hand.

From The Press of Feb. 27.

Chairman Charles J. Fisk of the Committee on Streets of the Plainfield Common Council is determined to have the long agitated project to open Watchung avenue from Front street to the foot of the mountain pushed rapidly to completion, and at his prompting a consultation between the Plainfield and North Plainfield authorities was held last night as announced in The Daily Press of last evening.

The session was held in the office of Mayor Gilbert, in the Coward Building, and was informal; those attending were Councilmen Ginna and Fisk of the Plainfield Committee on Streets, Councilman Valiant of the North Plainfield Committee on Streets, Street Commissioner Robert A. Meeker of the city, ex-Borough Councilman Newton B. Smalley, Town Committeeman Robert M. Fountain, and the Editor of The Daily Press by invitation.

The map and list of assessments which were left as a $2,000 legacy of the former effort to open the avenue were open for inspection and discussion. Mr. Fisk reviewed the action that had been taken, stating that the Town Committee and the City Council had acted jointly in appointing commissioners and assessing benefits and damages. They had operated under a law which had been passed to cover just such cases, and after the preliminary work had been accomplished objectors had obtained a decision in the courts setting it aside on the grounds of the unconstitutionality of the act under which they had conducted the survey.

The method of procedure left was for the two councils to agree informally on action, and then proceed independently but with thorough understanding of one another's movements.

All agreed that the opening of the avenue would be a vast improvement. Mr. Smalley, who was one of the most aggressive in previous agitation of the enterprise, said he could talk a week on the matter, and not exhaust argument in favor of it. The only cause for previous defeat had been the injustice of the assessments. Too much had been put on some individuals, some had been awarded too large benefits, and not enough had been put on the township at large.

The commissioners had awarded damages of $25,423 08, and provision to raise this amount had been made by assessment on the property-holders most directly benefited in the immediate neighborhood of the improvement. Outside of this, $1,509.73 had been assessed on the town at large, for the expenses connected with the work of the commission. Plainfield had been assessed $657.37 as her share of the cost.

Mr. Smalley pointed out that the work involved in perfecting the improvement would be less today than when agitated before. Much of the proposed extension has already been opened, thereby lessening future cost, and opening up property improvements which would take a generous share of the assessment. For instance, Grand street had been opened through Watchung Park, and deeded by A. D. Thompson to the Borough, and that was really a part of the proposed Watchung avenue, and a portion of the assessments would be distributed over the various properties thus opened up in the Park. Formerly, the work of opening would have to be done clear from the brook to Johnston drive, but now the only part really unopened was from the brook to Jackson avenue. If the work of assessment were carefully done, and if the individual amounts were not excessive, and a fair proportion were assessed on the borough at large, he was sure that everything would be plain sailing and that all would push the enterprise along as a good thing.

He believed that too generous allowances had been made to some of those whose property would have to be taken to complete the improvement. For instance, Mr. Messersmith had been awarded $2,917 damages, when only three-fourths of his $2,000 lot of land was to be taken, and he was left his house, which Mr. Smalley would pay $1,500 for tomorrow gladly and move to a lot he had ready in Watchung Park. St. Joseph's Church had been awarded $1,800, when it had always been understood that she would be glad to have her land taken without recompense, for the sake of having the thoroughfare opened. The street would not touch the church building, but instead would pass directly between the church and parsonage, opening up for the church two very desirable corner lots. So with many other similar cases; he believed that by cutting the damages down to the actual selling figures of the land, and making the assessments so that no one would growl, there would be speedy accomplishment of the desires of the projectors of the improvement.

Asked if he would be willing to undertake the work of getting signers to the petition to the Borough Council, Mr. Smalley said he was glad to be identified with the matter as he felt that it would be the making of the borough. That new street meant the immediate development of one-third of the North Plainfield territory, now lying dormant. No better building land lay outdoors than the lots of that section, especially along the crest of the hill, and all that was wanted was a thoroughfare reaching it from the station. Even far-away Washington Park would be benefited by the opening, as the avenue would be used by the residents of that fashionable section in communicating between their homes and the station. It would be a wonderfully popular and handsome driveway, and would give great relief to Somerset street, now congested with traffic and made dangerous for skittish horses because of the trolley cars.

Mr. Fisk said that what was wanted was to start right and then go ahead. As a sample of enterprise and push he cited the widening of Peace street, for which Mr. Smalley expressed admiration as one of the best things Plainfield had done. Mr. Fisk told how injunctions had been all ready to serve, on the part of the obstructionists, against the city's procedure, and how the city stole a march on them by beginning the work at 2 a. m. and pushing it through in the night; and when the kickers came down to breakfast they were glad to have the work proceed, and were now among the proudest residents of the improved street.

Plainfield, said Mr. Fisk, was ready to go ahead just as soon as North Plainfield saw her way clear. He advised that Mr. Valiant consult Borough Counsel Reed, and get instruction from him as to the exact method of procedure. Then Mr. Smalley could be advised in the matter, and he could secure the necessary petition, and when that was presented to the Borough Council the work of appointing commissioners and assessing benefits and damages could proceed. Mr. Fisk said he would guarantee to have an ordinance go through the Plainfield Council simultaneously with that in the North Plainfield Council, and thus the street would be laid out on both sides of the brook at once and would meet at the brook and be ready for a bridge from the Boards of Freeholders of the two counties.

It was pointed out that the natural sequence of opening Watchung avenue would be the vacation of Warren street, and the improvement of the houses already up in that locality. On the Plainfield side the assessments for benefits from the improvement had previously been extended out Watchung avenue as far as Seventh street.

After thorough discussion of every detail of the plan, it was decided that Mr. Valiant and Mr. Smalley should proceed immediately on the line suggested by Mr. Fisk, and that an effort should be made to get the project in shape for the new Borough Council to act on it. It is hoped to get the enterprise under good headway during the Summer, so that by Fall the avenue, straight as an arrow, and 60 feet wide, will sweep in grandeur from Front street all the way to the mountain drive, uniting at the Y. M. C. A. Building with that portion already affording such a splendid drive from Front street to the Netherwood Heights.

Praise for Congressman Dunn.

[From The Elizabeth Daily Journal.]

Congressman Dunn's Newark bay bridge bill has received President Cleveland's signature, and it is a law. But it is merely permissive; it does not, of course, provide ways and means for building a bridge between Elizabeth and Bergen Point, but it opens the way for such a bridge so far as Congress can open it. The rest must be done by the New Jersey Legislature and by the people of Union and Hudson Counties. Mr. Dunn has given his best effort to secure the passage of this bill, and he is to be congratulated upon his success.

$100 Reward $100.

The reader of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer $100 for any case that it fails to cure.

Send for list of testimonials.

F. J. Cheney & Co., Props., Toledo, O.
Sold by druggists, 75c.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

Study of His Childhood and Strong Characteristics.

BOYHOOD OF THE FUTURE EMPEROR.

Abrupt and Quarrelsome In Disposition, With No Regard For Neatness of Attire. Lacked the Scholastic Trait—His First Entry Into France.

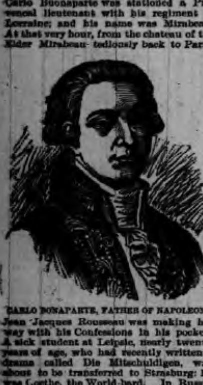
[Copyright, 1895, by John Clark Ridpath.]

II.—BOYHOOD.

Napoleon may be said to have had a threefold life. He was an Italian by descent, a Corsican by variation, and a Frenchman by nationality. He was the last by a close contingency; for Corsica had only become French a few months before his birth. We may here glance briefly at the aspect of the world at the date of his apparition.

The Bourbon monarchy of France was in its beetle heyday—knowing little, and fearing nothing. Its wisest organ was the minister of Foreign Affairs, the great Choiseul. Louis XV. was in the forty-sixth year of his reign. He had recently lost a vast empire in North America, but had gained his parc aux cerfs at Versailles! Italy consisted of distracted principalities, over which the papal power still extended its scepter in spectral majesty. Clement XIV. had reached the third month of his pontificate. The Hapsburg Joseph II. was in the fourth year of that imperial rule which had now become a shadow and illusion on the disk of time. Great Britain, gaining rapidly by conquest on foreign shores, had for ruler George III., then in the thirty-first year of his age. Chatham had just resigned from the ministry, and the duke of Grafton was staggering under the first blows of Junius!

In America the rebels of New England had been outlawed by Parliament for their "rash and hasty proceeding" against the tax on tea. On the continent of Europe, Voltaire, though seventy three years of age, was still the literary emperor—giving forth from his estate at Ferney both laws and oracles to men. Only a few miles from the birthscene in the house of Carlo Buonaparte was stationed a Provencal lieutenant with his regiment of Lorraine; and his name was Mirabeau! At that very hour, from the chateau of the Elder Mirabeau tediously back to Paris,



CARLO BONAPARTE, FATHER OF NAPOLEON.

Jean Jacques Rousseau was making his way with his Confessions in his pocket! A sick student at Leipsic, nearly twenty years of age, who had recently written a drama called Die Mitschuldigen, was about to be transferred to Strasburg: he was Goethe, the World-bard. In Russia the daughter of Christian August, of Anhalt-Zerbst, having put a seven years' oblivion between herself and her murdered husband, was sitting in imperial robes among the favorites of the corruptest court ever known in Christendom!

Letitia di Buonaparte was not quite nineteen years of age when her war-god was born. She was now for the fourth time a mother—a thing seemingly incredible in our harsh northern clime. Incidents in the first years of the Napoleonic childhood there are none recorded. We are left to himself and to his schoolmate Bourienne for our knowledge of the earliest characteristics and events of his life.

The Corsican had a prodigious memory, and it reached back well toward his infancy. When in after years he spoke of himself—as he was much given to doing—he generally used exaggeration; but we may not doubt that there was always a vein of sterling truth underrunning his dramatic recitals. We know indeed, out of the nature of the case, that his representations of his own child-character were in the main correct.

The young Buonaparte was from a babe abrupt and quarrelsome. His willfulness was extreme. The likelihood is that he never once in his life willingly obeyed anybody! Near his death, at Longwood, he declared that he was never afraid. His child-passion was frequently excited against Joseph, over whom he exercised a censorious sway from the time when they toddled together in the birth-room or fought in the yard. He appears to have loved his mother, and to have obeyed her in a morose and mathematical way; but in his last talk he indicates that his conduct as a child toward the mother was rather prudential than affectionate. He bears witness that the Ramolino lioness was tender in her treatment of him, as well as severe and just. Certain it is that in and about the maison di Buonaparte he made the earliest possible reputation as a tearer of tapestries and a scratcher of human faces.

To their fourth child, Carlo Buonaparte and his wife gave the name of Napoleon. At the first it was Napoleone. In this form the possessor retained it until, flaring up in Paris in the character of a young Jacobin, he threw away the Italian and aristocratic fictions in his name, to become plain, republican NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. In fact, there was never anything in his character to encourage the use of more letters than were necessary; his speed in writing was unfavorable to the cultivation of diacritical marks!

The first teaching of the child Bonaparte was given by his mother. Then he was sent, in his sixth year, to a child's school kept by a woman. He went from the parental threshold in that same arbitrary and belligerent mood which characterized him ever. He fought with his schoolmates, among whom he appeared with no sign of neatness in his clothing, and nothing debonair in his manner.

At this time, beside his parents, he had two important relatives. One of these was Lucien Buonaparte, brother of his grandfather Joseph; and the other was Joseph Fesch, afterwards the Cardinal Fesch, half-brother of his mother. The latter was a studious lad of twelve, who took an interest in his sister's son; and the former had wealth and influence in the island, both of which he was willing to bestow on the Bonaparte schoolboy. Young Fesch aided him with his lessons, and exercised a conservative influence on his temper. How little might it be foreseen that the younger of these twain, with his early look and long hair and stockings down over his shoes in the dust of the playground, should one day, from an imperial palace in the most splendid city in the world despatch his elder playmate as ambassador to the Pope of Rome!

What were the civil and social influences around the schoolhouse of Bonaparte? The sentiments of that place are among the most potent and enduring forces of life. The child-nature imbibes unconsciously the prevailing principles of the hour; and the character is forming while the first hesitant words are conned from the primer. The boy Napoleon had around his schoolroom—as around his cradle—an agitated atmosphere. It was banked with the receding clouds of revolution. There was lightning on the rim, and blood on the fringes.

The majority of the Corsicans had accepted the French domination. Some still remembered Genoa with affection; and many sighed for independence. Among the latter were the Buonapartes. The feeling of regret for the lost cause began to wane about the time that Napoleon was sent to school; but there was still in his heart a drop of inherited bitterness on account of the French conquest. He looked back angrily at the terrible conditions surrounding him in his childhood. As late as his twentieth year he broke out in passion. "I was born," said he, "while my country was dying. Thirty thousand French, vomited on our shores, drowning the throne of liberty in waves of blood—such was the horrid sight which first met my view. The cries of the dying, the groans of the oppressed, tears of despair, surrounded my cradle at my birth." The utterance shows how hardly the future emperor of the French himself in youth became a Frenchman.

When, from the sixth to the ninth year of his age, the boy Bonaparte attended school in his native town, three lines radiated before his feet. One of these was dim and clouded, but glorified with patches of extreme light. It was the way into the kingdom of that New Philosophy which was just then revealing itself with such brilliancy in France. A second and well-trod way led straightly to the Church. Rome was great and honorable. Her rewards for diligent ambition were rich and certain. The young aspirant who entered her colleges might well expect emolument and reputation. The third path led dangerously to the military life. None might at that time discern the coming upheaval of society, with its concomitant reign of the sword. But the agitations of the epoch were sufficient to encourage war, and to offer a measure of inducement to follow in the path of military glory.

The taciturn schoolboy of Ajaccio had these three open ways before him. From the first, he was precluded by the dispositions of his family, intensified in himself. He never had the scholastic trait. His abilities as a pupil, and afterwards as a military cadet, showed nothing of the philosophe. Indeed he conceived—how early in boyhood we know not—a prejudice against philosophy and the philosophers as well. As for the Church, he had an inbred admiration for Rome; but the kind of life offered in the priesthood was without attractions for him personally. He was willing that Joseph and other of his friends should become priests and bishops; but not himself. Neither the scholar's gown nor the priest's surplice offered the slightest attraction to his imagination.

The condition of the Buonaparte family about the years 1776-78 was critical. Carlo, the father, had given an interested adhesion to the French. He had his hopes from the annexation. He would keep his titles and recover the properties formerly belonging to the family. The Buonaparte estates in Corsica had been mostly lost. Some had been confiscated by the Genoese party and converted into Jesuit schools. The recent revolution had reduced Carlo's means almost to naught. He was himself of no reputation as an economist. His family had rapidly multiplied. Two children died in infancy between the birth of Napoleon and that of Lucien, in 1775. The family was brought almost to penury.

Carlo de Buonaparte could not get back his properties. The privilege of writing his name with a de did not compensate for his losses. He struggled with adversity, and sought the aid of influential friends. Among those the most available was General Marbœuf. The latter in 1776 appealed on behalf of his Corsican friends to the authorities in Paris for the privilege of educating the Buonaparte boys in France at the expense of the royal treasury. This thing might be done—provided the applicants should be under ten years of age, and be able to show four strains of noble blood in their veins! In the case of the boys Buonaparte, this could not be proved; and affairs in the homestead went from bad to worse.

At this juncture history, rather than man, came to the rescue. France was on the verge of bankruptcy. One finance minister after another was appointed, and one financial scheme after another exploded in the hands of the inventors. It became necessary to call together, at Versailles, a council of the nobles. Carlo de Buonaparte was chosen a representative from Corsica. In going to perform his duty at the French capital, he took with him, to be distributed en route, his two sons, Joseph and Napoleon; also, the boys' half uncle, Joseph Fesch; also, a cousin of Letitia, the mother. As for Fesch, he was to be left as a student at Aix. The cousin had been appointed to an office in the church at Autun; and at that place the distracted father determined to drop his two sons at school.

This was in the year 1778. The company set out by way of Florence, Genoa, Marseilles, Lyons. The youngest of the company was a sad-faced, big-eyed boy, in such apparel as could be furnished in the house of an impecunious nobleman. The boy's head was bent forward as he walked. His foot now for the first time touched the continent. He was in his tenth year. He muttered broken ejaculations to his companions. It was Napoleon Bonaparte on his way to Autun—and the world.

JOHN CLARK RIDPATH.

Two Kinds of It.

The landlady had left the star boarder to carve the fowl while she went out into the kitchen to see about some of the other portions of the feast. Presently she stuck her head in the door.

"Isn't that carving done yet?" she asked in a tone implying that it was not, and was not because the boarder didn't know any more about carving than a Philadelphian knows about rapid transit.

"It is, madam," he responded, with the sweetest grace imaginable, "but the chicken is not." And he passed it over to her with the raw edges showing through in half a dozen places.—Detroit Free Press.

THE FARMER'S NEW YEAR'S EVE.

The old year goes. Ah! well a-dear!
'Twas not for all, so bad a year.
  The late grain rusted,
  Some corn got frosted,
And the bank where I put my hard earned cash
Went down to swell the financial crash.
The camping tramps took my garden truck,
But they went with the summer; that's one good luck.
Of the good wife's chickens they had full share,
But still we've our eating and some to spare.
The pork sells well at a profit figger,
Though I wouldn't care if 'twere somewhat bigger.
Son John has his new barn well begun,
And Mary has married the miller's son.
We've all been middling well and strong.
If no worse happens we'll get along.
The old bay mare's twin colts both live,
A fine little span. Tom Jones will give
Three hundred for them two years from now
There's oats in the bin and hay in the mow,
And the place from debt high clear.
So the old year goes, ah, dear! ah, dear!
  'Twas not so bad a year.

The new year comes. What cheer? what cheer?
God grant it be a goodly year.
  That times may brighten,
  And debts may lighten.
The folks who are running this land's affairs
Have the heft of my hopes and a share of my prayers.
But I reckon it's more than they all can do
By their worldly wisdom to pull us through.
We've been a-riding in a balloon
And the gas is out, and late or soon
We'll touch the bottom, U. S. and all,
If we're not there now. The financial fall,
If it only lands us on good bed rock,
May yet be a blessing in spite of the shock
And when we stand solid, I hope we'll know
Enough to remember and go it slow
Till we're able to enter a faster race
With breath sufficient to keep the pace.
But the world will swing about the same
Whether it gets my praise or blame.
So I'll fodder my cattle and take my cheer
And wait such fortune that comes anear
  Along o' the coming year.

—Minneapolis Housekeeper.

A JOLLY SORT OF FARM.

Vegetables Growing at One Hand, the Products of the Sea at the Other.

"Once, some years ago," said Superintendent H. T. Woodman of the city's aquarium at Castle Garden, "I went up the west coast of Florida in a sailboat on a collecting tour for shells and so on. On the north shore of Tampa Bay we saw a little white house—very white, indeed, it was—a whiteness, as we afterward learned, that was due to whitewash made of lime from shells that the owner had burned himself. We went ashore there and were most hospitably received and invited to stay. We couldn't do that, but we were in the neighborhood for a day or two, and we ate two or three meals at his house, and subsequently I called upon him once or twice and was received in the same hospitable manner.

"No doubt there are other gardens like his, but his is the only one of the sort I ever saw, a kind of land-and-water garden combined. His land garden, which was about half an acre or so, was fifty or perhaps a hundred feet back from the shore. He had in this garden cabbages and beans and potatoes and lettuce, and garden stuff generally. His water garden was composed of three patches each about fifty feet square, side by side and under water, close to the shore, and each enclosed in a palmetto crib, which was, however, only one log high, for that was all that was needed. He could go out in a skiff at any time and catch anything that there was in any of the cribs.

"In the first patch of the water garden he kept hard clams, and he had plenty of them. The second patch he had fixed up for oysters. He had thrown in shells for the oysters to spawn on, and he had an abundant supply of oysters. The third crib he had fixed up for crustacea. He had thrown in some old stumps here, and had shoved in under the crib some slabs or planks that had drifted ashore, to make a shelter for crawfish, which like to back in under things as the lobster does. He had in this crib crawfish and crabs. Of course these could easily have crawled over the single log of the crib if they had wanted to, but they didn't want to; they preferred the shelters in this crib to the sandy beeches outside. In fact, this crib was an attraction to any stray crawfish or crab that might come that way. You see he had only to step out of his house on one side for his vegetables and on the other for his sea food. He gave us oysters steamed in a big iron pot over a fire in the yard, and the pick of both his gardens, land and marine; and certainly we couldn't have had anything fresher or more delightful."

FROCKS FOR BABY GIRLS.

The Daintiest Summer Materials are Made for Their Benefit.

When the summer baby girl of '95 appears in her new frocks she will be the daintiest, quaintest little creature in the land. Prettily flowered dimities, batistes as fine as silk, nainsook of weblike texture and a host of dainty fabrics are now being made up in a manner most tempting to the mothers of baby girls.

Skirts are flaring and sleeves are as big as of old. Many of the latter are made with the quaint "1830" slope much in evidence. The guimpe is still popular and embroideries are all the vogue as a trimming. Pique gowns with coats and hats to match will also be in favor. Dainty little nainsook dresses are charmingly made up with tiny ruffles of deep yellow Valenciennes lace and the big puff of the sleeve is quite shrouded in wee lace ruffles.

Delicately colored chambray frocks are stylishly trimmed with insertion. The new eyelet embroideries will also be much used on children's gowns. Ribbons will be in favor as a trimming, and sashes are to be the rage.

An envious person grows lean on the fat of his neighbor.

THE GERMAN BALL.

MUCH MERRY SPORT ON WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY EVE.

Members and Guests of the Gesang and Turn Verein Enjoy a Masquerade Dance and Supper.

The seventh annual masquerade ball of the Plainfield Gesang and Turn Verein took place in their hall on Somerset street Thursday evening. The entire hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, between 300 and 400 being present. The grand march started precisely at 9:30, led by Chas. Meyer, who was followed by the rest of the committee arrayed in gorgeous costumes, made especially for the occasion.

On entering the hall it was a beautiful sight to see the merry masqueraders at their height of frolic, under the glaring gaslight. On the walls were sketches of numerous funny people. Some very fine costumes were worn by those present, noticeable among those being Miss Sadie Connors and Mrs. Charles McIntosh, who were undoubtedly leading belles of the evening. At 12 all unmasked, and a march was again played, and all went down stairs to partake of an excellent supper.

The women who looked after the interests of the inner man were Mrs. William Beiter, Mrs. Geo. Feller, Mrs. Bechtel, Mrs. Andrew Schlick and Miss O. Kellar.

After supper, dancing was again resumed until early morning.

Following are many of the dancers and their costumes:

Miss Minnie Kiely, Queen of the May
" J Waters, Princess
" S Dorfeer, Spanish Baby Girl
" A Seidling, Flower Girl
" A Haurand, Domino
" M Waters, Summer Girl
" Mamie Kiely, Maid of Athens
" A Doyle, Dancing Girl
" Grace Huff, Actress
" L Muldowney, Texas Steer
" M Muldowney, Ballet Girl
" F Figan, Ballet Dancer
" A Feiring, Tambourine Girl
" M Diem, Tambourine Girl
" Ada Fallar, Mountaineer
" Minnie Bachtle, Mountaineer
" Marienschbeck, French Queen
" Pauline Mercier, Drummer Girl
" Lilie Woodland, Italian Girl
" Edith Thatcher, Spanish Dancer
" Lena Weber, Dancing Girl
" L Rafferty, Ballet Girl
Mrs H Wedemeyer, School Girl
" Pedeflous, Star Spangled Banner
" N Dady, Dancing Girl
" T Marley, Peasant Girl
" Feiring, Martha Washington
" Theo Vroom, Gypsy
" H Klineman, Fairy Girl
Miss Jennie Henderson, Ballet Dancer
" A Dusenbury, Flower Girl
" Nellie Parkinson, School Girl
" M Oge, Tambourine Girl
" P Frantz, Gypsy Girl
" Freda Frantz, Swiss Bride
" A Schoelein, Empire Costume
" L Schoelein, Checker Girl
" S Jones, Old-Fashioned Girl
Mrs George Richter, Empire Costume
" Chas Myers, School Girl
" Jacob Schlick, School Girl
" E Hoerster, Turkish Girl
" Johnson Wilson, Circus Rider
" Charles McIntosh, Dreams of Spring
F Bitum, Aunt Dinah
W Kennedy, Minstrel
Jacob Schlick, Baby Esther
John Wirth, Charles II
A S Carpenter, Cadet
Geo Jones, Dude
Wm Boe, Militiaman
H Klineman, Hunter
Frank Foster, Clown
A Hoffman, Gambler
H Poose, Uncle Sam
H McComas, Waiter
Henry Sodeur, Clown
A McComas, After the Ball
Geo Kieding, Summer Sport
J. Conneely, Clown
M Cannon, Fat Boy
H Bosart, Dude
Frank Keilar, Impersonator
Fred Bowden, Clown
Chas Keller, Dr. Parkhurst
Chas McIntosh, English Soldier

Following was the committee in charge:

Floor Manager—Chas. Meyer.
First Assistant—E. Hoerster.
Second Assistant—Ed Schlerboets.
Floor Committee—M. Schoettlin, John Boetzer.
Reception Committee—A. Wolff, George Richter.

The officers of the association are:

President—Chas. Dressolt.
Vice-president—Geo. Richter.
Recording Secretary—M. Schoettlin.
Financial Secretary—Chas. Felber.
Treasurer—A. Wolff.

Nothing happened during the entire evening to mar the pleasures of the merry crowd. The ball was in every way a success. Good order was maintained all the evening, and the committee deserve credit for the manner in which the affair was handled.

THE SECOND BAKING.

Bread Wagon Burned in North Plainfield's Leading Thoroughfare.

The curious sight of a wagon enveloped in flames was a spectacle that greeted the vision of pedestrians and residents of Somerset street near Warren Engine House at 8 yesterday morning. The vehicle belonged to Henry A. Voehl, baker. It was his best wagon, and had just returned from the early morning delivery, preparatory to starting on another route. Like all bakery wagons, it was a covered one, and on the inside was a lighted lantern which is used for illumination before daylight, and which had not yet been extinguished.

It is evident that the lantern exploded while the driver, Mr. Voehl, was in the bakery, for the attention of several bystanders was attracted by smoke and fire coming from the inside of the wagon. Before water could be obtained and the flames quenched the upper portion of the wagon, which was a new one, was destroyed, together with a small amount of bread, etc. The horse was prevented from running away, and taken from the shafts.

BRIAR PIPE
GIVEN AWAY
WITH EVERY ONE POUND bale OF
DUKES MIXTURE
for 35 cents
Every pipe stamped
DUKES MIXTURE or ATCO
2 oz. PACKAGES 5¢

Rates of Advertising

SPACE	WEEKS 1	2	3	MONTHS 1	2	3	6	12
1 in.	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00	$2.50	$4.00	$5.00	$9.50	$15.00
2 in.	1.50	3.00	4.00	4.00	6.50	8.00	12.00	20.00
3 in.	2.50	3.00	4.00	5.00	8.00	12.00	18.00	25.00
4 in.	3.00	3.50	5.00	6.00	9.00	16.00	20.00	32.00
5 in.	3.50	4.50	6.00	8.00	12.50	18.00	25.00	37.00
¼ col.	4.50	6.00	8.00	10.00	15.00	20.00	30.00	40.00
½ col.	7.00	10.00	12.00	15.00	24.00	30.00	54.00	80.00
1 col.	12.00	16.00	20.00	25.00	35.00	50.00	85.00	140.00

All Electro's must be solid metal.

Double cols. 30 per ct. advance of above rates.

WHATEVER form of printed matter you require we can be of service to you; whether it be

Letter Headings,
Circulars,
Programmes, Menus,
Addresses,
Memorials,
By-Laws of Societies,
Prospectuses and Reports of Financial Associations, or any other matter for Public or Private Circulation,
Everything.

WEEKLY CONSTITUTIONALIST
DAILY PRESS
(Chautauqua Building),
PLAINFIELD N. J.

TOWNSEND'S
Marble & Granite Works,
30 SOMERSET STREET,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.

If you have not engaged your work, I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under a very small expense in running my shop, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertisement for my business, which will tend to build up trade, and I feel safe to warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Hoping to be favored with your patronage, I am yours respectfully,

J. E. TOWNSEND,
Manager. 9 11 tf
Branch Yard Westfield, N. J.

TOBACCO, SEGARS, &c.
H. EGGERDING,
121 Park Avenue.
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Manufacturer of the Celebrated
C. O. D. CIGAR.
The best 5 cent cigar in the State, and made on the premises from the finest Havana.
CLEAR HAVANA SEGARS A SPECIALTY.
A large assortment of the Choicest Brands of Foreign and Domestic Cigars, Cigarettes and Tobaccos always on hand.
Smokers Articles in Great Variety.

E. R. WOOLSTON, J. P. BUCKLE
Woolston & Buckle,
PAINTERS,
Wall Papers,
PAINTERS SUPPLIES. 161-163 NORTH AVENUE

Dime Savings Institution
OF PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Is now receiving deposits payable on demand with interest. Money deposited on or before July 1, 1894, will draw interest from that date.

JOHN W. MURRAY, President,
J. FRANK HUBBARD,
ELIAS R. POPE, Treasurer.

FOR MALARIA,
GENERAL DEBILITY,
AND
ALL STOMACH TROUBLES
COLES'
PERUVIAN BARK
AND
WILD CHERRY BITTERS
ARE THE BEST.
A Vegetable Substitute for Quinine.
SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
Price, 50 cents and $1.00 per Bottle.
PREPARED ONLY BY THE
D. F. COLES DRUG AND MFG. CO.
RAHWAY, N. J.

SANITARY PLUMBING,
Brick and Portable Furnace,
GAS FITTING,
TIN ROOFING,
Etc., Etc.

I am prepared to do any of the above branches in a strictly first-class, sanitary and workmanlike manner.

Having associated myself with the Master Plumbers Association of New York City, I employ none but first-class mechanics and non-union men. I believe in every man running his own business at all times and in all cases.

D. W. LITTELL,
No. 112 North Ave., Plainfield, N. J.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
Cleanse the Bowels and Purify the Blood! Cure Diarrhoea, Dysentery and Dyspepsia, and give healthy action to the entire system.

ASK YOUR HORSESHOER FOR THE
NEVERSLIP
THE ONLY SHOE FOR WINTER USE.

It ABSOLUTELY prevents slipping, and insures perfect safety and comfort to horse and driver.

Shod with the "Neverslip," your horse's feet are always in good condition—kept so by not having to constantly remove the shoes for sharpening.

The CALKS are REMOVABLE,
Steel-Centered and SELF-SHARPENING.

When worn out new Calks can be easily inserted without removing shoes, saving an immense amount of time usually lost at the blacksmith shop.

On receipt of postal will mail free our descriptive circular containing prices of Calked Shoes, ready to be nailed on, for trial, offered this winter at very low prices.

S. H. Berry Hardware Co.,
Dover, N. J.,
Dealers in hardware blacksmiths' supplies, etc. sole agents for Union county.

$6.00
........TO........
CALIFORNIA

is our Sleeping Car Rate on the Phillips-Rock Island Tourist Excursion, from Boston and kindred distant cities on the route of this car, to San Francisco and Los Angeles. The cars have upholstered spring seats, are Pullman build, and appointments perfect.

You have a special manager on the car all the way, and excursions run once a week, leaving Boston every Tuesday. Save money by taking this popular mode of travel.

Address for full particulars,

A. PHILLIPS & CO.
296 Washington st., Boston, Mass.
JNO. SEBASTIAN,
Gen. Passenger Agent, Chicago.
8 23 Feb

FORTUNE IN A SONG.

A SUCCESSFUL AUTHOR WHO DON'T KNOW ONE NOTE FROM ANOTHER.

Three Million Copies of "After the Ball" Have Been Sold. Words and Music Written in an Hour When the Author Was in a State of Physical Collapse.

Mr. Charles K. Harris is a man who has earned popularity by writing a famous song. As the author of "After the Ball" he has made himself both famous and rich. And yet he is not a musician, doesn't know one note from another, and turns out entirely by ear the airs that later are sung up and down this broad land, and are printed by hundreds of thousands.

Mr. Harris was an obscure banjo teacher in Milwaukee. He had written several ballads, but none of them "caught on" until one morning in the spring of 1893 he awoke to find himself famous. Orders for "After the Ball" came from leading dealers in 5,000 lots, and he began to enjoy an income of over $1,000 a day.

His first songs were sold to publishers, but he decided to become his own publisher, and one of his songs, written before "After the Ball," and entitled "Kiss and Let's Make Up," netted him $8,000. Mr. Harris is about 30 years of age. He lives in Milwaukee in a sixteen-room house, built by him a year ago. He is married.

When asked by a correspondent about his method of composition, he replied: "There are weeks at a time when I do not touch a piano or think of composing. I play by ear only, and do not know a single note. My arranger, Mr. Joseph Clauder, who is, in my estimation, one of the best arrangers in the country today, is the leader of the orchestra at Davidson's Theater. Whenever I have a song to take down I send for him. I play it off by ear to him, and he jots it down. Then he plays it over in the right key, and if there are any mistakes I correct them.

"I do not write vulgar songs. My songs are found in every home in the United States which has a piano or a parlor organ. I write for the people and my subjects are taken from life. I receive hundreds of letters daily from all classes of people, from bootblacks to society belles, who desire me to put music to their poems. I have tried it several times, but have always found it an utter impossibility.

"I write both words and music at the same time, and if you will pick up any of my songs you will find that the words and music harmonize closely. In composing a song a man must have musical ability, and must also be something of a poet."

"Will you tell how you came to write 'After the Ball?'"

"I attended a ball in Chicago given by one of the prominent clubs there, and stood talking to a handsome business man. I noticed that his eyes constantly followed a certain young lady in the ballroom. I found out subsequently that they had been engaged, but had parted through some lovers' quarrel. While he was dancing with other girls she would anxiously watch him. I knew by the expression of their faces that their hearts were aching.

"On my return home I was in my office completely tired out when a member of the Wheelmen's club came and asked me to compose a song for an entertainment to be given by the club. I told him I was too tired after the ball, but if he would leave me alone I could perhaps compose something for him in time for the entertainment. The words 'after the ball' kept ringing in my ears, and I could not rest. I sat down at the piano, and at that moment I had the entire idea, music, subject and all. In an hour the song was finished."—

LACE COLLARS AND ECONOMY.

One of Them Will Make a Simple Wardrobe Seem Elaborate.

Lace collars are no longer regarded as luxuries—they are considered economical investments. One lace collar, if ingeniously treated, is capable of varying the effect of half a dozen different waists.

Every woman knows that if the bodice of her gown appears like new her entire costume is stamped as such. Therefore, great is the value of a lace collar. It must be a large collar of some heavy lace like Russian thread, and should fall well over the corsage and form epaulettes over the sleeves.

When it is purchased it should be worn untrimmed over a dark waist and will give a stylish effect to the whole costume. On its next appearance it may be joined to a gay little stock of chiffon or velvet; again it may appear lined with any of the new shades of silk. This will give a charming touch of color to a black bodice. It may also be made effective by turning it with ribbons, as shewn in the illustration, having the loops stand up high on the shoulders and the longest ends reaching below the waist line. These ribbons should appear to be fastened to the collar by small bunches of flowers. Imagine a cream white lace collar trimmed with heliotrope ribbons in this manner and fastened with dainty clusters of forget-me-nots. This collar crowned with a forget-me-not blue chiffon stock would be an addition to any costume.

After a lace collar has been treated in these various ways as a last resort it may have the design outlined in jets, gold threads or tiny colored beads. Then again it will appear like new and fulfill its economical mission.

It is the cynical Boston Transcript that says of a certain woman that she carries her age well, because she has been doing [illegible]

THE JOYS OF GIBRALTAR.

Its Skies and Flowers and Monkeys and Picturesque Inhabitants.

A sky of a wonderful blue overhead. A sea of sapphire at our feet. Beyond, so far away that they lose themselves in the haze of the horizon, a range of mountains—those of two continents as wide apart in civilization as two worlds, yet blending themselves as one with the distance. Towering above us a rock bristling with fortifications, tunnelled with magazines, set all over with cannon and signal stations. Around us, at the foot of this rock, queer little narrow streets, branching off in every direction, following crooked courses through the town, sometimes, like escaping prisoners, running up wide flights of steps, between high stucco walls, only to be stopped by a higher wall at the top, and so forced to turn abruptly, dodge by a garden and round the corner of a house beyond.

Donkeys with panniers go up and down these steps, donkeys jingling with bells drag every conceivable sort of cart through the streets. Moors, barelegged, with covered heads and flowing garments; Spaniards in long cloaks, soldiers in English uniform, foreigners from many nations, jostle and crowd and shout. Old men and women or small ragged boys drive droves of turkeys, guiding them with whips, snapping their long lashes as our teamsters drive horses. And everywhere one looks, in porcelain pots fastened to the outsides of houses, filling the gardens, covering often the cannon, nodding over the walls, clambering up trees, waving bright colors at us like signal flags from stations on the rock above us—everywhere are flowers; the heliotrope in bushes large as those of our currants, geraniums like trees, red cactus, one great sweep of color, morning glories, roses, the December air as perfumed as that of June.

This, then, is Gibraltar; no gloomy fortress, but a paradise of flowers, a medley of the picturesque. The 6,000 English soldiers add only to the effect, and the new defenses always going on suggest not so much preparations for war as some new marvel of engineering skill, from which beauty of line is never eliminated.

With this marvel of earth and sky above us there could be no indoors for us that day. Even Prof. Producers mounted a donkey to make the ascent of those galleries, tunnelling the rock to its very crest, 1,300 feet above, every opening mounted with a cannon. It is here that the monkeys, tired perhaps of awaiting battles for which so many preparations are made, carry on warfare of their own, hurling stones at visitors and soldiers, while they sit and grin at a distance like mischievous school boys.—Harper's Bazaar.

FOR CHEAP GAS.

Expert Stevens Could Furnish It at 27 Cents and Have a Picnic.

There is a bill in the New Jersey legislature limiting the price of gas to one dollar per thousand feet. Mr. Gruber of Jersey City, who introduced the bill, produced figures from an expert gasmaker, showing that 250,000 cubic feet of gas can be made and distributed for $87.12. Deducting 10 per cent. for leakage there would remain 225,000 cubic feet, which, sold at one dollar a thousand, would bring $225, and leave a profit of $137.88. An additional 250,000 cubic feet could be made for $64.12, making the total cost of manufacturing and distributing 500,000 feet of gas a day $156.24. For an invested capital of $200,000, after deducting 10 per cent. for interest, his figures showed that there would remain a yearly surplus of $88,220.40.

The representatives of the gas companies spent some time upon the floor of the House endeavoring to ascertain the name of the expert. After considerable sparring between Mr. Gruber and Secretary of State Kelsey and Col. Fuller, Levi Stevens stepped forward and announced that he made the figures and was prepared to prove their correctness. He said he could secure a million dollars capital and furnish gas of 22-candle power for 30 cents per thousand. In Philadelphia he could supply the city at 27 cents, "and have a picnic," he said. Excellent 22-candle power gas, he continued, can be made for 18 to 22 cents, and it costs about as much more to distribute it.

Mr. Stevens displayed considerable feeling against Secretary Kelsey, whom he charged with being the agent of the New York gas companies. The Trenton Gas Company, he said, was started on a capital of $35,000, which had been watered on the profits, and now amounted to $830,000. Mr. Stevens is now superintending the gas plant at the State prison, where he makes gas at less than 50 cents a thousand, and said he could light the State House for less.

A PENALTY WORSE THAN DEATH.

Belgium Has a System of Refined Torture that Kills in Three Years.

Though the death penalty was practically abolished in Belgium over thirty years ago, the punishment of those convicted of capital crimes is so awful that none has yet been able to endure it more than three years.

The duties of public executioner in Belgium are singular, but not arduous. The courts still continue to sentence malefactors to death, but the guillotine has been replaced by a scaffold, on which is posted a copy of the sentence. Much ceremony is observed in affixing this document. A troop of gendarmes, with their imposing helmets plumed with horsehair, is drawn up about the place of execution, which they gravely guard with sabers drawn, while the red-robed executioner mounts the steps, nails up the decree of the court, and after a moment takes it down again.

But the condemned man might more mercifully have perished by the axe or rope. He is placed in a dungeon so constructed that from the moment he enters it he will never hear the sound of human voices nor see a living being. His food is passed in through a sliding panel in the door of his cell.

Not one of these prisoners has been able to survive this confinement more than three years. The authorities have striven in vain to prolong their lives by varying their food as much as possible, but those who are moderately or lightly nourished gradually waste away, while those who are generously fed go mad and die raving maniacs.

Not Easy to Please.

Married Man—Why don't you get married, Miss Perkins? You are getting to look like a "back number." You will soon be an old maid.

Miss Perkins—If I were as easy to please as your wife was I would have been married long ago.—Boston Home Journal.

TELEPHONE COMPANY

SPEAKING CONNECTION WITH OVER 12,000 SUBSCRIBERS—PROTECTION FROM FIRE AND BURGLARS, PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Central Office—175½ North Avenue.

Public pay stations, fitted with long distance instruments:

J E Leggett Park ave and Front st
Telephone Exchange 175 North ave opp depo
Horsley Barker Grove and Front sts
G W F Moy 8th and Park avenue
Frank Rowley Somerset and Craig place
J C Field, Somerville.
J B Gutteridge, Netherwood
Hotel Albion, Park ave and 5th street

Subscriber's Name	Address.
Ackerman, Mrs. J. H.	218 West 7th st
Adams, Dr D C.	40 Grove st
Adams H C	115 E 6th st
Addis & Son	122 North av
Andrews F H	515 Central av
Albion Hotel, The,	Park av and 5th st
Alert Hose Co., No 1	W 2d st
Babcock, Geo H	8th and Union sts
Barnaby F A	Plainfield
Brakeley, F W Dr	Dunellen
Boone G W Dr	7th and Liberty sts
Bushnell, John	Central ave. and 6th st
Beerbower, J E	Park av and 2d st
Berg, Jos F, M D	121 E 8th st
Blair A C	149 North av
Boice, Runyon & Co	245 Park av
Board of Education	8th st and Arlington av
Booth, E H	Central av
Brookside Sanitarium	Somerset st
Brown J M	612 Central av
Central Times	102 E Front st
Clark, E B	221 Crescent av
Children's Home	Jackson ave
Chase Fred F	655 North av
Closson, James T	Richmond and Front sts
Constitutionalist Office	105 North av
Cooley, Dr J H	Manning and Westervelt aves
Cox, Rowland	310 W Seventh st
Chapman, Mrs F A	14 LaGrande av
Cruikshank, S. A	Belvidere av
Carman, J H, M D	49 Somerset st
Chase, B F M	Somerset st
Central Pharmacy	Park av & Front st
Daily Press	105 North ave
Davis, Dr T S	Cor 6th st & Park av
Day, B M	Rockview ave
Decker, F—pay station	Westfield, N J
Doane, T O—Chief P F D	420 W 5th st
Dunn Fred W	Park and North av
Dumont, John E	151 E 7th st
Endicott, Dr Geo W	Park ave. and 7th st
Hose No 1	West 2d st
Engine No 2	2d st near Park av
Engine No 3	Somerset st
Evans, Geo G	37 Washington ave
Fanwood, pay station	Fanwood station
Force A L	82 Duer st
Fisk, Chas. J	211 West 7th st
Fisk, Pliny	6 W 7th st
Freight House	C. RR, Depot
French Bros	Somerset st
Fritts, Dr J T	420 Park av
Fleming, Howard	1013 Park av
French, C Frank	69 Somerset st
do do	227 Park av
Gaston, M. D., W F	5th and New st
Grant, Geo W Chief of Police	418 W 6th st
Griffen, A M	119 E Front st
Gilbert, A	Cor Central av & 8th st
Hegeman, E. A	107 Sycamore avenue
Hedges, Dr. Ellis W	703 Watchung av
Hedden, Albert	4th st. near Park ave
Hoagland's City Express	161 North av
Howell E O	191 North av
Holmes E E	209 Madison av
Hogan Chas W	20 Rockview av
Hummer & Mulford	229 Park av
Ivins D G	211 Watchung av
Jenkins, Dr. O. L	212 W Front st
Kaufman W T	503 W 7th st
Keely & Son	LaGrande av and Scott pl
Kirkner, J	5th and Division sts
Leggett Pharmacy	Park av and Front st
Linnett W E	120 Jackson av
Lowrie H M, Dr	519 Park av
Lowry, Rev Robert	Madison ave and 9th st
Lovell, L M	Crescent ave
Linke, Frank	227 W Front st
Lounsbury, F C	Plainfield av
Mallinson A D	205 North av
Matthews, Chas	49 Grove st
MacDonald, J F	186 E Front st
Marsh Craig A	109 E Front st
Mathewson W B Dr	Babcock Bldg
do do	97 Rockview av
McQuaide James R	731 W 7th st
McGee, Henry A	Willow ave
McGee, James	Willow ave
Moy G W F	Park av and 8th st
Muhlenberg Hospital	638 W 3rd st
Murray, Dr. W H	727 Watchung av
Murray J W	313 W 4th st
Music Hall	495
Myers, J E	129 E 7th st
Newhall, Henry B	144 E 7th st
N Y & N J Telephone Co	175 North av
Park Club The	Washington av
Fenton T B jr	Rockview av
Perkins Ed C	Central av
Plainfield Beef Co	154 E 3rd st
do Electric Light Co	Madison av
do Gas Light Co	E 4th st
do Street Railway Co	Grant av
do Water Supply Co	Netherwood
Police Station	Park av and Railroad
do Chief Office	Park av
Pond Machine Tool Co	E 2nd st
Pope J C & Co	E Front st
Postal Telegraph & Cable Co	106 Park av
Potter, C jr	427 W 7th st
Potter Printing Press Co	268 South av
Probasco J B Dr	E Front st
Randolph, L W	143 Front st
Reynolds, H P	Park and North ave
Reynolds, H. P	Washington avenue
Reed Chas A	37 Myrtle av
Reed & Coddington	Babcock Bldg
Reinhart J W	69 Belvidere av
Rheaume L A	Watchung av and 4th st
Rogers W H	408 W 5th st
Rowley Frank	45 Somerset st
Roberts, D S	127 North av
Rockfellow, Geo W	Park and 4th st
Rogers, D W	232 W 2d st
Roome, Mrs J	Cor. Mercer & Sycamore aves
Runyon, A M & Son	402 Park av
Runyon, A M & Son	412 Madison av
Rushmore, Dr Edward	429 Park av near Fifth st
Rankin, H. G	821 8th st
Runyon, Chas W	129 North av
Rice, R. W. & Co	cor. Emily and Duer sts
Rushmore Robert	3rd st and Grant av
Saunders W L	45 Mercer av
Serrell, Lemuel W	625 W Front st
Scott, Walter & Co	South ave
Shaw, R J	Front st. opp. Park ave
Shepard A D	Fanwood
Slater F M	27 Jackson av
Smalley Bros	North av
Smith, W F	Belvidere av, Netherwood
Smith, Jas A	225 W Front st
Streall, H A	1203 Hillside av
Stevens F R	703 South av
Stevens Geo Q	Grant av and W Front st
Stephenson W J	148 North av
Sykes T F	Front st Fanwood
Talmadge, Henry P	Netherwood
Taylor Mrs M S	10 Rockview Terrace
Telegraph Office	Plainfield station
Terrill & Cole	209 W 2d st
Thompson, A D	147-149 North av
Thompson, A D	Farragut road
Thickstun, Jos A	320 Madison av
Tilsworth, Jos H	413 W 7th st
Tomlinson, Dr T E	222 La Grande av
[illegible]	[illegible]
Tracy, J Evarts	440 6th st
Toulson W J	343 Watchung av
Tweedy, O. B	125 Crescent av
Ulrich & Bliss	110 W Front st
Union Beef Co	218 E 3rd st
United States Express Co	188 North av
Union Co Country Club	Cor 7th st & Arlington
Van Sickle J W	122 North av
Wadsworth, W B	422 8th st
Western Union Telegraph Company	at Depot
Wharton, Clifton jr	816 3rd Place
Wolfsman, E	427 West Seventh st
Wiechers, J F	W 8th st., near Grant ave
Wiertz Max	344 W Front st

TELEPHONE TOLL RATES

FOR FIVE MINUTES CONVERSATION.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY

Asbury Park, N J	60c	Hempstead N Y	45c
Astoria, N Y	50c	Hoboken N J	35c
Babylon, N Y	60c	Hunter's Point N Y	45c
Bath, N Y	60c	Irvington N J	40c
Bayonne N J	45c	Islip N Y	60c
Bergen Point N J	35c	Jamaica N Y	45c
Bayside N Y	50c	Jersey City N J	35c
Bay Shore N Y	75c	Keyport N J	50c
Fayville N Y	60c	Kingston N J	35c
Belleville N J	40c	Laurel Hill N Y	45c
Blissville N Y	45c	Leonia N J	45c
Bloomfield N J	35c	Little Neck N Y	50c
Bloomingdale N J	45c	Little Silver N J	50c
Boonton N J	45c	Long Branch N J	50c
Brooklyn N Y	35c	Madison N J	40c
Caldwell N J	45c	Matawan N J	50c
Carlstadt N J	45c	Millburn N J	35c
Centreville N J	45c	Montclair N J	30c
Chatham N J	50c	Morristown N J	45c
Closter N J	45c	Newark N J	35c
Colt's Neck N J	75c	New Brunswick N J	35c
Coney Island N Y	45c	Newton N Y	45c
Cresskill N J	45c	New York N Y	35c
Dover N J	40c	Orange N J	35c
East Norwich N Y	60c	Pamrapo N J	45c
Eatontown N J	60c	Passaic N J	35c
Elizabeth N J	25c	Paterson N J	35c
Englewood N J	35c	Perth Amboy N J	25c
Fairview N J	45c	Rahway N J	20c
Fanwood N J	15c	Red Bank N J	50c
Far Rockaway N Y	45c	Seabright N J	50c
Flatbush N Y	35c	Short Hills N J	35c
Flushing N Y	40c	South Amboy N J	30c
Fort Lee N J	45c	South River N J	35c
Franklin Park N J	35c	Staten Island N Y	35c
Freehold N J	50c	Westfield N J	15c
German Settlem't N Y	60c	Woodbridge N J	30c
Glen Cove N Y	50c	Yonkers N Y	60c
Gravesend N Y	45c	Trenton N J	60c
Hackensack N J	35c	Tarrytown N Y	60c

OLD POINT COMFORT.

Delightful Personally-Conducted Tour via Pennsylvania Railroad.

No other resort of the Upper South can compare with Old Point Comfort in attractiveness. Apart from its historical surroundings and the fact of its being a Government post, the situation of the place, with its magnificent ocean front and elegantly-planned drives, would commend it to the public as a most delightful place to spend a few-days vacation.

The next tour will leave New York and Philadelphia by special train Thursday, March 7, and tickets will be good for return passage on special train leaving Old Point Comfort the following Saturday. The rates, including transportation and meals en route in each direction, as well as hotel accommodations at Hygeia Hotel, Old Point Comfort, will be $15.50 from New York and $12.50 from Philadelphia; proportionate rates from other points. Tickets, including one day's board at the Hygeia Hotel, and good to return via Washington and Richmond within ten days, can also be purchased at same rates.

For further information apply to Ticket Agents, or address Tourist Agent, 1196 Broadway, New York, or Room 411 Broad Street Station, Philadelphia, to whom application for space should also be made.

WON FOR THE CITY.

Counselor Marsh's Point Sustained by the Supreme Court.

Decision was given by the Supreme Court in Trenton Thursday reversing the decision of Judge McCormick in the Michael Watson liquor case. Judge McCormick's ruling was against Counselor Craig A. Marsh's point for the City of Plainfield, and the effect of the Supreme Court's decision is to have a new trial of the case in which Judge McCormick will have to rule as the Supreme Court decided.

WASHINGTON SUPPER.

Grace M. E. Church Has a Patriotic Entertainment.

The supper and entertainment given by the Ladies Aid Society of the Grace M. E. Church last night was well attended, and afforded a pleasant evening to the members and friends. From 6 to 9 the supper was served in the parlors under the supervision of the following women: Mrs. J. Valiant, chairman; Meadames J. Lunger, W. Lunger, Sheppard, Carroll, Morton, L. Hummer, C. Hummer, Schuck, Vermeule, Winckler, Carney, Demott, Loomis, Garry, Nelson, Most, Griffin, Randolph, Taft and Miss Belle Lunger.

After the refreshments had been cleared away the following programme was rendered in an excellent manner:

Piano Solo—"Song of the Birds,"
Miss Bessie Valiant
Solo............Miss Alice Carroll
Dialogue, "An Afternoon Out"—Misses Addie Carney, Carrie Pangborn, Nellie Vermeule, Hattie Messerschmidt and Nellie Valiant.
Recitation, "The Wedding Bee",
Miss Edna French
Singing, "America"........Queen Esther Band

Danced in Memory of George.

To the tuneful music of Windnagle's orchestra 75 merry couples tripped in with fantastic steps the 163d birthday of George Washington in the T. A. B. Hall on East Fourth street Thursday night The dance was given by the T. A. B. society, and the committee of arrangements was as follows: P. J. Reville, P. J. Mack, C. McCarthy, P. Cullen and M. O'Keefe.

The dancing commenced at 9:30, and during the intermission between 12 and 1 an entertainment was furnished by a colored quartette, which afforded a pleasant change to the programme. A number was present from Bound Brook.

The management of the floor was in charge of P. Reville and C. McCarthy.

Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray are home from Rockledge, Fla.

P. P. Van Arsdale,
PIANO TUNER.

Instruments put in thorough order. Terms reasonable. Pianos and Organs for sale and to let. Orders by postal, P. O. box 149, or left at Willett's shoe store, No. 107 Park avenue, will receive prompt attention. Residence 201 E. Front street, corner Elm street. 11y191

Jas. M. Dunn,
Dealer in
GROCERIES, PROVI
Vegetables, Fruits, etc.
No. 224 Park Ave
OPPOSITE NORTH AVENUE.
Everything usually found in a first-class grocery store.
Goods delivered free of charge.

RICKERT'S
ACCOMMODATION EXPRESS.

OFFICE—Vanderbeek's Music Store, Park avenue. The "Accommodation Express" will attend to the general carrying business of the city, delivering goods or baggage to and from the depot, or from place to place.

Moving of Furniture, Pianos, etc., with care and safety.

WILLIAM A. WOODRUFF,
FIRE AND LIFE
Insurance Agent,
Office cor. Front St. and Park Ave.,
PLAINFIELD, N. J.
Real Estate for Sale & Exchange.
MONEY TO LOAN
On Approved Security.
Mar3otf

Stoves, Ranges
—AND—
HARDWARE
OF ALL KINDS
J. J. HEIDELOFF,
No. 21 SOMERSET ST. 2-18-tf

CANOPIES
For Weddings, Parties, Etc.,
TO HIRE., CHARGES REASONABLE
Mrs. Weigman,
20 EAST FRONT STREET, PLAINFIELD, N. J.
mch20tf

John Chandler,
CARPENTER AND BUILDER,
Plainfield, N. J.
Residence and shop No. 308 East Third street.
Jobbing promptly attended to. apay

E. B. MAYNARD,
PRACTICAL BARBER
AND
Artistic Hair Dresser,
No. 204 PARK AVENUE.
Ladies' and Children's Hair Cutting done at eir residences. Shaving, Shampooing, etc. tisfactorily performed. D7y1

CARNEY BROTHERS, Agents,
135 West Front St.

TINNERS,
PLUMBERS,
GAS FITTERS.
PARLOR STOVES,
COOK STOVES
HEATERS.

Grates and Bricks for all kinds of Stove s can e found here at Jobbers' prices. Bring your Tinware mending to us. The best Tinners, the est Plumbers, and the best Gas-fitters in the section. We use none but the very best of materials, and our work always gives satisfaction.

Kes of All Kinds are Made Here.
Tinware Made to Order.
Ranges, Brick and
Portable Furnaces
SANITARY PLUMBING.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

W. R. CODINGTON,
Counsellor-at-Law,
Commissioner of Deeds, Master-in-Chancery Notary Public. Offices corner of Park avenue and Second street.—jectf

---

GEORGE W. DAY,
General Auctioneer.
Sales of Personal Property solicited. P. O. Box 133, Dunellen, N. J., or address in care of CONSTITUTIONALIST. Terms reasonable.

DR. CHARLES R. THIERS,
Dentist,
48 Somerset street. A new local anaesthetic application for extracting teeth without pain. Gold filling a specialty.—jectf

---

LEWIS B. CODDINGTON,
(Successor to E. J. Cavey.)
Furniture and Freight Express!
OFFICE—24 W. FRONT ST.
Large Covered Vans or Trucks. Goods delivered to any part of the U. S. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges reasonable. P. O. Box 1 [illegible] Piano moving a specialty.

A. WOLFF,
Manufacturer of
CIGARS,
And dealer in all kinds of Smoking and Chewing Tobacco, and smokers' articles, has removed from 23½ W. Front street, to 244 West Front street, one door east of Madison avenue, and solicits the patronage of his friends and the public generally.

TWENTY
Yeas experience in the business.
SECOND STREET, 3 doors above Peacestree

Mr. JOHN H. STEVENS, Horse-shoer, gives particular attention to Shoeing, Forging, Stumbling and Interfering Horses. Speedy Cutters stopped in an incredible short space of time. Horses with diseased feet treated in a particular manner by experienced workmen.

ALBERT HEDDEN,
Liver and Feeding Stables
FOURTH STREET,
Between Peace street and Park avenue.
First-Class Livery.
Horses Boarded by Week or Month
Telephone call No. 114.

Parlor stoves,
Furnaces, Ranges,
Piping, Plumbing.
Heater Work. Tinning,
Hardware.
A. M. GRIFFEN,
East Front Street.
TELEPHONE CALL, 6. 11 11-tf

Estey
Pianos
Organs
FULLY WARRANTED.
Moderate Prices.
Cash or Installments.
See Them Before You Buy.
ESTEY & SAXE,
5 East 14th Street, - New York.

PATENTS
CAVEATS, TRADE MARKS
COPYRIGHTS.

CAN I OBTAIN A PATENT? For a prompt answer and an honest opinion, write to MUNN & CO., who have had nearly fifty years' experience in the patent business. Communications strictly confidential. A Handbook of Information concerning Patents and how to obtain them sent free. Also a catalogue of mechanical and scientific books sent free. Patents taken through Munn & Co. receive special notice in the Scientific American, and thus are brought widely before the public without cost to the inventor. [illegible]

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY

PUBLISHED AT

Plainfield, New Jersey.

TERMS—TWO DOLLARS A YEAR.

A. L. Force, Publisher & Proprietor.

Walter Irving Clarke, City Editor

Seldom in years was the "license session" of the Common Council as tame an affair as that of last night. The usual large number of protests against license was reduced by the one appeal of the Ministers Association. Even the memorial adopted by the Friends and published in The Daily Press some days ago, was missing. The W. C. T. U. had expected to be on hand to reveal the nearness that signatures to license applications were bought, but some good friend had told them that that was a matter of common knowledge, and the W. C. T. U. had therefore nothing more to say. The applications were reported correct in form, and went through with bells on. And till 11 that night there was much rejoicing at the bars of the town.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Maltby of West Dunellen has been visiting Miss Chapman in Newark.

Miss Bessie Barker of Montclair is stopping with Miss Wilson of Greenbrook road.

Master Charles Dresselt of Emily street is still confined to his home with rheumatism.

Dr. P. J. Zeglio will soon occupy his new home, corner of Somerset and Pearl streets.

Clifton Wharton, Jr., gave a private supper to a party of twelve in the Casino last night.

W. N. Runyon of Plainfield was a hit of the amateur minstrels in Elizabeth Saturday night.

Thomas B. Astee, who spent last Summer in Plainfield for his health, died Sunday in New York.

Charles Holstein will represent Miantonomoh Tribe at the State convention in Trenton this week.

Rev. Mr. Gibson of Plainfield preached Sunday at the dedication of the Shiloh Baptist Church, Elizabeth.

John Wendie, an employe of the United States Express Company, is suffering from a disorder of the eye.

Frank E. Hale, at one time engaged in the carpentering business in this city, is now conducting a hotel in Irvington.

Miss Zahn returned to her home in New Brunswick yesterday after a pleasant visit with Miss Sadie Blimm on Somerset street.

Mrs. Morgan Taylor has rented her house on Rockview Terrace to N. C. Ayres, who formerly occupied the Van-Deventer house.

Letters received from ex-Borough Street Commissioner Benjamin E. Gavin, who is wintering at Thomasville, Ga., say he is enjoying himself and that his health is improving.

All signs now point to the nomination of Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman as the Republican candidate for Mayor of the Borough at the primary to be held Friday evening of this week.

Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone of the Church of the Redeemer has been elected a member of the Ministers Association. He was a guest of Rev. Dr. Rodman Sunday and assisted in the evening service in Grace Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur F. Randolph entertained a number of friends and neighbors Tuesday evening, at their home 115 Essex street, it being the anniversary of Mr. Randolph's birthday. So enjoyable was the affair that it was two o'clock before the parting came.

Mrs. Emily Thorne, who resides at Toledo, Washington, says she has never been able to procure any medicine for rheumatism that relieves the pain so quickly and effectually as Chamberlain's Pain Balm and that she has also used it for lame back with great success. For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North aves. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

Prove their Worth.

That is what thousands of people, speaking out of their own experience, say to their friends in regard to the most marvelous external remedy known for all sorts of pains and aches in the back, limbs, chest or side.

Allcock's Porous Plaster

Do Not Be Persuaded to accept a substitute. "Allcock's" has never been equaled.

Allcock's Corn Shields,
Allcock's Bunion Shields,
Have no equal as a relief and cure for corns and bunions.

Brandreth's Pills stand at the front. The longer in use the stronger is their position.

A TEXT FROM THE PRESS

Rev. Dr. Lewis Gives a Plain Temperance Talk.

SHARP SARCASM ON THE SUBJECT

Interesting Comparison of the Relative Value of the Signature of John Doe (His Mark) and the Signatures of Clergymen and Christian Women.

"THE APPLICATIONS WERE REPORTED CORRECT IN FORM, AND WENT THROUGH WITH BELLS ON. AND TILL 11 THAT NIGHT THERE WAS MUCH REJOICING AT THE BARS OF THE TOWN."

To THE EDITOR OF THE DAILY PRESS: The above quotation from your editorial note of yesterday is remarkably suggestive as to the situation of things in Plainfield. It was all right that the saloons should rejoice. Those who win rejoice in spite of themselves. Your editorial records that the protests against licenses were unusually meager. Undoubtedly. The most persistent sometimes grow a little weary of useless methods. The clergymen have come to think it a little monotonous and a trifle wearying to be politely listened to as to their protests and then hear the order given: "File the protests and go on with the voting." It is just a trifle humiliating, not to say insulting, to be told year after year that John (his x mark) Doe has an hundred fold more weight with the men who are under oath to administer the government of Plainfield as the best interests demand, than the name of J. K. Newell "Secretary of the Ministers Association" has, or than the combined names of D. J. Yerkes, D. D., and W. R. Richards, D. D., "pastors" etc., would have. John (his x mark) Doe evidently represents something; something tangible; something that shows on the ledger.

It is not wholly conducive to enthusiasm on the part of Christian women to be told, year after year, that Margaret "her mark" Doe counts for more on "license night" than Mrs. Horace Kimball, "President of the Children's Home Association". Mrs. Kimball represents only the results of the liquor traffic, which form so large a factor in the demand for a Children's Home, while Margaret "her mark" represents something else, causes, not results. Margaret's "mark" is necessary to scatter the results of the saloon system promiscuously about the city, so that Mrs. Kimball and her compeers will have some use for a Children's Home. Othello is nothing when his occupation is gone.

Your editorial suggests that Christian and temperance influences have depressed the market for signatures to applications for license, so that it is "A matter of common knowledge" that the X "marks" of John and Margaret cost money. Quite likely; but since the "applications go through with bells on" nothing is lost, and the commercial power of the saloon is increased, and its hold on the throat of the city is strengthened.

If the total cost of a given license is $700, plus $25 each for the names of applicants, and possibly the cost of a burial lot signers somewhere, so that tender consciences can swear that John and Margaret are owners of "real-estate", it is easy to see that between the brewer, who holds a mortgage on the saloon, and the demands of the license system, the saloon keeper is "between the devil and the deep sea" and that business must be pushed to prevent shipwreck. And who except preachers and Christian women, does not know that the "very best interests of our fair city" are enhanced in proportion as the business of the saloons is increased?

"Rejoice?" By all means. The saloons do right. Let them rejoice. They are securely intrenched, if their fees are somewhat large. Protection always costs something. But when a saloon can vanquish a church, count by count, it is competent for the saloon to smile complaisantly, "set 'em up all around", and suggest between drinks that the "churches are not in it tonight". I wonder sometimes if it would not do well, just for a change, for the Common Council to have a session some "license night" which would call for "praise meetings" in the churches as well as the saloons. Is that asking too much for Christianity?

I hope The Press will not make it public, but judging by the past the time will come again when these clergymen and church people whose prayers are as powerless

"As a painted ship upon a painted ocean"

to move the Common Council, will be besought to rally for some phase of good citizenship or good government, especially when such a rally will help one party to put another out of power. When the saloons have done their work so well that corner lots and houses to rent are rated as they were in Sodom one morning after a big fire, the secretary of the Ministers Association, and the presidents of all the societies of Christian women, and the most efficient church officers, will be sent for by the politicians and real-estate men to help pull society out of the ashes of its own folly, and revive business and our good name.

Meanwhile, let the saloons rejoice "until 11 at night", but not any later, please, because they are in partnership with the city, and the city says "Close at 11", and the firm should not be divided against itself, when it is so well united against the churches.

A. H. LEWIS.

A. Vandarbeek is ill at his home.

NO SECRET

IN THIS WOMAN'S CASE.

Mrs. Campbell Wishes Her Letter Published so that the Truth May Be Known.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Of the thousands of letters received from women all over the world by Mrs. Pinkham, not one is given to the public unless by the wish of the writer. Thus absolute confidence is established between Mrs. Pinkham and her army of patients; and she freely solicits a letter from any woman, rich or poor, who is in ill health or ailing.

In the case of Mary E. Campbell, of Albion, Noble Co., Ind., her suffering was so severe, her relief so suddenly realized, and her gratitude so great, that she wishes the circumstances published, in the hope that others may be benefited thereby. She says:—

"My physician told me I had dropsy and falling of the womb. My stomach and bowels were so bloated I could not get a full breath. My face and hands were bloated badly. I had that dreadful bearing-down pain, backache, palpitation of the heart, and nervousness.

"One of my physicians told me I had something growing in my stomach; and the medicine that I took gave me relief only for a short time. I thought I must die. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it worked like a charm. After taking the first bottle I could walk across the street, now I am well. I advise all my friends to take it."
—MARY E. CAMPBELL, Albion, Noble Co.

LEVI HETFIELD DEAD.

Paralysis Ends a Busy and Useful Life.

VIGOROUS AT THE AGE OF 77.

He Was One of the Pioneers in Plainfield's Development, and Leaves a Record of Industry, Integrity and Success.

From The Press of Feb. 27.

Death this morning at 4 removed from among Plainfield's citizens Levi Hetfield, to whom much of the present success of this city as a residence and business centre is due. There is no person in this section of the State who was better known as a business man and more respected as a citizen than Mr. Hetfield. His whole life and interests have remained in Plainfield from his boyhood days, and the sturdy habits of his character are evidenced in the many organizations and institutions which are now important factors in local life, and in forming which he took a prominent and active part. The large property interests of which he was the owner are self-sufficient in themselves to speak for his great executive ability as a business man.

Mr. Hetfield was a native of Westfield. He came to Plainfield when a young lad, and commenced to learn the trade of a carpenter, at which he soon became an adept, and by industrious and frugal customs soon launched into business for himself—that of a builder and contractor. From that time forward his life had been one of continuous prosperity.

His first business venture of any magnitude was the erection of a flour and feed mill on Madison avenue, but which a few years later was burned. This business was supplemented by a lumber and coal yard.

A large part of the fortune which he left was made from increase in value and improvement of real-estate, between Third and Fifth streets, which he purchased years ago as farm land, and which is now covered with valuable residences.

In politics he was Democrat, active in serving his party, but true and consistent in advocating its principles. For three terms he was an influential member of the Common Council. He was one of the charter members of the Dime Savings Bank, a director in the Plainfield Street Railway Co., Bound Brook Mutual Fire Insurance Company and the American Mutual Fire Insurance Company. He was an active member of the First Baptist Church. A number of years ago he retired from active business life and has since devoted his time to overseeing his large estate. His executive ability was frequently recognized by the Court of Chancery in appointing him as administrator of various estates, notably among them being the J[illegible] Male and Alfred Berry estates.

In 1838 he was married to Miss Sarah A. Hand, who died in 1868, and in 1874 he was again married—this time to Miss Maggie Freeman. He leaves four children, Walter L., John M., Mrs. Harold Serrell and Mrs. Dr. Andrew Manning, all of this city.

Mr. Hetfield's death was caused by paralysis, with which he was stricken last week after returning from Elizabeth on Wednesday, where he had over-exerted himself in the work incident to settling up the affairs of the estate of Mrs. Colt. No immediate fears were entertained at that time, but on Monday afternoon he sank into unconsciousness, which continued until death ensued this morning. The funeral will be held Saturday afternoon at 2:30, at his late home on Madison avenue.

Clifford McGee has gone to Orleans, N. Y., to represent the Standard Oil interests. He expects to remain there a year.

HYMENEAL.

Bowen—Viegut.

The marriage of Miss Augusta Floyd Viegut to Herbert Wolcott Bowen, formerly a resident of Netherwood for several years, was celebrated yesterday at high noon at the residence of the bride, 46 West Thirty-fourth street, New York, the ceremony being performed by Archbishop Corrigan.

The bride, who is a daughter of Mr. Viegut, is descended on the paternal side from a distinguished Castilian family, her father being a prominent resident of Barcelona, Spain. On the maternal side she is a great-great-granddaughter of William Floyd, a signer of the Declaration of Independence and a great-granddaughter of Major David VanHorn, who was an aide de camp at Washington's inauguration. She was educated abroad and made her social bow to the fashionable set in New York about a year ago.

The groom, who is United States Consul-General at Barcelona, Spain, is a son of Henry C. Bowen, proprietor of The New York Independent, and a lineal descendant of John Eliot, a great-grandnephew of Benjamin Franklin, and is connected with the Winthrop, Tappan, Aspinwall and many other well-known families. He is a Yale graduate and attended the Columbia Law School.

Owing to a recent death in the groom's family only the relatives witnessed the ceremony. There was no reception afterward. Miss Grace Coudert, daughter of Hon. Frederic R. Coudert, was maid of honor, and the bridemaids were Miss Dorothy VanSchaick and Miss Marie Vyse of Staten Island. The maid of honor wore pale green satin, and the maids salmon pink satin, trimmed with old point lace and spangled chiffon. They carried bunches of violets. The bride wore a frock of heavy white satin, trimmed with point lace, and a veil of the same dainty material. The groom's brother, Clarence W. Bowen, acted as best man.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowen will spend a week in Washington and after a short stay in New York will sail for Barcelona, Spain.

DR. AND EDITOR MORSE.

Finds Great Curative Qualities in a Simple Remedy.

From Westfield, N. J., Leader.

The fact of the Editor of the Leader being a physician of the old school, encourages some people to ask why we kick quacks and quackers. We do hate charlatans the worst way; that's a fact. But—every proprietary medicine isn't a quack medicine. In some of them we believe as devoutly as we do in calomel and quinine. There, for example is Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy. It has our faith. We know its value. In the laboratory it has fully approved itself as containing just those ingredients which every physician knows the materia medica to indicate for the disorders for which the remedy is prescribed. In clinical experience its further proof has not been wanting, as we have reason to know. We have no hesitancy in saying that we would prescribe the remedy in any case where it is really indicated.

Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy has no rival as a blood builder and nerve food. It has met with unparalleled success in the treatment of all diseases of the skin, liver, kidneys and the blood. It restores the disordered liver to a healthy condition, and effectually cures the worst cases of habitual constipation. It has cured cases of Bright's disease, erysipelas, rheumatism, dyspepsia, gravel, diabetes, bladder and urinary troubles, where all else has failed.

It is a certain cure for all the diseases and weaknesses peculiar to females, and affords great protection from attacks that originate in change of life. Dr. Kennedy's Favorite Remedy is for sale by all dealers in medicine at one dollar a bottle or six bottles for five dollars; which brings a treatment within the reach of all.

THE SPOUSES ENTERTAIN.

Red Men's Auxiliary Provide a Pleasant Time for Palefaces.

The dance and entertainment given by Iona Council, No. 14, Daughters of Pocohontas, in the Red Men's hall on West Front street last night, provided amusement for 250 people who attended. The floor had been crashed, and the walls gayly decorated with bright colors. From the centre chandelier hung miniature flags and Chinese lanterns, while four streamers of red, white and blue bunting were suspended from the centre to each corner of the room.

The entertainment portion of the event was commenced at 9, and continued to 10:30, during which time the following Plainfield artists rendered songs and recitations that in many cases were more meritorious than is usually found in the amateur performer, and who were greeted with applause by those present: Piano solo, Mrs. Fred Canfield; recitation, Miss Webber; comic recitation, A. Gorton; songs, Eli Odam; songs, Dr. G. O. Bedford; recitations, Elmer Neal; song, Mrs. A. J. Stiglitz; humorous sayings, John H. Carney; song, Mrs. W. Westphal.

At 10:30 the grand march was commenced, led by David C. Allen and Mrs. George Voehl. At the intermission refreshments were served by members of the council. Mrs. George Voehl was the chairman of the committee having charge of the affair.

C. W. O. Hardman, sheriff of Tyler Co., W. Va., appreciates a good thing and does not hesitate to say so. He was almost prostrated with a cold when he procured a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. He says: "It gave me prompt relief. I find it to be an invaluable remedy for coughs and colds." For sale at Reynolds's pharmacy, Park and North ave. T. S. Armstrong, manager.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

The fac-simile signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

E. P. THORN,

No. 125 Park Avenue,

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Pure Wines and Liquors,

For Family and Medicinal Use,

A SPECIALTY.

2-26-y

FEBRUARY PRICES.

Amos H. VanHorn, Limited,

73 Market Street, Near Plane Street.

Note the Name Amos Before Entering the Store.

PRICES DURING FEBRUARY.

Tapestry Brussels carpet per yard, only	50c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$10
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, only	$20
Velvet carpet per yard, only	75c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$15
Antique oak sideboards, only	$13 50
Extra super all-wool ingrain carpet per yard, only	50c
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, in rug covering, only	$30
Fancy couches and lounges, only	$5
Low priced ingrain carpet per yard, only	25c
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$20
Body Brussels carpet per yard, only	$1c
Antique oak chiffoniers with mirrors, only	$8.75
Mahogany finished frame parlor suits, in silk covering, only	$40
Dining-room chairs, high back, antique oak, per set only	$7.50
Antique oak extension tables, only	$8.50
Oilcloth per yard, only	20c
Hall stands, only	$5.50
Antique oak bedroom suits, only	$25
Three ply carpet per yard, only	75c

PORTLAND RANGES—The prices on these Ranges are not reduced, as we are not allowed to do so by the manufacturers. We have made reductions in all other departments not mentioned above at the same rate as in this ad. Easy terms. Goods delivered free to all parts of the State.

STORING FURNITURE—Having just erected a new building at 88, 90 and 92 Bank st., we can safely say that we have the most complete Storage Building in the State, and at such low rates. All locked rooms. Furniture moved with vans by careful men in city or country. Telephone 580.

AMOS H. VAN HORN, Limited,

73 Market st., near Plane st., Newark, N. J.

LEGGETT'S TOILET SOAP,

for the toilet, bath and nursery. 15 cents a cake, 6 cakes 75 cents. Warranted absolutely pure.

The compounding of physicians' prescriptions a specialty.

Corner Park avenue and Front street.

FERRIS' GOOD SENSE Corset Waists

Quality, Workmanship, and Shapes, unequaled.

Over A MILLION Mothers, Misses, and Children, wear them.

Modern ideas of healthful dress are perfected in this Corset Waist. For sale by all leading retailers. Children's, 25c. to 75c. Misses', 50c. to $1.00. Ladies', $1.00 to $2.00.

A HINDOO TRICK.

IT IS RIDICULOUSLY EASY WHEN YOU KNOW HOW IT IS DONE.

Professor Herrmann Explains the Mystery of the Sealed Box and the Crafty Way In Which the Performer Who is Tied in a Bag Exchanges Her Prisons.

Where, if not in India, should we turn for the weird and mysterious, for the wonderful, for that which may not be understood by any one, even those who profess to understand everything? India, with a civilization that was older than Europe's when Europe's civilization began. What is developed is naturally more fully developed in India than in any younger country. What has been made a study for years must be surpassed by that which has been made a study of for centuries. Although the magic of the Hindoos is by far the most celebrated, it is not the most scientific magic in the world.

European and American magicians, a few years since, introduced an illusion called the Hindoo box trick, for no other reason than that Hindoo is a very good word to tack on any illusion, as it is to a certain extent mystifying. This trick was performed in the following manner: A large box capable of holding a human being was brought in and examined by a committee invited on the stage for the purpose of making this inspection. It was found to be a strongly built iron bound box, with great hasp hinges fastening one side of the lid to the box, the other side of which was held down with a hasp and staple, firmly riveted through the wood, and any one in the audience was called upon to secure it with a padlock. This was done. Then the box was placed on two trestles sufficiently high to sustain it about eighteen inches from the stage floor; a coil of rope, usually about a hundred feet in length, was handed to the committee and they were requested to tie the box, which was invariably tied by lashing it so securely as to render it an impossibility to open the lid in any way without destroying the rope. The knots of this rope were often sealed with sealing wax, marked with rings and charms worn by members of the committee in such a manner as to prevent the seals being tampered with without a discovery.

After this was done to the satisfaction of the committee the assistant, generally a young woman dressed in a page's costume, was called in. This assistant was placed in a strong linen bag, the bag drawn up over her head and securely tied with a stout string, the knots of which were sealed in the same manner as those on the box. The page was then taken and seated on the box, a screen drawn around both the box and the performer, when in an incredibly short space of time, never exceeding thirty seconds, a smart tap on the box announced that all was ready; the screen was hastily drawn aside, and the empty bag, still sealed exactly as left by the committee, with every seam intact, would be found lying on top of the box, the page having disappeared entirely.

A rapping on the inside of the box proclaimed the fact that the performer was inside of it, and after the seals and knots were inspected and untied and the network of rope wound around it removed the key was produced and the box unlocked. The performer would step out as cool and unruffled as though she had been lying on a sofa during the whole affair.

Now, unexplained, this appears truly wonderful, but the explanation is so simple as to be ridiculous. The box, carefully corded and locked, of course could not have been opened at the top, the bottom was resting on the trestles, and we naturally turn to the sides for an opening. The front side of the box, just below the hasp, was so arranged that an invisible hinge or rod running through the bottom of the lower half of the box front allowed this to drop down inside the box, leaving no obstacle in the way of the performer's entering it but the ropes, which, of course, were pushed aside enough to allow the small body of the page to pass through.

Once inside the box she simply rolled to the back of it, raised the front lid and with a small, flat, knifelike instrument shot two tiny bolts into place, rapped on the box, concealed her instruments to open it and was ready for the inspection of the committee. The bolts were hid by the other half of the box lid, they being set into the upper edges of the board and the smallness of the cracks prevented their discovery.

But how about the bag? you ask. That was managed in this way: There were two bags, one inside the other. The performer was placed in an outer bag, leaving an empty one exactly like the outer one flat against the back of the bag. When the magician was pulling the bag over the young lady's head, ready to be tied and sealed, he simply brought the tops of the two bags to be sealed up, that of the empty one above that of the one containing the page, and held it in his hand to be tied and sealed, the hands clasped around the top of the outer bag concealing its mouth so that the committee working above his hands really tied and sealed the top of the empty bag. When this was done he would pick up the slight figure of the page and seat her on the top of the box, quickly draw the screen around her and she would slip the outer bag down from her shoulders, draw up and shake out the inner or empty one and lay it on the top of the box. The outer bag would then be wound around her body inside a blouse waist or outer garment; she would then open the box, crawl into it, fasten the front and call for "light."

A. HERRMANN.

Strange.

"You know old John Goodner?"

"Yes."

"Never called anything but 'Honest John' for forty years?"

"Um."

"County treasurer for twenty-eight years and guardian for half the orphans in the county? Trusted by everybody?"

"Yep."

"Dead three weeks and experts have gone over his books?"

"Well?"

"They found he was honest in every way!"

Old Rounder Logic.

Swaggs—Ah, you will never know how much I regret my youthful follies.

Boggs—Why?

Swaggs—Because, now that I have money enough to indulge them without compunctions of conscience all the novelty is gone.

Conscience is not a safe guide in any matter upon which it has not been ed[illegible]

Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union.

OFFICIAL.

Regular meeting of the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union, held on Thursday, Feb. 7, 1895, at 2:30 p m.

The following members were present, viz:

Director Hubbard and Freeholders Badgeley, Clark, Ehrlich, Halliday, Farrell, Hulskamper, Krause, Littell, Miller, Roll, Swain, Tier, Westcott and Woodruff—15.

Absent—Freeholders Morrell, Ogden—2.

The minutes of the previous meeting (reading of bills excepted) were on motion approved as read.

COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

February 5, 1895.

To the Honorable, the Director and Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County:

Gentlemen—The iron pipe bridge, composed of iron pipes having a diameter of four feet, which the Freeholders of Union and Essex placed across the Morris turnpike, near Passaic river, to convey the water course known as Spring Brook, has become in a measure stopped by the accumulation of wash, and the caving of the banks of the stream on the northerly side of said turnpike, to such an extent as to form a dam, preventing the free passage of the stream through the said iron pipe bridge.

In consequence, the stream does not have its proper outlet, the utility of the iron bridge is impaired, and my lands on the southerly side of said turnpike are frequently flooded to my great damage.

I am informed it is the custom of your Board to have the outlet from a bridge cleared of obstructions for some distance in order to permit the stream to pass off, and I would respectfully petition your Honorable Board to have this conduit cleared in the interest of the public health and the preservation of the bridge.

Trusting my petition may commend itself to your kind and favorable consideration. I am

Respectfully yours,

GEO B VANDERPOOL.

After some debate, on motion of Freeholder Woodruff, the communication was received and referred to Freeholder Swain.

From Frank H Dunn, Clerk of the Grand Jury, as follows, viz:

Whereas, The Grand Jury of the County of Union has made an inspection of the County Jail of this County at the present term, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, and that they find the same neat, cleanly and well kept, except this, that there is at present maintained in the kitchen thereof, a water closet, and that, though as well attended to as can be, is in its present position unsanitary; therefore be it

Resolved, That the said Grand Jury would respectfully suggest that the said closet be removed from the said kitchen; and be it further

Resolved, That a true copy of this preamble and resolution be transmitted to the Board of Chosen Freeholders of Union County.

I hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of a resolution passed by the Grand Jury of the County of Union at the present sitting for the January term, eighteen hundred and ninety-five, as taken from the minutes thereof.

Signed, FRANK H DUNN, Clerk.

Dated Jan 18, 1895.

From the Grand Jury of the County of Union, a presentment, having reference to the power conferred upon the Board of Chosen Freeholders by the Legislature, bearing upon the control of certain public roads, etc.

After being read in full, it was on motion of Freeholder Roll, received and placed on file.

From Louis Quien, County Engineer, as follows, viz:

Elizabeth, N J, Feb 7, 1895.

To the Honorable, the Board of Freeholders of Union County, N J:

Gentlemen—The following letter was received by the undersigned from Messrs Hillpot & Ayres with reference to their bond in connection with Morris avenue grading and paving contract.

The undersigned respectfully reports to your Honorable Body, that the contract with the said Messrs Hillpot & Ayres, has not been settled, and will not be, until the expiration of one year from the date of the last payment made to them by the County of Union.

Respectfully sumitted,

LOUIS QUIEN,

County Engineer.

The following is a copy of the letter referred to:

Bound Brook, N J, Jan 23, 1895.

Louis Quien, County Engineer, Elizabeth, N J:

Dear Sir—Previous to the settlement of our contract with the Board of Chosen Freeholder of the County of Union, you said you would have our bond of $10,000 released when settlement was made.

Please give this matter immediate attention and oblige,

Yours truly,

HILLPOT & AYRES.

On motion of Freeholder Clark, received and placed on file.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Committee to settle with the Collector presented the following report, viz:

To the Board of Chosen Freeholders of the County of Union:

Gentlemen—Your Committee to settle with the County Collector, respectfully report that we have examined his books, showing his receipts and disbursements, together with his vouchers, bonds and coupons paid and bank books, and find that the same agrees and are correct in every particular.

His receipts and disbursements from Sept 12, 1894, to Jan 30, 1895, are as follows, viz:

Receipts,	$439,123 62
Disbursements,	354,079 00
Balance in his hands	$75,043 62

GEO W LITTELL,
HENRY KRAUSE,
JOHN FARRELL,
Committee.

To be continued next week.

IMMORALITY IN PLAINFIELD

REV. DR. LEWIS SAYS IT'S GETTING WORSE.

Police Officials Say Different—Interesting Information at the Meeting of the Plainfield Branch Alliance.

At the regular monthly meeting of the Plainfield Branch Alliance in All Souls Church yesterday afternoon the discussion of the "Criminal Classes" developed interesting facts in connection with the morality of Plainfield.

The meeting was called to order by Mrs. Edwin W. Conklin, vice president.

H. P. Reynolds opened the discussion with a paper on "The criminal classes; what are they and how should they be dealt". Mr. Reynolds spoke substantially as follows:

One subject there is on which most people are quite willing to confess ignorance and that is the life within prison walls—the world of the outcast and convict. Yet the modern spirit of inquiry is penetrating these barriers. A study of our modern attempts to deal with the law breakers which should enumerate the various methods in use and the experiments tried would occupy much time, but of these methods, two, at least, possess great usefulness and greater promise. First, as to the reformatory idea: Is it not strange with the reformatory principle imbedded in every great religious system that it should have been left to this century to try the reformatory experiment? We see reformatory schools increasing in our own country, while reformatory methods are being introduded into every grade of penal institutions in England. In accord with universal experience youth is the period when reform is most possible. Hence commitments to reformatories have largely been restricted below the age of 18. Faith in the possibility of reform is taking wider scope in the founding of such great establishments as those at Elmira, N. Y., Concord, Mass., and Huntington, Penn. Mr. Brockway's big school at Elmira has been turned inside down; its fame is literally "World" wide, but what has it proved. Barring some exceptions it has proved that even such appalling products of civilization as the American tough can be made a man of, and not a bad sort of a man. Many young men have gone there born and bred to enmity with society; their only school the slums only trade theft, only amusement drunkeness. They have come forth reading and writing, sober and healthy.

Reformed, you ask? Out of every 100 of these graduates, 80 and odd are never again committed for criminal offenses, while a somewhat less proportion are known to become self-supporting and respectable. Idleness, i. e., lack of a habit of industry is the source of more criminality than drink—plus ignorance. Of existing reformatories no two are alike in methods, although all rest upon a common basis. For example, we find at Elmira that Father Stick has played an important part. At Concord corporal punishment is unknown.

Some 25 miles southeasterly from Plainfield at Jamesburg is located the New Jersey State Reform School for Juvenile Delinquents. Here the boys are trained in some practical trade or occupation; worked upon the farm and instructed in the usual English branches. Moral and religious training are prominent features. The trustees have power to grant absolute discharge of such boys as merit freedom. In cases of those whose reformation is incomplete after three years of confinement the trustees may grant a parole to continue in force during the period of minority or good behavior. While paroled the boy may be apprenticed or allowed to return to his own home on his own recognizance, always subject to rearrest for misconduct. Thus he is aroused to a sense of responsibility and manliness. All reformatory work involves a trial of the indeterminate sentence and of probation and parole laws.

A few conclusions are now generally accepted with regard to penal law. First, that fear of punishment does not greatly serve to prevent crime; second, society for its own protection must put the criminal under restraint for his own good, and the good of society, and every effort should be made for his reformation.

There is great need for a prison on the lines of the Massachusetts or Elmira reformatory in New Jersey. Six years ago a commission of five capable gentlemen was appointed by Gov. Abbett to investigate and report on the advisability of establishing a reformatory prison. This commission in April, 1890, presented a report that was strong, concise and practical. The commission took occasion to indicate an appropriate location for the new prison of interest to us as dwellers of Union County—at Rahway. If the prison was wanted then the want has grown with every year. But we have not the beginning of a reformatory system. More than anything else is this the hope and aim of the S. C. A. A., nor will the Association cease its labors till this aim is attained.

A paper on "Is Drunkenness Prevalent?" was read by Mrs. T. H. Tomlinson, which answered the question in the affirmative.

G. E. Marx, secretary of the Boys Club, talked on the treatment of juvenile offenders. "Is Crime on the Increase," was discussed by Miss Erskine, who said that she had talked with Chief Grant and Judge Coddington, both of whom told her that they had encountered less vice in the past two years than ever before.

An informal discussion followed, during which Dr. Lewis made the interesting announcement that immorality had been constantly increasing in the last five years in Plainfield, the prevalence of which was not due to the lack of vigilance of officials, but to the mother and housewife who displayed in many cases great indifference as to the associations their children and servants kept.

Fifty Dollars Given Away.

To raisers of poultry, the most wonderful and valuable monthly is The Poultry Keeper. The publishers offer fifty dollars free. Send for sample copy free and see how. Any of the following back numbers worth a dollar but sent postpaid for only five cents each: Brooders Incubators, Appliances, Poultry Houses (illus) Aug. '89 Aug. '91. Worth $10. Poultry Houses, April '87, Oct. '88 and July '91 (30 illus). Preserving eggs, Sep. '87. Turkeys, Mar. '92. Poultry diseases Nov '87. How to Feed for Eggs, Oct. '91. All About Lice, Oct. '87, Dec '91. Testing Eggs June '91 and June '92. How to Make the Hot Water Incubator July '87. Sample free. Address, The Poultry Keeper Co., Parkersburg, Pa.

If you find that trade goes slowly
And is never at its best,
With an ad just press the button—
Watch The Press do the rest.

THE MODEL SOCIABLE.

Christian Endeavorers Have a Pleasant and Profitable Time.

When it was known among the Christian Endeavorers that there was to be a model sociable in the Trinity Reformed Church last evening everyone wanted to be present, and a very large number of them were.

Westfield, Rahway, Willow Grove, Dunellen, Cranford, and all the Plainfield societies were represented.

The social features of Christian Endeavor work is perplexing to most of the societies and just how to hold a sociable with the best possible results is no easy task.

E. E. Anthony of the Trinity Society has charge of the social work through the county and at his suggestion the first model sociable was held. Members from societies all through the county were present.

During the day a number of the young women gathered at the church and with artistic hands made a scene of rare beauty.

Wm. Milliken of Dunellen was the only Endeavorer to be found not engaged—in work, and he very willingly gave his time and experience in assisting the young women.

The decorations were pink and green, and bunting with these colors encircled the room and neatly entwined the several pillars in the room. The presence of several banquet lamps added much to the beauty of the scene.

The chief feature, of course, was sociability, and everyone present was doubly impressed with this fact. It was a happy departure from the old style, when a person securing a seat would hold it the rest of the evening.

The young people moved and chatted freely with those whom it was made possible they should know through the use of a card prepared by Wm. Milliken and Wm. Crawford, with the bearer's name on and which was attached to the lapel of the coat.

Mr. Anthony arrested the attention of the large audience, and introduced Miss Bessie Blair who rendered a beautiful vocal solo, "Who is Sylva?"

The merry company then without any difficulty joined in social conversation. When Mr. Anthony thought that they had talked enough, they were called to order, and Mr. Beekman gave a pleasing piano solo which was finely executed.

After another intermission the audience enjoyed a delightful alto solo by Miss Nancy Randolph. Then the least important feature of the event, as so stated, was indulged in. The committees then served cocoa and wafers, which were all to be desired.

The last number on the programme was a vocal solo by Miss Fanny Mattison, accompanied by Miss Nettie Mattison on the piano and Miss Florence Bates, with the violin. The rendition was enjoyed to the fullest extent. Miss Bates is a pupil of Carl Feininger, and her work is of high merit. Mr. Anthony then asked for interchange of ideas on the social question, but none were able to offer a more novel plan than that presented, and all were highly pleased with the success of this model sociable.

The committees acting under the direction of E. E. Anthony were as follows:

Social—Miss Fanny Mattison, Miss Jennie Buidk, Miss Ella Gardner, Miss Jennie Smith, Mrs. Clarence Mundy.

Flower and Decorating—Miss May Sheppard, Miss Carrie Mehl, Miss Viola Huff, Miss Grace Berg, Miss Lizzie Dunlap.

Reception—Miss Cora Gardner, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Woodruff, Miss Garretta Wikoff and Elmer Garretson.

—Again we call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of the auction sale of the personal property and farming implements of Israel J. Coon at Smalleytown, Somerset county, on Wednesday next, March 6. As Mr. Coon has leased his farm everything mentioned will be sold to the highest bidder.

PAINT cracks.—It often costs more to prepare a house for repainting that has been painted in the first place with cheap ready-mixed paints, than it would to have painted it twice with strictly pure white lead, ground in pure linseed oil.

Strictly Pure White Lead

forms a permanent base for repainting and never has to be burned or scraped off on account of scaling or cracking. It is always smooth and clean. To be sure of getting strictly pure white lead, purchase any of the following brands:

"Atlantic," "Jewett," "Brooklyn."

FOR COLORS.—National Lead Co.'s Pure White Lead Tinting Colors, a one-pound can to a 25-pound keg of Lead and mix your own paints. Saves time and annoyance in matching shades, and insures the best paint that it is possible to put on wood.

Send us a postal card and get our book on paints and color-card, free; it will probably save you a good many dollars.

NATIONAL LEAD CO., New York.

ANOTHER SECRET ORDER.

Chosen Friends Organize Under the Name of Plainfield Council.

Plainfield Council, No. 44, Order of Chosen Friends, is the title of a new fraternal and beneficial order organized in Odd Fellows Hall last evening, with 23 active members. Officers were elected and installed as follows:

Councilor—Martin R. Lantz.
Past Councilor—C. F. Gullburg.
Vice Councilor—Anna E. Brownell.
Prelate—Kate Franse.
Marshal—C. R. Skillman.
Warden—Mary E. Stevens.
Guard—Chas. Keiderling.
Sentry—Fred R. Schmidt.
Secretary—G. T. Mullin.
Treasurer—N. R. Barnes.
Trustees—Jas. Bell, E. S. Schenck, C. N. Brownell.

The order was organized by C. F. Gullburg, and the following installing officers from Jersey City took part:

S G S—J G Reid.
P C—L Hopkins.
V C—Mrs J G Reid.
Treas—G B Ludman.
Prelate—Mrs E F Ludman.

Remarks on the good of the order followed. Regular meetings are to be held twice a month.

Children Shrink

from taking medicine. They don't like its taste. But they are eager to take what they like—Scott's Emulsion, for instance. Children almost always like Scott's Emulsion.

And it does them good.

Scott's Emulsion is the easiest, most palatable form of Cod-liver Oil, with the Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda added to nourish the bones and tone up the nervous system. The way children gain flesh and strength on Scott's Emulsion is surprising even to physicians.

All delicate children need it.

Don't be persuaded to accept a substitute!

Scott & Bowne, N. Y. All Druggists. 50c. and $1.

The Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Standard Railway of America

Protected throughout by the Interlocking Switch and Block Signal System.

On and after Jan 20, 1895, trains will leave Elizabeth as follows:

FAST LINE leaves Philadelphia 12 26 p m daily with Pullman Vestibule parlor and sleeping cars for Pittsburg, Northern and Eastern Pennsylvania.

4.57 P. M. WESTERN EXPRESS, with Pullman Vestibule sleeping cars, dining car daily for Pittsburg, Chicago, Cleveland, daily except Saturday, for Toledo, Williamsport, Rochester, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

6.34 p.m.—SOUTHWESTERN EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping car, daily, to Columbus, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis, and Memphis. Dining car Altoona to Richmond.

8 43 p. m.—PACIFIC EXPRESS with Pullman vestibule sleeping cars, daily, for Pittsburg, Columbus, Chicago, and Toledo, daily, except Saturday for Cleveland.

For Baltimore, Washington and the South—[illegible]

For New York only, 6 10 a. m. daily.

For Philadelphia—[illegible]

FOR ATLANTIC CITY [illegible]

Cape May, Sea Isle City and Ocean City [illegible] p. m. weekdays.

For Rahway—[illegible]

For New Brunswick—[illegible]

For Woodbridge—[illegible]

For Perth Amboy—[illegible]

For East Millstone—[illegible]

For Trenton—[illegible]

For Lambertville, Phillipsburg and Belvidere via Trenton—[illegible]

For Flemington—[illegible]

For Freehold—[illegible] via Monmouth Junction, week-days.

For Jamesburg, via Monmouth Junction—[illegible]

For Long Branch, Ocean Grove, and points on New York and Long Branch R. R.—[illegible] do not stop at Asbury Park on Sundays.

For Sea Side Park, Island Heights and Toms River—[illegible]

For Boston—[illegible] daily.

For Brooklyn, N. Y.—All through trains connect at Jersey City with boats to Brooklyn annex, affording direct transfer to and from Fulton street, avoiding double ferriage and journey across New York City.

Leave New York for Elizabeth—[illegible]

S. M. PREVOST, General Manager.

J. R. WOOD, Gen. Pass. Agent.

FEAR AS A CAUSE OF DEATH.

The Imagination a Potent Factor In Acquiring a Fatal Disease.

"Of the whole number of persons supposed to die of disease," said a prominent physician the other day, "I should say that at least 50 per cent are really carried away by fear. Were it not for this element mortality would be far less than it is."

In support of his statement he cited various cases where the element of fear had entered largely in as a potent factor to persuade people that their time had come. Presentiments, prophecies, premonitions and general nervousness all played their part. Some years ago four criminals, condemned in Russia to die were taken to a house and shown several beds, in which, they were told, a number of cholera patients had died. In fact, the beds were new, never having been slept in. The criminals were informed that they would be set at liberty if they would undergo the ordeal of sleeping several nights in the beds. From the prisoners' point of view it was a possible though desperate chance of escape. They one and all decided to take the chances. At the end of the time prescribed two were uninjured and went free, but the others developed all the symptoms and died of Asiatic cholera.

Two physicians determined to take advantage of the impressionable mind of a female patient and prove a theory for the benefit of science. The lady had complained of an itching on her back. She was told that a blister would be applied. Instead a common postage stamp was applied, and, so runs the chronicle, performed all the offices of the plaster which was not there.

A college professor was once the subject of a practical joke at the hands of the students. They met him one after another, and each successively inquired after his health, saying that he looked ill. He took to his bed, a physician was called, and for days the professor imagined he was ill.—New York World.

Central Railroad of New Jersey.

(Anthracine coal used exclusively insuring cleanliness and comfort.)

Station in New York foot of Liberty Street. Time Table in Effect, Nov. 18, 1894.

PLAINFIELD AND NEW YORK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave New York from foot of Liberty street [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND NEWARK.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Newark [illegible]

Passengers for Newark change cars at Elizabeth.

PLAINFIELD AND SOMERVILLE.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Somerville [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND EASTON.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

Leave Easton [illegible]

PLAINFIELD AND LAKE HOPATCONG.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

WESTWARD CONNECTIONS.

LEAVE PLAINFIELD.

[illegible] A. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Pottsville, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport and Tamaqua.

7 10 a. m. for stations to High Bridge, connecting for stations on High Bridge Branch.

[illegible] A. M. for Flemington, D. L. & W. R. R. Easton, Bangor and Mauch Chunk.

[illegible] A. M. for Flemington, High Bridge branch D L & W R R, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Williamsport, Tamaqua, Pottsville, Nanticoke, Upper Lehigh, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, &c. Through coach to Williamsport.

[illegible] p. m. way for Easton, connecting at Junction for stations on D. L. & W. R. R.

[illegible] P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Allentown, Reading, Harrisburg, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Sunbury and Williamsport, Wilkes-Barre and Scranton. Buffet parlor car to Mauch Chunk.

[illegible] p. m., way for Easton, connecting at High Bridge for stations on High Bridge branch.

[illegible] P. M. for Flemington, Easton, Bethlehem, Bangor, Allentown, Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Mauch Chunk, Shamokin and Tamaqua. Buffet parlor car to Scranton.

[illegible] P. M. for Flemington.

[illegible] P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading and Harrisburg.

[illegible] P. M. for Easton, Bethlehem and Allentown.

[illegible] a. m. Sunday for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Wilkesbarre and Scranton. [illegible] a. m. Sundays for Easton. [illegible] p. m. Sundays for Easton, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Tamaqua, Reading and Harrisburg. [illegible] p. m. Sundays for Easton, Bethlehem, Allentown, Mauch Chunk, Reading, Harrisburg, &c. and at Junction for D. L. & W. R. R.

For Atlantic City, [illegible]

Long Branch, Ocean Grove, &c.

Leave Plainfield [illegible]

For Perth Amboy, [illegible]

For Freehold, [illegible]

ROYAL BLUE LINE.

Leave Plainfield for Philadelphia, [illegible]

For Trenton [illegible]

For Baltimore and Washington at [illegible]

For Chattanooga, New Orleans and all points south with through vestibule sleeper, via Shenandoah Valley Route at [illegible]

For Buffalo, Chicago and all points west, week-days at [illegible]

RETURNING—LEAVE PHILADELPHIA,

Reading terminal [illegible]

Sundays—[illegible]

From 9th and Green sts:—[illegible]

Leave Trenton, Warren and Tucker sts., [illegible]

Plainfield passengers by trains marked * change cars at Bound Brook.

Through tickets to all points at lowest rates may be had on application in advance to the ticket agent at the station.

GAY MINSTRELS' NIGHT

With Wild Delight to See the Show the People Flock.

FOR EVERYONE 'TWAS LOTS OF FUN

Except the "Tea at Four o'Clock"—Though Play Fell Flat, the Songs Were Fat, and All the Jokes Made Laughter Loud—But 'Tis Confessed That Some Liked Best the Rough and Tumble of the Crowd.

As the sands pour down in the hour-glass, so poured the people into the Casino of the Union County Country Club Thursday night, when the Muhlenberg Hospital Benefit took place. You who have seen the mass of minute particles push at the tiny opening and pile up with amazing rapidity in the other bulb, can imagine how the crowd surged through the door of the cozy playhouse and took possession. Those of you who were there, need no description to remind you of the football rush in which you participated.

A big attendance had been expected, from the first mention of the project. Amateur performances by Plainfield society talent have never known failure, and the Hospital has a big place in the popular heart. All the members of the Women's Auxiliary Board, and other prominent women in addition, were patronesses, the drug stores, had tickets for sale, and the newspapers were advertising the affair liberally.

Lewis G. Timpson, who was hustling the business management of the show, saw how things were going, and advised that Music Hall be engaged because it was so much larger. That was vetoed, and he suggested that the Casino seats be reserved. The Board of Governors of the Hospital said no, that everyone must stand an equal chance of getting a good seat. So the sale of tickets went merrily on without reserve. There were 70 patronesses; and with that eagerness to sell all her allotment of tickets which characterizes the Plainfield patroness and makes her an invaluable adjunct to a social charity entertainment, each industriously performed her part, generally with calm disregard of Manager Timpson's frantic appeals to render him an accounting a few days before the performance. Many of the fair ticketsellers had not made returns up to the night of the entertainment, and 15 had n't been heard from up to last night, so no one knew how many seats had been disposed of. Provision was made for an extra crowd, by the placing of 75 more seats, the weather was doubtful, and the management trusted to Providence, and to the hard times that make amusement managers mournful, to keep the attendance within the capacity of the house.

But the dark skies and the rain and snow squalls gave place to beautiful starlight; the electric street lighting circuit of the Casino district broke down, giving to a promenade or a drive that additional attraction of a spice of adventure and romance which black night under a brilliant heaven always inspires; and the Country Club's home was a pretty blaze for the society butterflies to flutter to.

At 7 those wise in their generation began to gather. The fiat had gone forth that the doors would be opened exactly at 7:30, but previous experiences had taught some that there was a way to the Casino through the clubhouse. This precedent, however, appeared to have been abrogated, the order being that not one person should be admitted to the Casino till the 7:30 stroke; and so the earlycomers just had to accumulate, and struggle, and pound on the doors that were shut in front of them.

The ticket-takers peeped with alarm at the fast-gathering crowd, and went through a series of athletic drills and braced their backs with oak planks, preparatory to tackling the oncoming onslaught.

As a result of the indoor council of war, only one narrow door was thrown back when the time for opening came. Even through that the people poured almost too fast for the ticket-takers to handle. Many had tickets ready, and many cast dollar bills instead into the treasurers' hands, and all swept on into the hall and took possession. The ushers made a valiant stand, but in spite of their good looks and politeness they were supremely ignored. It was society's night, the Plainfield public's night, and society and the Plainfield public swarmed everywhere and swooped down upon the seats and forthwith occupied them all without the aid of conventional escorts.

Charles J. Fisk, the Puck of the Country Club, never broke his perennial smile as he said to Manager Timpson "If you want police to keep back the crowd and drive out out all those who have n't bought tickets in advance, I 'll get you all the cops you need." One bluecoat was outside, a spectator, and Chief Engineer Doane of the Fire Department was at hand in his handsome uniform and handsome form, ready to bring on the apparatus if the friction of the rush generated a blaze.

There were two streams of people, converging at the door. One line had been formed on the piazzas of the clubhouse, headed at the Casino entrance, and the second was massed on the Arlington avenue sidewalk and shoved its way up the steps. The chief ambition of each line was not to let the other get ahead faster than itself. So it was a lively time.

Everybody was proud because nobody got mad, and the "characteristic good-nature of American crowds" was exhibited as the most admirable of virtues. The elegant finery of feminine skirts was trampled, and the shapeliness of feminine gowns was crushed; headdress and toilettes on which hours had been spent, were tangled and battered into such uncomeliness as is well pictured in the sight of a discarded silk hat: what cared the wearers!—they were going to get there though it cost 'em their wardrobes, and they did n't often get a chance for that kind of fun. At 7:50 the Casino was so full that an outsider who was crying "Hot tamales" said the windows bulged out into bows, and it was remarked that the big fat sandwiches of tickets and dollar bills in the hands of the men at the door had stretched their fingers into extension ladders. Every seat was full; every aisle was full; and there were more a-coming. Nobody fainted, and everybody smiled and felt good because no one had said a bad word.

The Casino looked well, as ever; the walls and arches and fireplace were still hung with green; and the animation, and the hum of voices, and the blaze of light, and the soft sweet music, were a rest after the general wrestling tournament. Rose's orchestra was playing, just as it plays in the Lyceum Theatre; the greatest show of the Plainfield season was about to begin; and everybody that knew one another was there to enjoy.

The vibrations of the stage curtains indicated that the performance was about to begin, when Mr. Fisk burst forth like a sunbeam and said:

"Through some fault of the management, the house has been largely oversold. We therefore announce that the entertainment will be repeated next Tuesday evening, and those who wish may retire and receive tickets for the second performance, or may get their money back, as they prefer." This was applauded, but not many went away. The house continued packed throughout. The actual attendance was 620. The seating capacity was 480. Eighty-five people paid at the door, and many latecomers were refused admission. Chief Engineer Doane prudently and firmly kept the aisles free from chairs.

A tinkle of the bell, a preliminary chord of music, and there came the gentle singing of "My Old Kentucky Home". The curtains were drawn apart, and the Plainfield amateur minstrels stood revealed in all their excellence. Blackface were they all, and wigged. The predominant costume was conventional evening dress, which Plainfield young men wear with such accustomed ease and grace. The end men wore white duck coats the fulness of whose skirts betokened that at some time they had done service as sails for Yankee cup-defenders; they were wonderful to behold in their matchless stiffness, and since they were laundered the price of starch must have jumped amazingly. Down the sides of the nether garments, also of white duck, ran gaudy broad red stripes; and red waistcoats peeped forth in glimpses above the collars of the tight-waisted coats whose mammoth wide-spreading skirts stood stiffly out like abbreviated and disarranged hoops. Jumbo chrysanthemums weighted each manly heart, and a tousled topknot stuck up from each crown like a medieval doorknob. The boutonnieres of the others were red and white pinks.

Two Georges were the Bonesses—George F. Schoonmaker and George O. Stevens; and the tambos were thumped and twirled by Howard W. Beebe and Clarence Cree. Mr. Cree was a foreign importation from Elizabeth, to remind Plainfield that she has n't all the brains and brightness of the earth; and all the others were home talent except Messrs. Taylor and Lehman, who had accommodatingly come from Lehigh University to fill the places of Fred G. Smith and O. W. Abbott, unfortunately kept home by illness.

Middleman Fred Walz had grouped about him besides these the following: Geo. B. Schoonmaker, Frank Cokefair, Robert Lewis, Arthur Freeman, Robert Clark, Will N. Runyon, Elmer E. Runyon, John Taylor, Jr., Fletcher D. Hallock, James H. Hallock, Elston French, R. Dalziell Schoonmaker, Nathaniel Miller, E. H. Janes, Frederick Denicke, and P. S. Castleman.

'Twas a bangup minstrel show; the jokes were clean, mostly new; the voices were good, and their songs tuneful; the instrumental music was fine; the local flings were witty without being unkind; there was a lively intermingling of humor and sentiment; the performers showed that it was possible for gentlemen to black up and give a minstrel show without a tiresome abundance of horseplay and without sinking their personality.

The opening overture was a medley of such airs as "There's a Little Spot in Ireland", "Do, Do, My Huckleberry Do", "Go to Sleep, My Baby", and the irresistible "Tommy Atkins", with incidental solos by Messrs. Cokefair, Cree and Stevens, and amusing antics by all the end men. Then, with many witticisms interspersed, the following programme was rendered:

Ballad—"Bedouin Love Song",
Arthur Freeman
Song—"If Barnum Were Alive",
George O. Stevens
